The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare originally had a grant of $3.5 million for the program for this calendar year. Breathitt said the new grant brings the total to about $14.9 million for this year.

Breathitt said an increase in applications made the additional grant necessary.

Home-Repair Swindle Hints Offered By Federal Agency

You can't tell the home-repair swindler without a scorecard, so the Federal Trade Commission last week gave homeowners a rundown of sharp operators who turn up at the door every year as soon as the leaves turn green.

If you get sniped by one of these salesmen, you can tell your troubles to the FTC, which will listen sympathetically. The commission can't help you get your money back, but it might help the next impulsive buyer.

"Phishes used to be classified by the FTC as the bait-and-switch, the 'home improvement academy,' 'fictional regular' prices, misleading guarantees, bogus contests, representations of interest rates. The bait-and-switch involves advertising a product at an attractive price, but homeowners who respond are told that the product is inferior in some way, and that they should purchase a more expensive product.

In the "home improvement academy" approach, the customer is a graduate of the school, which specializes in repair and remodeling, and that the salesman's knowledge will benefit the homeowner in the selection of materials.

In some cases, a customer is promised a certain commission on sales made to friends or neighbors whose names he furnishes to the salesman. This is known as the referral racket. The fast operator gets a new list of prospects, but he usually disappears before any commissions are paid.

Some homeowners get hooked after they are told their homes will be entered in a contest to determine which house showed the greatest improvement. The winner usually is a free trip to Europe, or a new automobile.

In some cases, the sharp quote discounts far below "regular" prices, but the quotations they give as "regular" actually are far above the amounts charged by reputable firms.

Some purchasers of sliding, storm windows, awnings, and other products sometimes discover conditions and limitations in the guarantee after the salesman has collected and departed.

The commission said the prospective purchaser should protect himself against fly-by-night operators, by comparing prices and quality with local, established firms, by not signing a contract until the fine print has been studied, and by refusing to be pressured in to signing a contract if the salesman insists that the offer will not be available tomorrow.

However, if you, as a consumer, do get rooked, don't just charge it up to experience and forget about it, the FTC said.

"Bring your complaint first to the seller, if you can find him."

If false advertising is involved, it should be reported to the media carrying it, the commission said. Other deceptions should be reported to local organizations dealing with business standards, and to the FTC.

Spokesman said all complaints are investigated to determine if the commission has jurisdiction, and if action against the seller would be in the public interest.

Morehead Signs Tall Alabama Cager To Grant

Morehead State College has signed a 6-7 schoolboy basketball star from Alabama to a grant-in-aid.

New head basketball coach Bob Wright said today that Lemar Green, a 17-year-old youngster from Carver High School in Birmingham, is the third high school star to sign with Morehead this spring.

Green, who weighs 195 pounds, averaged 20.1 points a game as a senior and collected an average of 22.2 rebounds a game.

A better than B average student, he was coached in high school by Carl Wells.

Already in the Eagle fold are Breckinridge Training School's Danny Comette, who scored 87 points in one game this year, and Jerry Conley, Jenkins High School star who had a 29.7 average as a senior and was named the top player in the Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference.

Green was signed by Morehead assistant coach Rex Chaney.

Use Of Birth Control Pills 'Successful'

The use of birth control pills by American women has been so successful that it has been unnecessary to take any of the five approved types off the market. The Food and Drug Administration reported to Congress this week.

Dr. Joseph F. Sadusk, chief of the FDA's Bureau of Medicine, reported to a House Appropriations subcommittee that one of his department's largest programs has been to monitor the effectiveness of the pills.

He said, however, that "we still must answer for the lady who is taking them and how safe it is for her to take these pills over a prolonged period of time."

The pills were put on the market for public consumption about four years ago.

Sadusk was questioned closely by the committee on the effectiveness of the pills in previously closed testimony.

Rep. John E. Forgy, D-R.I., subcommittee chairman, asked Sadusk "have you had occasion to take any of these pills off the market because of adverse reactions?"

"We have not," Sadusk replied. "You may recall that approximately one and one-half years ago, the matter of thrombophilia came up as a safety factor. It was determined as an ad hoc advisory committee matter and except for this patient who previously had phlebitis, it was safe for them to continue taking birth control pills."

