First Lady Heard By Thousands At School Dedication

Superintendent Ova Haney Praised For Work In Securing Magnificent Structure For Morgan County; Barkley Speaks

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, first lady of the land, smilingly and graciously officiated Monday at the laying of a cornerstone of a new school building at Camargo and the dedication of a quarter-million dollar Consolidated school structure at West Liberty.

Mrs. Roosevelt told thousands of Kentuckians, assembled at West Liberty, that her only regret was that "the President is not along with me." She was cheered along the entire route, and obligingly shook hands with many of her admirers who would not be denied.

3 Enter Political Races During Week

Lonnie Flannery Asks Representative Nomination; Fraley Speaks Office

The week brought three new announcements for county political offices, although several persons rumored as prospective candidates did not enter the field.

L. B. Flannery, of Bluestone, announced his candidacy for the County Clerk's office, opposing C. V. Alfrey, incumbent. Mr. Flannery has already made known their intention of making the race. They are the Hon. Young, Lyle C. Tackett and J. B. Mauk.

Luther Bradley, of Easton, announced on the Republican ticket for county clerk, opposing C. V. Alfrey, incumbent. Mr. Bradley ran 4 years ago but was unsuccessful in his quest for the nomination.

Luther Fraley became the first to announce for tax commissioner. His announcement was received late today. Mr. Fraley bought the same office in 1933, was nominated on the Democratic ticket, but defeated by the Republican sweep at the final election.

Postal Telegraph Effects Rate Cut

Cost of Messages To Any Part of United States Reduced, Manager Says

Postal Telegraph has filed, and the Federal Communications Commission at Washington, D. C., has approved, a reduction in the rate for overnight telegraph services throughout the United States.

According to an announcement received today by Goldie Hayes, Manager, and signed by Clarence H. Mackay, Chairman of the Board of Postal Telegraph, the cost of night letter telegrams is established a base of 25 words for which charges are the same or less than the present rate. The night message which the new rate structure eliminates within the United States. The present 50-word night letter is also eliminated by the 25-word night letter and the base rate for a night letter is reduced to fifty cents between the two most widely separated points in the United States.

For instance, the present rate for 25 words, sent as a night message between New York and San Francisco, is 96 cents and the 50-word night letter is $1.25; the new word base is 50 per cent. Similar reductions will result between all points.

"The more impressive feature of the new overnight rates, however," Miss Hayes, manager says, "can be simply stated as follows: The mere words written on the lower the per word word. Take the new rate for a 300-word night letter between the East and West Coasts. It is slightly more than one cent per word of $3.40. Compare that with the present rate for 300 words which is $7.20. That is a reduction of about 53 per cent. On the new basis we carry 300 words from here to Chicago for $1.18, about New York, Buffalo, Albany and San Francisco for $1.80 and $2.40 cents respectively, and the cost is even lower for longer messages."

Facilities Taken Over For Summer Term At Local School

Inquiries Indicate That Practice Teaching Classes Will Be Over-Flooding

MANY GROUPS MAY BE DIVIDED DURING YEAR

College Officials Believe That Enrollment Will Be Largest In Years

Indications at the present time point toward the most extensive program in the history of the Training School that has ever been attempted during a summer session. Work will be offered in 18 groups from the first through the twelfth and extra teachers are being added to handle the additional regular classes.

For the first time, those in charge are asking that all children who are to enter the first grade in September be prepared during the summer for a program of pre-first-grade work. During the five weeks of the term these children will be given work that is designed to prepare them for more successful accomplishments when they begin the regular first grade work in the fall.

Arrangements are being made to handle a number of additional pupils during the summer term. At the present time, vacancies exist in all grades. The term begins September 1. The first five weeks. In the first eight weeks only half-day sessions will be held. Classes will begin at eight and close at twelve. All parents who wish to enroll pupils for this term should do so at the Training School Office immediately. No tuition charge is made beyond the ninth grade.

Faculty Selects Eleanor Blue Color

What is Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's favorite color? Recent inquiries by the faculty members have a hard time answering that, for the color that Mrs. Roosevelt wears is the one that was created by and named after her—that is that new shade of blue—called Eleanor blue—which is apt to prove the high-point in this year's classic feminine wearing apparel parade.

Since she dominated the dress, of Mrs. Roosevelt in her appearance at West Liberty Monday, the faculty has selected. The First Lady was garbed in a piece Eleanor blue ensemble.

She wore a black hat, trimmed with a white flower, and black shoes. Her purse, which she kept tucked in her handbag, even while speaking was also Eleanor blue. She wore a corsage of tallmarr roses and baby breath.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore no jewelry except three or four diamond rings which flashed their brilliant rays constantly, that streamed through the West Liberty school as she was speaking.

On traveling during warm weather Mrs. Roosevelt prefers seersucker. She drives her own automobile and is always accompanied by her secretary. A recent radio address of the wife of the President said she was never accompanied by secret service men.

