MOREHEAD, Ky. --- If you're interested in a "once-in-a-lifetime" chance to travel and study overseas this summer, Morehead State University may have just the right educational experience for you.

During the 1985 summer sessions, MSU will be offering 12 courses in six different countries in conjunction with the programs of the Cooperative Center for Study in Britain (CCSB), the Kentucky Institute for European Studies (KIES), and Kansai Gaidai University near Osaka, Japan, according to Drs. Charles Holt and Kent Freeland, MSU's co-coordinators of overseas study.

"These programs for overseas study lend a new dimension to a student's educational background," Drs. Holt and Freeland said. "For some, it's a once-in-a-lifetime chance to travel and study abroad."

Drs. Holt and Freeland said that the CCSB has two terms during the summer. One is based in the homes of families in various British cities and the other is based at Queen Elizabeth College in London.

They added that year-long courses are available in both Britain and Japan.

"Our recruiting this year is ahead of last year primarily because returning students have been telling their friends about their experiences in these programs," they said.

The application deadline for overseas study through MSU is March 15. Programs are open to full-time and part-time students and more information is available from Dr. Charles Holt, 114 Rader Hall, UPO 738, Morehead, KY 40351, telephone: (606) 783-2590 or Dr. Kent Freeland, 401 Ginger Hall, UPO 795, Morehead, KY 40351, telephone: (606) 783-2006.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Lt. Gov. Steven Beshear said at Morehead State University recently that preserving student financial aid and increasing faculty salaries to make them nationally competitive are the most critical issues facing higher education in Kentucky.

Beshear told a campus press conference that if anticipated federal cuts in student loans and grants become realities, "there will be a greater need for student financial aid in the state. This could mean that students will have to go to college closer to home and that will be important for regional universities and the community colleges."

Keeping good faculty is a problem in Kentucky's public colleges and universities, according to the lieutenant governor.

"A few years back we seemed to be competitive nationally, but I think we've slipped in recent years," he stated. "If Kentucky is to retain quality faculty members, this problem will have to be dealt with."

Beshear predicted that physical plant needs would be the lowest priority item for higher education in the state in the immediate future.

"If you don't get good students and quality faculty, you don't need the buildings," he said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Robert Franzini, associate professor of art at Morehead State University, has a print titled "Young Boy With A Bat" on display through March 3, in the Rose Art Museum at Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass. The print is among many chosen to be part of the Boston Printmakers 37th National Exhibition.

The exhibition is a competitive show for participants and only about 5 percent of the entries are chosen, according to Franzini. "I was very happy and honored to have my print selected," Franzini said. "Three years ago was my first time to be chosen, among 2,000 entries of which only 100 or so were chosen, it's very competitive," he said.

"Young Boy With A Bat" was completed last summer and one of a series by Franzini. "Young Boy With A Bat" was picked by juror, David Kiehl, assistant curator of prints and photographs at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Colette Dowling, best-selling author of "The Cinderella Complex," will speak at Morehead State University Feb. 13, beginning the second half of the 1984-85 Concert and Lecture Series.

A successful contributor to such magazines as "Harper's," "The New York Times Magazine," "New York" and "Redbook," Dowling has been writing about women's issues for many years.

"In my best work, I have used myself as a bellweather," Dowling said, "examining closely the ambiguities and conflicts in my own life and seeing how these relate to the lives of women in general."

After thorough self-examination, research and interviews, Dowling said, she wrote "The Cinderella Complex," whose theme is "women's hidden fear of independence."

She said that women seem to like her book because she knows, from her own experiences, what they are going through. "I know about having children, about husbands, about divorce and death."

Dowling is the mother of three college-age children, a graduate of Trinity College, Washington, D.C., and the 1958 guest editor of "Mademoiselle" magazine.

The 10:20 a.m. lecture in Button Auditorium is free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University, in cooperation with Ashland Community College, is offering upper division business courses to undergraduate students through "Weekend College" in Ashland, according to Dr. Bernard Davis, acting dean of MSU's College of Professional Studies.

The classes, which meet Friday nights and Saturdays, include junior and senior level accounting, management, intermediate microeconomics and labor relations courses. Although business finance meets on a weeknight this semester, it is also part of the program. Each class, ranging from 13-20 people, meets for five weeks.

