MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The development and growth of black students is what Jerry Gore has been concerned with since first arriving at Morehead State University as a freshman in 1966.

At that time in the late 60s, there was no black worship experience locally at MSU.

It was this need for a black worship experience that led Gore and a group of students to form the Black Gospel Ensemble in 1968.

"We started out just singing "Oh Happy Day," Gore said. Today, the ensemble has 25 student members and has toured seven states.

But Gore, who has been appointed director of minority student affairs as of July 1 by MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard, continues to be involved with what he calls black student development, which he said is the key to black students having a more "fully-rounded" education.

Gore said this is much more important for blacks at traditionally white colleges, which were not originally designed to meet the needs of black students.

"In the past, black students had no choice but to attend a black institution," Gore said. "Now they go to white campuses--many of which are not prepared to deal with the situation."

Gore added that Reinhard is offering a "new direction" in supporting educational opportunities for minorities, but that more resources are needed to further meet the needs of minority students.

The son of Mrs. Hattie Dunlap of Maysville and Austin Gore Sr. of Washington, D.C., Gore realizes the importance of education for blacks from his own experience. He grew up in Maysville at a time when "only the rich and smart went to college. My mother always stressed that I should get a good education. She said it was something you always need and use."

He entered Morehead State in the fall of 1966, supporting himself through school by taking various odd jobs. Through working in these menial tasks, Gore said he had the chance to "interact with all kinds of people--rich and poor--and to develop a real perspective on life.

"I had a job as a cook (one of five or six jobs he had at one time) and I had to get to work at 5 o'clock every morning. The only people who would be on the street at that time were me, the street sweeper, and the winos who would be begging for money. When I got off my job at 8 a.m. to go home, I would see those winos with bottles in their hands," Gore recalled.

"That one small thing taught me that if you want something--whatever it is--you have to go out and get it. They were out there every morning to get what they wanted," he said.

It's a perspective that Gore has used to counsel people, whether as MSU's Wilson Hall director, university counselor, or ensemble advisor.

In these roles, he said, "you have to like people, and like interacting with them."

Gore said he is "thrilled" when those he counsels succeed after college. "One year several young men living in Wilson Hall graduated from Morehead and four of them graduated with honors," he added with a hint of pride in his voice.

"About 1,800 students have passed through here (Wilson Hall) in my 12 years as director. I tell them to get out there and do it, and when you do your job, have fun doing it."

Gore added that he enjoys the challenge of helping students grow and develop. "One big shot is all you've got."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Phillip Michael Hopper of Greentown, Ind., has been appointed director of Career Planning and Placement at Morehead State University.

Hopper, a native of Georgia, will assume his duties June 17, according to MSU Vice President for Student Development G. Gary Grace.

Hopper has been administrative assistant for the Upper Wabash Valley (Ind.) School Study Council since 1983. He previously was career/placement counselor at Edinboro (Pa.) State University, where he developed and implemented career planning, counseling and job search seminars and served as liaison with prospective employers.

"With his background in career planning and placement services, Dr. Hopper will do much to strengthen MSU's program and allow us to do even more to assist our students," Dr. Grace said. "His special interpersonal skills will be an asset with both students and their future employers," Grace added.

"I am delighted to be returning to the stimulating environment of a University campus, where I will be working one-on-one with students, assisting them in their career decisions," Hopper said.

The new director earned his B.A. degree in philosophy and religion from Asbury College and his M.A. degree in student personnel services at Edinboro State. He is a candidate for a doctorate in educational administration at Ball State University.

He and his wife, the former Rebecca Joan Collier, are the parents of two sons.

June 5, 1985
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Discussions on academic programs, student services and campus life with Morehead State University administrators and students will highlight the University's Summer Orientation and Registration (SOAR) program.

The first SOAR session will be held Friday and Saturday, June 14-15. Group discussions on MSU's programs and services will be held on the first day for students and parents. On day two, students will register for the Fall Semester, while parents hear about campus life from Eagle Guides (current MSU students).

More than 1,500 newly-admitted students and their parents have been invited to participate in one of the four SOAR programs by MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard.

"The Student Development staff has developed an exciting and informative program designed to let parents and incoming students know what they can expect from MSU and what the University expects from them," Dr. Reinhard said.

"The program has been expanded considerably from past summer orientation sessions," Director of Admissions Albert J. Bowen said. "It offers parents and students an opportunity to learn about the University's educational programs and services such as financial aid as well as campus life," Bowen added.

At 10 a.m. on Friday, incoming students will be welcomed by Dr. Reinhard in Button Drill Room, then meet with Academic Affairs Division staff members for general education and skills assessment. After lunch, faculty advisors will prepare them for Saturday's registration.

During the afternoon, small group discussions on campus life will be conducted by Eagle Guides. Evening events include a cookout at Eagle Lake and a dance at Button Drill Room.

Separate sessions for parents will begin Friday with a welcome by Vice President for Student Development Gary Grace and President Reinhard. Dr. Grace will outline the University's student support services and Dr. Ronald Walke, director of Student Financial Aid, will discuss financial planning for college.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roberta Anderson and her staff will present an overview of MSU's academic programs and campus tours will be available. Following the cookout, the "Mighty Morehead Art Players" will present a light look at college life, followed by an open discussion on campus life with administrative staff members.

Saturday morning during registration, parents will hear about campus life from the Eagle Guides and Office of Admissions staff members.

Other SOAR programs are scheduled June 27-28, July 11-12 and July 19-20.

Information on SOAR may be obtained from the Office of Admissions, Morehead State University, Morehead, KY 40351. Telephone toll-free: 1-800-262-7474 in Kentucky or 1-800-354-2090 from out-of-state.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Unusual music is breezing into Eastern Kentucky later this month.

Like a breath of fresh air, TRAPEZOID, a West Virginia-based Appalachian string band, will appear live in concert on Saturday, June 29, at 7:30 p.m. in Morehead State University's Button Auditorium, according to Larry Netherton, WMKY Public Radio's General Manager.