Sadusk explained that phlebitis causes blood clots in the leg and causes the veins to stand out along the leg.

The doctor said that his agency now requires warnings in the labeling for the physician who prescribes the pills.

Motorists Drive The Economy To New Heights First Quarter

The American motorist drove the economy to a peak far higher than expected in the first three months of 1965.

A Commerce Department report showed last week that economic expansion during the first quarter was one of the greatest in a five-year period.

Record high volume of automobile sales was a major factor.

Gross national product -- GNP -- the total of all government and private goods and services, was at an annual rate of $64.9 billion, a rise of $14.5 billion over the first three months of 1964. If this quarterly pace is maintained throughout the year, the economy would turn out $880 billion worth of goods in 1965.

The President's Council of Economic Advisors has forecast a GNP of about $860 billion for the year.

The rise was due almost entirely to purchases of consumer goods and services.

Some of the sharp gain in automobile production was attributed to a natural rebound following strikes by auto workers last fall, but a major part of it apparently came from a keen demand for new cars.

The Commerce Department said prices went up only modestly in the first three months of the year. Although the inflationary factor was not shown in the report, a department official said it was about the same as the annual average of 1.5 percent of the last several years.

The official said the extra accumulation of steel inventories in anticipation of a strike in that industry had only a minor effect on the figures, since buying already was at a high rate in late 1964.

The increase might have been more than $1 billion higher, if a dock strike in January and February had not slowed the movement of exports. This component of GNP is computed as the excess of exports over imports.

The figure was $1.3 billion below the annual rate for January-March of 1964.

Residential construction, on an annual basis, moved up from $25.1 billion to $26.3 billion following a declining trend in the previous nine months.

Businesses continued to spend more on fixed investment, and this factor added $2 billion to the GNP total.

Government purchases, which account for about 20 percent of GNP, remained unchanged from

Tobacco Industry 'Confuses Public'

Dr. Luther L. Terry, the U.S. surgeon general, said this week to confuse the public about health hazards connected with smoking cigarettes.

Terry said that while most physicians believe smoking potentially is injurious to health, the industry has sought during late 1964, Net purchases by the federal government dropped slightly, but there was a balancing gain in outlays by state and local governments.

There were significant gains in all major categories of consumer goods and services.

On an annual rate basis, purchases of durable goods advanced from $56.3 billion to $61.7 billion; nondurable goods from $181.8 billion to $184.2 billion; and services from $169 billion to $171.6 billion.

congressional hearings to give the impression there is doubt with the medical profession about the relationship between smoking and health. Congress is considering bills to require health warning labels on cigarette packages and advertising.

Terry said in an interview, but he said he believes most doctors agree with the committee appointed by the surgeon general which investigated the problem. It reported in January, 1964, that if found cigarette-smoking can be a cause of cancer and certain respiratory diseases.

Terry said a survey last year found that of 60,000 physicians queried, 94.9 percent thought cigarette smoking was a health hazard.

SKY PATROL READY—Governor Edward T. Breathitt and Lieutenant Colonel W. E. Newman, deputy-director of Kentucky State Police, place insignia on one of the airplanes which will patrol Kentucky highways. The planes will be used to control speed, help motorists and observe traffic violators. Breathitt said State patrol will begin with two airplanes, which possibly will be increased to five, the Governor said.

'Sky Patrol' Will Make Effort To Check Speeding On Highways

The State Police hope to have Kentucky's new "Sky Patrol" effective by May 1.

"We already have gone through the experimental stage," Col. James E. Bassett, State Police director said. "Our tests have proved highly successful."

The plans to patrol the State highways with two airplanes. They will be flown at low altitudes to control speed, help motorists, and observe traffic violators.

Bassett said that existing planes in the State Department of Aeronautics will be used and State troopers will serve as observers.

"We can use these planes to cut traffic accidents and save lives at little cost to the State," he added.

Once the operation is in full swing, Bassett said, "four or five planes may be used." The State owns 11 airplanes.