Cooking School To Close Today With Awarding of Prizes

Last Day of Attraction Expected To Draw Larger Crowds; 10 Reel Picture Features Presentation of Newspaper

Misfortune befell the Morehead Independent's Cooking School Wednesday, as a transformer which burned out at the Cozy Theatre prevented the second day's showing of the feature film, "The Bride Wakes Up."

However the Independent rapidly revised its plans so that today's cooking school, which is the last, will be more elaborate than it would ordinarily have been.

Housewives of Rowan and adjoining counties are invited to come in full strength to today's cooking school. Among the offerings at the last day will be a doubly large number of free gifts. Among the gifts that will be distributed are large size gift boxes of Lifebuoy and Lux Soap, Lux Powder, Rinso, several large cans of Spry shortening, 50 pounds of flour, 12 bags of coffee, 6 baskets of mixed groceries, 10 pieces of aluminum ware, canned goods, free recipe books to everybody. This is not the complete list of awards that will be presented.

The prizes, for the most part, are given by the manufacturers or jobbers of the merchandise, so that women may become better acquainted with their products.

Thursday's cooking school, which will be held at the Cozy Theatre will start promptly at 2:30 p. m. Awarding of prizes will be held immediately following the showing of the 10-reel cooking school film.

Merchants of Morehead are cooperating with the Independent to complete the success of this year's cooking school. The response given it by the women of this vicinity will determine whether future schools of this nature will be sponsored in the city.

Doors at the theatre will be open a half hour early. The school and the awarding of prizes should be over before 5 o'clock.

The cooking school consists of the most modern methods of preparing dishes with economy as a by-word. The nation's greatest culinary experts had a hand in preparing the recipes.

The school is something new for Morehead and Rowan County. It offers a worth-while instruction for housewives without any cost. There is no charge for any part of the program. Instead of charging you the Independent urges that you attend as the newspaper's guest.

Instruction On Social Security Presented; Will Be At Ashland June 11

A traveling school in which almost a dozen branches of state and federal governments will carry the story of social security to the people of the state is to be held in the near future.

This announcement was made today by Benedict Crowell, Regional Director of the national security board in Cleveland. His territory includes the states of Kentucky, Michigan and Ohio. At the national emergency council for Kentucky, a chairman was appointed as this school will be known.

One day sessions of the institute will be held as follows, Mr. Crowell said: Wednesday, June 2, Frankfort; Thursday, June 2, Frankfort; Friday, June 4, Paducah; Saturday, June 5, Mammoth Cave.

Wednesday, June 8, Pineville; Thursday, June 10, Pikeville; Friday, June 11, Ashland. Definite territory will be assigned to each of the cities in which institute sessions will be held. Mr. Crowell said. This will be the first of a series of national security board's Louisville office, will be the presiding executive at institute sessions in the western part of Kentucky while S. H. Outbacker, manager of the board's Ashland office, will act similarly in the eastern half of the state.

At the Frankfort session there will be a general discussion of social security both from the national viewpoint and from the state officials whose work is related.

Business Trend Steady

Further indications that retail business throughout the country is not now pushing forward into higher ground with the vigor that was apparent to the middle of the year, were indicated by the Department of Commerce reports, last week from 37 key cities, just received by the Louisville Courier-Journal. The slackened activities seemed to be due largely to the unfavorable weather and seasonal influences. Merchants pointed out that current comparisons are at a disadvantage because business at this time last year was under a cloud of gloom, due to the anticipation of bonus payments which were to begin June 15. Seasonal influences added to less satisfactory conditions in retail centers, exerted an unfavorable effect on wholesale lines, which generally were slower. It

A MOUNTAIN TOWN STAGES A SHOW

West Liberty staged a magnificent show Monday. With the wife of the President of the United States as the central figure, Morgan County dedicated a quarter-million dollar school building, constructed through aid of the Works Progress Administration.

West Liberty may well be proud many years from now of the fine building that will form the center of education for some twenty-thousand people; they, down through the decades, may be equally as proud of the dedication of that building.

We were struck by the flawless manner in which the entire dedication program was staged; the courtesy of the people—the welcoming hands that they extended to the thousands who were present.

They were typical mountain, people eager to please, anxious to portray their accomplishments. It was a great day for Morgan County and the impression that the small mountain city of approximately a thousand souls gave to its visitors, its audience of a day, might well be copied anywhere.

ALL QUIET ON BUSINESS FRONT

It has been generally quiet on the business front lately, with the indicators tending slightly downward. Activity in the stock market has been sporadic, with occasional "corrective setbacks," taking place, and with a moderately disturbing influence. Nothing noteworthy has occurred in the bond market.

