Federal Agents Nab 4 Rouburn Women On Fraud Warrants

Scheme Uncovered By Inspector W. L. Ferrell; All Are Released On Bonds For Appearance

Four women, of Rouburn, one mile east of Morehead, were arrested last week by United States officers and charged with one of the most unique mail-order fraud schemes that has ever been practiced in this country, according to Postoffice Inspector Walter L. Ferrell.

The women, Mae Adams, Ida M. Adams, Emma Adams and Lurine Adams, all of Rouburn, were taken into custody by U. S. Deputy Marshal Mont Magann, on a federal charge of using the mails to further a scheme to defraud.

According to Inspector Ferrell, it has been the practice of mail order houses, after receiving an order from a person, to fill the order and return the original blank with the merchandise, thus making a cash transaction with the firm's notation appearing on the original blank.

He said, in explaining the working of the scheme, that an order for a certain amount of merchandise, generally a few cents less than the order, would be sent to the mail order house where it would be filled and sent to the customer. After receiving the order, the customer would take the order, write in several more items whose price made an even total in dollars, and then said that total to the total amount of the order.

The customer then returned the order to the mail order house with a letter claiming that part of the order had been received and to either send the other merchandise at once or return the money "sent" with the order.

As the order seemed to be all right in all respects the merchandise would be sent to the customer.

Mr. Ferrell said that the mail order house called him into the case in April, of this year but that the scheme had been in operation since 1924 or 1925. Upon entering the case he had the firm make photostatic copies of all orders coming from the above named women and if the orders were returned claiming shortage and asking for the money to be refunded, a photostatic copy was also made of the "changed" order.

In this way, according to the inspector, it was an easy matter to check up on the orders and the complete scheme was quickly brought to light. After a complete investigation the women were taken into custody on Ferrell's orders.

They were taken before U. S. Commissioner J. W. Riley here for preliminary examination and released on bonds for appearance before the Federal Grand Jury in December.

Mr. Ferrell said that he had received complaints from four other firms regarding the scheme and that it was evidently practiced on a wide scale.

In commenting on the case, the inspector said that it was the first time, to his knowledge, that a fraud of this kind had been committed, either in this district or in the United States.

Walter Howard, of Elliott Court filled a $500 appearance bond this week in the court of United States Commissioner J. W. Riley on a charge of possession of illegal whiskey. Revenue agents said they confiscated seven pints of moonshine from him.

Officers said they found nine gallons of whiskey on the place of Pleas Whisman, of Newfoundland, Elliott County. Whisman was not apprehended.

The politics, the doings of young and your neighbors, the heart-throbs of life, the big "little" things which don't break on Page 1, but in which we are all interested. Interestingly written, constructive in thought and deep in purpose is this weekly column. Turn to Page 2.

Democrats Hold Edge Of 381 Votes On GOP's, Registration Disclosures

Almost 5,000 Persons Eligible To Cast Ballot In August 7 Primary; Deadline For Registering Expires Saturday

Gaining five on late registrations, Democrats of Rowan County hold an unexpected majority of 381, according to official and complete tabulations at the office of the County Clerk compiled Monday morning.

The capitulation, appearing in tabulated form elsewhere in this paper, discloses that Democrats hold the edge in 13 of 19 precincts. Brushy precinct has been divided into two wards but the survey does not divide them, since the Clerk's office has not yet made the separation.

A total of 4,873 have registered to vote in this county. Of this number, 2,623 are Democrats; 2,241 Republicans, and 9 Independents.

Since the registration books were last posted 125 Republicans and 130 Democrats have registered. Between 80 and 100 voters are expected to register before the deadline Saturday, thereby giving the county a total voting population of approximately 5,000.

Republican precincts are: Farmers No. 2, majority of 82; Morehead No. 11, majority of 10; Cranberry No. 12, majority of 7; McKenzie No. 13, majority of 7; and Plank No. 15, majority of 40.

Morehead number 10 precinct, which has a total of 600 registered voters is the largest Democratic precinct in the county polling an edge of 130 over the GOP.

Two Japanese ships joined the search to reinforce two American craft and one British vessel already in the area. A powerful concentration of the United States fleet raced on toward the area of operations.

The search turned toward the islands as Miss Earhart's husband, George Palmer Putnam, said if any of the numerous radio signals apparently from the Earhart plane were genuine, the craft must necessarily have been on land—and not aloft—when the signals were received.

Putnam also reported all radio bearings on the most likely of the mysterious radio signals indicated their source was the Phoenix Islands, 280 miles southeast of Howland.

Operators Licenses On Sale At Clerk's Office

Automobile operators licenses for the year 1937-38 went on sale today at the office of Circuit Clerk Joe McKinney. The old driver's licenses will expire July 31, Mr. McKinney stated.

There is a rush for the licenses during the last few days of July and in early August for those who do so should procure them between now and then, Mr. McKinney said.

Papers submitted in this week's independent misspelled word contest were the most part, better than at any time in the past. Neatness and originality were the final deciding points.

3 New Candidates Enter Rowan Races During This Week

Reports were being circulated today that there might be some changes in the political set-up for this year's primary races, but the deadline for filing which falls at midnight. However, to seasoned politicians, the line-up has already been completed, and if there are any changes from now to election day they will be comparatively unimportant.

In the minor races there were three announcements this week. Joe Rice, of Morehead, withdrew from the race for the Democratic nomination for Jailer, but his brother, James Rice, immediately filed and won Joe's place.

Arthur Barber, Morehead, announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Magistrate of district 1, composed of the five Morehead precincts, Wagner and Dry Creek.

There seems no question but that the races are tightening up as the supposedly weaker candidates are getting in more telling blows during the last month. Many of those who most political leaders thought had little strength, now are in a position that they are conceded a good chance to win.