Dr. Davis said the courses are aimed at people who wish to build on their two-year degrees or people who want to build on a four-year program from MSU. This is made possible by using courses from ACC. "Weekend College" also helps students working on MBA and ABA degrees.

To get into the program, a person must have an associate degree in his/her area of study from ACC or the equivalent from an accredited college or university.

The idea for "Weekend College" came from Dr. William M. Whitaker, III, assistant vice-president for academic affairs, two years ago when Whitaker was dean of the School of Business. He had heard about another institution's use of a similar program and wanted to get MSU involved.

"Ashland was a prime market because of its ideal location, and they had a community college," Whitaker said.

After gathering information about the program, MSU negotiated with ACC and signed the agreement in Dec. 1982 to begin the program the following semester.

Bonnie H. Bailey, MSU instructor of data processing, has been coordinator of the "Weekend College" since it began. She takes care of correspondence courses, student records and class schedules. Together, she and Dr. Davis oversee the program.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A "Tax Clinic" designed to help people with their 1984 tax returns will air on Morehead State University's public radio station WMKY (FM 90) Saturday, March 2, at 11 a.m., according to Larry Netherton, station manager.

The two-hour national call-in program will be broadcast live and will deal with new IRS regulations and other frequently asked tax questions, Netherton said. A special toll free number will be available.

Hosting the "Tax Clinic" will be Noah Adams, co-anchor of National Public Radio's award-winning "All Things Considered." Panelists are Helen Herzer, IRS taxpayer education coordinator for Boston; Ramondo Gee, IRS taxpayer service manager for Detroit and a former IRS auditor; and Nancy Stephens of the National Society of Public Accountants, a 17,000-member organization of tax consultants.

Some of the 1984 tax changes to be discussed include new taxes on some Social Security benefits, new rules for tax shelters, new limits on charitable contributions, new regulations for medical deductions, new rules on income averaging, and more stringent requirements for record-keeping for 1985.

"Tax Clinic" is a production of American Public Radio.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Some 300 high school students from Kentucky and surrounding states will participate in the 25th Annual Morehead State University Band Clinic, Feb. 14-17, in Baird Music Hall.

Students from Kentucky, West Virginia, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Virginia, selected by their high school band directors or by audition by MSU, will be placed on Thursday, rehearse Friday and Saturday, and present a concert Sunday, according to Eugene Norden, MSU assistant professor of music and director of bands.

Norden said the clinic gives high school students an opportunity and a musical experience that would otherwise be impossible.

"We have maintained for many years now that it is truly an 'experience of excellence' for them," he added.

During the placement and seating procedures on Thursday, Norden said, various bands will be formed. Each band will present a concert in Duncan Recital Hall Sunday beginning at 1 p.m.

The Sunday concerts are free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Use of Morehead State University's Button Auditorium has been sharply reduced because its stage rigging system has deteriorated to the point of being a safety hazard, MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard announced Monday.

Correcting the problem is expected to cost up to $100,000, he added.

"I have directed that Button Auditorium be utilized only for lecture-type programs which do not require use of the overhead rigging system," Dr. Reinhard said. "We will dismantle the system as soon as possible to minimize the hazardous conditions until permanent repairs can be made."

Dr. Reinhard said he acted on the recommendation of Porter Dailey, acting vice president for administrative and fiscal services, who had been advised by two outside consultants that the rigging system was unsafe. The second consultant reported late last week.

"The problem first was called to our attention last semester by Dr. Charles Grimsley of the theatre faculty and his assessment of the situation was confirmed by the consultants," Dailey stated. "We reinforced the supporting cables at that time to reduce the potential of an accident but since have concluded that closing the stage area is the most prudent course."

Dr. Reinhard added:

"Both consultants told us that the system had not been properly maintained for several years and that we had no choice but to replace it. Unfortunately, the total replacement costs might have been avoided if corrective action had been taken when the problem was identified a few years ago."

Dailey said that MSU would take bids on the project as soon as funds become available and that performance-type programs now scheduled in Button Auditorium would be shifted to other campus facilities.