The nationally-acclaimed band works from a traditional base, but with a different emphasis. Its programs include folk, Irish tunes, jazz, swing, chamber music, and even an adaptation from African kora.

The band has performed around the country at folk and bluegrass festivals; including Kentucky Music Weekend; for college students on such campuses as Harvard and Marshall universities, and at Kennedy Center and the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

"We've all had some classical training and the combination of instruments gives us that unique sound," said Reisler, one of the group's founders.

"The fact that we choose a lot of different musics reflects our different interests. We choose material that works with our instruments, but for us it's really the texture rather than the surface of the material that matters," Reisler explained.

James Goodfriend, music critic for Stereo Review, has said that the musicians "share an intense musicality and imagination; they do so many different and interesting (and beautiful and peculiar and funny) things, you just want to go down to West Virginia and hug the four of them."

WMKY, public radio from Morehead State University, will sponsor TRAPEZOID in concert in conjunction with MSU's annual Appalachian Celebration, June 24-29. Concert tickets may be obtained in advance by mailing a check (payable to WMKY Fund) to WMKY FM 90, MSU, UPO 903, Morehead, KY 40351. Ticket prices are $5 for adults and $2 for students. Remaining tickets will be sold at the door.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has received funding from the U.S. Department of Labor's Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) for development of a Small Coal Operators Mining Assistance Center (SCOMAC).

Announcement of the $61,000 start-up grant was made jointly by Assistant Secretary of Labor for MSHA David Zeeger and MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard.

SCOMAC will offer free technical and administrative assistance to coal operators producing under 300,000 tons annually.

"This grant will make it possible for people at Kentucky's small mining operations to obtain the safety training and technical help they need, but may not be able to afford otherwise," Zeeger said.

"MSU is proud to be selected to provide this special service to aid the state's smaller mines--considered the backbone of the nation's coal industry," Dr. Reinhard said. "It comes at a critical time for many of them," he added.

Morehead State was selected by MSHA as a center site because of the University's ongoing mining technology program, the caliber of the people in the program and its proximity and relationship with Southeast Kentucky's key coal producing areas, according to Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, MSU College of Applied Sciences and Technology dean.

SCOMAC

"We're honored to receive this special grant and for the opportunity to help our small coal companies improve their safety and operational efficiency," Derrickson said.

J. Wes Blakely, MSU chairholder in mining and former editor of "Coal Mining," one of the nation's leading coal journals, will be the coordinator of SCOMAC. According to Blakely, some of the key areas of assistance it will offer are: _____

- Help in developing adequate roof control data or plans;
- Training or retraining of workers;
- Advice on employee benefits;
- Help in developing needed data for permits;
- Development of a motivational plan to increase worker awareness of safety;
- Planning and development of total mine ventilation system;
- Assistance in selecting appropriate equipment for specific applications.

"SCOMAC will serve as a clearing house or catalyst, directing an operator with a problem or request to the appropriate person or agency," Blakely explained. "We will draw upon the expertise available at MSU--staff and students--whenever feasible," he added.

Blakely cautioned that operators should not expect SCOMAC to provide purchase money for hardware or equipment. "We primarily will be a consulting and problem-solving service," he said.

Small coal companies will receive announcements of SCOMAC's formal opening soon, Blakely said. Until then, small operators with annual tonnage of less than 300,000 may call the coordinator at (606) 783-2633 for additional information.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- When Kristi Spears of Portsmouth High School was selected a few weeks ago to receive Morehead State University's Distinguished Scholar Award, it strengthened a family tradition and produced a $20,000 windfall.

Kristi, a recent PHS graduate, will follow in the footsteps of her father, David, an MSU alumnus and now a Portsmouth attorney.

"I was definitely interested in Morehead State because of dad's status as a graduate but the scholarship turned the whole matter into a great opportunity I couldn't refuse," Kristi stated.

The "scholarship" represents a four-year, fully-funded college education for Kristi if she maintains at least a 3.0 (B) grade point average as a marketing and economics student at MSU. For an out-of-state student, MSU's Distinguished Scholar Award is worth more than $20,000 over the four-year period.

Kristi was selected for the award on the basis of her qualification as a semi-finalist in the National Merit competition, according to Al Bowen, MSU's director of admissions.

"Our new scholarship program is aimed at recruiting top students in academics with the same level of enthusiasm that our coaches use in recruiting athletes," Bowen said. "And we are going for the best students we can find. Kristi Spears is a good example of what our new program is all about."

Active in the band and jazz ensemble and a choral group, Kristi's decision to attend MSU also pleased her band director, Billy Watson, another MSU graduate.

"She is a fine young woman with a good mind and a bright future and I am very happy that she is going to Morehead State," said Watson.

Kristi will be among at least six National Merit finalists and semi-finalists successfully recruited by MSU for the fall term as "Distinguished Scholars."

"Many institutions would be happy with just one of these top students and we feel our good fortune in attracting six of them indicates that MSU is right on target in concentrating on academic excellence," Bowen added.

Information about opportunities at MSU are available from the Office of Admissions. The toll-free telephone number for out-of-state residents is 1-800-354-2090 and in Kentucky the number is 1-800-262-7474.

Fact Sheet

Public Information • Morehead State University • UPO Box 1100 • Morehead, KY 40351 • 606-783-2030

--The Martiki-Morehead State University Mountaintop Agriculture Complex is a national model surface-mined land reclamation project on the site of the largest single ongoing surface mining operation in Appalachia.

--Located off Wolf Creek in Martin County, nine miles southeast of Inez, the project was launched in August 1982 as a joint venture of MSU, the Martiki Coal Corp., and the Pocahontas Development Corp., a subsidiary of Norfolk Southern Corp.

--Over a 15-year period, 4,000 acres of surface-mined mountaintop land will be reclaimed for agricultural uses, increasing the level land available for development.

--MSU officials expect to reclaim approximately 200 acres annually.

