Democratic Races In Spotlight As Day For Primary Nears

County Judge's Fight Attracts More Attention On August Ballot

OTHER CONTESTS CLOSE AS BATTLE LINES DRAWN

Counting Of Votes To Start After Last Box Is Brought In

Democrats continued to hold the spotlight of political attention in Rowan County during the week, with a number of the county races on that ticket admittedly close and bitterly fought.

Republican leaders are apparently better organized in an effort to nominate their candidates for the November election with less possible friction. There is no sign, however, that the success is so simple as it appears.

Throughout the state some steam is being generated for the candidates. Hubert Meredith and Francis M. Murke for Attorney General. The Chandler organization is supporting Meredith while the Republicans are fairly well aligned with Burke.

John Young Brown, who has, in the past, been an active participant in a series of radio addresses, urged the nomination of Mr. Burke.

Ben Johnson, of Bardonia, who split two years ago with Chandler, is likewise behind Burke and in a two hour and fifteen minute address recently urged the people to elect anti-administration candidates to the Senate and House.

Ben Johnson, of Bardonia, who split two years ago with Chandler, is likewise behind Burke and in a two hour and fifteen minute address recently urged the people to elect anti-administration candidates to the Senate and House.

Politicians generally agree that these are tightening up as the primary approaches. Candidates in many cases, who appeared to have a substantial advantage two weeks ago, are now in a position today as the opposition is getting in the better lists.

The Republican ticket the race for State Auditor, F. H. Brayer and Bert Proctor appears to be the hardest fought.

TRUCKING INTERESTS MENACE TO HIGHWAYS

A combination of the great interstate trucking companies and the trucking interests, an incorporated national organization called the "American Trucking Associations, Inc.," of Washington, D. C. together with the "Motor Truck Club of Kentucky," described by itself as the Kentucky affiliate of the national body, has boldly and publicly announced that they propose to destroy the Kentucky law limiting the size and weight of trucks.

One of the phases of this attack is to nominate and elect "truck-minded" candidates to the Kentucky Legislature at the August primaries and in the November election.

The public press has recently carried reports of meetings of truck employes in different parts of the State "to elect men to offices" who will vote to permit the operation of trucks of excessive size in Kentucky. Recent issues of the Truck Club's paper—the "Kentucky Motor Carrier,"—have announced the establishment in Louisville of headquarters by the American Trucking Associations, Inc., and the holding of "trucking meetings" by the truck operators. The indications are that a campaign is being adroitly conducted "in every county" in the state for the purpose of bringing out or pleading candidates to repeal or amend the present law.

There are two important issues to be decided by the people at these elections. 1. Will the 100,000 automobiles and 40,000 operators of merchants' and farmers' trucks (who are not members of the Kentucky Motor Club) permit themselves to be run off their own highways and allow the highways themselves to be destroyed by the giant trucks of these great commercial trucking interests? 2. Will the people of Kentucky submit to these foreign concerns determining and dictating what laws the people of this State shall have for their own protection?

The present law, which was enacted in 1932 by an overwhelming majority, was attacked vigorously in 1934, 1936 and 1937, but under the demand of the people these efforts to destroy it have failed. There are, however, many indications that by reason of the direction and assistance of the American Trucking Associations, Inc., the present campaign is better organized and better financed than any of the previous ones. There is grave danger that the public will not know who are the Truck Club's candidates, and hence will fail to act until it is too late.

We are concerned with this matter as citizens, because if the weight limits of trucks are raised we as taxpayers have to pay the bill for maintenance of our roads and bridges which the super-size trucks will injure or destroy, and because as users of the highways we will be subjected to greater danger and inconvenience. The interest of the people of Kentucky is great both as taxpayers and as users of the highways.

We are not alone in this protest against increasing the size of trucks. So far as we know, not a single newspaper of the state has ever advocated a change in the law to permit the operation of larger and heavier trucks. Practically all of the automobilists, the owners of ordinarily-sized trucks and the public generally, strongly oppose such a change.

THE R. O. T. C. AT MOREHEAD COLLEGE

Announcement that a Reserve Officers Training Corp is practically assured for the Morehead State Teachers College is but another milestone achieved in the progressive march of this eastern Kentucky educational institution.