Reasons for the downward trend of the indicators, says Business Week "can be found in the abnormally high level recorded toward the close of 1936 and the beginning of 1937, rather than the current level." In other words, the immediate past, activity was artificially feverish, due largely to prospective labor troubles and prospective price rises. Inventories were built up rapidly—in some cases, to excessive proportions. Buyers thronged a sellers' market. Now the situation is a little different.

The problem of labor difficulties remains—though hopes are held that the national Labor Relations Act will prove a soothing factor to both labor and capital. But the price outlook now is mixed. No longer does it appear certain that continuing rises will take place this year. Copper prices recently dropped more than two cents. A large steel corporation announced that there would be no increases in the third quarter. Scrap prices are down, and are weakening. This is generally true throughout the durable goods market.

The consumer goods market, there are also signs of recession in prices. The average commodity price level has oozed downward fractionally for a number of successive weeks. And the President is known to be turning his attention to the price structure, and tending to the view, held by most economists, that the late upward trend was a dangerous one, filled with inflationary possibilities.

Inescapably connected with the course of prices and the progress of industry is government fiscal policy. The recent budget message was not encouraging in that it showed wide, unfavorable discrepancies between actual and contemplated income. It did stress the need for economy—a need which is making itself felt in Congress, some leaders having come out strongly for cuts all along the line in appropriations. Business awaits the outcome.

A less tangible, but encouraging factor is the outlook in the legislative field. It seems doubtful if Congress will endorse, this session, any major law inimical to industry. A number of such laws have been proposed, such as the thirty-hour week bill, and the corporation licensing bill. But those close to the Washington scene give such laws almost no chance of passing, the radical Congressional bloc being definitely in the minority.

In the meantime, employment is rising, and so are payrolls. Corporation earnings statements covering the first quarter of this year are mostly better than in the same period in 1936. Home building is advancing, though the long anticipated boom in this field is still over the horizon. A few industries, notably electrical manufacturers, have made extraordinary sales records, passing all previous levels by wide margins.

So it looks as if we will be in for a quiet summer, with "paramount issues" at a minimum, save for those already in the headlines. The next six weeks or so in Congress will be concentrated on floor debate of the proposal to increase the membership of the Supreme Court, and there is a good chance that Congress will not adjourn until September.

THE NEW NEUTRALITY ACT AND THE EUROPEAN WAR SITUATION

The other day an army plane winged southward from Washington, bearing a document that finally reached the President at sea, was quickly signed by him. This was the new neutrality act, hurried through House and Senate by congressmen with an anxious eye on the turbid European war situation. This act is a compromise between the advocates of mandatory neutrality and discretionary neutrality—that is, a law which forces the President to forbid trade with belligerent nations, and one which permits him to use his judgment in the light of circumstances.

The new act is not perfect—but it is regarded as being about as good as could be had, and great hopes for keeping America out of war are bound up in it. It places an embargo on arms shipments to fighting nations. And, in the event of war, it gives the President discretionary power to list goods which cannot be exported to belligerents; to deny belligerents use of our ports, etc. Important provision extends this authority to civil as well as international wars.

"War in Europe this summer, perhaps, this fall sure," is being talked by some. But there has been much talk of that kind for several years, and no general war has broken out yet. It looks as if the powers are uncertain of their relative strengths, are doing a considerable amount of bluffing.

CONVENIENCES BRING FIRE HAZARDS

New inventions and developments designed to make domestic and commercial life more efficient and comfortable often bring with them special hazards. The employment of knowledge and care to eliminate these hazards may be the means of saving lives and dollars.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has just issued highly important bulletins dealing with two modern fire and explosion hazards that can be corrected with relative ease—odorless gas, and air-conditioning systems.

Most common of the gas hazards in case of fire, quickly makes its presence known. It is odorless and, however, a few commercial gases are odorless and natural gas is almost completely without odor. When these gases are used for any purpose they should be odorized—a simple and inexpensive process. Had the gas used in the New London, Texas, school been odorized, it is possible that the explosion would never have occurred—the presence of gas would have been noticed before dangerous quantities had escaped.

Improperly designed or constructed air-conditioning systems, can, if fire occurs, rapidly fan the flames until the blaze gets out of control. This recently happened in an Illinois theatre, where a small fire starting on the stage was fanned to great intensity by the air-conditioning unit, and was quickly transmitted to other portions of the building. The National Board's new bulletins, which may be obtained by writing to 65 John St., New York, City, describe the best way of eliminating this hazard.

Thus man's most useful mechanical servants can endanger him and his property. Take no chances with them—a few dollars spent now may save thousands, and a few minutes time invested in protecting your home and place of business may save lives.

WHOSE RESPONSIBILITY IS IT?

Law enforcement authorities have fought commercial frauds for years with a rising curve of success. Their efficiency dates from the day when the old doctrine "let the buyer beware," lost favor in public opinion.