--Currently the project includes approximately 350 acres in various grasses, animal facilities and other support buildings as well as a water storage tank and irrigation system.

--Approximately 150 acres of pasture land is covered in fescue, orchard grass, timothy, alfalfa and various clovers.

--With enriched soil producing surplus forage, 50 head of beef cattle have been added as the start of the project's cattle operation.

--Primarily designed for large-scale agriculture production, the complex also includes research plots for testing the adaptability of various strains of grasses and clovers.

--Small garden plots have been started, yielding tomatoes, cabbage, broccoli and other vegetables.

--A 240-sow farrowing to finishing operation currently is producing 5,000 market hogs annually at an average weight of 220 lbs. each.

--The swine operation also produces 16 tons of manure daily which is used to restore top soil, adding valuable nutrients, organic matter and humus.

--In July, the poultry facility, a high-rise laying house for 80,000 hens, will begin operation, not only yielding eggs for market, but also 11 tons of fertilizer daily to be used to enrich the land.

--MSU agriculture specialists estimate the swine and poultry facilities will provide more than $250,000 worth of fertilizer annually which can be used to enrich the land.

--Plans call for eventual development of sheep facilities and cultivation of row crops, orchard crops, greenhouse flowers and vegetables and forest areas for commercial wood products as well as wildlife.

--In addition to agriculture specialists, the project involves MSU faculty and student resources in mining, reclamation and energy studies.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--The portrait of a 17th Century colonial governor co-founder of Princeton University will be on display in Morehead State University's Camden-Carroll Library from 2 to 4 p.m. Thursday, June 20.

Jonathan Belcher, who governed the colonies of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and New Jersey, was known as the "Governor of the Bay."

The five-foot portrait is the work of former MSU student Elden Lounsberry of Belcher. It is owned by MSU alumnus and Belcher resident Dr. F.R. Belcher, who is a descendant of the governor. Dr. Belcher will attend the showing.

In addition to the public showing of the portrait, the library also will make available to those interested materials concerning the governor and the period in which he lived.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky--Public school educators from 32 Eastern Kentucky school systems will spend June 17-21 at Morehead State University in preparation for their role in the state's new teacher certification program.

Under legislation enacted by the Kentucky General Assembly, all new teachers must serve a one-year internship prior to certification. During this internship period, they will be observed four times each by their principal, a resource teacher named by the Department of Education, and a university person.

"We will be training trainers to train trainers," said Dr. George Troutt, coordinator of MSU Teacher In-Service Education. "After the workshop, these public school educators will go back to train area teams, who in turn will train observers," explained Troutt.

Assisting Troutt as members of MSU's Commonwealth Training Faculty will be Shirley Blair, MSU coordinator of clinical and field experience, and Randy Wells, professor of education.

"We will prepare them in a specialized observation technique known as the Florida Performance Measurement System," Troutt said. "By using an already proven measurement system, we can provide specifics rather than generalizations to be used as guidelines and as standards for new teachers," he added.

"The Beginning Teacher Internship Program offers tremendous assistance to new teachers. They will receive professional growth help from trained observes, including their peers," Troutt noted

"The program has created, for the first time, a partnership among those of us responsible for educating teachers and public school personnel. Together we will make that crucial decision as to whether a teacher will be certified," he continued.

"We have had marvelous support and cooperation from administrators in the school systems in preparing for this cooperative effort," Troutt said.

Independent school district participants include: Judith L. Morris, Ashland; Frances Miller, Fairview; Charlene Collins, Jenkins; Mildred King, Maysville; Paul Wade Trimble, Paintsville; Dr. Warren P. Tiller, Pikeville; Ben Bingham, Raceland Worthington; Charles P. Holsinger, Russell, and a representative from Jackson Independent.

Also attending will be Cynthia Champer of Ashland, representing the Kentucky Education Development Corporation, and Sue Wells, MSU assistant professor of education.

That was Kentucky Secretary of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Charlotte E. Baldwin's description of the Morehead State University-Martiki Mountaintop Agriculture Complex after viewing the project last week.

Secretary Baldwin along with state farm and mining officials and representatives of Martiki Coal Corp., Pocahontas Development Corp., and its parent company Norfolk Southern, joined MSU administrators for a first hand look at the progress.

The complex, located nine miles southeast of Inez, is a national model in surface-mined land reclamation and is on the site of the largest ongoing surface mining operation in Appalachia.

Three years ago, MSU, Martiki and Pocahontas launched the project to reclaim 4,000 acres of plateau-mined land over a 15-year period for agriculture uses, increasing the amount of level land available for development.

Baldwin pledged her cabinet's support for the "innovative program in post-mining use" and praised "the bold decision of industries to sacrifice a portion of their profits for long term development of the land."

Martiki Field Day

Calling plateau mining "a godsend" to the people of Eastern Kentucky, MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard said, "This region and its people cry out for suitable land for development--something the rest of the country takes for granted."

"The land produced can be more valuable than simply the coal itself," Dr. Reinhard told the nearly 200 people attending the first major public Field Day.

"The complex," he said, "is proof that we can mine coal in harmony with environmental needs and produce land for development."

MSU College of Applied Sciences and Technology Dean Charles Derrickson said that when the project was conceived that he and his colleagues weren't sure what to expect as they faced the challenge of building top soil out of limestone.

"Our primary goal is to prove to the world that agriculture can be a viable alternative to coal mining--once the mining is done," Dr. Derrickson said.

Former Kentucky Governor Edward T. Breathitt Jr., vice president of public affairs for Norfolk Southern, said that while the concept had been discussed, it had taken MSU's leadership to make it a reality.

"Morehead State also provided the credibility which would have been lacking if we did it or Martiki did it," Breathitt said. "It was MSU's reputation on the line and that of its fine people," he added.

Currently the complex includes approximately 350 acres in various grasses and clovers, small garden plots, animal facilities, support buildings and a water storage and irrigation system.

Fertilizing the ground to create a top soil with enough nutrients to feed crops was the first step to be addressed by MSU agriculture specialists.