The benefits of the ROTC and the fact that the cost to the institution is negligible, makes one wonder that this type of training has not been provided before. Certainly the merits of an ROTC unit are unquestioned.

The Federal government is providing all the uniforms and equipment for the unit. The college does not pay a cent... the only stipulation which it need fulfill being that sufficient locker and drilling space be provided. This has been very adequately and satisfactorily cared for by turning over the entire basement of Thompson Hall for it.

Although definite announcement that the unit will be established here has not been made, it is expected to be forth-coming within a few days. All inspections as Morehead for a site of the ROTC have met with approval. The final report was made last week by government officers. The ROTC at Morehead will bring to the youth of eastern Kentucky a new and needed type of instruction. It develops the physique and provides army training which will prove of immeasurable help in case of conflict, besides offering beneficial initial training in this type of work for those young men who might later desire to enter the service of the country.

CHAMPIONS OF POLAR FAIRWAYS

Russian pilots are getting a lot of follow-through into their aerial drives these days. Twice now within barely more than a fortnight, Soviet fliers have surprised everyone with the amazing power of their distance game. Landing of a second air crew at San Jacinto, Calif., after flying more than 6,262 miles, sets a new world's record for non-stop distance.

Even though Pilot Gromoff must have sliced his drive a trifle to land in the rough, the Soviet threesome bettered the record the Frenchmen, Rossi and Codos, set in their New York-to-Syria flight by some 600 miles. What makes the Russian flights even more impressive is the fact that they are flying off from Moscow. The Soviet airmen had to cover a most difficult course. Considering the fog traps and ice bunkers encountered the greater part of the way, one cannot but admire the pluck and skill the Russians have shown in escaping so many lurking hazards. Certainly those arctic fairways are no place for a duffer.

To be sure, landing in a California cow pasture does add a stroke to their score. But all things considered, the Russians have turned in another nifty card. The flights from Moscow to Vancouver and to San Jacinto show how far their tee shots can carry. They may need a little more bushing up on their short game, but a few more practice sessions with the putter in the landing greens, and these Soviet fliers probably will be covering the polar course well under par and so regularly that the pole course will become a business.

THE COIN OF LIVES

Dr. Herbert J. Stack, director of the Educational Division of the National Conservation Bureau, has started on a "transcontinental tour for traffic safety." His trip, which will cover ten or more states, is designed to assist the national movement to make good driving instruction a standard part of high school curricula. He will attend summer sessions of colleges and universities, lecture and hold conferences with teachers.

If Dr. Stack's trip succeeds in arousing enthusiasm for driving education, the inevitable result will be the saving of thousands of lives. At the present time, traffic safety is taught in a large number of progressive schools. During years in which accident fatalities to adults have steadily increased, accidents and fatalities to children of school age have gone down.

School driving courses need not be costly. The main thing is proper planning that will adequately enlist the interest of students and appeal to their imaginations as well as to their sense of self preservation. Traffic safety to adults have steadily increased, accidents and fatalities to children of school age have gone down.

FAIREST FARM PRICES

In a period such as the present, the work of the better agricultural marketing cooperatives becomes even more than ordinarily valuable and necessary. The prices of farm products are fluctuating. Market conditions are changing. Fiscal problems that directly affect agriculture are in the limelight. The foreign trade picture is confused.

The marketing cooperatives, with their expert management and staffs, are able to keep up with changing conditions and advise their members of necessary adjustments that must be made. By use of coordinated bargaining power, they are able to get the fairest prices for what their members sell. They can develop and hold markets.

YOUTH'S OPPORTUNITY

In an appeal to British youth to become qualified to protect democracy even against itself, Stanley Baldwin thus classified the "armament by which youth may build impregnable defenses: "Courage, discipline, efficiency and leadership strong enough in moral power to need no physical force to support it,—the shield of peace and character." and such is the opportunity of youth in any country. Youth thus equipped need have no fear of unemployment.

