Burial was made at Lee Cemetery.

"A Little Child Shall Lead Them"

Last Saturday marked the great Rhea Rally in Morehead, a rally held at the Court house Saturday afternoon. The meeting was well advertised by hand bills and word of mouth. The time of the meeting came. The court house bell tolled its message and the crowd assembled. At one time, by actual count there were forty eight present besides the speaker. This included the Rhea campaign manager and the man who introduced the speaker. The greater part of the time there was an average of twenty-five present. Of these twenty five, according to an investigator, four were Republicans, four were for Chandler, four were children, four were women who wanted to rest their feet and two were highway employees.

Judge Friend, a real gentleman from Beattyville, took the limelight and lambast the Chandler speaking tour in the country because he said "A sixteen year old boy was speaking, asking how could a sixteen year old boy be familiar with the issues of the campaign."

The answer is simple. The issues of the campaign are so simple, so clear, that a six year old child can understand. In fact, they are so simple, that the Chandler Campaign headquarters are seriously considering reaching down into the cradle and getting a babe in arms to make the best speeches.

Judge Friend stated that it took a "He-Man" to discuss this campaign. It undoubtedly does take a man with broad shoulders and a lot of heave, to carry the burden of Tom Rhea and Ruby Laffoon.

The Chandler idea is that Rhea will be served. We have never yet been able to see that because a man was old he necessarily had an opinion on brains. We believe that any person over six years of age, with even ordinary intelligence is capable of discussing intelligently the issues of this campaign.

Proof of that statement is the fact that when the Chandler followers held their meeting at Elizabettsille last Friday night, they were greeted by a crowd numbered over two hundred, people who had walked as high as three or four miles there and back home, to hear the gospel of Happy Chandler expounded by a "sixteen year old boy". They were forced, because of the great crowd to hold their meeting in the Masonic Hall instead of in the school house as was at first intended.

College Again Tops Semester's Big Enrollment

Over 150 Students More Than At Same Term Last Year Here.

TRAINING SCHOOL GROWS

With an enrollment of 440 college students, and 52 students in the high school department, the Morehead State Teachers College has again set a new high mark for enrollment over the previous corresponding summer term. The previous high mark for enrollment for the second summer term, was established last year, when at the close of enrollment 305 students had received cards in the college department. There are still several days left to enroll for the term, and several more students are expected.

The only department in the training school which is active this term is the high school department in which 52 students are enrolled. This is eight more than last year. No new teachers have been added to the faculty for the term, with the exception of Miss Ruth Pate of Muldresboro, Tennessee, who is here to replace Miss Troemel. Miss Troemel is in Madison Wisconsin where she lives and where she is enrolled in Wisconsin University.

A number of other faculty members are on vacations, several being in Europe or ready to sail for Europe. Prof. Ralph Hudson left Saturday and expected to sail for London on Wednesday of this week. While there he intends to spend considerable time in study and in visiting art galleries in France, Italy and England. Miss Inez Fatta Humphrey will leave for Europe within the next two or three weeks.

BABY OF J. BAILEY DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

"Jackie", the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bailey of Clearfield died at an Ashland hospital Tuesday night after an illness of several days. "Jackie" who was two years old became seriously ill last week and was taken to Ashland on Sunday.

The remains were brought to Clearfield Wednesday and funeral services will be conducted on Thursday afternoon with burial in Bradley cemetery.

Besides her parents, Jackie is survived by her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ambury.

COUNTY SCHOOLS OPENED MONDAY

The schools of Rowan County, with the exception of the consolidated and town schools opened for seven months term of the 1935-1936 school year on Monday of this week. Preparations were made for the opening of the schools at a teachers meeting held in Morehead on Saturday of last week at the Morehead High School Auditorium.

According to reports from the County Superintendent's office, the enrollment in the rural schools exceeded 2,500 students, although no accurate figures have been made available. Dr. T. A. E. Evans, County Health Director, is making preparations to take up work in connection with the schools within the next two weeks, and will be occupied from that time until the close of the regular visits.

A. B. CHANDLER TO SPEAK IN ELLIOTT

What is expected to be the greatest political rally ever held in Elliott county is scheduled to take place Monday morning, July 22 when A. B. (Happy) Chandler opens his campaign at Sandy Hook with an address at 10:00 a. m.

Chandler supported by attending a big dinner at noon in honor of the distinguished visitor. They are stating plainly in their advertisements that they are paying for the dinner out of their own pockets and that it is not paid for by either the Administration or the Highway Department funds.

The Chandler Committee from Elliott county extends a hearty invitation to every citizen of Rowan county to attend the big "celebration."

Hon. B. M. Vincent Gets Big Reception

Senator B. M. Vincent of Brownsville, Kentucky, in Edmondson county, spoke to an audience at Sandy Hook Monday afternoon, that numbered over 1,500 persons, in the interest of the candidacy of A. B. (Happy) Chandler, for governor. Senator Vincent, who comes from a neighboring county to that of Tom Rhea's, is a candidate for the office of Attorney General, but stated in no uncertain language that he did not care to discuss his candidacy, but that of one more important to the people of Kentucky.

He declared that the time is ripe for a New Deal in Kentucky, a deal that will take Kentucky's government out of the hands of old time politicians and place it in the hands of the young and honest men of Kentucky Democrats. He scored General Howard representative from Elliott county for his support of the Six Tax and announced him that the people of Elliott county would remember his lack of loyalty to their interests in the future.

Senator Vincent with powerful strokes painted a picture for the farmers and working men they still forget. He likened Happy Chandler to a young strong honest working man hitched alongside of Ruby Laffoon, a blind, stubborn bally mule who would kick over the traces.

Wrecks Take Toll Of Week Just Past

A number of serious wrecks over the week-end, resulted in serious injury to several local people according to reports. Saturday night S. C. Caudill was seriously, although not fatally injured when the car in which he was riding slid off the road near the Charles Hogue home and tumbled over several broken ribs and cuts and bruises. He is reported as improving nicely. His companion was unconscious for several hours, but apparently suffered no serious injuries.