IT IS YOUR DUTY TO REGISTER

This is the last week for registration to participate in the August 7 primary. The date marks almost a year since Kentucky's new voting law went into effect, yet we find many persons who have not registered to vote.

Ours is a government founded upon democratic principles. It is a government by and for the people. It is the duty of every citizen to participate in that government. The voting house is a place where the average American goes to have his say in the operation of this government.

It matters not what party affiliation you have, it is your duty to register if you have not already done so. Then go to the polls on August 7 and cast your ballot for the person you feel is best fitted for an office and will make the county the best public servant.

SUPPORT THE SCHOOL AND AGRICULTURAL FAIR

Officers of the Rowan School and Agricultural Fair Association have already done much work toward the successful presentation of this year's event. Their officers receive no remuneration for their work, other than the knowledge of a worthwhile deed well done.

Merchants in Morehead have always cooperated almost a hundred per cent in subscription to advertising in the Fair catalog and other assistance, and are commended for their support. Actually from a financial standpoint the Fair doesn't mean a lot to local firms, since it is of short duration and is designed purely as an educational feature and not one to attract people from outside the county. However, the Fair has, during past years, successfully reached its goal as an educational affair. It is a civic enterprise that deserves the support of every Rowan Countyman who is interested in the advancement of our schools and farms.

THE MAIL ORDER HOUSE SCHEME OF FRAUD

The uncovering of a unique mail-order house fraud scheme in Morehead this week by postal inspectors, brings to mind again that crime never pays. According to reports of the arresting officers and Postoffice Inspector Ferrell, these women had been operating this scheme for the last three years and successfully getting by with it.

Whether they are guilty remains for the courts to decide. If they are, it is a safe conjecture that they will be given a prison sentence. Behind the bars, they will have an opportunity to seriously consider the penalty for a few stolen dollars.

It is remarkable that the large mail-order houses could have hood-winked so long by the fraud. However, as explained in a page one story of the affair, it was so unique a scheme that it was many months before it was uncovered.

STRIKES GROW TENSE AND BLOODY

Today the business outlook is curiously mixed. On the unfavorable side, the strike situation grows steadily more tense, even as individual strikes are growing more bloody and embittered and troubles such as those now being experienced by the independent steel companies may be felt in other important industries before the year's end. On top of this, Congress is considering or about to consider a number of legislative proposals—ranging all the way from a more and more stringent "NRA" to creation of a gigantic, Federally-owned super-power system—which are anathema to all business leaders. And there is a good chance that taxes will be materially increased for 1938.

Even so, the strength of the recovery movement—expressed in rising incomes, and an almost insatiable public desire for commodities of all kinds—is so great that practically all of the established forecasting services are bullish. Thus, in recent weeks, the Alexander Hamilton service has said: "The world is in the boom phase of the business cycle."

Edison believes that "gains over a year ago should continue to be well maintained." Brookline anticipates that "renewed recovery should follow the summer lull." Colonel Ayres sees "no reason to fear that any serious business recession is impending." Gibson says, "No major decline is in prospect for the summer months." Poor's foresees "some recession during the near term," but nothing severe.

Summing up opinion, United Business Service observes that "present indications point to a moderate lull in activity over the next few months, although business in the aggregate should hold above a year ago."

So far as specific elements in the industrial picture are concerned, the commentators agree fairly well. Most of them think that bond prices will be either stabilized at current levels, or may go down slightly due to higher interest rates. Stocks are definitely being kept shifting and stalling, and neither material advances nor recessions are anticipated. There will be little variance in commodity prices generally during the next few months, with a possible rise coming in the fall. Summer trade in all lines, seasonal factors considered, will be good, and better than in 1936. Foreign trade should start upward, but it will be a long time before pre-depression levels are again reached. A war in Europe would revolutionize the outlook in this field, but a few believe that any of the major powers are sufficiently confident to risk a war as yet—they are simply shifting and stalling.

For most industries, the earnings outlook is good—though nowhere near as good as the production outlook. Some of the largest industries—of which the railroads are a case in point—are doing a greatly increased volume of business with extremely small increases in earnings, due to higher taxes, higher wages, etc. However, practically all industry has emerged from the "deficit period" and is at least back in the black ink.

FREIGHT RATES GO DOWN

Freight rates have never been harmful to the nation's progress, says the Commercial and Financial Chronicle. And over a period of years rail charges have declined more or advanced less than the price of commodities. This should help lay the ancient fallacy that the cost of transportation is a burden on industry and the consumer.

The largest advance in freight rates in American history occurred late in 1920. In 1921, the freight rate was 28.1 per cent higher than in 1920, while the wholesale price of all commodities was 72.2 per cent higher. By December 31, 1936, the average freight rate was 3.6 per cent lower than in 1925—while the average wholesale price was 51.8 per cent higher.

This 15-year record is indicative of the trend of freight rates in their relation to commodity costs ever since the railroads became a major factor in transportation. Today, the cost of transporting goods is less, on a percentage basis, than at almost any other period in our history. And the trend of rates, measured by the commodity price levels, is consistently downward. During the past 28 years, the railroads have never received a rate even approaching that which other industries earned.

The value of the railroads' service to industries and shippers of the nation is almost immeasurable. Good are moved—swiftly, certainly, and on strict schedule—at an extremely low cost. Car shortages have been virtually outlawed, and train speeds increased. Loss by theft and damage has been greatly reduced. The cost of rail transportation is, for the majority of commodities, a microscopic element in the final price paid by the buyer. Far from slowing national progress, the railroads have always contributed to it on a monumental scale.