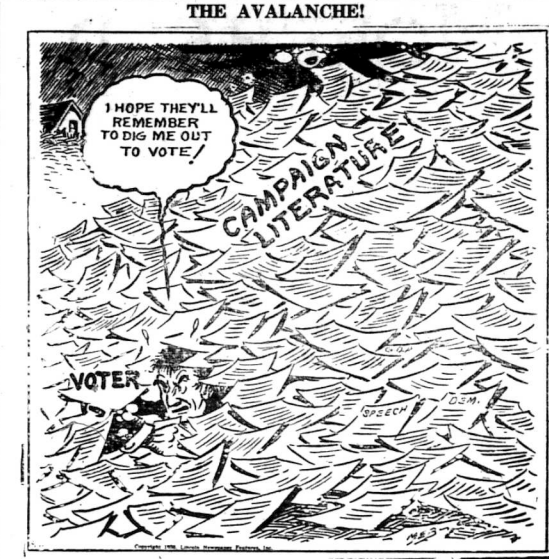

MAGISTRATES ONE OF COUNTY'S IMPORTANT OFFICIALS

Magistrates and staffs, are very interested in good government, should be gratified at the fact that in every magisterial district there are candidates who will make for an intelligent and working fiscal unit. A magistrate, although he receives little remuneration, is one of the most important office holders in the county. In voting for this officer, citizens should heed to no party lines in November.

A GARDENER IS A PROGRESSIVE CITIZEN

Many Morehead residents have found relief from continued higher prices of foodstuffs by raising their own gardens. Gardens have perhaps paid bigger dividends this year than for some time in the past.

A garden in the rear of a man's home attests to energy and ambition. It provides a useful outlet for energy that exists after the day's work is done. If you see a man tending his garden late in the afternoon you can generally put him down as a progressive and good citizen.

majority of any precinct. The counting of ballots will start at the courthouse as soon as all the precincts have been checked in by County Clerk C. W. Alberry. The returns in all races in this county and in the Representative race in Bath county will be broadcast over loud speakers at the courthouse until the count is completed. The Independent is sponsoring this. Although many politicians say there will be no more than 2,000 Democratic votes cast, your writer holds the opinion that the total vote will be at least 2,300 and possibly 2,500 Democrats and around 2,000 Republicans. If you don't want to be bothered with candidates don't come to Morehead Monday. That is County Court Day, and you will venture to say there will be more hand to hand and more shouting words passed in this little city than there has been in the last 100 years. If you are undecided how to vote, make it a point to step in the courthouse yard sometime Monday. You'll go away thinking you are a hundred times more popular than you really are. The ballots for the primary election were printed last week. The ballot will not be as large as it has been in most elections in the past. The Democratic ballot has columns of candidates while the Republican are bunched in one row. With the cooperation of State agencies of government and the Social Security Board will continue its campaign of education in Kentucky with a series of institutes beginning on Thursday, July 29. This announcement was made today by S. H. Oberbauer, area supervisor of the Federal Bureau of Old-Age Benefits in the State of Kentucky. The first session will be held at 10:00 a. m. at the Morehead meetings are set for July 30 in Louisville, August 3 in Lexington, August 4 in Frankfort, and August 5 in Paducah. In several cases the Kentucky institutes are being held jointly with the opening of new field offices of the Federal Bureau of Old-Age Benefits in the State mentioned. The personnel of these new offices will be introduced to the public at the institutes which they serve as these sessions are held. In each city to be visited, there will be a general session at which prominent speakers will discuss various phases of the Social Security Act. A representative of the Federal Government will outline the Act in general while representatives of Kentucky State departments of government will discuss unemployment compensation and public assistance. Following the general meetings, there will be a series of public hearings. At one of these Federal old-age benefits will be discussed and all questions asked by the public will be answered. At others unemployment compensation will be similarly considered. The public hearing sessions will be held at the offices of the Social Security Administration. Representatives of the United States Collector of Internal Revenue will explain tax and cover the usual questions which will be answered at the conferences will receive a complete set of informational material dealing with the general subject of social security. Mr. Oberbauer is now completing arrangements for the various meetings which will be held and is sponsored by a local committee of leading citizens from the respective areas. Further details of the program is under the direction of William E. Duffy, manager of the Bureau of Federal Old-Age Benefits in that city. A staff will be ranking executives of the various agencies of government which will be in charge of the social security program in Kentucky will travel from city to city to carry on the open to the public without charge. THE STORY TILS FAR:
 Escaping from a German prison camp, Fred Willis finds that the Red Cross nurse he loves, Rose Duffy, is engaged to his closest pal, Jimmy Davis. Rather than ruin Jimmy's happiness, Fred sacrifices himself and pretends to Rose he already has a wife. Back home in his job of circus Barker, Fred accidentally discovers that Jimmy is involved in a series of ruthless gang murders. He subtly pleads with him to stop, then begs Rose to do something. Rose hears of an approaching gang ferry and informs the police, and Jimmy is apprehended with firearms on his person. Getting him in prison, Rose said she had to do it to save him from something worse. He turns his back on her, has the guard take him to his cell.