On Sunday news was brought to Morehead of the serious injury of Joe Williams, son of Mrs. Oscar Palmer of this city. Mr. Williams, according to reports was riding in a truck with four other young men, returned to their homes in Olympia from work at Owingville, when the truck in which they were riding skidded in some loose gravel, left the grade and turned on its side in a ditch. Williams who was riding in the seat with two others, suffered severe cuts and bruises and several broken ribs. The two boys who were in the bed of the truck were most seriously injured, although none were fatal.

Baseball League Is Dropped For Year

In view of the predictions of the Rowan County News, the Kentucky State League folded up Tuesday night, after a more or less disastrous season from a financial viewpoint, and decided unanimously to discontinue the league during the last half of the season. Morehead has been somewhat more or less in that mood since the beginning of the season, lacking financial support so necessary to the success of a baseball team. Expenses last year were so great that the backers of the team were not enthusiastic over the prospects of another season played at a loss. The result was the opposite of encouraging for the team, which went into a slump from which they failed to recover.

The life of baseball in a small community is on an average two or three years. The enthusiastic backers of the first season become lukewarm when they see the expense account mount, and freeze up in two years. That is about what happened this year.

LOCAL WOMEN FORM CHANDLER CLUB

The Women's Chandler Club was organized here last Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Epsy Goodpastor, of Owingville, who is serving as State Campaign chairman for women for the Chandler campaign. About twenty five women were present, while more than that many more phoned that they were unable to attend, but that they would be out to future meetings.

TRAINING SCHOOL "KIDS" PUT ON ANIMAL CIRCUS

A Circus "what was a circus" was held by the children of the first grade at the Training School last Friday afternoon. With animals captured and caged by themselves, headed by a toy band, with a band major strutting his stuff, the parade started at the Training School and ended at the station. Animals of every description were in the parade, with clown art gypies and all that goes make up a circus.

Masons To Confer Third Degree Today

What is expected to be one of the largest meetings ever held by the Masonic Lodge here will be held this (Thursday) afternoon when eight candidates will receive the third degree, according to an announcement made yesterday. It is expected that the largest crowd of Masons ever gathered in Morehead will witness the induction of the largest class ever taken into the Masonic lodge here.

In view of the expected crowd, arrangements have been made to hold the initiation ceremonies in the Morehead High School gymnasium. They will begin at 8:00 p. m. Arrangements have been made also to take care of the parking of cars in order to avoid congestion on the narrow street. Cars will be parked back of the school house, thus leaving the streets free.

Following the ceremonies in the afternoon, the guests and members of the local lodge will enjoy a dinner at 6:30 p. m. served by the ladies of the Christian Church in the church basement. Other rituals are planned for the evening.

Dr. Roy E. Graves Dies Following Short Illness

Was One Of Popular Professors Of College For Year.

BURIAL IN MISSISSIPPI

Dr. Roy E. Graves died at a Lexington Hospital Tuesday afternoon, following an illness of only a few days. His death came as a distinct shock to friends in this city and in the Morehead State Teachers College where he has been a member of the faculty for a number of years.

Mrs. Graves returned to Morehead Tuesday afternoon to make arrangements, and to get the children who had been left here while Dr. Graves was in the hospital. She returned to Lexington immediately, and the remains were shipped to Crystal Springs, Mississippi, where funeral services will be held Friday.

Dr. Graves was apparently in the best of health Friday morning, but was taken suddenly ill Tuesday afternoon of last week and was hurried to the hospital where he was under observation for a time, gradually sinking into an unconscious condition in which he remained for some time. He recovered consciousness, before he was able to rally sufficient strength to throw off the poison of death.

According to a brother of Dr. Graves, who is also a physician, Dr. Graves was suffering from a rare condition, an inverted or related stomach, which prevented circulation and caused a gangrenous condition, which resulted in his death.

Mrs. Nickel had been ill for several months and her death is the result of complications following an attack of influenza and pneumonia early in the spring. Funeral services were held at the home of Mrs. Stinson at Haldeman Wednesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. H. E. Kaeze, pastor of the Morehead Baptist Church. Burial was made in the cemetery at Morehead. A complete obituary will be published next week.

PROJECTS CLOSED COUNTY K.E.R.A.

Up to the time of going to press the local K.E.R.A. office in this city has been making time, closing accounts on the K.E.R.A. projects in this county which were closed by executive order last week, and awaiting further instructions on the approval of the one project that has thus far been submitted under the new setup.

This new setup is designed to take care of federal relief so far as the county is concerned, and to establish paying work jobs that will work the men directly back into their old occupations. Thus far only one project has been submitted, although the blanks are here for the making out of other projects.

Order issued from Louisville last week brought all existing K.E.R.A. projects to a close, immediately. Records on these projects are being closed and ready for filing. According to Dixon Shouse, the local officers are not sure just what the plans of the future will be, but are therefore unable to give any further information for the benefit of our readers. As soon as anything definite is learned, he has asked the News to be ready to give the information to its readers.

SALES TAX STILL THE ISSUE

After everything's said and done, after all the charges and counter charges have been made and answered, after the Old Age Pension has been discussed, and the Relief baby laid at Tom Rhea's door, after all the political bombast has been aired, the real issue of the campaign being waged at present is still the Sales Tax.

It has been rather amusing to hear of the Old Age Pensions and the Relief being discussed and Tom Rhea advocated as the sole exponent and father of the Old Age Pension, and as the originator and savior of Relief. In the first place, the Old Age Pension is a part of the Roosevelt Social Security program and as such has received the unqualified endorsement of every Democratic candidate for Governor. Tom Rhea has no option on the Old Age Pension. Happy Chandler is just as strongly in favor of it and is much more likely to live up to his pledge. He has been proved to be a man of courage and a man whose convictions are more sacred than a promise.