Meanwhile, a new kind of fraud—the liability claim racket—has elbowed its way to national prominence. This crime has chosen its victims impartially from rural and urban areas alike, and while the public is rapidly recognizing its seriousness, few communities have erected a working defense against it. The question is: Whose responsibility is it to crush the racket?

New York is the first city to recognize liability claim abuses as the direct concern of regularly constituted law enforcement officials. Early in 1936, New York County organized an Accident Fraud Bureau. In a year it has apprehended 126 persons, including lawyers, doctors, runners and claimants. So valuable has the Bureau proved that it has now been established on a permanent basis.

In sweeping the dishonest elements and their accomplices out of the legal and medical professions, the Accident Fraud Bureau has struck at fraudulent practices which it is estimated cost more than a million dollars a year in New York alone, and the court calendar is being relieved of congestion at the rate of 30,000 negligence cases a year, according to the original Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

New York's Accident Fraud Bureau has demonstrated that the cost of an adequate and proper defense against the liability claim racket pays for itself many times over, on a dollar and cents basis. Taxpayers, business men, insurance buyers, consumers are being progressively freed of a parasitical burden. Other cities now learn a profitable lesson from what New York has gained, through intelligent acceptance of a civic responsibility. Until they do, solution of the problem is unlikely.

FARMERS DISCOVER A BASIC TRUTH

It is reported by the Dairymen's League News that thousands of communications poured into the New York State Assembly, concerning the Rogers-Allen bill—a measure to discontinue the control of the dairy industry, it having been found injurious to all concerned, as well as impractical, and to replace it with legislation encouraging producer cooperation. An overwhelming percentage of the communications favored the bill.

War Declared On Flies

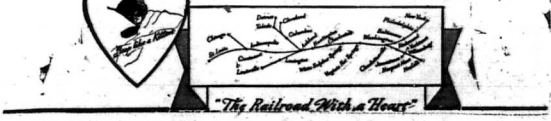

Although there is no military training in the Civilian Conservation Corps, concerted warfare has been declared against flies in all CCC camps as an important part of the campaign against the spread of communicable disease under instructions issued by Major General William E. Cole, commander of the Fifth Corps Area, which includes Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana. Proper health habits are among the greatest benefits of CCC training. Health conditions in CCC camps showed gratifying improvements during the first three months of 1937, according to a report just issued by General Cole. "Greater safeguards must be taken for the health of CCC enrollees because they are not in camp long enough to become 'seasoned' in the same manner as regular army troops of long service. The turnover is such that CCC enrollees practically remain in the category of recruits, both as regards service and age. "The secret of keeping down the sick rate in CCC camps is the maintenance of strict preventive measures against communicable diseases and their spread through CCC camps. Enrollees must be taught strict cleanliness in personal hygiene and camp sanitation. Constant medical inspection is necessary. "Enrollees must be taught to guard against common colds by wearing proper and adequate clothing and protecting their bodies in inclement weather. Barracks must be properly ventilated and kept free from dirt. "Food must be preserved and protected from contamination by flies. Now is the time to put fly traps into operation. All buildings must be adequately screened against disease-bearing insects. "Each camp must have adequate bathing facilities and an adequate supply of dependable drinking water. New enrollees should be properly vaccinated. "Thorough physical examinations should be made twice each month in all camps. Camp physicians are warned to be particularly vigilant in searching out dangerous skin diseases. Camp dispensaries are kept scrupulously clean at all times, and every effort is made to prevent cross-infections occurring during sick call. Only by constant, unceasing inspection can we maintain healthy conditions in our camps. We want every enrollee to benefit from good food, proper clothing and shelter, and from regular work habits and recreation," General Cole concluded. Independent Ads Get Results.

THE STORY THIS FAR:
Selma Landis is accused of the murder of her young husband Robert, who had been running about with a cabaret singer named Polly Brynnes. She maintains her innocence, but admits having a revolver. David Graham, her ex-suitor, also defends her. He affirms having given Selma money to flee as she would agree to a divorce for Selma.

Possible suspects include Polly Brynnes, her alleged brother, Phil, who turns out to be her husband, also Lum Kee and Dancer, co-owners of the night club where Landis spent his last hours. Phil Brynnes is found strangled in his hotel room, then Pedro Dominguez, landlord in Polly's building, is also found dead. Nick Charles aids the "Prince police" because his wife Nora is a cousin of Selma. He finds that the room directly above Polly's has been occupied by a mysterious unknown tenant who spied on her. Then he stakes everything on the chance he will assemble everyone connected with the case (including Selma's Aunt Katherine and her psychiatrists) in this room, for an open discussion.

REDDY KILOWATT
Your electrical servant

THE END

The trend in the Argentine toward decreasing imports of fully manufactured chemicals and related products and a corresponding increase in local manufacture packaging and finishing which has been noted for several years is continuing.