REFUGEE IN A STORM

In his annual address, the president of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, said:

"The sound record of the capital stock fire insurance companies throughout the recent depression is one which I feel confident in saying is without parallel. In the face of the most depressing financial conditions the companies as a body have stood firm, without the slightest faltering on their part in maintaining their service of insurance protection for all classes and all interests throughout the land. No property owner, large or small, in any part of the country, however remote, has had his anxieties increased under depression conditions by inability to obtain from the stock fire insurance companies coverage for his factory, his store, his goods, his home and its contents, or any other property he possessed against the hazard of destruction by fire or other kindred causes. No bank, insurance institution, other association, or personal investor relying upon such property as collateral without identification because the stock fire insurance companies were timorously seeking to contract the area of their operations or to lessen the burden of risk they were carrying. This, in the depth of the depression the American public has found our companies prepared to give the full measure of their accustomed service; it has found them meeting every obligation to the letter, and it has seen in them a haven of refuge in a terrifying storm."

Fire insurance is the foundation of all credit. Without insurance no man could afford to build a factory, to buy stocks of goods, to loan money for productive undertakings, to send merchant ships out upon the seas. In every endeavor, a fire insurance policy stands between an industry or an individual and a ruinous loss. If, even for a brief time, insurance fails to provide this essential protection, commercial chaos would reign. The channels of credit would dry up and paralysis would encompass all business.

No industry has done more to serve the people—the wealthy man and the poor man, the great corporation and the little business—than stock fire insurance.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, in rejecting the proposal to reorganize the United States Supreme Court, said: "It would subjugate the courts to the will of Congress and the President and thereby destroy the independence of the judiciary, the only certain shield of individual rights."

Rowan voters, "between two fires," should select the man most capable of handling the office.

Oriental Custom Is Followed In Picture

The well-known Chinese medical system was used during the filming of World War scenes for "Seventh Heaven," the Twentieth Century picture starring Simone Simon and James Stewart, which opens Friday at the Cozy Theatre.

The Chinese pay their physicians for keeping them well as contrasted with the Oriental practice of waiting until sickness overcomes them before paying for the services of a doctor.

Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century picture producer, believes in following the Oriental practice in producing pictures.

Dr. C. A. Seytarr and two other physicians were used during the filming of "Seventh Heaven," supervising the bandaging of eighty-five soldiers for a hospital scene as they would look as if they were severely wounded and yet not be injured by the lightly sound strips of crimson-streaked gauze.

Dr. L. S. Hays and Jay Fraley spent two carloads of medicine on their Lawrence county farms.

The other men did not feel the effects of the alcohol until Wednesday evening. Young Bronston was the next to become ill. The first symptoms to him was almost total blindness, followed by partial paralysis. He was rushed to his home at Portsmouth, Ohio.

Alfrey died in the St. Joseph Hospital Friday afternoon, succumbing within a short time after his condition became critical.

The same day Frank Bronston collapsed and was taken to Portsmouth. Doctors there, however, said that he was not a victim of the poisoned alcohol, but his condition was caused by worry and nerve strain.

Funeral services for Mr. Hogge were conducted from the Baptist Church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Rev. B. H. Kazee, assisted by the Rev. H. L. Moore.

Rescue Hopes For Earhart Fading

(Continued from Page 1) flight period," Putnam told Coast Guard officials, "and asked that live broadcast be discontinued, much stronger than Noonan reckoned with."

"They probably never got within 100 miles of Howland as thought."

One of the messages from Miss Earhart's plane shortly before it was last heard from officially at 3:14 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time, Friday afternoon said the plane was 100 miles from its base.

After a conference with Putnam, Lieutenant Frank Johnson, of the Coast Guard, recommended a naval search of the Phoenix Island area.

A few hours previously, hopes soared on the strength of a report from the Coast Guard cutter Itasca that it had sighted lights that might be flares. However, the cutter soon concluded they were from a meteor.

Nevertheless, the Itasca continued its search in an area 200 miles north of Howland, pending arrival of the battleship Cole to supply the cutter with fuel for a southward shift.

Jennings Scores Rowan Grand Jury

Another portion of the 6 page statement declared: "I am inclined to believe that the Grand Jury did not intentionally lend itself as a political tool to the hands of selfish and scheming politicians, but that for the most part, the members of the Grand Jury were unaware of the true facts and innocent of complicity."

Declared that he was a candidate for no office and had no ulterior motives, Judge Jennings closed the statement with: "It is my intention to continue to administer the affairs of the county to the best advantage of the county regardless of the persecution of certain groups motivated by ulterior and unwholesome purposes."

Judge Jennings' statement was issued Wednesday, too. It is to be carried in its entirety in these columns this week, but will be published in complete form of the next issue of the paper. The grand jury report in the last issue.

Joe E. Brown Is In Comedy Picture

For Friday, July 9, the College brings to the screen a laugh provoking, side-splitting, roaring comedy featuring Joe E. Brown in "Riding on Air." Supported by Guy Kibbee, Florence Rice and Vinton Haworth, Joe E. Brown really "rides on air" in a home made airplane in this latest comedy hit.

Outstanding also in this Friday's program is a two reel story of the Dionne Quintuplets. Here they are seen walking and playing about their quarters and their names can be heard talking for the first time from the screen.

For Friday, July 16th, the great story from the pen of Bret Hart "Outcasts of Poker Flat," will be shown.

SIAM MARKET FOR TOBACCO MAY IMPROVE

Siam offers a fair market at the present time for the sale of the cheaper varieties of tobacco and the gradual improvement in general economic conditions in the country gives promise of a substantial increase in both imports and local sales in the near future, says a Department of Commerce report.