Relief was being carried on for almost a year before the Sales Tax was enacted. It was being paid for out of a tax on old whiskey which was stored in the state. If Ruby Laffoon and Tom Rhea had not opposed bitterly and successfully the attempt of Happy Chandler and his friends to place a 50 cent tax on this supply of old whiskey, the state would not have needed money and there would have been no need of the Sales Tax. They forget to tell you that while Kentucky's governor was refusing to accept this 50 cent tax on old whiskey, the supply was being moved out of the state to Pennsylvania. And they forget to tell you that when it reached Pennsylvania, the governor there called a special session of the legislature and slapped a tax of $2.00 a gallon on it, which is the reason Pennsylvania has been able to carry on their relief program without trouble.

They forget to tell you that other methods of taxation which would not have placed the burden on the backs of the poor, were suggested and refused, solely for the purpose of forcing the Sales Tax over. They forget to tell you that an income tax would have been much more fair and just and that they refused absolutely to allow its passage. They forget to tell you that they saved you possibly $5.00 on your real estate tax, and then slapped on a Sales Tax that costs you several times that amount. They shout, "it was an emergency measure and we had to have it!" but they forget that by draining the last drop of blood for toll they have crushed Kentucky and used it as a door mat for their selfish purposes. They do not account for the three million dollar increase in the state debt when they had promised to "balance the budget." They failed to inform the public that they cut off only $3,500,000 in revenue when they removed the estate tax and replaced it, not with ten million dollars from the Sales Tax but with an additional $3,000,000 tax from whiskey and beer. They refused to admit that they refused a tax on manufactured whiskey of 25 cents a gallon, and finally passed one of 5 cents, a tax that in itself would have made the Sales Tax unnecessary.

All they can say is that it was needed for the schools and for relief, neither of which is true. For the schools would have gone on as they have for nearly one hundred and fifty years and relief would have gone on as it has for the past eight months without a cent being paid by the State.

There is but one candidate who started out against the Sales Tax, who has fought it consistently, and who has never changed. He stands now where he stood in 1932, in 1933, in 1934. He opposed the back breaking tax then. He opposes it now. He has not compromised. He has not weakened. He stands or falls on that opposition. In his mind he will stand, for reports from over the state indicate one of the most complete victories that the Democratic party has ever recorded for Happy Chandler and against the Sales Tax.

Reporter Writes From Capitol

(By Howard Henderson)
Courier Journal Reporter

Both the Rhea and Chandler forces are making their bids on the Laffoon issue. Each draws the line more distinctly on the question than on any other. Mr. Chandler charges Mr. Rhea with being the man responsible for all that happened during the Laffoon reign, and Mr. Rhea's public speeches prove his part in organizing the House and Senate and the passage of much of the legislature of the last four years.

The issue is not so clearly drawn on the sales tax and the primary question, due to Mr. Rhea's charge since he became a candidate or his retirement, Mr. Chandler is against the sales tax, as he has been from the beginning, and favors its repeal. He is advocating the nomination of candidates for State office by primaries, rather than by convention.

On the other hand, Mr. Rhea who helped defeat a direct primary bill in 1932 and again in 1934, and who with Governor Laffoon forced the State Committee to call a convention this year, is running now in the primary, but saying nothing about his attitude on the question in the future.

It is rather interesting position Mr. Rhea has gotten himself into, fighting so hard for three years to keep the voters from getting a primary, and now running in the primary, asking the voters for their suffrage. Mr. Chandler is deviating from the idea, while Mr. Rhea personally is saying nothing.

Rhea Backer Says Primary. But the Rhea speakers are not so quiet. In Frankfort this week at a Rhea meeting which Mr. Rhea attended, one of the speakers denounced the primary method, and pictured the advantages he said would grow out of a convention nomination.

Mr. Rhea's political utterances on the sales tax at sales tax meetings record. No one conversant with what went on at Frankfort from 1932 to 1934 will deny that Mr. Rhea was responsible for the passage of the present sales tax. It was his political generalship that enabled the Government to put the tax through, and Mr. Rhea showed the Governor how to beat off the very amendment he now proposes to put on the tax bill. When the bill was pending amendments were offered to exempt necessities from its provision, but the Governor and Mr. Rhea got the amendment defeated. Now Mr. Rhea's candidate favors the amendment. Mr. Chandler is charging that Mr. Rhea favors the amendment like Governor Laffoon, two years ago, was not wedded to the sales tax.

Neither Mr. Chandler, advocating outright repeal of the sales tax, nor Mr. Rhea, favoring exemption of necessities from the sales tax, have indicated what tax they favor to replace the revenues that will be lost. Mr. Rhea will have to make up additional revenue, because he also advocates a homestead exemption of $7,000 on real estate, which will practically wipe out the money now collected from real estate.

Here again, Mr. Rhea's campaign programme is at odds with his record at Frankfort. Last year when Representative Ralph Gilbert, Shelbyville, passed through the House a bill to give homeowners a $2,500 homestead exemption, Mr. Rhea and Governor Laffoon got behind a substitute bill of Senator Perry B. Gaines, Carrollton, which cut the real estate holdings, as railroad and other corporations, as well as homeowners. Mr. Rhea and Governor Laffoon defeated the Gilbert bill, and now Mr. Rhea promises to pass a similar, but larger, homestead exemption law.

Road Department's Use Target. During the week Mr. Chandler's organization joined the cry already raised by the other three candidates against the use of the Highway Department in Mr. Rhea's behalf. Mr. Chandler's campaign chairman, Senator Robert Humphreys, wrote a complaint to Federal authorities at Washington that Federal funds allotted to Kentucky for road building were being used for the Rhea campaign.

This brought from J. Lyter Donaldson, chairman of the Commission, a denial that assessments for the Rhea campaign were being levied on the Commission employees. The money collected has been a voluntary contribution, the Commission members said. But by whatever word it is called it was in fact anything but voluntary since the employees were asked for a definite per cent of their yearly salary and the money was collected last month before the salary checks were turned over to the employees.

A campaign speech this week by Harvey Lisle, member of the Highway Commission, at a Rhea meeting in Frankfort, illustrates the extent of the Highway Department's activities in the gubernatorial campaign. Mr. Lisle and Mr. Rhea were here, attending a meeting of the State Highway Commission, Tuesday.