CHAPTER NINE

The courtroom was filled when the judge gave the signal for the opening of Jimmy's trial. A short and bitterly contested division of opinion existed, among those who had followed the case. Some people believed Jimmy was being made a scapegoat for an undisciplined clique of law-evaders. Some felt he was what the prosecution hinted at, a power in underworld affairs, and some were certain, on the strength of his innocent face and reserved bearing, that he was a chance victim of circumstances. The defense shrewdly focused on the latter angle.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury," declaimed Jimmy's attorney, mustering his most impressive air, "I mean to prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that the defendant is not only innocent of the charge, but that on the contrary, when falsely arrested by over-zealous officers, he was rendering a public service to the people of this city in attempting to hand over to the authorities a stolen car filled with deadly weapons which he had come upon in the peaceful pursuit of his legitimate profession. This was a long sentence, and the speaker had to pause for a moment before he went on."

"I shall further conclusively establish that the defendant's previous record as an American citizen precludes the slightest possibility of his having been identified with the underworld."
 "I object, Your Honor!" cut in the prosecutor. "Counsel's statements are immaterial, and offered solely for the purpose of winning the sympathy of the jury."
 Before the judge could answer, the fast-thinking defense lawyer, facing the jurors, expanded on his initial statement.

"I do not think it immaterial that the jury should be aware of the fact that the defendant was twice wounded on the field of battle, that he was decorated by the French government for bravery in action, and finally honored by his own country's Cross."
 "Objection sustained!" boomed the judge, with ponderous tardiness. "The jury is instructed to disregard the remarks of the defendant's counsel."

"Your Honor, and members of the jury," pursued the defending lawyer, James Davis had been trained as a soldier. He had learned in France to think not of himself, but of his comrades in danger. As a civilian he held steadfastly to that principle. Upon the sworn evidence of reliable witnesses who were present when the defendant discovered the car filled with weapons, I shall be able to prove to you absolutely that he is not guilty of the charge as stated."

Then came the bombshell. Jimmy rose in his chair and cried out at the top of his voice: "What do you mean not guilty! It ain't true!" There was wild commotion in the court, voices raised in surprised clamor. People craning their necks. General confusion. The defense lawyer stared at his client in a stupefied way.

Rose tried to catch Jimmy's eye, bending forward with an expression of incredulous relief. He had finally done what she had prayed he would do. He would pay the penalty, honestly, and then be free and clear forever of this wretched stultifying mess. "I did it and I want to say so," repeated Jimmy.

"Double-crosser" muttered the defense lawyer under his breath, as he sat down. "This is highly irregular," intoned the judge, when he had restored order. "Am I to understand you wish to change your plea to guilty?" "Yeah," answered Jimmy, catching Rose's glance and returning her grateful smile. "That's right, Guilty."

"Will you tell the court something of the circumstances which induced you to arrive at a verdict of guilt?" "I'm guilty," rejoined Jimmy. "Let it go at that."

"Then you admit the state's charge?" "Yeah, I admit it. Why not get it over with?"

"In that case there remains nothing but to find you guilty of the charge against you. Jury dismissed. James Davis, I hereby sentence you to three years in the State Penitentiary."

Noisy disorder again prevailed as attendants began to clear the court. The gangster pals of Jimmy gathered in the rear, angry scowls on their faces, starting toward Rose. Her eyes were tear-stained, her thoughts only of Jimmy. She had just time to run forward, seize his hand and kiss it, before he was unceremoniously dragged out through the barrier in the rear.

"You must be out of your head," growled the lawyer, who had followed him outside. "Right after I had 'em in the palm of my hand—"

"Listen," answered Jimmy. "I'm the guy to decide that." A sudden frightening thought struck him. "This is all right by me in every way. And whoever gave the tip-off, tell the boys to lay off!"