The United States was the first ranking supplier of tobacco to the Siam market in the fiscal year 1936 and accounted for 72 per cent of the total imports.

The general policy of the Government of Siam in recent years has been to improve tobacco cultivation by advising cultivators along scientific lines as regards planting and by assisting in the sale of tobacco leaves. Cultivation of tobacco in Siam has not as yet been particularly successful due to the moisture of the climate, lack of experience in planting and crop diseases.

GERMAN CHILDREN ARE GATHERING OLD BONES

With the view to increasing the domestic supply of bones for the manufacture of glue and other materials Germany has organized several agencies, chief of which are groups of school children, who go from door-to-door twice each week collecting cast off bones.

The German glue industry is using approximately 110,000 tons of bones per annum and was obliged to import 47,000 tons from foreign countries, chiefly South America in 1936.

In addition to the student aid program, NYA sponsors a work project program for out-of-school youth and cooperates with schools, colleges and youth agencies in encouraging and furthering vocational guidance.

Logan Introduces Court Substitute

Kentucky Senator Proposes Justices Be Retired At Age Of 75

Administration forces, abandoning their long fight for the Roosevelt court bill, put forward this week a substitute which opponents declared is "no better" than the original.

Opposition leaders disclosed that they would seek to side track the entire court issue for the session by asking that the Senate send the substitute to its Judiciary Committee for study.

But those in charge of the new bill said they had enough votes to prevent its being sent to the committee—and enough to pass it. They prepared to begin arguments for it on the floor.

The substitute, introduced by Senators Logan, Democrat, Kentucky; Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, and Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona, would permit the President to name new justices to the Supreme Court at the rate of one a year, up to the total number of incumbent justices past 75.

2,735 In Kentucky Are Out On Strike

Industrial Workers in Louisville and Coal Miners Stage Sit-Downs

Kentucky's strike tide soared to 2,735 this week as labor controversies continued on four fronts.

More than 1,500 were idle in Louisville alone and 1,000 miners were reported at base owing to a sit down strike in the Elkhorn Corporation mines near Jenkins.

About 235 employes of the strike-bound Wald Manufacturing Company, Maysville, still were out. William L. Hoge, president of the Mengel Body company, Louisville, where the only question at issue seemed to be that of a closed shop. The strikers maintained picket lines, permitting only office employees to enter the plant.

No—This Isn't Teddy Roosevelt! It's The 'Runniest' Man That Ever Entered Rowan County Politics

This isn't the late Teddy Roosevelt pictured above. It's Judge J. W. Riley, who has held more political offices in Rowan County than any living man. But this year he won't be a candidate, withdrawing today from the race for County Attorney.

Judge J. W. Riley, the man whom old-timers love to say came to Rowan County with a candidate card in his hand, and has kept one in his pocket ever since, seeks no office this year.

Previously Judge Riley, who was 71 years old at his birthday in April, had announced he would be a candidate for County Attorney. Sitting in his office across from the courthouse today, Judge Riley, who has enjoyed the best of health, said he had definitely decided not to run, although he was to get the nomination without opposition.

"I'm not as young as I used to be, and besides I've got more to do now than I can take care of and am making more money than I would if I were County Attorney."

It could be noted that the statement was reluctantly given for Judge Riley hates to retire from political campaigns in which he is a candidate.

If a printer had set J. W. Riley's name up in type to go of a ballot in 1888, he could have kept the type set up and used it in every election with one or two exceptions. Riley is the "runniest" man for City Attorney and was elected. After four years in this position he became a candidate for City Council and was elected to fill this place.

In 1910, while a member of the council, he became a candidate for County Judge and served in this capacity for four years. The next four years found Judge Riley without a public office, since he did not seek any but returned to a private law practice.

The political bug hit him again in 1917 and at the insistence of his friends he ran for County Judge and was elected. That term having expired he was a candidate for re-election and again won.

From 1925 to 1929 he returned to a private law practice, but four years was a long time for him to be out of the official family of the county and in 1929 he again made the race for County Attorney and was elected. Four years later his only defeat, previously explained occurred.

Absence from public office did not suit the now old but active former office holder and in 1935 he secured an appointment as United States Commissioner for this Federal district, a office he now holds.

During his life Judge Riley has made 9 political races, and lost only one.

He is a campaigner of the old school.

The words that Henry Watterston once wrote, matches his early campaigning to a "fare-thee-well," "Marching around in a swallow-tail coat."

Get some of them offices. Get some of them votes."

One of Judge Riley's favorite methods of campaigning in the old days was to challenge his opponent to a public debate, generally in some school-house. Hours before the speaking was to begin, hundreds of country-folk would be gathered in.

A speech that was not from two to four hours long was not worth going to hear in those days, and Judge Riley always managed to keep his listeners interested by sprinkling jokes and spicy comments with the more serious matter at hand. Many of these jokes Judge Riley still remembers.

"We used to start campaigning by horse-back and would be gone for three and four days," he recalls. "We would go into the brush and get briars and brambles in our clothes before seeing a voter for it was a good policy in those days to make him think we had been working in the fields all day."

Judge Riley recalled one trip when he was a candidate for County Attorney and Elijah Hogge was seeking the office of County Clerk. They were electing together, when night fell on them near Hogtown. They finally found a place to spend the night in a modest cottage.

They sat down to a real country dinner, when the man of the house asked Judge Riley to return thanks. "Lige, you return the thanks," Judge Riley told Mr. Hogge. "By Jacks, now, John, you know I've never done that," said Mr. Hogge. So Judge Riley returned the thanks for the first time. Hundreds of times afterwards he returned the thanks at the table during his numerous campaigns.