"Yes," she answered. "And when you returned it, you sent a note!"

Selma nodded. Nick swung about to face Dancer, pulling the forged checks from his pocket.

"You traced her signature on this check from the note," he said quietly. "You deposited it to Robert's account. Then you forged Robert's name to the other checks, and told Polly to keep them. Did you cash them?"

"Then I suppose I knocked him off before I get the dough," said Dancer sarcastically. "What kind of a stumble-bum does that make me?"

"The kind that left his fingerprints all over the room when Polly's husband was killed!" cried in Abrams.

"Phil Bryn's dead?" cried Polly in apparent shocked disbelief.

Dancer forgot Abrams' accusation when he heard the truth about Polly's relationship.

"Was Phil your husband?" he demanded of her, his face flushing with hatred.

Polly turned her head away, obviously in fear. Abrams followed up his opening with Dancer.

"You knew he was her husband," he insisted. "You were sitting up here with these ear-phones on, listening to every thing you found out about Phil and killed him."

"I didn't kill him," Dancer said, his black eyes pinpoints of futile rage. "I went to see him, sure. I thought he'd killed Landis and told him so. He said he didn't. That's all I know. I didn't do anything to him."

Abrams turned suddenly to Lum Kee.

"Were you in on this check business?"

"I know nothing about it," said Lum Kee.

"Lou lie!" cried the lieutenant. "You were here with these ear-phones on too! You were mad because they weren't cutting you in on it! You followed Landis that night and tried to stick him up. Something went wrong. You had to kill him and Phil saw you. You went to his hotel and killed him."

"I do not kill Pedro. I do not kill Mr. Landis," replied Lum Kee. "I go out with Dancer to get air."

"You weren't with me!" cried Dancer, springing up from his chair. You can't use me for an alibi, you little—"

The police rushed in to separate the two. Nick, who had quietly picked up the picture found by Nora in Pedro's room, rose and stepped forward.

"Just a minute," he said. "I suggested we meet here I had an idea someone might make a slip. Somebody has."

There was a collective inking of brows. Nobody spoke, but the air was charged with electric tension.

"We've been wrong about the Landis murder," went on Nick.

with a glance at Abrams. "It wasn't a killing for money. It was a murder of revenge. The desire to get even for a supposed wrong of years. Am I right, David?"

David, startled at being so suddenly addressed, looked up with an air of surprise.

"Why, what do you mean?" he asked.

"David," said Nick calmly, "you hated Robert because he took Selma away from you. You didn't want him to go away. You wanted to kill him. You were going to frame Polly and Dancer. When that plan fell through you followed Robert...waited for him to come out of his home and saw Selma with a gun and were terrified that she'd seen you. Then you circled the block to your car and came back to her."

"You took her gun and threw it away, not because you wanted to protect her, but because you wanted to frame her for the murder!"

The only expression on David's face was one of offended indignation. He turned appealingly to Nora.

"Nora, is he fooling?" he asked.

"Sure," said Nick quickly. "Any you were fooling when you said you hadn't seen Pedro for six years. You said Pedro had long white moustaches."

He held up the photograph.

"He had long white moustaches when he died, but look at his picture now. He is six years ago. His moustache was neither white nor long. You'd forgotten him as he was then. When you talked about his long moustache, you remembered him as he was last night...when you killed him!"

Stunned silence followed for an instant. Then David jumped to his feet, drawing his revolver from his pocket. His face was twisted in immanent rage.

"If there's a move from any of you," he cried, "I'll kill you, I'll kill you, so help me!"

"Then it's true!" cried Selma, eyes widening in horror.

"I did kill Robert," went on David. "But not the way you and I wanted to. It was too easy. Too quick. I wanted to see him suffer. The way he'd made me suffer. I wanted to torture him as he'd tortured me."

"David!" screamed Selma. He drew a step nearer her.

"I wanted to see you hang!" he cried. "I wanted to see you gradually grow madder and madder as the days got near when they were to hang you. I won't see that. But I can still see you die."

He leveled his pistol. Nick stepped in front of Selma. At the same moment Lum Kee, with a panache movement, pounced on David from the left.

The gun went off harmlessly in the air. Abrams and two policemen seized David, and pinning his arms, carried him screaming from the room.

The eastbound express was speeding from Frisco toward the Rockies. Nick sat facing Nora and Selma. A soft snoring peacefully beside him on the seat.

"I'm going to bed," said Selma. She rose. "I'm still in a daze. I can't understand...about David."

"His mind had been undermined for some time," said Selma. "Selma kissed Nora good-night. Then she glanced from her cousin to Nick.

"I've got to kiss him too," she said. "Do you mind?"

"Go right ahead," answered Nora. "But I warn you, it's a hard habit to get out of."

When Selma had retired and they were alone, Nora picked up some knitting on which she had been working, and sighed in contentment.