Of five events scheduled in Button this week, four have been moved to other sites. The Chi Omega Follies on Tuesday and Wednesday nights will be staged in the Crager Room. The Wednesday night movie by Program Council will be shown in the Breck Auditorium. The Thursday night performance of Jubilation! Dance, a Black History Month event sponsored by Arts in Morehead, will be presented in Wetherby Gymnasium. The high school regional drama festival on Friday and Saturday has been switched to Kibbey Theatre.

The Wednesday lecture by author Colette Dowling will remain in Button and will utilize only the front area of the stage.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A nursing workshop on leadership style will be held Thursday, Feb. 28, at Morehead State University to provide information on leadership as a role in nursing and on basic leadership styles, according to Pauline Ramey, MSU assistant professor of nursing.

This program, part of the 1985 spring semester schedule of the Continuing Education Program, is for registered nurses, supervisors, head nurses and team leaders in all areas of nursing, Ramey said.

Ramey said the workshop has been approved by the Kentucky Board of Nursing for six contact hours to be awarded by MSU's Department of Nursing and Allied Health Services.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. in the East Room of the Adron Doran University Center. Classes will be from 9 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. Cost for the workshop is $30 which includes breaks and handout materials.

Registration information is available from the MSU Department of Nursing and Allied Health Services, UPO 853, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone numbers are (606) 783-2635 or 2632.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Fred Busroe, Morehead State University associate professor of biological and environmental sciences, has been awarded his third faculty research grant to study birds and their habitats in the Cave Run Lake area, especially the Minor E. Clark Fish Hatchery.

According to Busroe, few ornithological studies have been conducted in the Cave Run Lake area in the last 20 years. He hopes to determine changes in the avifaunal populations that may have taken place due to environmental changes such as, strip mining, reclamation and dam construction in this area of the Cumberland Plateau.

"Eastern Kentucky ornithology has been ignored to a certain degree," Busroe said. "This makes it difficult to draw conclusions."

Busroe said the last comprehensive publication of Kentucky avifauna was in 1965 by Robert Mengle. At this point he has observed 174 species in the Cave Run area. This list includes 14 species that Mengle listed as unrecorded on the Cumberland Plateau. In Rowan County alone he has sighted a total of 210 species.

"The most unusual sightings have been of a Ruddy Turnstone and a Wood Stork. One of the more interesting events has been the sighting of five Bald Eagles in the area," Busroe added.

Busroe will submit his findings to the Kentucky Ornithological Society for publication in the "Kentucky Warbler." He has had several of his observations published. The findings of his second grant should appear in the March issue of the "Kentucky Warbler."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- As a result of a newly-funded project at Morehead State University, the talents of six eastern Kentucky vintage fiddlers will be preserved on audio and video recordings, according to Shirley Hamilton, director of human resources, and Marynell Young, folk arts research specialist, of MSU's Appalachian Development Center (ADC).

The ADC has been given a $1,000 grant by the Kentucky Folklife Foundation to tape the first of the six fiddlers.

Young selected those elder statesmen of eastern Kentucky who represent the reality of the myth of the highland fiddler. These fiddlers learned to play before the proliferation of modern electronic devices. The project should be completed by June 30, 1985. It will allow recognition and appreciation of the tunes that have survived through the years.

Young is also an accomplished fiddler. Both her grandfathers, her father, and her uncle are fiddlers. She didn't realize until much later in life how much her family had to offer in the way of music. At the age of 30, she bought a fiddle and began taking lessons.

In Knoxville, Tenn., Young played with a local string band at the Dogwood Arts Festival in 1978. From 1978-1984 she and her husband, Gene Young, played fiddle for the "Kings English String Band," composed of professors of the Texas A & M University English department. She and her husband are currently with a Morehead group called the "White Horse String Band," established in 1984. Group members are Ron Dobler, banjo; Marynell Young, fiddle; Bill Worrell, bass; Gene Young, fiddle, and Dean Owen, guitar.

The authentic traditional mountain music played by Young's group is neither "Blue Grass" nor "New Grass." Traditional music is rarely written down. Instead, a player may learn many tunes from some older performer.

As part of the Appalachian Celebration, June 24-29, Young is coordinating a two-day gathering of traditional musicians on Friday, June 28, at 7:30 p.m., in Baird Music Hall. Some performers will be Frank George, Leo Blair, Alfred Baily, "The Foot In The Door String Band," the "White Horse String Band," the "Ratcliff Family Band," and possibly some of older vintage fiddlers. Admission is free.