The lawyer looked at him uncertainly, as an attendant pulled Jimmy's arm.

"Sure, I'll tell 'em," said the lawyer with a sneer on his face that indicated he had radically different ideas.

Rose was in a semi-daze when she reached the open air outside the courtroom. She was completely oblivious to the proximity of several of the men who had been present in Jimmy's office the day the crime was planned. Only when one of them touched her on the arm did she realize she was not alone.

"I'm a friend of Jimmy's," smiled the pockmarked chap who stood there. "Anything I can do?"

He tightened his grip as she nervously tried to pull away. "Let me drive you home."

There was a car at the curb with three other members of the gang. Rose caught sight of it and started.

"Thanks, but I'd much rather be alone."
 "Some of the boys want to talk to you about Jimmy," insisted the other.

"I don't want to talk about it," replied Rose, her eyes widening as she took in for the first time the full extent of her peril.

"We'd be glad to take you home, was the report. She was being pulled toward the car, the door of which was open. Suddenly her arm was released.

A policeman had turned the corner. He stopped short and squinted from the corner of his eyes, as if recognizing a familiar face.

For the moment she was safe. She thought of appealing to the policeman, decided not to. Signalling to a taxi that was cruising about, she jumped inside.

"No. 648 Brennon Place," she told the driver.

He started off. But the big sedan—the one that had been waiting for her—was also starting. "Please hurry!" cried Rose.

The distance to the apartment house was not far. But to Rose, alternately staring back and pleading with the driver to hurry it seemed an endless journey.

Opening the door of the automatic elevator just in time to escape the two men who had rushed after her, she fell panting against the side of the car. In a moment she had reached the third floor.

There crouched in the semi-darkness across the room, were a group of a half dozen shadowy figures!

ed. A policeman had turned the corner. He stopped short and squinted from the corner of his eyes, as if recognizing a familiar face.

For the moment she was safe. She thought of appealing to the policeman, decided not to. Signalling to a taxi that was cruising about, she jumped inside.

"No. 648 Brennon Place," she told the driver.

He started off. But the big sedan—the one that had been waiting for her—was also starting. "Please hurry!" cried Rose.

The distance to the apartment house was not far. But to Rose, alternately staring back and pleading with the driver to hurry it seemed an endless journey.

Opening the door of the automatic elevator just in time to escape the two men who had rushed after her, she fell panting against the side of the car. In a moment she had reached the third floor.

There crouched in the semi-darkness across the room, were a group of a half dozen shadowy figures!

WORLD-IS-FLAT THEORY
DEALT TELLING BLOW

Wilton Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion City, Ill., who claims the world is flat like a pancake, may be interested in an investigation made by ranger naturalists here and reported by them today.

They demonstrated, using the best instruments available, that the center of Yellowstone Lake, the park's largest body of water, is fifty-seven feet higher at the center than at the shore lines.

Because of the earth's curvature, which Voliva declines to admit the altitude, 1,731 above sea level, does not vary, the distance from the center of the earth being the same at all points.

The variation in height above a shore to shore line is due to the size of the lake, twenty-five miles in length and with an area of 139 square miles.

GIVES UP $500,000; GETS DOG AND TAP DANCING LESSONS

Elaine Harnett, the little nine-year-old Chicago girl who gave up a home of wealth and a promised $500,000 inheritance to live with her mother—played happily with her new puppy today.

Last week when Judge Walter J. La Buy asked Elaine whether she wanted to live with her mother, Mrs. Veronica Harnett, 30, or her parental grandmother, Mrs. Mae Kirkpatrick, the girl said: "My mother has been very nice to me. I would like to live with her and my brother, Bobby, (3).

My mother promised me a black puppy dog and tap dancing lessons and I can play with two little girls next door."

Returning from church today, Elaine was greeted by a frothing wire-haired fox terrier. But although he's nearly all white—except for two big spots on his head—"Trixie" has met with Elaine's approval. And the tap-dancing lessons start soon.

Mrs. Harnett is estranged from her husband, Elaine lived for eight years with Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Daerster. Told Judge La Buy he "was worth about half a million dollars" and intended to "leave it all to Elaine" if she did not return to live with her mother.