In his first race, Judge Riley visited every home and knew every voter in the county. He was elected that time by a majority of 45 votes. There were less than a thousand votes in the county at that time, as compared with 5,000 today. The county had 6 voting precincts, located at Morehead, Farmers, Pine Grove, Piercy, Hogtown and Brushy.

He expects to live to be a hundred years old. Certainly today, he looks little older than the above picture, which was taken 20 years ago, and which might easily be mistaken for that of Teddy Roosevelt.

Another candidate in 1933 had secured the nomination on the Democratic ticket, and Judge Riley had announced he would not make a race that year. A few days before the final election the nominee withdrew, and County Democratic Chairman Elijah Hogge went to the "old reliable candidate" and at his insistence Judge Riley made the race, without any campaigning.

Judge Riley was born and reared in Nicholas County. When he had barely turned the 21 mark, he announced for County Surveyor of Nicholas County, was nominated, elected and served four years.

In 1895 he came to Morehead as an instructor at the Morehead State Teachers College, migrating here after teaching in the common schools in Morgan County.

In 1898 Judge Riley was nominated and elected County Attorney. When that office expired he DIVORCES: Divorces Continue to increase in Rowan County as prosperity returns. During the first six months of 1936 there were 27 petitions for divorce filed in Circuit Court. During the same period in 1937 a total of 31 persons filed suits to sever the holy bonds of matrimony.

BROADCASTS: Perhaps you haven't tuned in on this station on your radio, but it is very popular. It is broadcasted station right here in Morehead. The program generally consist of the playing of a number of phonograph records sprinkled with spicy comments and sometimes a little home talent. A Mr. Turner in West Morehead operates this amateur broadcasting outfit.

WILD CAT PROPERTY: Monday morning Sheriff Mast May mounted the steps at the courthouse, took from his pocket a bunch of legal looking papers, and performed an annual chore. The Sheriff was selling the property of delinquent taxpayers. In the same manner he has been doing every year. Sheriff Mast spent 30 minutes or better reading off a long list of names, acres and the amount due to the county.

BONDS Speaking of the bonds of matrimony reminds this court reporter of the bonds in the court of United States Commissioner J. W. Riley. Only once in a period of two years has a person who has been haled into Commissioner Riley's court failed to execute a good bond. Most of these hearings are on liquor cases and to quote Commissioner Riley, "The moonshiners and bootleggers can give a quicker and better bond than most bankers."

REVENUE It happens many times in a period of a year in this Federal district. Revenue officers find a moonshine still or a quantity of liquor in some farmer's home or on his premises, but the farmer isn't there to arrest. The revenue officers leave word with his wife or nearest neighbor to come in and give himself up on a certain day — generally the day is when Commissioner Riley is holding court. With one or two exceptions they have all surrendered on the specified day.

RECEPTION of the station is good for a distance of ten or twelve miles.

Reds To Combat Chicago In Night Battle On Monday

Famed Comedian Will Provide Entertainment Before Ball Game

The Chicago Cubs will make their annual night appearance at Crosley Field Monday, when they hop into Cincinnati for a one night stand to meet the Redlegs in a nocturnal contest to be played under the most powerful baseball lighting system in the world.

The Cubs are speeding at maddening pace in this torrid National League race and are a real attraction in themselves, but the Cincinnati management, never the less, has booked an added feature in the person of Al Schacht, the "Clown Prince of Baseball."

Schacht, who has entertained the crowds at the world series for years, and who is now touring the country with his comedy act, has promised Cincinnati fans a real show.

Of course, the usual sensational fireworks display and band concert will precede the contest.

Following the Monday contest the Reds will take to the road for a few days this week to participate in the National League's eastern section. Their trip will take them to Brooklyn, Boston, New York and Philadelphia, then they will return to Crosley Field on July 27 to meet the Boston Bees.

Three of the Reds left the club for a few days this week to participate in the all-star game at Washington. Manager Charley Dresen was chosen as one of Bill Terry's assistants, while Pitcher Lee Grissom and Catcher Ernie Lombardi were named as active players.

Selection of Grissom gained considerable prestige for the spectacular lefthander, as he was the only freshman member of the National League squad. His recent run of 27 consecutive scoreless innings was a factor in his selection.

Mammoth Cave Is Beautified; Expect Large Attendance

More Than 65,000 Visited Caves During Last 12 Months

Mammoth Cave National Park, the 26th in the Nation's chain of parks, expects to have approximately 200,000 visitors this year, while the cave itself is expected to have in excess of 100,000 visitors. Four camps of CCC enrollees have landscaped the entire hotel grounds. They have also built 34 miles of truck trails, and at the present time they are finishing a system of trails near the Mammoth Cave Hotel.

Last year the list of visitors exceeded 65,000. They represented all of the states, District of Columbia, and 30 foreign countries. Officials state that this year business has already shown a 20 per cent increase over the corresponding period of last year.

In the program of landscaping was the plans for a parking lot suitable for parking 200 cars and an emergency lot ample for 300 more. It also boasts of a 60,000 gallon water system, ten new deluxe cabins, and a completely redecorated hotel with a modern coffee shop.

Mr. Charles E. Mohr, member of the staff of the Public Museum and Art Gallery, Reading, Pennsylvania, while here collecting specimens of cave life, said, "This field is almost untouched from the scientific standpoint. I have been here three different times and each time I realize that one could easily make a life time study of the life in the cave. I am an amateur photographer and nowhere have I found such interesting specimens as I did here."

While in the cave I discovered a very rare formation near Crystal Lake, and as far as I was able to determine it has no counterpart in any cave. It resembled a huge bed of mushrooms which had been splashed with every color of the rainbow. The upper surface of them was smooth while the under surface was fringed with a delicate fern-like growth. This was a choice one for my color photography, and the thrill of finding something in Mammoth Cave is indeed a thrill."