"The election of Rhea is important to Franklin County and the whole State," Mr. Lisle said. "Franklin County needs many things which it is entitled to, and one of them is a bridge. If my efforts will help we will start and complete that bridge during the Laffoon Administration. Many roads in Franklin County have been neglected, but I am on the State Highway Commission for the next four years. Franklin County will probably have more high-type road than any other county in my district."

"The only way for me to stay there," Mr. Lisle went on, "is for you to get busy in the next few weeks so that we'll need only one primary to finish this race. There are more Franklin County people working for the Highway Commission under the Laffoon Administration than under any previous Administration. I believe you owe it to us to work night and day to nominate Tom Rhea, which will mean election in November."

Q—This sheets of aluminum have been recommended as a satisfactory material for insulating my home. Since heat goes through it rapidly when used for cooking utensils, I do not understand how it could make good insulation. Please advise.

A—The principal involved in the use of aluminum for insulation purposes is that of reflection of the heat. The practical application of the material is of comparative insignificance. The surface of the heaters, which reflect the heat from a sheet of bright copper used as a reflector. Therefore, the thickness of the material is of comparative insignificance. A stationery clerk had been drafted on a Federal grand jury and didn't want to serve. When his name was called he asked the Judge to excuse him. "We are very busy at the store," he said, and I ought to be there."

Lady's Painful Trouble Helped By Cardui

Why do so many women take Cardui for the relief of functional pains at monthly times? The answer is that they want results such as Mrs. Herbert W. Hunt, of Halesville, Texas, describes. She writes: "My health wasn't good. I suffered from cramp-like pains. I found just what I needed in Cardui. I began to mend. My stomach, which was sore and flat, felt glowing. I can't praise Cardui too highly because I know it cured me. If Cardui does not help you, consult a physician."

NO MORE LADIES

From the stage play by A.E. THOMAS Adapted by BEATRICE FABER At the METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURES

(Synopsis: Marcia Townsend has married Sherry Warren, New York's heartbreaker, with the mutual understanding that the girl expects nothing of her marriage but a complete flop. But for a year and a half they are blissfully happy. Then Sherry meets Teresa Germain, a nightclub banjo player, and with his cousin Edgar. That night he telephones Marcia and says he is taking care of Edgar. Edgar, however, is at the country, a guest in Marcia's home. And so the truth is out.)

covered and in the best of spirits. That's the funniest thing I've ever seen in my life she burst, pointing to Roger.

Hello, Darling, George said an anxious smile to her.

Hello, she returned gaily. Oh by the way, we're guests coming to your house, Sherry whispered.

Guests? Sherry was perplexed. Who's coming?

She gestured vaguely. Oh, not many. We're giving a big dinner tonight. And now I'm going up and get a little rest.

Sherry took her chin in his hand. Then he kissed her. Love me? She nodded with a fixed brilliant smile. Beautiful!

Suddenly she could endure the mockery of it no longer. Turning abruptly she fled.

I believe it's the air. Salston who once wanted to shoot you for stealing his wife, Edgar informed him, all but smacking his lips.

Sherry stared. Jim Salston! A shudder shook him as he recalled how narrowly he had escaped the fair Diana's clutches after Jim had house too, too brightly attractive? Sherry and Jim looked at each other again. Diana! They breathed together.

As Marcia hurried in Sherry turned to her. Darling, he said happily, if I may ask a personal question, what are you up to?

Up to? Marcia was limp-eyed innocence. Marcia darling! Diana gushed at her, rushing up.

Then followed a steady barrage of excited exclamations and effusive comments, punctuated by the clipped twittering of the impeccable correct Lord Moulton. And when Diana and spied Jim and Sherry more twittering and exclamations were in order.

Jim threw back his head and roared with laughter. You should! What a divinely interesting week, and we're going to have, Diana breathed.

Sherry looked at Marcia who smiled back at him incurably. They all strolled into the living room.

Isn't it lucky I could get you gently to the light. What's the matter, Marcia? Has Sherry been straying off the reservation? He stopped and colored. I'm sorry I said that. It's none of my business. Then he thumped the rail. But if he

Why? I'd like to knock his block off.

Because—he steeled his voice to a normal pitch.—I'm very fond of you Marcia—very fond of you.

I hope so, Jim, Marcia said gravely, because I've always been very fond of you in spite of the way you feel about Sherry.

There was a deep throxy growl in Jim's voice. He played me a dirty trick once and if he's starting to do the same thing to you—

I didn't say it was, Marcia replied wearily. I know Sherry's faults, she finally said out of the heavily laden pause. I knew them when I married him.

But you don't have to lie down. Jim spluttered in exasperation, and let any man make a sap out of you.

Imperceptibly her chin went up. I haven't the slightest intention of doing that.

CHAPTER TWO

Banjo Music

The following afternoon found Fanny, a tall highball in one hand, a long cigarette-holder in the other and her knitting somewhere between, watching Marcia who was gazing soberly out the window of her upstairs sitting-room.

If I were you, she finally said to break the gloomy silence. I'd try not to look so much like a monument to outraged womanhood. When does Sherry get here?

At this very moment, Sherry with a strained attempt to cheerfulness, walked in. Anybody home?

Who wants to know? Fanny said, disappearing through the door.

Sherry turned to Marcia. Sorry darling, he said huskily.

Did you say Darling? she asked with brittle significance.

His glance wavered just a little. But he nodded, taking it in his stride. Darling, it was rotten of me to stay away so long. Then, with a candid air he informed her that he had seen Edgar downstairs. He smiled ingratiatingly. I've got to get a better excuse than that next time.

Marcia froze into rigid stillness. Sorry? He had said that? She was sorry and in the next breath she was talking airily of a better excuse next time. Her hands began to work with small convulsive jerks. Feverishly, she conjured up a vision of ghastly years to come of one tawdry, sordid episode after another to forgive and overlook.

She heard herself speaking to him and felt a shock of incredulity that this shrill strained voice should be hers. Do you want to know how I feel? Well my heart is breaking. I always thought it was nonsense, that phrase, but it can happen. Isn't that interesting?