LATE LAMBS NEED WORM TREATMENT

Stomach worms in sheep are particularly severe this year. Thousands of Kentucky farmers who neglected to treat their flocks regularly with a reliable vermifuge have lambs that are already retarded in growth and development. When such lambs are sent to market they not only weigh less than they should for their age but must go into the lower grades, with the result that the farmer gets less pounds and less money per pound. The unusually mild winter, together with much more rain during late spring and early summer than normally, made ideal conditions for heavy infestation of worms.

Most farmers can still grow their lambs out to profitable market weight and condition if they will begin treatment immediately. Treatment should be administered to the entire flock, both lambs and ewes. This treatment should be repeated in about 10 days, and monthly thereafter. Unless sheepmen generally begin treatment of their flocks, including the lambs, and continue such practice at regular intervals, the number of low grade and tail-end lambs this year will be abnormally large.

Sheepmen who are not familiar with methods of treating sheep for worms should consult their county farm agent or write to the Kentucky College of Agriculture for Extension Circular 152.

DRY CAMPAIGNER CAUGHT BOOTLEGGING

A 22-year-old "crusader," who for several weeks had been circulating through the streets of Charlotte, N. C., with large banners on the front, side and back of his car, reading, "Save the Youth of North Carolina. Vote Dry in the Local Option Election," was stopped by police and arrested for his activities as delivery boy for a local bootlegger.

GARDEN GUILDLETS

Tomatoes Letters have been coming complaining about tomato fruit worm injury, and about the prevalence of mis-shapen fruit. As to the insect, the condition is due to improve, now that corn is silking out. The tomato fruit worm and the corn ear worm are the same, and, fortunately for tomato producers, particularly those who grow the late crop, the insect seems to prefer corn. Knowing that the tomato fruit worm situation is about to be eased is small comfort for the men who have seen their early tomato profits dwindle, in fact, almost vanish, but they may take that much to heart.

The mis-shapen fruit condition will also improve, as any gardener can see if he will examine the clusters now ripening. The improvement is being brought about by the weather. While the earlier fruits were being set, the season was rainy and the nights were cool. This interfered with pollination. However, now that temperatures are more to the tomato's liking, symmetrical fruit is resulting.

The Mexican Bean Beetle At the risk of seeming to repeat may be said that the Mexican Bean Beetle, once well established for comfort, and for the likelihood of the later plantings of beans being satisfactory. The insect crept up on us in rather more insidious fashion than usual, but it is nevertheless quite firmly established now, and in some portions of the state will call on the very best efforts of the gardener to control it. Plantings protected now will produce beans in September; certainly, the pleasure of having beans then should not be foregone.

Fall Greens August is coming apace, and with it the sowing of the late greens, kale and Swiss Chard turnip. One need not wait until August, however, but begin now to cover any vacant garden spots or rows that offer. While it is true that the risk of dry hot weather, and that of severe infestation of pea beetles and other pests attend, it is also true that the showers with which much of Kentucky has been blessed all summer may continue to drive the greens past danger of injury from these insects. Anyhow, the seed is inexpensive, and even though sowing may have to be done, there always remains the benefit from having gleaned up the garden debris, and the crab grass and the fox-tail that may have started after active cultivation of the garden crop was no longer necessary.

The whole variety is Dwarf Siberian. One ounce of seed of gopher kale or turnip will cover 800 square feet of space, 15 feet by 40, for example. Only the merest seed-bed preparation will suffice. Gardeners who feel that the greens chance is too wild to take, may clean up the harvested portions of the garden and in part set tomatoes plants that were discarded when the main crop was set, and which, having stood in the plantbed, are still strong enough to bear setting. If they have grown tall and rangy, they should be set lying down in furrows 3 to 4 inches deep, just the growing tip exposed, and watered a time or two.

The tomatoes that result will certainly prove welcome, as gardeners know who must be satisfied with the under-sized and tart fruits that early-set plants produce toward the end of the season. Another way to set over-grown tomato plants is to cut them back to the first sucker, to become the main stem.

Home Loan Has Over 40,000 In State

Organization Is Insured Up To $5,000 By Federal Government

Savings of 40,726 persons in 50 savings, building and loan associations in Kentucky are now insured up to $5,000 on each account by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, it was reported today by Nugent Fallon, General Manager of the Corporation.

