MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Department of Communications has two classes in the Radio-Television area that may be of interest to nonmajors on its Summer II schedule of courses.

They are: International Broadcasting (R-TV 399-002) Monday through Friday, 1 to 3 p.m., and The Soap Opera and Society (R-TV 399-001) Monday through Friday, 10:10 a.m. to 12:10 p.m.

Although listed as undergraduate courses, they may be taken at the graduate-level through special arrangement, according to Dr. Michael Biel, associate professor of radio-television.

International Broadcasting will compare how other countries present news to their citizens and how that news is presented for Americans. Students also will examine entertainment programming and receive experience in using a shortwave receiver to pick up overseas transmissions, Biel said.

Sociological aspects of the daytime serial drama will be explored in The Soap Opera and Society. The evolution from 15-minute radio broadcasts to hour-long television programs will be examined as well as character development and plot structure.

Registration for Morehead State Summer II will be conducted on July 8. Classes begin July 9 and continue through Aug. 2.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Biel at (606) 783-2794.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- America is the target of terrorists because of its strength, U.S. Sen. Wendell H. Ford told Kentucky Boys' State delegates at their closing banquet Friday (June 28) at Morehead State University.

"Everyone wants to take on a giant," Sen. Ford said. Reminding the group that Independence Day was just a few days away, he cautioned against taking the nation's freedoms for granted.

"Recent acts of terrorism may have given new meaning to those freedoms," he said. The senator noted that over the past five years $2 trillion had been spent on defense of the United States. "Now we see a small band of terrorists holding us at bay," he said, referring to the recent hostage taking of 39 Americans by Shiite extremists.

"The Fourth of July is a celebration of the creation of individual freedoms and ideals which have made the U.S. a giant among nations," he continued.

The reason the U.S. Constitution has survived nearly 200 years is "our dedication to the ideals on that paper," he said.

"The torch of leadership is slowly but surely being passed to you and your peers," he told the more than 300 high school seniors participating in the American Legion's week-long practical learning experience in government.

"We must re-dedicate ourselves to ourselves to our nation's ideals and freedoms," he said, urging the delegates to choose involvement over complacency.

Sen. Ford challenged the youth to become more involved in community service and government. "The world is in your hands," he said.

Following the senator's remarks, results of the election of Boys' Nation senators and alternates were announced.

Elected senators were Eric Fountain of Calvert City, a senior at Marshall County High School, and Boys' State Gov. Terry Jones of Anchorage, a senior at Eastern High School.

Named alternates were M. John Jordan of Frankfort, a senior at Franklin County High School, and Mark L. Sander of Louisville, a senior at DeSales High School.

Boys' Nation will be held in Washington, D.C., July 19-27.

July 1, 1985
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- For three delegates to Kentucky Boys' State, there were many challenges, including a very special one-- communicating with others.

The Kentucky School for the Deaf was represented at the convention at Morehead State University June 23-29 by:

Brian Weyer of Newport, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Weyer; David Cornett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Cornett of Cornettsville; and Mike Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Revis of Bledsoe.

"I felt awkward at first," said Weyer. "As the convention continued during the week, others learned how to communicate with us through sign language," said Wilson. The three students said they enjoyed the learning experience at the American Legion-sponsored event.

Weyer was elected superintendent of public instruction. Cornett and Wilson were elected state senators.

Kent Mann and Bill Melton, assistant principals for the school who accompanied the three students to the convention as interpreters, said the response by other students was encouraging.

"The response of the hearing kids to our kids was great," said Melton. He added that an informal class was started during the convention to teach basic sign language. Ten students eventually participated in the class.

"They have been really eager to communicate with our kids," Melton said.

All three delegates said they enjoyed making new friends during the convention, although they admitted to being somewhat apprehensive at first.

"I felt a bit scared when I first came here," said Cornett. But as the other students learned how to communicate with him, the convention "became a more pleasant experience," he said.

The three students traveled to Frankfort on June 28, where Weyer met with his state counterpart, Alice McDonald, superintendent of public instruction. Weyer said that the other officers provided him with an education agenda to discuss with her.

Weyer and Cornett said they would consider a future in politics "a challenge." "I would like to give it a try," Cornett added.

July 9, 1985
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Outside income of coaches may be the next issue addressed by the NCAA Presidents Commission.