To check speeding, Col. Bassett pointed out, the observer will use a stopwatch and a table showing time, distance and speed relationships. By this method, the trooper will be able to indicate accurately the speed of a vehicle passing through a given zone.

The Department of Highways will paint stripes across highways at selected intervals to make the observations accurate. The trooper in the plane will relay the information to a police cruiser on the ground. The ground unit, in turn, will stop any traffic violator.

"This system," Col. Bassett said, "is very similar to the way radar now is used to control speed."

Enforcement is the chief purpose for the planes, he said, but they also will be used to help stranded motorists and those involved in accidents.

The aircraft will be on standby to help in rescues, emergency blood deliveries, manhunts, situations where time and the unique capabilities of a plane are determining factors in the success of missions.

Experience from other states shows that the air patrol is able to observe improper passing and stop-sign violations, just to mention a couple of hazardous infractions, Col. Bassett concluded.

The suggestion to use airplanes for police work was made by Gov. Edward T. Breathitt's co-pilot, Sandy Hockenbush.

Richmond Show Set To Honor Homecoming

In a special floral tribute to Kentucky's springtime beauty, Richmond will dedicate its third annual flower show on Apr. 29 to Kentucky Homecoming Year.

Trees, shrubs, and flowers in display will be displayed.

Two classes of the horticulture division will include flowering branches and fruit tree blooming. Tulips, geraniums, and other spring flowers will have their own classes.

Other classes in the artistic division of arrangements honor Kentucky Homecoming Year by their design and title: "Run For Home," "Period Arrangement," "Explore Kentucky - Keep Kentucky Green" (all green arrangements depicting Kentucky's parks system). Other arrangements tie in with burley tobacco, the Kentucky Cardinal and coal.

State School Head's Appointment Asked By Constitution Review Assembly Group

The State superintendent of public instruction would be appointed by a State board of Education elected by the people, under a proposal approved by the education, health and welfare committee of the Constitution Revision Assembly.

The superintendent, who may not succeed himself, is now one of seven members of the board of Education.

Procedure of the committee at an Apr. 13 meeting in the State Capitol was to conduct a public hearing on the question, clear the proposal through a subcommittee on education, and then submit it for approval to the full committee.

The committee, headed by Ramsey B. Taylor, Sr., Princeton, is now ready to submit its recommendation with any other it may have to the full assembly for approval before ultimate submission to a vote by the people.

At the hearing in the House Chamber, Dr. Harry M. States, current superintendent of public instruction, and J. Marvin Dodson, executive secretary of the Kentucky Education Association, stated they believe that any revision of the present 1891 Constitution which strips voters of the power to elect either superintendent or board that appoints superintendents would be defeated at the polls.

Appointment of the superintendent by an elected board has been advocated for some time by the State Department of Education, the Kentucky Education Association, the Kentucky Association of School Administrators, and the Kentucky School Boards Association.

The same principle has been endorsed by the Kentucky Council of Parents and Teachers and the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation. A spokesman for the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs urged its adoption at the committee's public hearing.

Announcement of the result of a poll of school board members in the state's 204 school districts on three proposals was made by Maurice B. Semet, executive secretary of the school boards association.

With 10 points for first choice, five for second, and one for third, the results were: appointment by an elected board, 918; election by popular vote on a nonpartisan ballot, 420; appointment by board named by

Fleming Votes $5,000 For New Airstrip

Fleming County Fiscal Court has voted to add $5,000, within the next two years, to the construction fund for an airstrip in the county. The project was initiated last year by the Chamber of Commerce which allocated $2,000 toward the building. City council also earmarked $5,000 for the airstrip, which will be built with local, state and federal funds.

The Fleming County Air Board is striving to raise $25,000 locally which will be one-fourth the total cost. The additional $9 percent will come from federal and state funds.

governor, 183. Dr. Sparks said that since World War II, nine states have provided for the election of state boards of education. He added that despite efforts by the legislature, no state had returned to the appointive system for state board members.

In a summary of his position on the question, Dr. Sparks added the people of Kentucky do not want their state board of education appointed by the governor. He said an elected state board would insulate the schools from political control.