On Saturday, June 29, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., there will be an outdoor stage at the Appalachian Arts and Crafts Market featuring traditional music. There will also be free workshops in fiddle, twin fiddle, banjo, bass fiddle, mandolin and guitar.

More information is available from Marynell Young, ADC, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone number is (606) 783-2077.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has modified its summer school calendar to accommodate public school personnel adversely affected by "snow days."

A special, two-week session starting June 22 has been added to the calendar for Summer I. The term will include two Saturday class meetings and students will be limited to three semester hours of credit.

MSU's regular four-week Summer I will open June 5 and close July 3. Summer II starts July 8 and ends Aug. 2. Summer commencement is scheduled Aug. 3 at 1:30 p.m.

"The calendar adjustment will benefit many of our alumni and other public school educators who need or desire additional college coursework during the summer of 1985," said MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard. "We are pleased to offer our solution to this problem which was caused by the bad weather."

Dr. Roberta T. Anderson, MSU's vice president for academic affairs, said classes to be offered during the special session had been carefully selected to be compatible with the concentrated timeframe.

"We are responding to the special needs of our students without compromising the academic quality of our summer courses," she said.

Dr. Anderson said she had encouraged faculty members to be flexible in working with summer students delayed by the late dismissal of the public schools.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- David R. Brunk, a former minor league baseball executive from Fort Myers, Fla., is the new director of Morehead State University's athletic fund raising organization, the Eagle Athletic Fund.

Brunk, 35, came to MSU from the position of owner and general manager of the Fort Myers Royals in the Florida State League. He retains a part ownership in the Watertown Pirates of the New York-Penn League.

A graduate of Ball State University, Brunk was named "Midwest League General Manager of the Year" in 1974 during his service with the Waterloo Royals. He also served as general manager of the Jacksonville Suns in the Southern League, as business manager of the San Antonio Brewers in the Texas League and as an administrative assistant with the Oklahoma City 89ers of the American Association.

"We are pleased to have someone with Dave's outstanding sports background in this important position," said Bill Redwine, MSU's director of development. "His experience in fund raising and promotions will be valuable to the Eagle Athletic Fund."

Brunk is married and the father of a daughter.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University President Herb. F. Reinhard will speak to graduates of MSU's Job Training Program courses at a March 1 graduation ceremony at 1:30 p.m. in the Patti Bolin Room of the Lloyd Cassity Building.

Eighteen students will receive certificates of graduation for completing courses in Account Clerk/Data Entry and Tourism/Retail Sales.

Graduates of the Account Clerk/Data Entry course are Pamela Chafin, Anita Cundiff, Toni Dimopoulis, Allen Donahue, Carol Jefferson and Betty Lambert, all of Morehead; Venus Butler and Noella Shope, both of Vanceburg; Judy Mers, Flemingsburg; Ana Nolen, Olive Hill; and David Sandman, Muses Hills.

Graduates of the Tourism/Retail Sales course are Marilyn Kidd, Gay Caudill, Sherry Goodner and Charlene Burgdoerfer, all of Morehead; Michael Highly, Owingsville; and Teresa Taylor and Cynthia Easterling, both of Clearfield.

Job Training Program courses, offered through MSU's Appalachian Development Center (ADC), are funded through the TENCO Private Industry Council with monies from the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA). Courses are short-term, frequently offered programs which combine classroom instruction with on-site work experience.

Twenty Rowan County businesses and professional offices have helped train students in MSU's Job Training Program courses during the past two years. Many graduates are now working full time as a direct result, according to Shirley Hamilton, assistant director for human resources at ADC.

According to Hamilton, the courses combine classroom instruction with practical work experience. Training is offered in Account Clerk/Data Processing, Food Service Management, Tourism/Retail Sales and Pharmacy Technician. Forty-two graduates have been hired as a direct result of training and on-site placements.

"Private industry participation in these training programs is crucial," Hamilton said. "The classroom portions teach basic skills and personal development, but the on-site training is the key to employment."