"I suppose we really should decide where we're going," she remarked.

"Do you care?" asked Nick. "We're alone! No reporters, no friends, no surprises!"

"But I haven't any clothes," smiled Nora.

"All the better," replied Nick. "You won't have to pack. As for me, all I need in the world is you and a toothbrush."

He looked down at her work with a puzzled frown.

"What's that you're making?" he asked. "Looks like a baby's garment."

Suddenly a look of amazement spread over his face, when he realized the nature of the garment.

"Why, Mrs. Charles?" he exclaimed.

"And you call yourself a detective!" said Nora.

Nick took her in his arms and kissed her. A gasp opened his eyes and apparently sensing the nature of the discussion, let loose a long drawn-out howl, as he realized his wife was over.

KENTUCKY LEADS IN SOIL CONSERVATION

Kentucky is leading in the eastern central states and in the application of soil building practices in the agricultural conservation program, according to figures released from the College of Agriculture at Lexington.

So far this year, nearly 18,000 farmers of 113 counties in Kentucky have arranged to trade benefit payments in the farm program for high-test superphosphate. Approximately 15,000 tons have been ordered from Sheffield, Alabama, or enough to treat 200,000 acres. Most of this land will be put in alfalfa, red clover, lespedeza, grass or other soil-conserving forage crops.

Last year Kentucky farmers co-operating in the conservation program improved nearly two and a half million acres by seeding and pasturing crops, applying limestone or phosphate, terracing or otherwise soil-building and soil conserving practices.

Dean Thomas F. Cooper, in a statement to the press, highly commended Kentucky farmers for their vision in cooperating in the national conservation program. Millions of acres are to go back into grass or will be put into legumes, thus maintaining and restoring fertility and at the same time providing large amounts of feed for livestock. A great work is being done, Dean Cooper, declared, by farmers, county committees and county agricultural agents.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

The Spencer County Sheep Growers Association insured 1,400 sheep during the past month. Madison county homesteaders have bought 15 new books for their county library.

Leslie county farmers are preparing to buy two purebred bulls cooperatively.

Approximately 200 tons of superphosphate have been spread in Bourbon county.

Bracken county farmers are receiving 40 to 45 cents for wool. The Sheep Growers' Association of Boyle county will give recognition to farmers who produce 100 pounds of lamb and 7 pounds of wool per ewe.

Luther House, of Allen county, bought 140 high grade ewes last month.

The Kiwanis club of Pikeville ordered six bushels of Boone County White seed corn for 4-H club members to use.

S. O. Arnett, H. H. Hawkworth and Dora Adams have seeded large acreages of alfalfa in Magoffin county.

Several Daviess county farmers are sowing root-rot resistant strains of tobacco seed as demonstrations.

Eight homemakers' clubs in Simpson county have had all-day meetings to learn cheese making.

A marl bed on the farm of A. J. Marshall in Garrard county has provided 1,000 tons of marl for local use.

CITY ATTRACTS THREE OUT OF 10 FROM FARM

That three out of 10 farm-reared young men and women leave Anderson county for the city is revealed in population studies made at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Four out of ten remain on farms either in Anderson county or in adjoining counties. Three more stay by farming as a life work, but move farther away in the state or to other states.

The studies help maintain city populations, which are never self-sustaining. Many of the Anderson county boys and girls go to Louisville, the Cincinnati area. There some of them learn trades, but more do semi-skilled work. Less than a tenth of them become clerks or enter professions.

United States Senator Alben W. Barkley, Paducah, who spoke just about an hour today as did Mrs. Roosevelt, delivered an address at Camargo, declaring that she "not only is the First Lady of the land because she is the wife of the President but First Lady in her own right because of her devotion to the American public."

He also presented John E. Buckingham, State Treasurer, and Judge L. K. Wood, Hopkinsville, State Director of the National Emergency Council. Mrs. McNamee introduced Mrs. Roosevelt as a "real friend of education."

Prior to laying the cornerstone at Camargo, the First Lady expressed gratitude that the Federal Government had seen fit to cooperate with localities in being of advantage to the people, especially in the cause of education so that children might be given the fundamental tools with which to meet the opportunities that come to them in life.

She referred to the depression as something that drew the people together and abolished sectionalism, adding "we have become much more a nation than we ever were before the depression."

JUNE 12 FINAL DATE FOR FILING A. C. F. WORKSHEETS

June 12 has been fixed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration as the last day on which worksheets for the 1937 conservation program will be accepted at county offices...

Worksheets are used in preparing information that will help farmers plan their operations so as to take part in the program. However, farmers who file worksheets are under no obligation to take part in the program...

Two reasons are given for requiring worksheets to be in county offices not later than June 12. First, information prepared from worksheets filed later than June 12 could not well be supplied to farmers in time to aid them in their work this year...