New Record Forecast In Farm-Sign-Up

Preliminary sign-up figures for the 1965 feed grain program indicate that new records may be set. Freeman M. Hockensmith, chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, complete State returns through Mar. 26, the program throughout the country has 1,373,709 acres signed up to divert, 34.1 million acres. This acreage for diversion is within 1 percent of last year's record 34.3 million acres.

Including farms signed up under the program's maling barley provision, the 1965 feed grain program has 1,378,138 acres signed up to divert, more than the previous record set in 1962. Base acreage on enrolled farms also is at a new high of 79.8 million acres, compared with the 1964 record of 77.7 million acres.

In Kentucky, 66,572 producers have signed up to take part in the 1965 feed grain program, compared with 62,650 signing up in 1964. Acreage for diversion in the State totals 772,289 acres for 1965, compared with 713,412 acres for 1964.

All of the sign-up totals will be increased when complete returns are received. The sign-up ended Mar. 26 in most States, but was extended for a week in some counties because of severe weather conditions prevailing in certain areas.

Of the 34.1 million acres intended for diversion, 26.3 million acres represented corn base acreage, 6.9 million acres represented sorghum acreage, and 3.0 million acres represented barley.

Don Carmichael In Honor Plan For Georgians

Don A. Carmichael, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden M. Carmichael of Stanbort, Ga., and heir of Morehead, Ky., has been selected to participate in the second Governor's Honor Program in the State of Georgia. He is one of 400 selected from 2,625 nominations from 166 Georgia schools. To be nominated, students must have a minimum I.Q. of 120, place in the upper 10 percent of their class, have an overall "B" average, and an "A" in the subject on which they wish to concentrate. Georgia is the second state to establish a Governor's Honor Program.

Congress Embroiled in Writing Farm Law

For more than 30 years, the government has been trying to help steadily declining number of farmers cope with the great technological revolution of world history.

The revolution is the explosion in farm productivity which has made its greatest gains in the years since World War II.

The end is not in sight. Per-acre production has risen about a third in the past decade. Further substantial gains are in sight. At the same time the number of farmers continues to dwindle at a rate of about 100,000 a year.

But even though there are now about 1 million fewer farmers in America than in 1955, those that remain have the capacity to produce about 8 to 10 percent more today's domestic and export markets can absorb. Congress is again embroiled in rewriting the federal farm program designed to keep the abundance from forcing sharp drops in farm prices.

President Johnson's farm bill calls for an extension through which federal major programs in return for compliance with production controls.

New features in the bill estimate will pull about $300 million in federal price support funds out of the wheat and rice stabilization programs. These funds would be replaced by $300 million obtained through raising farm income—the additional income estimates by $100 million more.

Another new and potentially significant proposal would support for small-scale producers would be higher than for larger operations.

One theme runs consistently through official explanations of the new bill: The administration wants to cut the number of tax dollars used for farm price support spending to make more money available for "Great Society" program in education, housing, and anti-poverty campaigns.

The administration proposal would continue all existing production controls. Its proponents add hope that controls on slightly in the distant future by slipping off 40 million crop acres into a $60 million long-term land retirement program.

But the flat statements that government must drop support prices—except where controls can be tightened—farm support levels may be eased down in the future to counter continued increases in per-acre production.

The current farm programs are under attack from at least two directions.

Some farm leaders, headed by spokesmen in the American Farm Bureau Federation, maintain that the government itself has created much of the problem by pegging prices at artificially high levels which, they claim, encourage overproduction.

Some economists charge that the support programs have gone off the track because they give almost all farmers the same amount of support for each bushel of pounds produced. Under this system, the argument runs, most of the government's money goes to help the big farmers while few pounds of bushels, gets little help.

There is little dispute that the government program have cost a lot of money. Through the fiscal year ending this June 30, federal spending on farm income stabilization has ranged from slightly over $3 billion a year to over $4 billion. These figures take no account of an additional average of $7 billion a year spent to ship farm surplus to the food for peace program.

This spending has served to absorb some of the excess production capacity of U.S. farm production from rising. But other billions have gone to buy up food and fiber to improve the living standards of needy people at home and abroad. Other billions have been paid to farmers to bring their compliance with programs which hold down production.