This was done by creating a 240-sow farrowing to finishing operation which not only produces 5,000 market hogs per year, but 16 tons of manure daily to enrich the soil. In July, the poultry facility, a high-rise house for 80,000 hens, will go into operation providing eggs for market as well as another 11 tons of fertilizer each day. Those two facilities will provide more than $250,000 worth of fertilizer annually to assist the University in its goal of reclaiming approximately 200 acres per year.

Plans call for eventual development of sheep facilities and cultivation of row crops, orchard crops, greenhouse flowers and vegetables and forest areas for commercial wood products as well as wildlife.

1---Dr. Andrew Boston, MSU professor of agriculture, briefs a group of Field Day visitors to the Morehead State-Martiki Mountaintop Agriculture Complex on the progress of the project. Approximately 200 state and regional farm and mine officials, representatives from Martiki Coal, Pocahontas Development Corp., and Norfolk Southern joined MSU administrators for a firsthand look at the complex.

2---A 240-sow farrow to finish unit was one of the first operations on the complex to be completed. It not only produces 5,000 market hogs per year, but 16 tons of fertilizer daily to be used to enrich the land, creating a top soil base for agriculture production.

3---Charlotte E. Baldwin, secretary of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection for Kentucky, called the complex "a visible and effective demonstration" of how plateau-mined land can be developed.