One writer has said that Mammoth Cave is indescribable. True it is among the Nations oldest and most beautiful. It has been almost a century and a half. The underground world of eternal darkness has well over a hundred chartered avenues and the total of this it is claimed is in excess of 152 miles. It has a master system of air conditioning, a constant temperature of 54 degrees. It has played a part in the history of our country in the manufacture of saltpeter for the war of 1812 by furnishing large amounts of salt peter. Indeed the things which have transpired here have been sufficient for the writing of a large number of books and countless newspaper and magazine articles.

Officials state that approximately sixty school parties have visited the area this year. Some of them come for the scenic attraction alone, but many of them come to study the geological wonders of the cave. Some come to see it because it is one of the Seven Wonders of the New World. From educational points it is studied for history, archeology, biology, zoology, and other specialized studies.

It is near the center of the nation's population and is bounded on every side by other attractions which may be seen by the visitors without additional mileage. Those coming from Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dayton, Detroit and other cities of the north and east can visit the Blue Grass, Cumberland Falls, Fort Harrod, My Old Kentucky Home, Lincoln's Birthplace while en route to Mammoth Cave. Those coming from Nashville, Knoxville, Memphis, New Orleans, Fort Worth, and other points of the south and west will want to see Lookout Mountain, Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Jefferson Davis Home and Birthplace, Lost River and other such points.

Tax Evasion Has Spotlight In U. S. Capitol Probes

Opinion Held That Congressional Investigation Not Necessary

The President's message to Congress on tax evasion continues to hold the attention of the public, particularly since the Joint Committee of the House and Senate began its investigation of his charges.

Some are of the opinion that a Congressional investigation is neither needed nor desirable; that the rotation of the whole problem is within the power and the initiative of the Treasury Department. Others hold that such an amazing story of tax avoidance as presented to Congress by the President, if not publicly investigated and the loop-holes plugged, will arouse an indignation having far-reaching results.

Those who claim that the Congressional investigation is not needed analyze the situation in this way. They point to three possible types of evasion: (1) actual fraud; (2) border-line types which are not easily discerned, due to either the obscure meaning of the law or the regulations of the Treasury Department for its operation; (3) those so-called "tax avoidances" which are entirely illegal.

As to the first, it is the plain duty of the Treasury officials to bring immediate criminal action against the offender. Certainly, in such cases no Congressional investigation is needed any more than in any other criminal acts, they point out. Moreover, the function of the Treasury Department is to institute civil action to recover from the tax defrauders the sums due.

As to the second type of evasions, the Treasury Department is acquainted with all the facts in each particular case. If the law itself is obscure, the duty of the Department is to propose to Congress whatever amendments are necessary to make the law clear. If the regulations of the Treasury with respect to the law are ambiguous and involved, its duty is to clarify its own regulations. Thus, in this type of evasion, there is no need for a Congressional investigation.

With respect to the third type, the so-called "tax avoidance" cases, no Congressional investigation is needed. If avoidances are found by the Department to be outside the pale of justice to the Government, yet clearly legal, it is the duty of the Treasury to recommend to Congress amendments to the law so as to prevent all obviously unjust tax deduction in the future.

This group of critics of the President's message to Congress aver that the Government should not leave it to the taxpayer's conscience to decide what means he shall use to protect his own interests, and then hold him up to censure and condemnation on "moral" grounds if he makes decisions that appear questionable.

Friends of the President's position declare that it is not so easy to effect amendments to the income-tax law as it would be made to appear; that powerful lobbies and shrewd lawyers are always present to fight such amendments will be presented even before they actually reach Congress.

The President, his defenders point out, pursued the dramatic course he did to make possible that corrective income-tax legislation would be passed at this session of Congress.

WILLIAM JOYCE COVENS'S THEY GAVE HIM A GUN

BASED UPON THE MURDER OF
HALSEY RAINES

THE STORY TELLER: Rose Duffy, a Red Cross nurse, has promised to wait for Fred Willis till he returns from the front lines. Believing him dead, she agrees to marry Jimmy Davis, whom Fred has regarded throughout the war as a younger brother. Fred shows up, having escaped from an enemy prison; but when he finds out how much Rose means to Jimmy, he tells her he is already married. Resuming his job as circus Barker, after the war, Fred runs into Jimmy unexpectedly, a block from where a street murder has just taken place and is invited to visit his home.

CHAPTER SIX

Fred stood immersed in thought as Jimmy hurried off. He must not see Rose again. Her final words were still sounding in his ears. "So far as I'm concerned you're dead!" Slowly, deliberately he looked down at Jimmy's card and then tore it into fragments. Unconscious of the fact that it might look strange for him, in his rather gaudy carnival clothes to remain stationary near a scene of the recent shooting, Fred looked up when someone tapped him on the arm. He could hardly believe his other mob all over the public right-of-way. "You mean, this fellow that just got killed?" "He was with one of the mobs," nodded Meadowlark. "Somebody from the other gang must have been waitin' for him about four or five floors up, in that hotel across the street. It had to be that high so the shots would clear the mazes." "Say, that's shootin'," said Fred.

"I don't know how you know me," retorted Meadowlark, flashing a detective's badge. "But never mind. What's your name?" "Put away the badge, Sarge," said Fred, unable to resist the impulse to have some fun with the fellow superior hard. "I recognized you for a dick from that sweet face." "I asked you a question!" bellowed Meadowlark. "Sarge!" said Fred reproachfully. "It ain't possible you've forgotten little Freddie Willis?" Meadowlark stared hard. His mind finally registered daylight, and the trace of a grin broke over his face. "The old 310th!" he cried. "And me thinking I remembered you from the Rogue's Gallery!" Meadowlark started hard, putting his arm about the other. "You certainly figured a good way of staying out of jail." "Yeah, that's right," responded Meadowlark. "But this thing that's going on here is pretty serious."