These programs have held net farm income for the past four years at a steady annual rate of $12.5-$12.6 billion. Within the programs, administration would have been only about half as high.

But this government spending—at least in farm legislation—President James E. Parton of the National Farmers Union, attacks the steady decline and stopped the farm and farmer.

In 1952, the U.S. had 5.2 million farms. By 1962, there were less than 3.7 million. Today there are about 3.4 million, and what is estimated in this change is a sharp decline in the number of commercial and non-commercial farms.

The Department of Agriculture has 1.6 million farm families with a total crop and livestock sales of more than $8,000 accounted for 61 percent of the nation's farm products. The other 9 percent came from 1.2 million small farms, many of them part-time or off-farm families.

While the total number of farms has been dropping, farm acreage has not declined much. And number of farms with sales over $10,000 a year has been growing—from 826,000 in 1959 to 840,000 in 1963.

"If recent trends continue," one economist predicted, "40 percent or more of the farm products will be produced in the near future on about 150,000 farms with sales of $40,000 or more. Approximately 1.4 million farms will produce an additional 50 to 55 percent."

In the face of this development, the Johnson administration is shaping a farm policy with the announced purpose of separating the social problem of rural America from the economic problems of commercial agriculture.

Farm commodity support programs are to continue if this policy is followed. They are to be designed, according to Johnson, to give "efficient family farmers" a chance to earn as much as their capital and labor as they could in the non-farm economy.

But the price support program will no longer be a primary instrument for supporting small, marginal farms.

Administration farm officials have apparently accepted as fact something which many farm politicians denied: that the price support, at what level—cannot offset major losses to farmers who sell very low prices for their products.

For farmers who sell very low prices, the price support is to be expanded to efficient-scale operations. Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman said in an outlook, the best hope lies in resources in rural areas.

For obvious political reasons, Freeman avoids the plague of any suggestion that administration policies are designed to encourage people to get off the farm. Any move should be voluntary, he insists, and 1968 programs include several proposed price support bonuses for small farmers and one plan to help small operators expand by acquiring the allotment rights of retiring farmers.

Current Data Is Essential To SS Unit

America is on the move. Census Bureau figures show that in a recent year over 35 million people moved to a different place. According to Social Security records, almost 20 million people are currently receiving monthly checks.

Partners two facts together and it is apparent that many of those receiving monthly social security checks will move within the year.

To make sure their checks reach them on time, the Social Security Administration asks that people receiving monthly benefits notify the office immediately when their address is changed. They are urged to, either by getting in touch with their nearest district office or by giving them the card given when they applied with their nearest district office.

In reporting a change of address, the social security claim number should be included on all correspondence.

To make doubly certain that checks arrive on time at the new address, the post office should be notified of a change of address. All letters sent to the Social Security district office should be addressed to the residents located at 1815 Carnegie Avenue, Ashland.

The other day portly Philip J. Philbin, a good-natured congressman from Massachusetts, fattened up the money-losing magazine in the country with an item.

Over Billion Pounds Of Food Given Schools

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced that domestic food donations to help feed school children, needy families, and needy persons in charitable institutions to total nearly more than 1 billion pounds in the first half (July-December 1964) of this fiscal year, a 10 percent gain over the same months a year earlier.

Donated foods were those acquired by the Department in price-support and surplus removal operations, and made available to the States and territories under the Consumer Food Programs of the Consumer Food Marketing Service. In addition, supplementary foods are purchased especially for schools in the National School Lunch Program.

The cost of donated commodities to all outlets during the July-December period totaled $20.2 million, a gain of nearly 39 percent from the same 6 months of 1963. The increase was accounted for largely by the distribution this fiscal year of over $48 million worth of frozen beef and natural liquid milk, and over $39 million worth of frozen canned beef in products that were not available for the same period a year earlier.

FARM BUREAU in Action

Tera Bennett Kentucky Farm Bureau Fed.

The Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation has announced the formation of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Scholarship Foundation, Inc., formed as an affiliate of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation. The non-profit foundation will provide financial assistance to outstanding rural high school. The young people must be members of a family belonging to Kentucky Farm Bureau. No scholarship will be awarded to a student who has received $1,000 per year for four years.