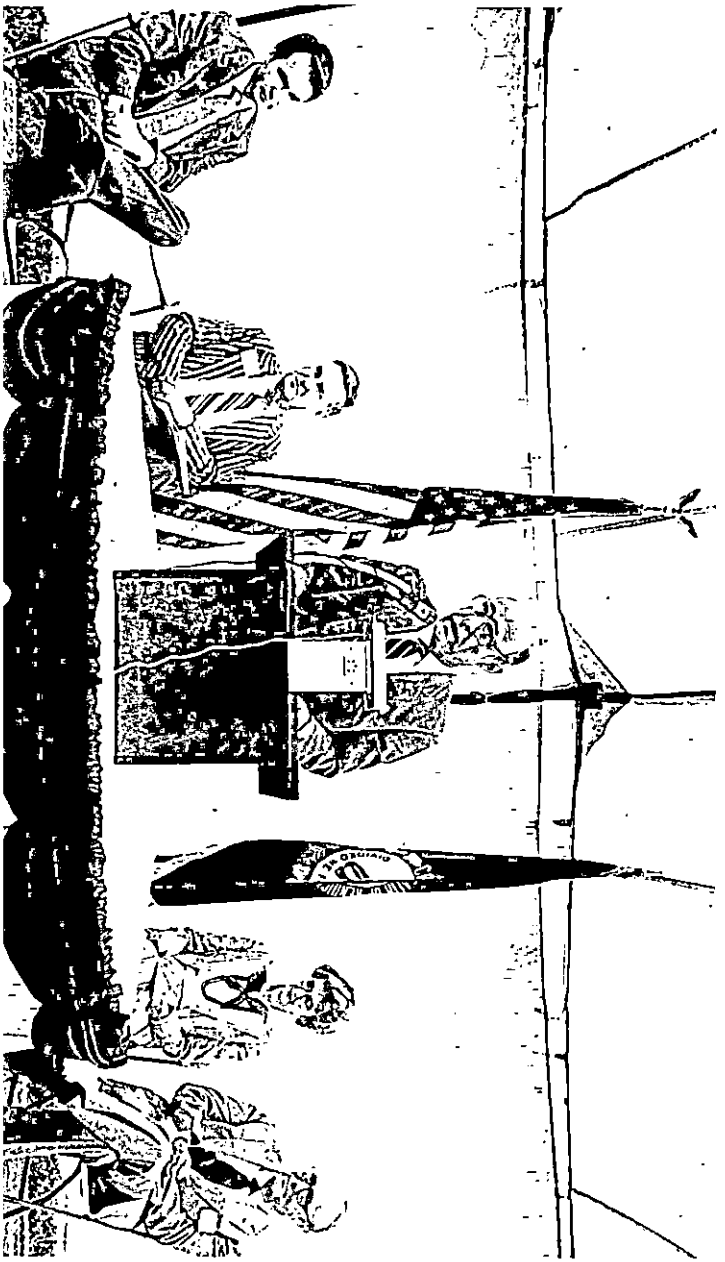

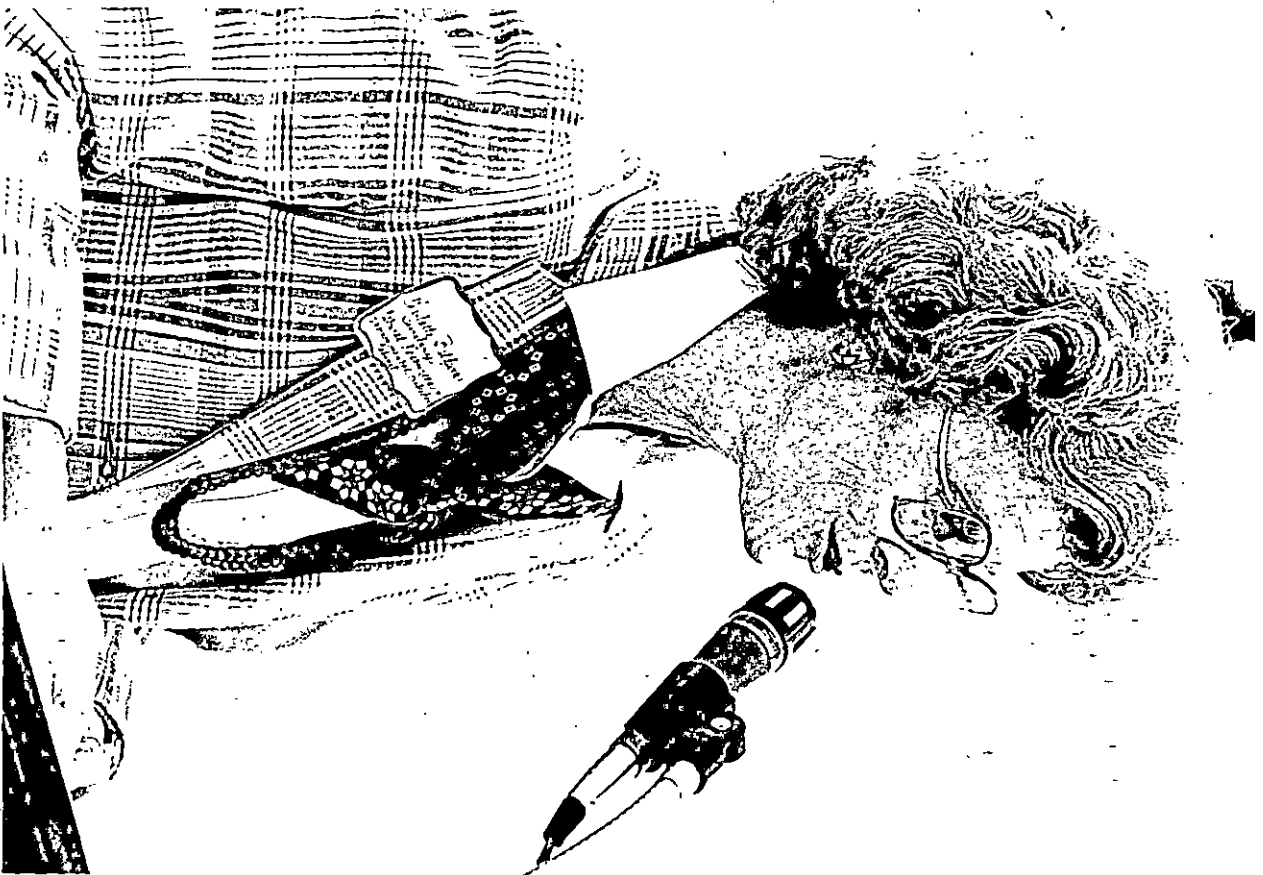

4--MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard, center, told visitors that the project was "a marriage of mining and agriculture from which other industries are spawned." Program participants also included, from left, MSU Board of Regents Chairman and Inez businessman Robert M. Duncan, MSU College of Applied Sciences and Technology Dean Charles Derrickson, Secretary Baldwin, and Norfolk Southern Vice President for Public Affairs Edward T. MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "A Random Harvest," the third annual conference of the Appalachian Writers Association, will convene June 28-30 at Morehead State University.

Workshops in short story, poetry, science fiction, children's literature, mystery fiction, novel, and article writing are among the offerings. Special sessions on "Publicizing Your World," "Literature as Dropout Prevention," and "Incorporation of Folklore into Literature" are also scheduled. Workshop leaders will include Sharyn McCrumb, Rudy Thomas, Parks Lanier, Bennie Lee Sinclair, and other well-known authors from across the region.

The featured speaker is Harriette Simpson Arnow, author of "Hunter's Horn" and "The Dollmaker." Editors from regional and national magazines and publishing houses will be available for individual consultation with conference participants. Readings will feature Appalachia's finest poets and fiction writers.

The Conference is part of Morehead State University's ninth annual Appalachian Celebration, June 24-29, which includes music, craft workshops, exhibits, and study of the Appalachian culture. Concerts during the writers conference include "A Gathering of Traditional Musicians" June 28 and a "Trapezoid" concert June 29.

Winners of the Appalachian Writers Association 1985 writing competition will be announced at a June 29 banquet, and 1985-86 officers will be elected June 30. Mystery novelist Sharyn McCrumb of Blacksburg, Va., is program chair for the 1985 conference, and Garry Barker of Flemingsburg is acting chairman of AWA.

The conference fee is $20, plus the banquet cost and Appalachian Writers Association membership fee which is $10 for adults and $5 for students. A complete schedule and registration information is available from the Appalachian Development Center, Morehead State University, Morehead, KY 40351, phone (606) 783-2077.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A little bit of England will make its way into the region later this summer when Morehead State University's Job Training Program (JTP) launches a six-month course for nannies.

MSU has been awarded a $30,000 grant from TEN-CO Private Industry Council, funded through the Job Training Partnership Act, to provide the new program.

The nanny, or children's nurse, has long been an established part of English family life and, according to JTP trainer Jacquelyn Scott, a survey has shown a great deal of interest in the program here.

Use of a nanny would be an alternative for child care today, Scott said. "Most working couples are not upper-class, but have child care needs to be met," she said. "Providing a sense of stability and taking care of the parents' most treasured possession, a nanny could become part of the family here," she said.

Students in the Nanny Program will be psychologically screened and then trained in basic child development, children's literature and first aid. The class will be open to men and women with high school diplomas and preferably with access to an automobile.

Once the course has been completed, students may work as a nanny. They also may enroll in a two-year program offered at Midway College. This program offers Nanny Certification to these students and those who already possess a degree in child care or development.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Ray Roberts, chief engineer at WMKY, public radio at Morehead State University, received a special recognition award for his 15 years of service to the station at WMKY's 20th anniversary banquet Saturday, June 15.

Nearly 100 former and current WMKY personnel and Community Advisory Board members attended the banquet at MSU's Adron Doran University Center.

Also recognized were three members of the advisory board, who are ineligible for reappointment. Plaques were presented by Board Chairman Francis Nash of Grayson to Dan Manley of Mt. Sterling and Edith Conyers of Morehead. Retiring board member Carl Haight of Flemingsburg was unable to attend.

Roberts, a Rowan County native who makes his home in Bath County now, was responsible for training many of the station's alumni attending the banquet.

The award for "excellence in engineering and for dedicated service to WMKY" was presented by Jim Hammond, station manager for a Dover, Del., radio station, who had worked with Roberts for four years.