"There are potential conflicts of interest there," said Dr. Herb. F. Reinhard, Morehead State University president. Reinhard sits on the 44-member Presidents Commission which called for and received a get tough policy for recruitment violations last month.

The commissions' proposals were overwhelmingly adopted at the special NCAA convention called by the presidents--a first in the NCAA's 79-year history.

The commission will meet again in October to look at several items and sources of outside revenue for coaches is one possibility, according to Dr. Reinhard.

"What happened in New Orleans last month was only the first step in what will be an ongoing process," he said. "Passage of those first proposals was a dramatic step forward, but we also know the public will be watching to see if they are implemented," Dr. Reinhard said.

The legislation reflected attitudes of presidents of NCAA schools regarding the state of intercollegiate athletics. "The public image of intercollegiate athletics had become tarnished by the horror stories about recruitment violations," the MSU president said. "Too many presidents felt they were not in control of their own programs," he added.

"Everyone of the items accepted spell out clearly that presidents no longer are willing to tolerate abuses by overzealous individuals," he said. "They feel a definite responsibility to become more involved and in control."

Noting that the vast majority of college and university athletic programs were run by ethical individuals, President Reinhard said that the horror stories of flagrant violations by only a few institutions had resulted in a negative public image for all programs.

"The presidents thought that the penalties already on the books were not strong enough," he said. "There was a feeling that the benefits of a possible national championship far outweighed the penalties for unethical behavior in the minds of some individuals," he added.

In its widely-discussed Proposition No. 3, also known as the "death penalty," the NCAA distinguishes between major and secondary violations and outlines specific penalties for each, including mandatory suspension of up to two years for schools committing two major violations over a five-year period.

Major violations have been defined as those which would give a school a recruiting or competitive edge and may include altering academic records of student-athletes or offering bribes to attend a particular school.

Noting that the members of the Presidents Commission represented a diversity of schools from the big business programs of Big 10 schools to much smaller programs, Dr. Reinhard said he was impressed by the unanimity among them despite those differences.

"Despite pressures from outside and within, they were determined to send a message that abuses would no longer be tolerated," he said. "Even those whose programs had one strike against them stood their ground."

The committee is charged with drafting a contemporary mission and a five to seven year plan to chart direction for the University. The committee's recommendations will be submitted in November to Dr. Reinhard, who will forward them to the various campus constituent groups for review and recommendations. The draft plan is expected to be submitted to the Regents in February for their consideration and action.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Yataghan" may be an unfamiliar word to most people, but not to Ted Blevins, Kentucky's number one Scrabble player.

Blevins, Morehead State University's Downing Hall director for the past four years, has used the word--which means a double-curved Turkish sword--to his advantage in at least one crucial Scrabble competition, and may use it again, when he and two other players from the state compete in the National Scrabble Tournament July 28-31 in Boston, Mass.

His number one status is based on a computer ranking kept by Alan Frank of Boston and recognized by Scrabble Players, Inc., a subsidiary of Selchow and Righter.

Blevins has played Scrabble for 20 years, beginning tournament play in 1980. Originally from Cincinnati, Ohio, Blevins said that a Scrabble club in a Cincinnati suburb attracted his attention when his parents were invited to participate in a tournament. Blevins entered, did reasonably well, and then entered another tournament, where he won the consolation division.

"I'm proud of how I've done," he said, "but people like my wife, Evie, and my family help me by playing."

Blevins' apartment is decorated with numerous Scrabble paraphernalia: a mug that says "I'd rather be playing Scrabble," a filing cabinet full of Scrabble newsletters, a Scrabble hat, an embroidered Scrabble board hanging on his front door, and a display of awards won in tournament play. He even won a Scrabble computer game as first prize.

Blevins trains for tournaments vigorously and keeps a stack of reference books handy. "I know about 95 percent of all five-letter words in the official Scrabble Dictionary," he said.

Blevins brushes up on his techniques prior to tournament play by setting up board examples, alphabetizing letters, and remembering roots of words from an etymology class he took at MSU.

Other members of his family are also avid Scrabble players. At one time, his brother held the highest score in North America.

Blevins will be among nearly 300 competitors in the national tournament, where the top 32 scorers will receive cash prizes. First prize is $10,000. This will be Blevins' first national tournament and he says he is confident he will do "as well as I can."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Special Equestrians Program has received provisional accreditation from the North American Riding for the Handicapped Association (NARHA).

A cooperative effort between MSU and the Rowan County School system, the program is designed to teach riding skills to handicapped youngsters.