Rowan County businesses who have participated in the on-site training program are Bellamy Insurance Company; Rowan County Clerk's Office; Phillip Tackett, CPA; Sheila Arnett, DMD; Frontier Housing; Life Care Center; 12 different MSU offices; State Farm Insurance; St. Claire Medical Center; Town and Country Florists; Peoples Store; Stucky's Merle Norman; Heck's; Roses Department Store; Martin's Department Store; Revco Drugs; Battson Drugs; Begley Drugs; and the Morehead Clinic Pharmacy.

New classes in Tourism/Retail Sales and Food Service Management begin March 25. Additional information is available from Alice Mark, training supervisor, Appalachian Development Center, Morehead State University, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone number is (606) 783-2370.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Carolyn Price, Dunbar, W.Va., has been named a general management consultant in Morehead State University's Small Business Development Center (SBDC), according to Dr. Donald L. Fogus, director of the MSU Appalachian Development Center (ADC).

A graduate of California State College at Hayward, with an MBA from Cornell University, Price previously worked as a management analyst for Stuart-Kirk Associates, San Francisco. She has also been executive director of the Alameda County Ex-Offenders Skills Bank in Oakland, Calif. and assistant business manager/bursar for the Peralta Community College District in Oakland.

Price will work in the new SBDC sub-district office in Pikeville, located on the campus of Pikeville College, according to Robert Justice, program for the East Kentucky SBDC. Justice said Price will work with small businesses in the 10 counties closest to Pikeville.

"We're very pleased to have Carolyn Price join our staff," Dr. Donald L. Fogus, director of MSU's Appalachian Development Center, said. "She will expand our Business Development component by adding new skills and experiences."

The SBDC is part of the Appalachian Development Center, with funding from the U.S. Small Business Administration, under the direction of Wilson C. Grier, assistant director for business development at ADC.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A Morehead State University adjunct professor of art has been chosen as an "Outreach Artist" by the Huntington Galleries, Huntington, W. Va., in a new program titled "Outreach Program for Kentucky Students," according to Thomas Sternal, professor of art and head of the Department of Art at MSU.

Janelle Delicata has been selected to represent the Galleries, Kentucky Museum Volunteers, Kentucky teachers and MSU, said Sternal. Delicata, formerly of Newtonville, Mass., received her undergraduate degree from the Maryland Institute College of Art and her master of fine arts degree from the School for American Craftsmen, Rochester Institute of Technology. She worked for ten years as a fiber artist in New England. She has been at MSU since August 1984.

"I will visit area schools and introduce students to textiles, tools and the process of fiber making," said Delicata. "Each student will also produce a swatch for a tapestry from their school, and the finished tapestries will be displayed at Huntington Galleries during June 1985."

Much of the equipment to be used for the program will be provided by MSU, according to Dr. Robert L. Burns, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. "Morehead State is happy to support this program considering the experience and educational value the program will provide," Dr. Burns said.

"I feel it is important for MSU and the business community to work together in providing students with educational experiences that would otherwise be impossible," he added.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Ray T. Fortunato, assistant vice president for personnel administration at Pennsylvania State University, has been awarded a consulting contract to develop new personnel policies for Morehead State University.

The lowest of three bidders on the project, Fortunato has been involved in higher education personnel administration for 36 years and is responsible for the personnel program on Penn State's 22 campuses. He is a former president of the College and University Personnel Association and has received the group's three major awards. He has 17 publishing credits, as well.

Draft copies of the policies developed by Fortunato will be reviewed by the President's Cabinet in March and then referred to the Faculty Senate and to an ad hoc committee of non-teaching employees for review.

The documents will return to the Cabinet for a final review before being presented by President Reinhard to the Board of Regents for adoption on Friday, April 26.

"Mr. Fortunato has an outstanding reputation as a personnel consultant and we are eager to see the policies he is formulating for MSU," said Ron Moss, director of personnel services. "His work will cover all of the University's employees and hopefully will eliminate the confusion caused by our present policies."

The consultant has made three trips to the campus in connection with the project.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Three one-day workshops have been scheduled as continuing education for nursing and allied health educators this semester by the Morehead State University Department of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences, according to Pauline Ramey, R.N., who coordinates continuing education for nursing and allied health sciences at MSU.

A Gerontology Conference will be the first workshop and will be held Thursday, March 7, in MSU's Reed Hall Auditorium, Room 419. This conference is designed for the purpose of discussing the unique nursing needs of the elderly client and the implication of these needs on nursing education.