Hammond called Roberts "his second dad" and talked about the important influence the engineer had on his career and life.

While Roberts has been at WMKY, the station increased its power from 10 watts to 50,000 watts and now reaches listeners in northeastern Kentucky, southwestern Ohio and western West Virginia.

Other alumni also spoke about the valuable experiences WMKY provided. Mark Jordan, currently sales manager at WUBE in Cincinnati, said "We got hands-on experience 10 and 15 years ago that others in the field hadn't had, and it made all the difference."

WMKY Banquet

The banquet speaker, Mike Crusham, former manager of WHAS/WAMZ in Louisville and now vice president and general manager of KRMG Radio in Tulsa, Okla., said, "I never thought I was working because I loved my job." In his talk, Crusham emphasized that "WMKY gave us the opportunity to learn the ideals (in the broadcasting business) first. It provided an invaluable laboratory for trying out the best in broadcasting."

Other alumni, not able to attend, sent samples of their work. Liz Everman, currently news anchor at Channel 32 in Louisville, wrote "Even the 'not-so-fond' memories I may have of WMKY have turned out to be valuable lessons. College is supposed to prepare you for the working world, and luckily I learned at WMKY that you have to be reliable and consistent."

As a special attraction, a video of the "Kentucky Show!" was shown before the banquet. WMKY alumnus Jim Welch, who directed the sound editing for the show, currently manages the Kentucky Theater in Louisville, where the production is shown hourly.

Other displays included memorabilia of the 20 years WMKY has been on the air and an informal slide show featuring students and staff from 1965 to the present.

An Open House was held all-day Saturday at the WMKY studios at 124 Henry Ward Place on the Morehead State University campus. The 20th anniversary provided the first official occasion for WMKY alumni to gather and reminisce about their experiences.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's ninth annual Appalachian Celebration, a week-long salute to the mountain culture heritage, will open Monday, June 24.

Exhibits, workshops for adults and children, tours, concerts and an arts and crafts market are on tap for visitors to the campus during the celebration.

Traditional arts and crafts and demonstrations will be daily fare in Button Drill Room, Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Displays will include the Coal Mining Memorabilia Exhibit of the National Scrip Collectors Association and more than 150 photographs from Kentucky's past, some dating back to the 1880s.

The photographs are from the soon-to-be published pictorial history of Kentucky being compiled by Dr. Stuart S. Sprague, MSU professor of history.

The mining memorabilia exhibit will include examples of tools, lamps, scrip and other items used by the early miners. On hand Wednesday through Friday to describe the exhibit will be Bill Williams, past president of the NSCA, who will provide free appraisals of scrip and buy, sell and trade scrip brought in by visitors.

In addition to the traditional arts and crafts exhibit in Button, there will be a display of contemporary craft works in Claypool-Young Art Gallery. A preview and reception of the exhibit, which will continue through July 28, is scheduled from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Sunday.

Topping off the Celebration on Saturday will be the Appalachian Arts and Crafts Market, featuring mountain handcraft products from more than 80 craftsmen and regional foods for sale from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Laughlin Health Building. Also there will be an open-air stage at the Market where traditional musicians will perform and conduct workshops.

Each evening, special music and variety programs are scheduled, ranging from Marc Pruett on Monday and the Ratcliff Family on Tuesday to Trapezoid on Saturday.

The Wednesday schedule calls for a Gospel Music Night featuring groups from the Johnson Church of God, Morehead; the Morehead Church of God Choir, the Applegate Family, the C. Roger Lewis Group, First Baptist Church of Winchester, the Hughes Duo of Augusta, MSU's Black Ensemble, and the Scottaires of Maysville.

On Thursday, there will be "An Appalachian Family Evening," a variety program which will include the "Hands to Heaven Puppets, clogger Scotty McKee, fiddler Marvin Carroll and the Bob Harmon Band from Fleming County, FFA tobacco auctioneer Marty Lytle and the Ratcliff Family Band. "Woodsy Owl" will make a guest appearance and several surprise acts are planned.

All of these events are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Button Auditorium.

On Friday, the scene will shift to Duncan Recital Hall, Baird Music Building, for "A Gathering of Traditional Musicians." With the exception of the Pruett, Ratcliff Family and Trapezoid concerts, there is no admission charge for the evening programs.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A military leader, NASA official and a U.S. senator will be among those addressing the 1985 Kentucky Boys' State convention to be held at Morehead State University June 23-29.

More than 300 youth from across the state will participate in the sessions designed to provide practical lessons in government. The annual program is sponsored by the Kentucky American Legion.

Maj. Gen. Billy G. Wellman, adjutant general, Kentucky National Guard, will speak Sunday, June 23, at 7 p.m. at first general session in Breck Auditorium.

A native of Ashland and a MSU alumnus, Wellman began his full-time career with the Guard in 1957 as personnel officer and in 1960 became staff assistant for the 201st Engineer Battalion of which he later became commander.

He held various other posts with the State Headquarters, before being named adjutant general by former Gov. Julian M. Carroll in 1977. He was reappointed to the post by former Gov. John Y. Brown in 1979 and later served the governor as Justice Cabinet secretary and Kentucky State Police commissioner. He was reappointed as adjutant general by Gov. Martha Layne Collins Dec. 13, 1983.

NASA astronaut Patterson Biggs will address Boys' State at 1 p.m. Friday, June 28, in Button Auditorium.

A native of Virginia, Biggs is a member of a team of aerospace specialists employed by Oklahoma State University to acquaint the public with the role of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in the exploration of air and space.

U.S. Sen. Wendell H. Ford will be the speaker for Boys' State graduation banquet, scheduled for 6 p.m. Friday, June 28, at Adron Doran University Center Cafeteria.

Now in his second term, Ford, a former governor of Kentucky, was re-elected to the senate in 1980 by the largest margin ever given a candidate for public office in the state's history.

He has held public office since 1965 when he served in the state senate, representing his native Daviess and adjacent Hancock counties.