Provisional accreditation, the first step to full accreditation, was granted following an on-site inspection by Lida McCowan, executive director of the Cheff Center for the Handicapped, Augusta, Mich.

Tammy McMillan, MSU instructor of horsemanship, and Janet Lewis of Morehead are coordinators of the program. Lewis serves as Rowan County School system's liaison.

"One of only a few such programs in the nation, the Special Equestrians Program is a very special outreach activity and we are extremely proud of this national recognition," said Dr. Charles Derrickson, dean of MSU's College of Applied Sciences and Technology. "Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. Lewis are to be congratulated for their efforts," he added.

"Accreditation is crucial to the program's success as it demonstrates to parents that it is safe," said McMillan.

"This is a truly important activity for these youngsters," Lewis noted. "It's a means for them to learn a special skill which in turn enhances their self-worth. For some it has been a way of overcoming a fear of animals," she added.

Without volunteers, the program couldn't exist, according to McMillan and Lewis. "Volunteers don't have to be knowledgeable about horses, just interested in youngsters," McMillan said.

The volunteers come from the community and from the University--special education and horsemanship students. "We've also received assistance from community groups such as the Kiwanis Club and American Legion Post 126," Lewis added.

Anyone interested in becoming a Special Equestrians Program volunteer this fall may obtain additional information from either Lewis, (606) 784-9591, or McMillan, (606) 783-2800.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Do-it-yourself interior decorating...Cable TV...Movies...Weekend entertainment...Learning to live with people. That's residence hall life at Morehead State University.

"We believe there's more to a student's education than what is learned in the classroom," said Dr. G. Gary Grace, MSU vice president for student development. "Campus life should prepare students to live in a community peopled by all kinds of personalities. After all a campus is a mini community," Grace added.

"We have adopted a new philosophy which is designed to foster a sense of self-responsibility in students. Our message is students are adults and will be treated as such," Grace said.

One change is that upperclassmen and freshmen no longer will be segregated, but will live together. "Not only can freshmen learn from upperclassmen, but upperclassmen can learn a great deal from the fresh approach freshmen bring to a campus," Grace noted.

Students living in MSU residence halls not only may select one of eight colors to paint their walls, but also may bring furniture from home and build lofts or bookshelves. Cable television is available and includes the three major networks, plus PBS, ESPN, and MTV.

Outside the residence halls, students will find plenty of things to do seven days a week. There's a film series, featuring one month devoted to science fiction to be launched with a screening of "Star Wars."

Beach activities in August and September are scheduled at Eagle Lake, the University's 30-acre lake located on campus, which was developed this summer into a recreational complex for swimming, boating and picnicking.

One highlight of the fall, Parents Weekend on Sept. 20-22, has been planned around the theme "Hog Wild over MSU." It will feature a Swine Ball, hog calling contest and pig roast.

Also in September, a campus-wide student talent search program will begin. There's also an intramural program to help work out stress. In addition to the usual sport competition, there will be nine coed intramural activities, including volleyball, racquet ball, tennis and flag football.

"It's been proven that when students are given the opportunity for involvement in their community and know they are expected to be responsible adults, they develop a greater sense of self-confidence, have a greater persistence level in their studies and obtain better grades," Grace said.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.--There's a new option in residence hall life for Morehead State University students this fall.

Two of the campus' 12 residence halls--Mignon Tower and Cartmell Hall--will go coed, housing men and women on alternate floors.

Coed housing has been available on college and university campuses for more than 20 years, according to Dr. G. Gary Grace, MSU vice president for student development.

"Studies have shown coed residence halls have less vandalism than single sex halls, their residents have higher grades and are less prone to give up their college studies. They also seem more satisfied with their college experience," Grace said.

The option--and Grace stresses that it is an option--is part of a new philosophy in student life at Morehead State designed to foster a sense of self-responsibility and provide community living experience similar to the world outside a campus. "After all a campus is really a mini community," Grace said.

"We are telling our students that they are adults and are expected to be responsible adults," Grace added.

"One of the interesting aspects of coed housing is that residents tend to view hallmates as family members, relationships become more brother-sister. In fact the young men become rather protective of their adopted sisters," Grace said. "Rather than pairing off, coed hall residents engage in group activities--just like families," he added.