SOPHISTICATED, MODERN SIMPLE "GET-TOGETHERS"

In the days when the coming of guests meant hours of labor in the kitchen, entertaining wasn't half the fun it is now. In this modern age of the "get-together" and gracious invitation to a few couples brings a friendly group into your home for these informal gatherings that cement real friendships.

Entertaining such as this is an easy party for the hostess. When you are tired and fatigued, then, too, today's entertaining burdens are shared so willingly by the "Man-of-the-house" when cooled to the appetizer beverages—he'd be disappointed if you wouldn't let him do it.

The hostess of course will probably fix the appetizers that she has occasion. And here, too, she will thank modern ice refrigeration as she removes a tray to the dining room. The party, which possibly has been in the ice refrigerator since last Sunday's apple pie went into the oven...

Tiny sweet pickled beets also make a delightful appetizer and here is a unique suggestion for preparing them. With an apple corer make a cavity in the beets and into the hole tuck a tightly rolled fillet of herring.

COUNTRY BUSINESS BEST IN MIDDLE WEST

Daily average sales in small towns and rural areas showed a larger increase in the Middle West than in other parts of the country as compared with February 1936. Estimates just received by the Economic District Office of the Department of Commerce, based on dollar value of rural chain store and mail order sales, indicate that sales in the Middle West were about 13 per cent above February of last year as compared with an increase of 11 1/2 per cent for the country as a whole.

THE FARM AND HOME

Headaches, backaches and nervous troubles are sometimes caused by improperly fitted or the wrong kind of shoes. It is especially important that properly fitted shoes be worn during the growing years, if the feet are to be free from aches and pains in adult life.

Lack of good water helps to reduce livestock profits on many farms. Where at all possible, water should be piped from springs, streams or wells to concrete tanks, so that a clean, fresh supply will be available at all times.

For 24 hours after farrowing give the sow nothing but clean water. Then begin with a thin sloup, gradually increasing the feed until she is on full feed in a week or 10 days, which will be about 100 pounds of grain a day per head.

To screen the house well use No. 16 mesh screen wire. This will keep out mosquitoes as well as flies. Full-length screens hung on hinges at the top, and with close fitting frames which hook at the bottom, are most satisfactory.

John D. Rockefeller Dies At Age Of 98

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., founder of one of the world's most colossal private fortunes and benefactor of humanity, died in his ninety-eight year, Sunday, May 23 at his winter home, the Case-

Death came to the capitalist, who long ago had withdrawn from the tumult of the financial world at 4:05 o'clock Sunday morning in the quiet of a Sabbath dawn. His physician, Dr. Harry L. Merriday, attributed it to sclerotic myocarditis, a hardening of the heart muscles.

It was for the man who had fought his way up from the farm, who had seen wars and panics, booms and depressions, a peaceful, painless death. He had been in comparatively good health since coming South last October, when he drifted into a coma at midnight.

Only once did he rouse himself, and that was to whisper to his valet and perusal servant of 20 years, John H. Yordi.

Yordi was unable to understand, but it did not sound as if his master knew the day was near, he said.

When Dr. Merriday arrived at 3:30, the frail patient, wasted by the ravages of age, was unconscious, gradually his pulse grew weaker, finally stopped.

The man who pyramided his savings from a $450 a week job into the Standard Oil trust which once controlled three-fourths of the country's output, was dead.

He had bequeathed more than $500,000,000 on carefully chosen philanthropies, transferred much of his holdings to the present head of the clan, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and died leaving what a family spokesman described as a "relatively small, very liquid," estate.

Plans were made to return the body to the Rockefeller estate at Pocantico Hills, Tarrytown, N. Y., for funeral services. A private car probably will leave here Monday, arriving in the North the next day.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the Riverside Church, New York City, will officiate at the funeral, which will be held Wednesday morning in the same room of the Pocantico Hills mansion where last rites were said 22 years ago for Mr. Rockefeller's wife. He will be buried beside her the following day in Lake View Cemetery, Cleveland, in accordance with his own wishes.

None of the immediate family was present at the end, so quickly did it come, and with so little warning. The venerable capitalist, who would have been 98 July 8, had expressed confidence in recent years that he would live to be 100, and his condition had seemed to justify his optimism.

Friday he seemed restless and unable to sleep, but then Dr. Merriday said he had become alarmed.

That afternoon he was taken downstairs in an elevator and wheeled out into the garden. He passed an hour in the open air.

Friday morning he said to his senior secretary, Ward Madison: "I am very tired."

Rockefeller decided to remain in bed all day. Dr. Merriday called frequently, but there were no indications that the heart that drove Rockefeller through the tempestuous world of finance was near to failure.

At noon, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., made a routine telephone call from New York and was assured there was nothing concerning his father's condition that required his presence in Florida.