This is another service being offered by the Kentucky Farm Bureau. It should add tremendously to the already growing demand and interest in the present Farm Bureau Young People's Scholarship Program.

The present scholarship program is in its 13th year. Under the program, 25 scholarships have been awarded. The four annual winners, two Kentucky boys and two Kentucky girls, each receive $250 a year for four years to be used toward expenses at the college of their choice under the Kentucky Farm Bureau-Winn-Dixie Stores, Inc. Mutual Insurance Company.

This year the two Kentucky Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Company scholarships were being called the J.P. Starford Memorial Scholarships.

In order to award a scholarship, the Foundation must accumulate $1,000. For each additional $1,000, the Foundation will award one more scholarship.

Any county Farm Bureau can donate money to this Foundation and designate that a scholarship be awarded to an outstanding young person in its county. If the money is in the amount of $1,000 and if the applicant meets the requirements of financial need, scholastic ability and leadership qualifications, as stated in the scholarship regulations.

Last year a scholarship program (four $1,000 scholarships) drew applications from 108 young people.

Acree-Poundage Policy Signed By President Johnson

President Johnson signed Saturday a farm bill to put teeth into a tobacco control program which has lost much of its effectiveness because of technological progress in agriculture.

The measure would clamp controls on flu-cured tobacco by limiting the amount of tobacco that a grower can produce on a single farm. Growers have been based on acreage planted, rather than sales, but as the Agriculture Department reduced acreages, growers were able to hold production high, or even increase it, by producing more and more per acre.

This was possible by using more fertilizers, improved production practices, growth regulators and other technological advances which the government itself helped to develop.

As a consequence, the government's tobacco program, once hailed as a perfect example of effective crop control, has run into the same overproduction trouble which earlier engulfed wheat, cotton and other crops which also were produced under acreage limitations.

In a statement, Johnson, called the new law "a substantial and constructive improvement in the tobacco program." He said that, assuming farmers agree in a referendum, the law will help to produce more effectively in balance, when demand, boost farm income through higher quality and increased exports, and cut government price support costs.

Under the new plan, subject to grower approval in a referendum, an individual farm's flu-cured tobacco production quota would be determined by multiplying its acreage yield by its acreage allotment.

The farm's acreage yield would be the average for the five highest years during the 1950-1960 period, with limitations that would keep the average yield from being out of line with that of the general community.

Hence, there would be no incentive to produce more per acre than the three-year average.

The program could apply to flu-cured tobacco and be expanded to burley and other types of tobacco in 1968.

About 65 percent of the growers who would vote in the referendum, which is still to be scheduled, live in North Carolina.

Zing into spring! Chevrolet Impala

It looks like a big car. And is—by almost any standard you want to apply.

Nobody builds a car as much as one inch wider. Length? It grew three inches this year. Roominess? Every closer model's got three inches more shoulder room. Price? That's where Chevrolet's got the edge. Like the look of mellow walnut across the Impala's instrument panel. And big touches. Like the fineament of the same Body by Fisher workmanship that makes some of America's most

Three Free Bicycles Offered By Optimist

Morehead and Rowan County youngsters will have the opportunity to win one of three new bicycles Saturday at the Optimist Club Bicycles Day at the Hill at Rowan County High School.

Boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 15 are invited to participate in the event scheduled from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Bruce Harris, chairman of the event, said that besides the bicycles, other prizes would be given to winners in the 6 to 10, 10 to 12 and 12 to 15.

Harris pointed out that the youngsters should contact their school principals for further information and should plan to be at Rowan County High School for the competition Saturday.

He said there would be numerous activities, including a bicycle inspection, bike in-a-minute, skill tests, games and entertainment, distribution of safety cards and awards and free refreshments for the participants.

Harris pointed out that all youngsters are invited to participate and that the members of the Optimist Club will conduct the various activities and serve as judges.

Dr. C. Nelson Grote, chairman of the Boys Work Committee, pointed out that the Bicycles Day will be an annual event and he is hoping for a large turnout of youngsters for Saturday's event.