In addition to being elected lieutenant governor in 1967 and governor in 1971, Ford also has been chairman of the National Democratic Governors' Caucus.

A civic leader as well as a politician, Ford has been active in the Jaycees and is the only Kentuckian to serve as national president and international vice president of the organization.

He is a recipient of the American Cancer Association Layman of the Year Award, the March of Dimes "Partners in Progress" award of appreciation and the Boy Scouts of America's highest service award.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will hold a Conference on Performance Tasks for supervisors of student teachers Saturday, June 29, from 9 a.m. to noon in Ginger Hall.

Approximately 75 student teacher supervisory personnel from schools in 16 of MSU's service area counties are expected to attend, according to Dr. John W. Payne, MSU coordinator of professional laboratory experiences.

Dr. Roberta Anderson, MSU vice president for academic affairs, will be the keynote speaker for the session. She will discuss various aspects of teacher preparation.

Formerly dean of the College of Education at the University of South Dakota, Dr. Anderson was a U.S. Department of Education Senior Scholar in Residence with the National Institute of Education, Washington, D.C. She came to MSU in January.

Saturday morning's program will include panel discussions tailored to secondary, elementary and special education teaching and featuring faculty members from MSU's Department of Education.

A noon luncheon will follow the morning sessions and participants will have an opportunity to visit the Appalachian Celebration Arts and Crafts Market.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Excited ..." That's how two Rowan County Senior High School students say they feel about being recipients of Morehead State University Distinguished Scholar Awards, the University's most prestigious scholarship.

Regan Brumagen and Teresa Fultz were the first National Merit finalist and semi-finalist, respectively, to receive the full four-year scholarships which cover tuition and fees, room, board and books.

Brumagen is the daughter of two MSU faculty members, Dr. David and Janice Brumagen of 422 N. University Blvd. Fultz is the daughter of Mrs. Dixie Fultz, Rt. 6, Morehead, and the late Elmer Fultz.

The awards were established last fall to encourage National Merit scholars to study at MSU, according to President Herb. F. Reinhard. "Those students who excel in National Merit competition are scholastic all-stars, academic blue chippers and we want them on our campus," Dr. Reinhard said.

During her freshman year, Brumagen said she planned to explore a variety of career options through courses ranging from writing and music to science and history.

"Morehead State is a very good school and the programs I'm interested in are excellent," she said. As a former University Breckinridge School student, Brumagen will have little difficulty finding her way around campus.

"My high school teachers have been just excellent," she said. "College work will be harder, but I think I can handle it. I need to develop better study habits for it," Brumagen said, adding that she enjoyed extracurricular activities.

At RCSHS, Brumagen was active in the American Field Service Club, Beta Club and the French Club. She has studied piano for the past eight years.

Her summer plans include working and leisure activities of swimming, walking--especially at the family's farm--and reading. "I read everything from Ellery Queen to Shakespeare. I haven't had a great deal of time to read this past year, so I'm really looking forward to digging into the library this summer," she said. Brumagen, 17, has a 19-year-old brother, Boone, who has received an appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy, and a 23-year-old sister, Kelly, the current Miss Kentucky and a MSU alumna.

Fultz plans to pursue studies leading to a career as a special education teacher. "I have nine nieces and nephews, all under the age of nine, and I love children," she explained.

Beginning her scholastic achievements early, Fultz, 17, was double-promoted as a student at Haldeman Elementary School. "I had good teachers throughout my time in elementary and high school," she said. "They were very helpful."

Also an avid reader, Fultz said she believes that makes studying easier. "I will read practically anything," she said.

A member of the RCSHS speech team for the past three years, Fultz also was active in the Science Club and Beta Club. During the past year, she's been employed by McDonald's.

Fultz has a 13-year-old brother, James, who is a student at Rowan Middle School, and an older brother and sister. "My family is happy for me because the scholarship will make it much easier for me to go to college. I really appreciate the University's interest in encouraging students to do well academically," she said.

Information about opportunities at MSU is available from the Office of Admissions. The toll-free telephone number for out-of-state residents is 1-800-354-2090 and in Kentucky the number is 1-800-262-7474.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Richard Byron Miles of Lafayette, Ind., has been appointed director of bands at Morehead State University, effective July 1.

Miles has been director of bands and coordinator of secondary music at Lafayette Jefferson High School since 1979. Prior to that time, he was director of music and bands and supervisor of music for Elkin (N.C.) City Schools.

"Mr. Miles was selected by a search committee from 80 college and high school band directors nationwide who applied for the position," MSU Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences Robert Burns said.

"He comes from a tremendous high school program, where he has established himself as one of the brightest, most innovative musicians in the country. He also has a strong commitment to music education in the total area of bands," Dr. Burns added.

A native of North Carolina, Miles is a graduate of Appalachian State University. He earned the Master of Science in Music Education degree and an Advanced Certificate in Music Education from the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, where he was a drill designer for the "Marching Illini" and graduate assistant supervisor of student teachers for the Music Education Division.

He has participated in a variety of clinics on symphonic and concert band musicianship and marching band show design, including ones with Bridgemen and Muchachos drum and bugle corps staff.

Under his direction, the Lafayette Jefferson High School Symphonic, Concert and Marching bands have consistently won superior ratings. The LJHS Marching Band is a three-time finalist in the Grand National Championship of Marching Bands in America and the 1983 Central United States Regional Grand Champion of Marching Bands in America.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Leaders are developed not born was the message delivered to Kentucky Boys' State delegates Sunday night by Maj. Gen. Billy G. Wellman, Kentucky National Guard adjutant general.

Wellman was the keynote speaker for the 45th session of Kentucky Boys' State which is under way this week at Morehead State University under the sponsorship of the American Legion.

He told his audience that preparation for leadership roles could begin for each of them this week if they would set goals and make commitments to accomplish those goals.

The first commitment, he told the approximately 300 delegates from across the state, was to education. "All college graduates will not be leaders, but all effective leaders of the future will be college graduates," he said.