Instructors will be Barbara Seely Moore, M.S.N., R.N., director of nursing at Winsor Care Center, Mt. Sterling; Geri Hall, M.S.W., educational coordinator, Pathways, Inc., Morehead; and Nancy Bennett, nutrition specialist, Ross Laboratories, Cincinnati, Ohio.

On Thursday, April 18, the second of the three programs will be held in the Adron Doran University Center (ADUC), Crager Room. Dr. Harriet Schneider, R.N., professor of nursing at the University of Mississippi will instruct a program on test construction in the health professions. According to Ramey, this workshop will focus on the relationship between course objectives and evaluation techniques and the principles involved in test construction.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- When spring break rolls around, Dr. Victor Howard, Morehead State University professor of history, will spend his vacation researching.

Howard, who has been at MSU since 1966, spends about eight hours a day doing research for various projects. "I have always wanted to be a detective, and doing research is my idea of looking for clues to something I don't know everything about," Howard said.

Howard's career in education has taken him from Harlan County, Ky., to Chicago, Ill. After working in Chicago for 16 years, Howard returned to MSU, where he was promised he could teach the courses on slavery. He had offers from other colleges and universities, but chose to return to Kentucky.

A prolific writer, Howard has written over 50 published articles in his career, including recent contributions to the "Encyclopedia of Southern History" and the "Encyclopedia of Religion in the South." His latest book, tentatively titled "Conscience and Slavery: A Study of Domestic Missions and American Slavery," is on its way to publishers.

"I teach what I research, and when I research, I just dig deeper into what I am teaching in my classes," Howard said.

Because of his dedication to research, he has won numerous awards, including the Distinguished Faculty Award and the Distinguished Researcher Award at MSU. He has also won the Robert Connor Award from the North Carolina Historical Society for his work on abolitionist John Brown, and the Penrose Award from the American Philosophical Society for religious history research.

2-2-2-2-2

Howard insists, however, he could not accomplish all of his research alone. "The librarians help me a lot, especially with inter-library loan." He said that MSU "has the best collection of abolitionist material in the state."

Howard doesn't always rely on inter-library loan for locating research. He travelled to the Amsted Research Center in New Orleans, La., to find material for his contributing article in the "Encyclopedia of Religion in the South." During spring break, he will be going to Washington, D.C. to finish research on another project.

Although he has involved himself in research for most of his life, Howard has found time to teach just about anyone. While he was a training commander during World War II, he had, among his pupils, members of Chiang Kai-Shek's Air Force and sailors from England and France. He has even taught Crow Indians on a Montana reservation.

Howard began his college career at Eastern Kentucky University, then transferred to MSU and earned his bachelor's degree. He earned his master's degree in social science at George Peabody College and received his doctorate at the Ohio State University.

Even though the Wallins, Ky., native has been to many places and held various types of teaching jobs, he is still doing what he loves most: teaching and learning history.

MOREHEAD, KY 40351

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Three years of work and planning by the Morehead State University Alumni Association has resulted in the creation of the university's first Student Alumni Ambassadors program.

"This is a test case for us," David Bolt, Alumni Association president, said at a recent meeting. "The Alumni Association is dedicated to involving more students, and we hope this program will encourage more interaction between students and alumni."

More than 40 students applied last fall for the new program. The 38 selected represent a cross-section of university students, said association Executive Vice President Don Young.

"These students represent the university and alumni. We want them to be representative of the whole student body," Young said.

To apply, students must have attended MSU for at least one semester, have a 2.5 grade-point average, be enrolled full time, show enthusiasm for the ambassador program, and have time available for the volunteer project.

Ambassadors were selected by an interview board consisting of faculty alumni officials and students.

"We have high hopes for the program," Young said. "The idea of a student ambassadors program is not new to other universities, and we feel such a program can succeed here at MSU."

"The association started planning the ambassadors program three years ago. We worked to gain sponsorship of the Executive Council and then coordinated the program with the president's office," he said. "We even attended workshops on the subject."

(more)

Sophomore David Adair of Slater Branch, a biology major, said he wanted to be an ambassador because he felt it was a way he could "pay the university back."

"I received an MSU Board of Regents scholarship and I felt that by working for the Alumni Association as a student ambassador I could pay the university back for all the help I've received from them."