He said there would be numerous activities, including a bicycle inspection, bike in-a-minute, skill tests, games and entertainment, distribution of safety cards and awards and free refreshments for the participants.

The first will be at the farm of Elbert Curtis at the farm section at 10 a.m. The second will be at the farm of Gary Kirk just off the Crum Road. The purpose of the meetings is to discuss what ever problem you have or if you have other tobacco problems, bring them with you.

Severe Doining Damage
If you are growing alfalfa and haven't checked it lately get out now and look at it for signs of insect damage. This insect is causing extensive damage through the state of Kentucky and is a very serious pest of alfalfa. 5-10 percent of fields daily. Many farmers are not even aware of the fact that their fields are infested. Inspect your field and if you see damage and if you find that 3 out of 25 plants are damaged it is time to spray with the recommended insecticide. Contact us or your dealer for the kind and amount of insecticide to use. It is important that you use the proper one and that it be used in the recommended rate since the residue on the hay that is cut from these fields can be poisonous if precautions are not observed.

He said Congress, with only two dissenting votes, has authorized the President to take what action he felt necessary in Vietnam. "One may disagree with the course of action, but in my opinion the government of the United States and the President of the United States are acting constitutionally."

Cropper said it is most important that the United States search out a course of action, a world of morality and law.

Rep. Perkins, discussing the effects of federal aid, opportunity programs and economic development in the state of Kentucky, said this country's efforts on the part of the federal government to help themselves, but fruit within eight years.

"I know that many say that even to talk of negotiation is tantamount to defeat, but our country is different than the rest of the world. We believe in the right of morality and law."

"I am a native of Magoffin County," being born and raised on a farm, and moved to Rowan County 18 years ago.

"I am a teacher and a farmer. At present I am principal of the Clearfield Consolidated School, located about a mile from Morehead."

"I have been active in almost all farm organizations and was, for many years, president of the Licking Valley Dairy Association. The challenge on my farm, just west of Clearfield, are primarily tobacco and beef cattle."

"I am married and have three children—Brenda Carol, a junior at Morehead State College; Gerald, in his junior year at Rowan County High School; and Larry in the 4th grade at Clearfield."

"The 71st Legislative District is blessed by having Morehead State College where the enrollment is expected to reach 7,000 by 1970. Most of the young men and women of this district, and area, receive their higher education at Morehead State College."

"It is necessary to follow that this college receives its appropriation from the budget submitted by the governor and approved by the Legislature. I could write pages about my past support of Morehead State College, but I don't want to desire to continue with, and help this great institution is best contained in the fact that (1) I received my A. # Hit-Run Charged To Morehead Youth

A 19-year-old Morehead man has been charged with hit and run in connection with an oncoming vehicle last Tuesday causing a collision near the Green Valley Acres subdivision.

Wilburn Ray Gregory, of Rt. 1, was arrested by State Police after a parking lot owned by Mrs. Tina Adkins Keeton was struck about 12:30 p.m. last Thursday.

State Trooper Marvin Jennings said his investigation showed that the youth fled the scene after striking Mrs. Adkins' car and he was apprehended a short time later.

A car operated by Clift Jones, 72, of Morehead, made a left turn into the path of an oncoming vehicle last Tuesday causing a collision near the Green Valley Acres subdivision.

Trooper Carl B. Sluss said Jones was headed west on U.S. 60 about 8:30 p.m. and started to make a left turn into the subdivision about 12:30 p.m. last Thursday.

Injured slightly in the mishap was Robert Cippano, 19, of Morehead, a passenger in the Romano car. He was taken to St. Claire Medical Center.

Optometrist Gets Professional Post

Dr. Byron E. Wentz, of Morehead, has been appointed to a key post in the Southern Council of Optometrists for 1965-66. He was announced by Dr. Henry V. Sawyer, Marion, S.C., President.

He will serve as a member of the College Liaison Department. The Council is made up of some 2,000 members in the State optometric associations of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

With a goal of upgrading the professional competence and educational status, it sponsors the annual Southern conference of Optometry and coordinates the public service activities of member States.

Dr. Wentz has served as past-president of the Kentucky Optometric Association, and is now president of the Kentucky Board of Examiners.