Urging the delegates to set high standards and not to settle for anything less in themselves or others, Wellman said. "Never compromise your integrity, because when you do, you lose self-respect."

He told the group that being in the presence of future leaders of America was somewhat motivating and inspiring and that while sometimes adults were apprehensive of the future leaders, he believed in them.

Earlier in the day, MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard welcomed them to campus and told them the key to democracy and its successful continuation was participation by knowledgeable and enlightened citizenry.

Noting that the world today suffered from the inability of its leaders to understand and respect each other, Dr. Reinhard challenged the delegates to be "leaders who are truly sensitive to the needs of others" and who "truly understand and respect each other."

Silas Noel of Frankfort, Kentucky Boys' State president, in his greetings to the delegates called on them to be enthusiastic. "In order to get something out of this program, you have to put something into it."

During the week-long program, the youths will study government operations, elect city and state officials and set up a general assembly in which they will introduce bills and perform other functions of their offices.

On Thursday, the elected state officials will meet with their real-life counterparts at the state capitol in Frankfort. On Friday evening, the graduation and awards banquet will be held with U.S. Sen. Wendell Ford as guest speaker.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Kentucky Boys' State Gov. Terry Jones and his counterpart, Gov. Martha Layne Collins, have something in common--their concern for education.

Jones, son of James and Minnie Jones of Anchorage, won the 1985 Boys' State gubernatorial race in the closest election of the convention's history.

"I want to discuss education policy with her," said Jones, a senior at Eastern High School in Louisville.

Jones is scheduled to meet with Gov. Collins during a convention trip to Frankfort Friday, part of the week-long activities that began Sunday at Morehead State University.

Education is one of several issues being discussed by the 304 participants in the Boys' State convention, sponsored by the American Legion to better acquaint students with state government functions.

The participants in the convention, which includes an election of state officers and legislators, were chosen from the top students in their high schools.

In the race for Boys' State governor, Jones said he initially lost the election by two votes. He requested a recount, and went on to win the election by six votes.

"Before I came here I knew very little about state government, but I believe I've learned a great deal. I've learned how parliamentary procedure is carried out," he said.

He added that the experience of participating in Kentucky Boys' State will help him in his goal of attending West Point Military Academy. Jones is active in Junior Achievement, 4-H Club, student council, and his high school newspaper. President of his school choral council, Jones plays football, baseball and basketball. He plans to become a computer programmer after college.

Jones said his experience at Kentucky Boys' State might lead him into state politics in the future. "With my family, you have to get into politics," he said half-jokingly, adding that he once campaigned for a Louisville mayoral candidate and that sparked his interest in Kentucky Boys' State.

"I'm a straightforward person," he continued. "If I feel strongly about something, I'll back it 100 percent. If I'm going to be in government--Kentucky Boys' State, or any kind of government--I have to be that way. My parents really enforced that. If you really feel strongly about something, stay with it--don't let go."

Elected as Lt. Governor of Boys' State was Kevin Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Spencer of Fort Knox. He is a student at Fort Knox High School. Also elected to state office were:

Secretary of State: Daniel R. Durham of East Hardin High School, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Durham of Glendale.

Boys' State

Superintendent of Public Instruction: Brian T. Weyer of the Kentucky School for the Deaf at Danville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Weyer of Newport.

Commissioner of Agriculture: Price Smith of Larue City High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Smith of Hodgenville.

Attorney General: Jim T. Trent of Rowan County High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Trent of Clearfield.

Treasurer: Jeffrey L. Holland of Lone Oak High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Holland Jr. of Paducah.

Railroad Commissioner: John J. Renaud of Paducah Tilghman High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Renaud of Paducah.

The high school juniors from across the state participated in caucuses, committee meetings, platform writing and elections during their introduction to Kentucky's political system in the 45th of Boys' State.

Earlier in the week, the more than 300 delegates met with members of Morehead's City Council. On Thursday afternoon, Gov. Martha Layne Collins will address a joint session of Boys' State and Girls' State, which is meeting at MSU this week also.

U.S. Sen. Wendell H. Ford is scheduled to speak at the Boys' State graduation banquet on Friday evening.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- For 1985 Kentucky Girls' State Gov. Christine J. Turpin of Paducah, the most important experience the past week was not winning the gubernatorial election, but "making new friends."

"I didn't make as many friends as I wanted to, but I knew I'd meet more people if I ran for governor," said the Paducah Tilghman High School senior.

Campaigning for the office, she said, also helped her learn parliamentary procedure and gave her public speaking experience. Her interest in Kentucky Girls' State, an American Legion Auxiliary program, was sparked last year when her sister was elected secretary of state. "She told me what a great experience the week was and I've always been interested in government," Turpin said.

The new chief executive of a mythical 51st state also said she might pursue public office in the future. "I'd be interested in being in the house or senate-- either state or federal," she said.

While tax reform and attracting businesses to the state were some of the issues discussed during the week-long practical learning experience in government, education was the major issue, according to Turpin. "It all starts with education," she said.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T.E. Turpin, she is active in speech events at her high school and holds a second degree in the National Forensic League. Her other high school activities include Key Club of which she is president-elect and the yearbook staff. She also has been nominated for a German Foreign Exchange Program.

Elected as Lt. Governor of Girls' State was Rosalie Batistoni, daughter of Maj. Joseph M. Batistoni of Radcliff. She is a senior at North Hardin High School. Also elected to state office were:

Secretary of State: Dana Duerr, daughter of Joseph E. Duerr of Louisville. She is a senior at Mercy Academy.

Treasurer: Kim Renee Buford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Buford of Paducah. She is a senior at Paducah Tilghman High School.

Nearly 300 young women from high schools across the state spent the week holding caucuses, electing officers, organizing a house and senate and writing bills as part of their introduction to Kentucky's government process during the 39th annual Girls' State convention held at Morehead State University June 24-29.

Other highlights of the week included an address by Gov. Martha Layne Collins and a meeting with the Morehead City Council.