Sport Spots

The first home doubleheader of the season will be played at Crosley Field Monday, Memorial Day, with the rampaging Pittsburgh Pirates opposing the Redlegs.

Picked to finish fourth in the pre-season predictions the Pirates have leaped to the front and now, due to their sensational early showing, they are rated as the pennant favorite.

The switch in the estimation of the Pirates is due to the effectiveness displayed by the pitching corps. Possessor of great strength in other positions, the Pirates proved many times they would be championship contenders with porous help.

Quietly, but efficiently, Manager Pie Traynor made some reinforcements during the winter and spring, and today he finds himself with what is rated the best balanced outfit in the circuit. He obtained "Southpaw" Pitches, Ed Brandt, brought along Rookie Russ Bauers, then effected a deal with Philadelphia for Joe Bow-

Bowman's addition has been the greatest aid of all to the Corsairs. His pitching has been a sensation. He is not only a right hander, but was with Philadelphia, but neither is Pittsburgh the same team.

Headlining the Pirates' fancy cast for the showing here will be Paul Waner, last year's National League batting leader, and Arkie Vaughan, who led the circuit in 1935. Other prominent Pirates include Lee Handley, Bill Brubaker, Gus Suhr, Clarence Jensen and sensational Rookie Johnny Dickshot.

Tickets for the big Decoration Day event now are on sale at the usual places, such as Walnut Streets, Cincinnati. Mail orders will receive prompt attention.

LUTHER BRADLEY SEEKS G.O.P. NOMINATION FOR CLERK

TO THE VOTERS OF ROWAN COUNTY:

Citizens of Rowan County, I made the race for County Clerk 4 years ago. I was defeated by Mr. Vernon Alfrey. I am on the ticket again for Clerk. I am a crippled man and I have a family to support. I don't even own a home for my family.

I am well qualified for the office, and if the voters put me in I pledge my cooperation to each individual and the County as a whole to look after the business of the office honestly and soberly.

I would like for those who do not know me personally to make an inquiry as to my qualifications and morality. If you find them satisfactory I would appreciate your consideration and support.

Ashland Will Conduct Meet

Ashland will be the scene of an institute of social security on Friday, June 11, it was announced today by Benedict Crowell, director of the social security board in region V, which includes the states of Kentucky, Michigan and Ohio.

At 11 o'clock on the morning of that day a general session of the institute will be held at a meeting place to be announced later.

One of the speakers on the program is expected to be Judge Lorenzo K. Wood, director of the national emergency council in the ing the round-tables.

It is also planned to show social security films at the Ashland meeting and to have an educational exhibit which will be placed in the Ventura Hotel where it may be seen prior to and after the speaking program. Complete sets of informational material will be distributed to all who attend the Ashland session and the round-tables that are to follow. All of the meetings are open to the public.

Mr. Crowell said the holding of the institute marks the beginning of a plan of the social security board to broaden its educational program in Kentucky. He expressed his appreciation of the cooperation which is being given by all agencies of the government in the state of Kentucky making possible a traveling school.

VEGETABLES NOT TO FORGET

Most gardens are started, and the peas, onions, cabbage, greens and possibly, potatoes, are planted. No doubt, the rest of the garden is planned, in so far as the ordinary vegetables are concerned. However this year's garden should not consist merely of the vegetables that have been the custom to grow, but might well include a few new ones, with new flavors, as being a venture mildly exciting, in fact here are a few. Broccoli—Many gardeners try each year to grow cauliflower, but each year some hopes crash, for cauliflower is not easy to grow successfully, in Kentucky's latitude. There is, however, a vegetable that resembles cauliflower in flavor, and which, if its green color is the asset dictators say it is, surpasses in food value. Furthermore, good crops can be realized, with no more trouble than is needed in growing early cabbage. This is broccoli, of late years appearing quite generally in food stores, and in Kentucky gardens, too, but by slow steps. Green-sprouting Calabrian is the variety. Gardeners may start their own plants now, but better would be to get them from the same persons who handle cabbage slips. Greens—it is foregone that all gardens now include a row or two of early greens, mustard, kale or rape, and possibly some spinach. In planting, may it be said that, in spite of the much-touted "small-boy's" objection to it, having more spinach would not be the tremendous propaganda in its behalf.

All of these are spring greens, however, whose use ends when warmer weather starts.

A WOMAN SITTING IN THE SUN

I saw her sitting in the sun Beside her open door; A woman with her work long done, And something in the look she wore Arrested me—it was so still. So calm and quiet, and her eyes Were cool and deep, and very blue. I paused and watched her wistfully. And glancing up, she smiled at me. I could not pass, my whole heart yearned To know the secret she had learned. I sat beside her in the sun. I spoke of my desire— The fewer of the days had fled Within my heart like fire. She smiled, she said, "Child I am old. And there is little to be told. Give this, I long since learned to know That life is good, and if we go Quietly at our work and play,