"Well, Sarge," said Fred, putting his arm about the other. "You certainly figured a good way of staying out of jail." "Yeah, that's right," responded Meadowlark. "But this thing that's going on here is pretty serious."

"Jimmy" said Fred bitterly. "How did you ever get into a racket like this?"

thoughtfully, glancing up at the hotel. "Shooting!" echoed Meadowlark. "I ain't seen anything like it since I left France." A sudden terrifying and intricate thought came into Fred's mind. Involuntarily one foot moved over to cover the torn pieces of card lying on the sidewalk. Emerging from the hotel, a policeman ran over to Meadowlark.

"Fred found a gun, sir," he reported. "Here's a couple of the empties." Meadowlark looked at them, grunted, then turned to exhibit his discovery to Fred. "Recognize that?" he asked. "Fred was startled to read in tiny letters on the shell: "U. S. Arsenal, Frankfort."

"The place that had furnished all the war supplies for his own platoon." "Like old times, ain't it?" grinned Meadowlark, as he pocketed the shell, shook hands, and started off. "Cautiously Fred picked up the bits of torn card, and took them to a place where he could reassemble them at his leisure. The motorized sidekick with which Fred managed to get out of town was parked in a suburb. On one car was the brightly painted legend: "Fred P. Willis' Circus Maximus and Carnival."

"Take over the show tonight," ordered Fred. "I got to go to town." "It ain't a dame, is it, Boss?" inquired Laro anxiously. He received no answer, and shook his head dubiously as his employer left. Reaching the address given on the card, Fred hesitated on the steps. Finally he rang the bell and Jimmy opened the door. "Well, for the love of Peter!" he cried. "I thought you'd be out yesterday."

"Well, come in come in!" He took the visitors shabby hat, looked at it in a rather odd way, as if comparing it with his own faultless attire, and flung open the door of the living room. "Rose!" he called. She was reading a book. She tried to place it on a corner stand when she saw Fred, but misjudged the distance, and it fell to the floor. Fred hurried to pick it up, and by this time she was herself. "Well, Rose," said Fred, "you sure look like being married was agreeing with you, like I said."

"How's Mrs. Willis?" asked Rose coolly. "Fred looked at her uncomprehendingly. "How's your wife?" "Oh—her?" replied Fred, improving wildly. "She's dead." "Oh, Fred!" said Rose, all sympathy. "I'm so sorry for you." "Yeah, it's always kind of sudden, losing a wife. Mine was the kind that's everything to a guy."

Mother, sweetheart, pal, you know—" "What's he trying to tell you, Rose?" said Jimmy, laughing. "You certainly don't know Fred if you think he's ever asked anybody to marry him in his life."

"It's good to see you two like this," interposed Fred cutting him off. He turned to Rose. "You are just where you belong and looking like you ought to look. Jimmy standing on his own feet. Of all the things I ever wanted, Rose!"

"Jimmy" said Fred bitterly. "How did you ever get into a racket like this?"

"I don't think I ever wanted anything so much as place like this." "I understand that now," said Rose oddly. "Say, I didn't know you had any domestic sentiment in you!" laughed Jimmy.

He ran out to mix some drinks. Fred turned cautiously to Rose. "This is swell 'furniture,'" he said. "What kind of work does a guy have to do to take all this?" "Jimmy's in the insurance business," said Rose easily. "I know, it must be pretty good."

"I never bother him about his work. He likes to forget it when he comes home." When the drinks were poured Fred observed that Jimmy gave himself nothing. He passed his absence off with a smiling comment that cocktails "don't mix with business." Afterwards Rose prepared sandwiches, and Fred went into a long digression about the tribulations of the carnival business. Rose seemed in exceptionally good spirits.

"Come up for dinner soon," she said, as she bade good-night to Fred. "I'd like to. You know I can never tell where I'm going to be. Take care of yourself, Rose." "I'll walk as far as the garage," volunteered Jimmy. They passed down a quiet side street. All evening long Fred had refrained from mentioning the one thing that was uppermost in his mind—the real motive for his having made the call.

As they neared the entrance of the public garage, there came a sudden burst of staccato explosions. With the swiftness of an animal, Jimmy leaped into a doorway, his hand reaching inside his coat. Fred watched, his mouth set in grim lines. The noise was merely that of a truck backing. Stepping over to Jimmy, he put a hand on a bulging revolver. The two men faced each other tensely. Each knew that further pretense was impossible. "Jimmy!" said Fred bitterly. "How in the devil did you ever get into a racket like this?"

Suit Alleges Gen. Denhardt Guilty Of Girl's Murder

Seeks To Collect $70,000 In Jefferson County Civil Action

Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt was accused of causing the death of Miss Patricia Wilson, 25, whose broken body was found on top of an elevator in the Seebach Hotel in July, 1936, in a suit for $70,000 filed Friday in the Jefferson Circuit court by Edward C. Langan, administrator of the girl's estate. The petition, prepared by James T. Robertson, attorney in the Kentucky Home Life Building, charges that General Denhardt "assaulted, beat and bruised" Patricia Wilson, "causing her to fall down an elevator shaft in the hotel."

The suit, alleging that General Denhardt's "malicious acts were the proximate cause of said deceased's death," asks $50,000 damages for her estate and $20,000 punitive damages. Mr. Langan is public administrator and guardian in Jefferson County. General Denhardt, reached at his home in Bowling Green, described the suit as "absurd, laughable and ridiculous." He laughed when told of its being filed, and said: "That's just one of those things."