Marcia! Silently he lashed himself with curses, feeling in that moment that his life itself would be cheap if the giving of it could wipe out the mortal wound that was in her eyes.

The thing really aches, she went on in a sort of gasping whisper, just because you prefer another woman to me.

I don't! It was a shout. But she had vanished behind her locked door.

One weary hour pushed its way past the other. Sherry paced the living-room with restless feet.

Edgar eyed him craftily. A malicious smile spread over his face. He clasped his hands together like a schoolboy with a secret. If I bet you'd be even more worried if you knew what I know?

Sherry turned on him fiercely. What do you mean, you little rat? Edgar cowered back in alarm. Sick him—sick him. He hurriedly ordered the large sheep-dog at his feet.

Rover immediately rolled over on his back, all four legs waving dejectedly in the air.

There was a ringing peal of feminine laughter from the door. It was Marcia, apparently fully re-

Come, come, Sherry said with a transparent attempt at Bravado, you mustn't steal my wife away from under my very roof.

discovered her. So Salston was one of the guests Marcia had invited.

Jim stepped into the room. Hello Sherry, he said easily. Edgar. Conversation was rather sided as Sherry mentally groped for an explanation, while Jim, openly enjoying his discomfort, blandly kept up a running fire of questions and answers.

Finally, when Edgar had pompously announced his departure and left, Jim said, grinning, I'm very grateful to you, Sherry—about Diana, you know. Because while you fancied yourself as a dashing love bandit stealing beautiful misunderrated wife from stoggy, unappreciative husband, I don't flatter myself much when I say I was too good for her—and Jim chuckled—nobody knows it any better than you.

Sherry muttered something under his breath. Well, she's happy now. I suppose, he said inanely, with her new England husband—Lord Moulton, isn't it?

The butler, Stafford, stood at attention in the doorway. Mr. James Salston has arrived, sir.

You introduced them. There was the sudden but unmistakable sound of a woman's voice from the entrance hall. Ducky, isn't this all together? Marcia asked quietly. Diana beamed. Too lucky for words.

Too, too, too lucky, Jim put in. Too, too, too lucky, Sherry finished with a sour smile.

I pass, Fanny said tersely. How about some bridge? Marcia suggested.

Marcia set about arranging chairs and a table. We can get in a couple of rubbers before dressing, she said smoothly.

The game progressed. Well, here we are, Moulton remarked with an air of enlightenment, husband, wife, ex-husband and—er——and—Middleman, wouldn't you say? Marcia asked regarding Sherry critically.

Sherry twitched with annoyance. I'd like some brandy and soda. Anybody else? Tell Stafford will you? he asked. Marcia, who was here, she was standing outside on the terrace when Jim, dummy in the game, rose quietly and joined her. Sherry, oblivious to his cards, stared after Marcia's side.

She drew her lips into a hostess smile. How's the bridge game? Perfect. He turned her face watching the others. Sherry stood at the French window. I hate to interrupt you two, he said coolly, but if you recall, there's a bridge game going on.

That's right there, isn't there? Jim offered his arm to Marcia and they returned indoors. How did I make out? he asked Sherry, indicating the bridge score.

I don't know, Sherry looked at Marcia pointedly. How did he make out?

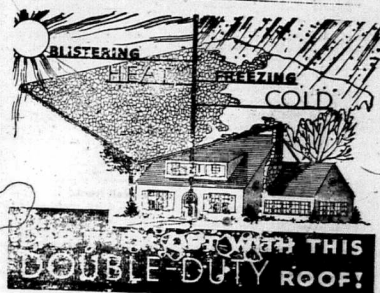

A little slant in hearts—doubled, she answered demurely.

Nice work, Sherry commended him.

Thanks. Come, come, Sherry said with a transparent attempt at bravado, you mustn't steal my wife away from under my very roof.

Nothing would give me greater pleasure, Jim replied suavely. Stafford was requesting their attention. The lady with the banjo is here, he informed them.

Sherry stared. Who? Oh, yes, Miss Teresa Germain. Marcia said, moving to the door. (At last—there is a clue to the reason for Marcia's party. What is her purpose in having Teresa Germain in her home? Don't miss next week's thrilling installment.)

Yes; immediately, the doctor told him. I gave him three grains of sodium-amylal by mouth. It'll quiet him tonight and he'll be able to return here tomorrow. His arm will be in a sling for a few days, but unless there is an infection, there's no danger.

Is he in shape to be questioned for a while before you take him to the hospital? Vance asked.

The doctor bent over Grassi, felt his pulse, and looked at his pupils. Well, what do you find? demanded the man on the bed.

Nothing really exciting, Vance replied. Suppose you tell us, what happened?

Grassi settled back on the pillows. Certainly, I went to bed early. I was fatigued, the excitement today. I am sure you will understand. It was before eleven o'clock, and I went to sleep immediately. I was exhausted.

You turned out the lights? Vance asked casually.

Naturally. And also I drew down the shades. The street lights are often annoying. I was awakened by some slight noise, I cannot say exactly what, but I lay quiet for a moment listening, and hearing nothing further, started to doze off again when I added, because I was aware, I do not know exactly how, explain it, of the presence of some body in the room. There was no noise or movement, I had a sort of chill sense.

Perhaps you are psychic, suggested Vance, with a slight yawn.

It may be, Grassi agreed. At any rate, I kept perfectly still and let my eyes move about the room. But it was very dark, there was only a faint glimmer of light filtering through the shades. But as I looked at the window I saw a vague shape near the door of the room and I instinctively threw my left arm across my breast, as if to ward off something which I felt was endangering me, but which I did not understand. Almost simultaneously I felt a sharp stinging pain in my left arm just above the elbow, and a curious sort of pressure. Whether it was the pain or whether it was the pressure I could not tell, but I lost consciousness for a moment, I probably fainted.

When I regained consciousness I felt a warm, sticky wetness under my left eye, and the pain in my arm had increased and was throbbing.