Another student, James Wampler, a Burgin native majoring in business administration with an emphasis in management, said he was intrigued by the student ambassador program.

"I had talked with Don Young and he told me about the program. It really interested me and I knew then that I wanted to work as an ambassador," Wampler said.

Wampler, a senior who is chief justice of the student court and a member of several social, professional, and honorary organizations, sees his new position as a liaison between students and alumni.

"I know the wants and needs of students, and by getting together with the alumni I can express those needs. The student ambassadors can give the alumni a different perspective of the university than what they hear from the faculty and staff."

"My main goal as an ambassador, I feel, is to show students the need for a good alumni association with alumni who remain active with the university after graduation," Wampler said.

Members of the Student Alumni Ambassadors are working to approve a constitution, elect officers, and making plans for workshops involving students and alumni.

AMBASSADORS OF "GOOD WILL" FOR MSU --- Four Morehead State University students are members of MSU's first Alumni Ambassadors program which began last fall. They are, left to right, Leslie Carpenter, Flemingsburg; Harvey Thompson, Owingsville; Lenay Stober, Burnside; and Tyson Cummings, Flemingsburg. MSU Alumni Ambassadors work with Alumni Association in creating closer communication between alumni and students.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Proposed cuts in federal aid for college students would have serious consequences if approved by Congress but no one should abandon their plans for the next school year, according to Morehead State University President Herb. F. Reinhard.

"Those who intend to enroll in college this fall should proceed with their applications because federal student aid for the 1985-86 school year already has been appropriated," Dr. Reinhard said. "It simply is too early for anyone to push the panic button."

He reported that MSU is cooperating with other colleges and universities in opposing President Reagan's proposed 25 percent cutback in student aid.

"Our preliminary figures indicate that about 700 of our students would stand to lose more than $500,000 as a result of just two of the suggested changes, but we are more concerned at this time that students and parents will become discouraged and fail to proceed with college plans this fall," Dr. Reinhard added.

"It is imperative that everyone understand that essentially nothing has changed for the 1985-86 school year," he stated. "We will conduct business as usual in the aid programs this fall and maintaining good enrollments will strengthen our case against the Reagan budget."

The MSU chief executive said he had contacted Kentucky's congressional delegation to express his opposition and that he would actively lobby against the measures.

"Student aid programs represent a sound investment of state and federal tax dollars which have been shown to pay lifelong dividends on the increased earnings of college graduates," Dr. Reinhard stated. "And the record shows that the over-publicized excesses in the programs, particularly in loans, have been largely corrected through tightened controls and criteria."

Specifically, adoption of the Reagan budget would have the following consequences for MSU students, according to Dr. Ron Walke, director of financial aid:

The suggested $4,000 yearly limit in federal student aid would adversely affect virtually all of the married students and out-of-state residents whose annual costs already exceed $5,500.

If the proposed $32,500 family income limit on eligibility for the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) program becomes law, about 300 current students would stand to lose about $225,000 yearly.

Enactment of the $25,000 family income limit for Pell Grant eligibility would cost about 400 students approximately $300,000 annually.

As evidence of the scope of federal student aid, Dr. Walke noted that the GSL and Pell programs alone disbursed more than $5 million to MSU students during the 1983-84 school year. Figures for the current year won't be available until the end of the spring semester.

Dr. Reinhard concluded:

"We have time to strongly oppose these proposals and I am hopeful that each of them will be defeated or drastically altered. Meanwhile, our current students and those looking at MSU for summer or fall enrollment should move ahead on their financial aid applications. Our door of opportunity remains open to all qualified students."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University is seeking nominations for its 1985 Founders Day Award for University Service.

"Individuals who have served the institution in superior fashion over an extended period are eligible and we invite our alumni and other friends to nominate deserving candidates," said Dr. Broadus Jackson, chairman of MSU's Founders Day Committee.

The award is to be presented during the annual observance on Thursday, March 28, as MSU celebrates its 63rd birthday as a state institution of higher education.

Nominations should be submitted in letter form to Dr. Broadus Jackson, Morehead State University, UPO Box 730, Morehead, KY 40351.

The nomination deadline is Friday, March 15. The Founders Day Award for University Service was established by MSU's Board of Regents in 1978.