"I never heard of the girl and was not in Louisville at the time. It was not at the Seebach and no one saw me." Asked where he was at the time, General Denhardt said he was on his farm. "You know, after that business out there, they've had me killing twenty men; shooting a Judge off the bench, burning a woman to death, and killing my first wife," the General laughingly stated. The former Lieutenant Governor recently was tried in Henry County on a charge of murder in the fatal shooting of Mrs. Verna Gair Taylor, La Grange widow. The case resulted in a hung jury. Ad Henry County prosecutors reset it for trial in the fall.

"Shortly after Mrs. Taylor's death, a check came to me and I said that Denhardt was responsible for the death of a girl whose body was found in the elevator shaft at the Seebach Hotel," Mr. Robertson explained. "Thinking this an unfounded rumor, we did nothing about it. A little later, another friend of mine told me the same thing, but, unwise, these leads were overlooked because it was thought they were just trying to blame a man charged with one crime. Within the last few weeks, the rumor became strong that, in justice to the estate, and just before the statute of limitations was about to run out on the claim, a thorough investigation was started which disclosed to all working on the matter that this suit should be filed."

Mr. Robertson said it was hoped that filing of the suit could be delayed until completion of investigation and preparation of the case, but the deadline for filing made it imperative that it be presented without further delay. The body of Miss Wilson, with a fracture of the skull and both legs broken, was found at 7:30 a. m. July 15, 1936, by James T. Robertson, 2405 Sleavin, an employe of the hotel. He told a Coroner's jury that he first noticed a glove sticking out the top of the dummy elevator, used for carrying linen.

The Coroner's jury held that Miss Wilson "came to her death due to her own carelessness and negligence." Luther Dodd, Rockcastle county, sold 275 chickens, clearing enough to pay initial cost and feed bill for 126 chickens he kept.

U. S. DEATH RATE IN 1936 WAS 11.5 PER 1,000

The United States death rate in 1936 was 11.5 per 1,000 estimated population, the highest recorded since 1929, according to preliminary reports just received by the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department from the Bureau of the Census.

The rate in 1935 was 10.9. Deaths in 1936 numbered 1,474,177, an increase of $1,425 over the number reported for the previous year. No explanation of the increase in mortality will be available until detailed statistics on individual causes of death are compiled. However, information collected from 86 cities and other sources indicates that deaths resulting from the heat wave of last July and a rise in respiratory deaths early in 1936 probably are responsible for the increase.

North Dakota's death rate of 8 per 1,000 estimated population was the lowest in the nation. Arizona's rate of 15.5 was the highest.

Eight to 15 different vegetables were planted in most Lincoln county home gardens. The potato crop in Breathitt county has made the best growth of any crop in several years.

THE ROAD NOT TAKEN

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood, and, sorry I could not travel both, I am one traveler, long I stood and looked down one as far as I could to where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair, and having perhaps the better claim, because it was grassy and wanted wear; though, as for that, the passing there had worn them really about the same.

And both that morning equally lay in leaves no step had trodden black. Oh, I kept the first for another day! Yet, knowing how waft leads on to way, I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a weariness ages and ages hence: Two roads diverged in a wood, and I—I took the one less traveled by, and that has made all the difference. —Robert Frost.

Just made an appointment at the Vogue Beauty Shop, to the Blue Moon Cafe, where she lunched while he feeds his soul on her beauty. She felt her meal had been heightened in enjoyment by the Mary Jane Bread, made by the Midland Baking Company. She made a mental note, while eating, that though she might enjoy the courtesy of the I. G. A., she had better serve her king of the super-fine quality at economy prices at Pennington's Grocery & Market.

While he was in a trance she decided to show him what a practical wife she would make. So down the street they started. First, they visited Bruce, which she thought would compare favorably with any store. Not finding what she wanted they journeyed hand in hand down Main Street. While she was aware that Fair and Honest dealing over a period of 29 years was the proudest of the many appreciable factors that McKinney's could point to, she knew that Blair Bros. Department Store carried the best and were complete outfitters for the family.

After visiting them she felt she wasn't proving herself a person of great economy, so she led the dazed king to the Economy Store. There she found Ladies' Sandals, Ladies' Sheer Dresses, Work Shirts, 49c-89c, Men's Work O'Alts, 98c-$1.25, and all other prices right. She had an ace up her sleeve. So she played it. Next they visited the Big Store. Just to think, "One thousand and one bargains." They thought they would like to prove it but they didn't bring a catalogue. They asked their motto too. The Big Store advertisement said "Hurry, Hurry," to get your size in Selby shoes. "What is it? We have it. And we have a telephone!"

By this time the king began to come out of his trance and decided to show his ability as a wise spender. First he didn't let her interfere with his visit to the Morehead Dispensary. Then he sought Woody Hinton, Mgr. of the Shady Rest Service Station. Buying a car from him he started it.

He visited the Midland Trail Garage to see if the batteries were fully charged. Feature hit on a new car! He had had too much to drink. Not wanting to slight anyone he investigated the quality, workmanship, and fair dealing of the Carr-Perry Motor Co. Gally he started east on Main. Passing the Morehead Garage & Service Station at the Boulevard he crashed into the bridge there. No need for a wrecker. The car was gone. And so was he. The Lane Funeral Home was called and their experience and knowledge stand in hand with such a wreck.

The fair queen was rushed home. She wasn't too late for C. E. Bishop Drug Company to fill the doctor's orders explicitly. Her mother sent her clothes to the Model Laundry and Dry Cleaning Company where they were made like new with their ultra-perfect laundry service.

It was fortunate that poor dad had kept his checks, for so long the wreck as legal receipts, from the People's Bank of Morehead.