"Vance's eyebrows went up. 'Ah, the door was closed?' 'Not quite, it was, as you say, open. Then I called again, into the hall; and the butler upstairs answered me. I sat down on the edge of the bed and waited until he arrived. Did anyone else answer your summons?' 'No. The butler went immediately to the telephone in the hall, downstairs, and I could hear him summoning medical assistance.

Vance rose slowly and walked to a beautiful old Boule cabinet between two east windows, and ran his fingers over the inlay. 'I say Mr. Grassi, he spoke without turning round—what about that blood stained, bath towel in the hamper?' 'Grassi glanced up with more alertness than he had shown at any time during the conversation.

There was a bath towel on this little stand beside the bed, he explained. You see, I have no private bath and the butler always leaves me my bath towel at night. When I arose I wrapped it around my arm.

'Ah, yes—quite so.' Vance turned toward the door. That accounts for the fact that here are no bloodstains on the floor.

Vance was now inspecting the lock of the door. How did it happen, Mr. Grassi, he asked in an offhand manner, that you didn't lock your door before you said your prayers and went to bed last night?' 'The lock does not work, Grassi returned in a tone of injured defiance.

At this moment a siren was heard in the street, and Vance went to the front window and looked out. The ambulance is here, he announced. We hope, Mr. Grassi, that you have a quiet night, and that we will see you tomorrow feeling quite yourself again.

Doctor Lobenz appeared at the door with Gamble. 'Through with my patient,' he asked, if so, I'll get some clothes on here and take him home.

Thank you, doctor, my good luck. And now, Markham, suppose you go downstairs to the library and do a bit of thinking—although it's a beastly hour for merriment.

After Grassi, accompanied by Doctor Lobenz, had departed, Vance closed the library doors and walked to the large center table. There it was, Markham, old dear, he said with a grim smile, pointing to the Chinese dagger before him.

The dagger lay on the library table in almost exactly the same spot where we had left it the afternoon before; but now there was a dried blood upon it and its condition told us, only too plainly, that it was the weapon which had been used to strike through Grassi's arm.

But why, asked Markham with a puzzled frown, should the man who attempted to kill Grassi bring the weapon back here to the library.

AT THE THEATRE

COZY If a camera can't go to the sky—there's no reason in the modern scientific development of motion pictures, why the sky can't come to the camera.

This rule was responsible for one of the strangest feats attempted on a sound stage. A huge "sky" the entire length of the largest stage at the Metro Goldwyn Mayer studios was prepared, with scintillating stroboscopes, and other optical instruments, cast weird clouds and other effects upon it.

This great sky is the background for many of the sets in "Mark of the Vampire," Metro Goldwyn Mayer's new decade drama, directed by Tod Browning, and coming Wednesday and Thursday July 17 and 18 to the Cozy Theatre. A churchyard, a witch's cave, an old castle, and other settings were built before it while, with optical instruments, similar to those used in a planetarium, weird shadows were created.

The weird sky is one of the principal effects to produce a sense of realism and excitement in the new picture, dealing with an epic narrative, in the midst of a country-vested show, Richard Dix and indelible with fantastic vampires.

Chandler Speaking At Hogtown Friday

A crowd of over two hundred voters gathered at Elliottville last Friday night to hear the issues of the present political campaign discussed by Dr. H. L. Nickell and Elijah Monroe Hodge, son of Lester Hodge. The meeting had been called to be held at the Elliottville school house, but the crowd was so much larger than was expected that arrangements were made to use the Masonic Hall instead.

The "Happy Chandler" Trio rendered a musical program before the speaking. Mr. Hodge discussed the Sales Tax and Happy Chandler's part in defeating it for three times only to finally have it passed in spite of his efforts to defeat it by the "One Hundred Jobs" offered by Governor Laffoon.

Dr. H. L. Nickell discussing relief stated that the state ment that at first the relief was maintained by a taxon whiskey and that it Laffoon and Rhea had not insisted on the Sales Tax being passed the Chandler supporters in the legislature would have passed an income tax and a tax of 25 cents a gallon on whiskey that would have produced more revenue than the sales tax and would at the same time have taken the burden of taxation off of the backs of the poor people and placed it on those who can afford to pay.

Other meetings are being planned for other sections of the county as rapidly as they can be reached. Speakers for various parts of the county are Dr. T. A. E. Evans, Floyd Reeves, Dr. H. L. Nickell, Judge E. Hodge, Elijah Monroe Hodge, and numerous others, who have volunteered their services in order to spread the "Happy" gospel.

HOUSING QUESTION BOX

After improving a residential property through the use of Federal Housing modernization credit a citizen was able to sell the building. The owner applied to a bank for modernization credit amounting to $450.92 to make alterations on a house. The credit was advanced five weeks later the property was sold and the financial institution repaid. The Credit-Finance Association here reported recently that they are 3 to 4 days behind in making reports and have been forced to put on several new employees to handle the increased volume of business due to better-housing activity.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written each week by Rev. B. H. Kaeze, Pastor of the Baptist Church.

SUBJECT: David; (The Great-Hearted) 1 Sam. 26:5-12; 2 Sam. 1:23-37.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." Phil. 2:4.

The greatest victory in life is over the man inside of us, not over the men outside. The story before us about David should be read with interest, for it tells us of a king who had conquered the man being inside.

Saul was the first of the kings of Israel, and though anointed by the Lord, he was a man of material moods and bitter temper. David, the shepherd boy, who had won the battle for Israel, was not a man, and had been anointed by Saul as the successor of King Saul. Saul's attempts had been made by Saul to kill David. But when Saul had conducted himself cowardly in all his ways; and the Lord was with him." Finally he was driven from his home as a fugitive from court. While in this exile he had many thrilling experiences, no numerous to mention here, in all of which he showed one or more of the fine qualities of courage, faith, kindness, consideration, and skill. On two occasions he spared the life of Saul when he could have easily killed him. The latter of these occasions furnishes us the example of his unusual self-control, his consideration for his enemy, and his willingness to abide by the will of God, who had anointed him to conquer the man inside of us we must have a strong realization that we are the Lord's. David realized that his life was not his own and that the battle he was fighting was his own. If it had been he would have slain his enemy. But knowing that he was serving Jehovah he would wait Jehovah's time and manner of disposing of Saul, so to prove to Saul that he did not want to kill him, but that he only wanted to do the Lord's will, he took away the crown of the Lord and the spear leaving Saul asleep as he had found him.

friend. They loved each other with a love greater than that of the noblest woman. In the elegy uttered by David over the body of Jonathan we have the unsurpassed beauty of a noble heart revealed in a gem of expression. In taking up the name son of Jonathan and calling it his, David not only befriended a dear friend who has gone, but he did a favor to the house of Saul, which, again, reveals his nobility of soul.