There are still rules to be followed, according to Grace. "Those who think this means 24-hour open house are under a misconception. Visitation hours will be the same as in single sex halls, but common public areas--lobbies and study rooms--offer hall residents the opportunity to burn the midnight oil after room visitation hours," Grace explained.

"There are a number of advantages related to coed housing, but the real key to its success is making it an option," he noted.

The option of coed halls isn't the only change in campus life planned for the fall semester which begins Aug. 19. No longer will incoming freshmen be segregated from upperclassmen, but will live in the same halls.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---"The opportunity of a lifetime," was the phrase Dr. William J. Weikel, Morehead State University professor of education, used to describe his recent around-the-world trip, which included touring China and the Soviet Union.

"Thousands of Chinese on bicycles" and everyone wanting to try out their English on the members of the group, were some of the impressions Dr. Weikel recalled. He remembered the visit to Moscow, capital city of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, as a "very structured tour."

China and the U.S.S.R. were the major countries visited, as Dr. Weikel led a Goodwill People to People Travel Program delegation of 25 American Mental Health Leaders around-the-world.

As former president of the American Mental Health Counselors Association, Dr. Weikel was asked to organize the professional/occupational delegation, which included counselors and psychologists from more than ten different states.

The group received a warm and accommodating welcome in China where they were greeted by Dr. Yan He-Qin, head of the Shanghai Psychiatric Hospital and Institute of Mental Health.

At the Worker's Sanitorium in Wuxi, China, the delegation members were introduced to a "kind of rest home" where a holistic approach was used in the recuperation of Chinese workers, suffering from a variety of problems. Dr. Weikel said that the Sanitorium was blending "Eastern and Western" treatment approaches.

The delegation was accompanied by a government guide in both China and the U.S.S.R. In China, they were allowed to tour several factories and schools in addition to the traditional sites such as the Ming Tombs and the Great Wall. In Moscow, however, the choices were more limited.

Dr. Weikel said that it was a "significant" gesture for the U.S.S.R. to open two of its mental health facilities to be toured by the group. Professional courtesy was extended to the delegation at both the All Union Research Center for Psychic Health in Moscow and the Bekhterev Psychoneurological Research Institute in Leningrad. Before leaving the U.S.S.R., the delegation toured the Kremlin, Moscow, and several landmarks in Leningrad.

The goals of the delegation in taking the trip, Dr. Weikel said, were "to meet their professional counterparts in the host country as well as the everyday citizens and to interact with those from vastly different cultures and backgrounds."

The Goodwill People to People Travel Program was founded by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1956 and is dedicated to the promotion of peace through the sharing of ideas and friendships across the boundaries of nations.

Dr. Weikel is currently in the process of planning a trip for the coming year in connection with this program.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Dr. Broadus Bryant Jackson, Morehead State University professor of geography, government and history, has been appointed chair of that department.

Jackson, a MSU faculty member since 1969, assumed the post July 1, according to Dr. Robert L. Burns, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

"Dr. Jackson's length of tenure at Morehead State gives him an excellent perspective to assist him in building on the strong programs already established in the department," Dr. Burns said.

Jackson came to MSU from the University of Maryland-Princess Anne, where he was chairman of the Social Science Division. He previously was at Jackson (Miss.) State University, where he organized and chaired the Department of History and Government, employing the school's first white full-time faculty member.

According to Jackson, a Harlan native, he returned to his home state to teach in order to complete work on his book. The book, "Reflections of American Republicanism: Schools for Ex-Slaves and Their Relationship to Religion and Politics in Mississippi, 1860-1880," is expected to be published at a later date. He has written several successful grant proposals and has contributed book reviews to professional journals.

MSU'S BAND CAMP PROGRAM: A PICTURE STORY

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Shades of the "Music Man!" It's Band Camp time at Morehead State University now through Aug. 10. Anybody on campus--and nearby--will tell you there's definitely more than 76 trombones around. With MSU as host, high school band students and their directors from all over the state are on campus to prepare for the upcoming year of half-time shows and marching competition performances. More than 1,000 students from 9 high schools are expected during the three-week period, according to Frank Oddis, MSU assistant professor of music and band camp director.

Cutlines

- 1--Bold brass sounds reflect a popular trend with today's band fans.
- 2--Concentration on formation is the name of the game for these parading piccolo players.
- 3--Determined drummers determine the cadence.
- 4--Highlighting half-time shows are precision maneuvers of the graceful flag corps.
- 5--After a long day of marching and drilling, there's even a moment to rest.