How is it that men come to big and noble stations in life? They are the greatest of her kings; he is the man great in everything. He moralizes all her institutions. He is shepherd boy—representative of her lofting classes. He is her musician—the successor of Jubal and Miriam and Deborah. He is her soldier—the conqueror of all the Goliaths that would steal her peace. He is her war. He is her king—numbering her might-errant—bringing mercy into armies and saving her people. He is her priest—substituting a broken and a contrite heart for the blood of bulls and rams. He is her prophet, preaching with his latest breath the everlastingness of his kingdom. He is her law—all her laws are called by his name. The truth is, in the estimation of Israel this man is a personification of the nation itself—the embodiment of her qualities—the incarnation of her spirit, the type of her destiny."

Look at the greatness of David in the tribute by George Matheson: "The David of Israel is not simply the greatest of her kings; he is the man great in everything. He moralizes all her institutions. He is shepherd boy—representative of her lofting classes. He is her musician—the successor of Jubal and Miriam and Deborah. He is her soldier—the conqueror of all the Goliaths that would steal her peace. He is her war. He is her king—numbering her might-errant—bringing mercy into armies and saving her people. He is her priest—substituting a broken and a contrite heart for the blood of bulls and rams. He is her prophet, preaching with his latest breath the everlastingness of his kingdom. He is her law—all her laws are called by his name. The truth is, in the estimation of Israel this man is a personification of the nation itself—the embodiment of her qualities—the incarnation of her spirit, the type of her destiny."

One Who Desired To Know

By IRVIN S. COBB

A SUBURBANITE in New Jersey was moving from one street to another where he had just built a new house. Observing with dismay the care-free way in which the moving crew yanked his cherished antiques about he was filled with a desire to save from possible damage a tall grandfather clock which he prized highly and which was reliably reported to be more than a hundred years old. Taking the clock up in his arms he started for the new house. But the clock was as tall as his owner, and heavy besides, and its doors kept swinging open, so that he had to stagger every few feet under its arms and mop his streaming brow. Then he would clutch his burden to his heaving breast and stagger on again. Before he had gone a block he had repeated this operation a dozen times and was panting from exhaustion. Every time he put the clock down he would give a gasp and a face and curse it for weighing so much and for being so unwieldy. After half an hour of these strenuous exertions he was nearing his destination when an intoxicated peddler who was carrying his labors from the opposite side of the road took advantage of a halt to halt him. "Mister," he said thickly, "could I ask you a quest?" "What is it?" demanded the pestered suburbanite. "Why in thunder don't you carry a watch?" (American News Features, Inc.)

But he said, that young strong vigorous young mule laid into the collar and pulled the load up the hill alone, in spite of the stubborn old blind mule trying to hold him back. Happy Chandler is the kind of a man we want for governor, he said. He will fight for Kentucky, he will provide an honest government. In the seven years that Happy Chandler has been in Frankfort, he said they have been unable to dig up a single vote or a single act of his that was not in the interest of the people. He has been honest, he has been courageous, he has stood not only for the things that he believed to be right, but for the things that he knew were for the interest of the people of Kentucky.

Senator Vincent spoke at Farmers in this county Monday evening. The meeting was held in the open lawn of the Stevens home and over two hundred citizens of that place were out to hear him. Being from Elizabethtown county in what is known as the Rhea district, Senator Vincent predicted as to the sentiment down there is of interest. He stated to a News reporter, that in his opinion Happy Chandler would carry the second district, the Rhea district by a good margin of votes. He said that Rhea supporters have conceded Warren county to Chandler by 2000 majority. Warren county is the home of Bowling Green where Rhea opened his campaign. Reports from over the State which two weeks ago said that the race was between Chandler and Rhea, now say openly that there is no race, said Senator Vincent. He is even sure that Rhea will become ill before long and will be forced to withdraw. That however is not likely.

SPORT SPLURGES

The first half of the Kentucky State League came to an end last Sunday, so far as Morehead was concerned. As a matter of fact it came to an end several weeks ago, according to the members of the team, when Clayton, Fralcy and Carter left for W. Va. that officially it was brought to a close Sunday with a forfeited game to Brooksville.

The first half has been disastrous so far as Morehead is concerned, from every angle. The team, has not received the support to which any local team is entitled, win or lose. Morehead fans, however have become accustomed to winning teams and quite evidently refuse to support one that is not so hot. The fact that the local team has two league championships to its credit is forgotten in the present fact that they would up the season at the bottom of the heap, in the cellar position.

Efforts are being made to reorganize the team for the second half. A change is being planned for Tuesday night, July 23 which is expected to, if not fill the coffers of the team, to at least give them a little money with which to open the season.

The dance has been well advertised and is expected to draw a large crowd. Funds, after paying expenses will be used to defray the expense of the team in the second half.

The plans for the coaching school to be held at the Morehead State Teachers College this month are going forward, and according to coach G. D. Downing, a number of coaches over the state are expected to be in attendance that week. Fees and expenses have been held down to a minimum that is expected to pay only the expenses of the school.

It is expected to have Frank Lane and Gale Mohney here to give instructions on the various changes in the two major sports, basketball and football, as well as the two outstanding coaches in their various sports, Adolph Rupp and Be McMillan.

We have a kids baseball team up near the swimming pool of the college. They evidently play a regular schedule. At any rate their games begin shortly after noon and last usually until supper time.

And Hope James Babe Ruth should attend one of these games, and get him an eye-bull. On Monday of this week, one of the neighbors, Don Batson came home at the close.

"Mother", he shouted when he got within hearing distance, "I made eleven home runs today!"

How's that for a home run king?

COMMON CAUSE OF BALDNESS

One of the chief causes of premature gray hair, falling hair and thinning hair is a lack of circulation in the scalp.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is the only medicine that acts on the circulatory system. Thousands of men and women report that the result is surprising falling hair, even to the new hair on bald areas and in eliminating dandruff and itching scalp. James Oil cuts but does not dry the scalp. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Write Dept. 36, NATIONAL BUREAU OF DRUGS, 241 West 42nd Street, New York

Benefit Dance To Be Tues. July 23

The dance to be held under the auspices of the Morehead Baseball Club here, has been postponed until the night of July 23, according to an announcement made by Dan Parker who has consented to act as manager for the rest of the baseball season. The dance will be held at the Morehead High School gymnasium, according to the announcement.

Music for the dance will be furnished by Billy Pierce and his "Harlem Aces", a radio broadcasting orchestra which has played important engagements in New York.

A feature of the evening's entertainment will be the floor show at midnight, which will consist of several novelty numbers and dances. The orchestra is on a tour of Kentucky, a fact which has made it possible to secure their services for the dance to be held here.

All funds will be turned over to pay the expenses of the team for the balance of the season. Subscriptions to the dance will be $1.00. Tickets are on sale at local business houses.

JUNIOR MERCHANTS WILL CLAIM FORFEITED GAMES

The Morehead Junior Merchants are having a hard time to get together with Owingsville to play off a double header, that has been scheduled and postponed and rescheduled at least four weeks.

The Merchants were supposed to have played Owingsville again last Saturday, but Owingsville failed to show up.

According to Walter Carr, secretary of the team, the Merchants are planning to schedule the games once more. Then if the visitors do not show up they intend to claim a forfeit and chalk up two wins to their credit.

"We're getting tired of waiting," said Walker.

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. Allen G. Ireland, Director, Bureau of Health Education, New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction

IBARE FEET
Grown ups often take on a wistful look when some one mentions the barefoot boy. But parents, too many parents take on a look of alarm when a son expresses a desire to be that boy.

What a pity it is that razor can destroy so much good fun. If a person doesn't worry about tickles and low creases, or milk and orange juice taken together, he's sure to believe he'll be going barefoot. Now there are two causes for worry but neither of them is flat feet. Arches may break when a child persists in jumping from high places, but it happens just as readily with shoes on. Arches also break more easily when a child is underweight. But the simple rule of going barefoot in the summer doesn't mean a sure case of flat feet.

The two causes for worry are backworn in certain parts of the country and the punctured wound. Where backworn is prevalent, the readers are usually well informed as to prevention and treatment. But the punctured wound is too often neglected. We're too content with a wash and a scrub of antiseptic. The great danger is tetanus or lockjaw, which is frequently a fatal disease. There is one safeguard—tetanus antitoxin. When a child falls on a nail, take him to a physician. To neglect that precaution is folly of the worst kind.

Kentucky State League Games Sunday Closes First Half Of Season, Owingsville Leading

Maysville Wins From Flemingsburg in Sunday's Encounter

The game Sunday in which Maysville won a victory over Flemingsburg, 8 to 2, and Vanceburg bowed to Owingsville, 9 to 1, may have been the Kentucky State Baseball league's swan songs.

Further indications that the league's best days are over were seen as Morehead failed to appear at Brooksville for the play-off of a postponed tilt and Paris was unable to get together enough players for the scheduled contest. At Mt. Sterling, similarly a deferred early season affair.

A league meeting will be held at Mt. Sterling Wednesday night presumably to make plans for the second half of the season beginning next Sunday, but whether it will turn out to be only the funeral of the loop after a year and a half of faltering life is a matter of conjecture.

Manager "John" Rudy, who has tried hard to give Maysville a good ball club and has lost a lot of money doing it, as have the other owners, what with bad weather and slim crowds, will attend the meeting together with Stutz Grierson, league umpire. They will aid in what salvaging is found possible.

When questions about the matter of a possible league bust-up Mr. Rudy stated that if it comes he will turn his effort to the grooming of his young nine for home games with out of town teams the rest of the summer. Independent ball will be played, he said, and the best teams available booked.

That the team, which includes only two veterans, Tolle and O'Rourke, has definite possibilities was seen yesterday as the youngsters pounded out a victory over Flemingsburg. They are beginning to click. The line-ups and summaries are as follows.

Owingsville Wins 10-1 From Vanceburg; Paris, Morehead Forfeit.

Owingsville earned a victory over Vanceburg in their Sunday game in the Kentucky State League. While Mt. Sterling was conceded a forfeit when Paris forfeited the game scheduled. Owingsville's victory was the result of a one-sided contest which they gathered 10 to 1. Feedback in the box for Owingsville was invincible, allowing seven well scattered hits while his team mates were making the day a holiday with twelve repairs. Ritchie of Owingsville smashed out a homer and a triple in four trips to the plate, while Ellis Johnson lined out two doubled in five trips.

Owingsville has a slight margin in the standings, but may be required to play off two games with Brooksville before they can be decorated the winners of the first half of the season's play.

Realizing that they were hopelessly out of the running and that they could not effect the standing of Mt. Sterling in the Kentucky State League, Paris gracefully folded up their tent Sunday and gathered up the remains to prepare for the last half of the season, with a good rest. Mt. Sterling, as a result of the forfeit, is still a contender for the leadership in the first half. Owingsville, as a result will be required to play off two postponed games with Brooksville.

Morehead's tailenders, became tail enders in fact as well as in prospect when they failed to appear at Brooksville for a scheduled league game. Brooksville won the game by default. Thus the first half of the season closed inauspiciously for the last season champions.

Plans are on foot in an attempt to reorganize the local team for the last half of the season's play, with a dance to be held on July 19, according to announcements.