Assets of these insured thrift and home financing institutions total $42,235,942. Other Kentucky savings and loan associations have submitted applications for this protection for the funds of their investors.

Associations in the United States which have qualified for this insurance now number 1,756, having $1,427,185 in assets and 1,489,115 investing shareholders. Forty-five of the insured institutions in Kentucky are Federal savings and loan associations, operating under charter and supervision of the national Government and are required by law to provide this insurance for the accounts of their investors and savers. The balance which are insured are state chartered institutions which have met the requirements of the Corporation.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation is the $100,000,000 instrumentality of the United States Government. To obtain insurance, an association must qualify as to the soundness of its finances and policies. After insurance, it must comply with the regulations of the Corporation, which examines the association regularly.

These insured associations have developed soundly, both as to the inflow of savings from old and new investors, and in the volume of loans being made for purchase, construction, reconditioning and refinancing of homes. Insured associations in this state are located in Carrollton, Ashland, Bowling Green, Catlettsburg, Central City, Covington, Glasgow, Hartford, Hazard, Hickman, Hodgenville, Hopkinsville, Lexington, London, Louisville, Middletown, Morehead, Newport, Owensboro, Paducah, Paintsville, Pineville, Princeton, Russellville, Somerset, Stanford, Winchester, Richmond, Elizabethtown and Fulton.

Reds Prepare For Long Home Series

Philadelphia At Crosley Field For Twin Attraction Sunday

The Reds are back in their own arena after their third swing thru the eastern section of the National League. They opened a three-game series against the Boston Bees with a ladies' day engagement Tuesday and now they are pointing toward their big week-end against the Phillies.

Opener of the Philadelphia series is scheduled to be played under the brilliant Crosley Field lights Friday. This will be the third night game of the season, and it will be preceded by one of the most elaborate pre-game programs ever scheduled by the Cincinnati Baseball Club.

In addition to the regular spectacular fireworks display and performance to the soundness of the A. A. U. Band and the West Carrollton, Ohio, High School Band, a track meet, under the supervision of the Cincinnati Athletic Club, will be held.

Feature of the track meet will be the Cincinnati appearance of Glenn Cunningham will race against some of the most

Government To Pay For Child's Keep

Social Security Department Makes Payments For Support of Orphan Children

More than a million children in this country are dependent upon charity of some kind. They have lost father or mother, or both, and other relatives with whom they live are too poor to support them. The Social Security Act helps the States to take care of such children in their own homes rather than in institutions. It authorizes Congress to provide Federal money for this purpose.

Any state may obtain its share of Federal funds by setting up a plan for aid to dependent children which is approved by the Social Security Board. Twenty-eight states and the District of Columbia already have such approved plans. In those states the responsible parent or relative of the child receives from the state welfare authorities a cash payment for the child's support at home. About 300,000 children are now being taken care of in this way with Federal, state and local funds.

The amount of money paid for each child under this phase of the Social Security Act is decided by the state. This amount is based on the need in each case. Whatever amount the state provides, the Federal government will contribute one-third of it, up to a Federal-State total of $18 a month for the first child and $12 per month for each other child in the same home. These children must be under 16 years of age to get help from Federal funds. Responsible parents or relatives should apply at nearest public welfare agencies or to proper departments at the state capital for assistance in the "aid-to-dependent children program."

ROBINSON'S SEAT TO BE FILLED BY NEW DEALER

Governor Carl E. Bailey, of Arkansas, last week was selected as the Democratic nominee for the Senate seat vacated by the death of Senator Joseph T. Robinson.

The selection was made by the State Democratic Committee. Democratic nomination in Arkansas is equivalent to election. Only three thirty-five members of the committee voted against the 42-year-old Governor, who will call a special election to name Robinson's successor formally. It was doubtful whether the Republican Party would select a candidate to oppose Bailey. Bailey is an ardent supporter of the Roosevelt Administration.

LISTENING CENTER REPLICA AT FAIR

A nearly exact replica of a typical University of Kentucky mountain Radio Listening Center will be erected at the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville that September by the University in cooperation with the National Youth Administration.

An interior of a typical mountain community center will be constructed and furnished appropriately. A radio of the type provided by the University of Kentucky to the listening centers will be in evidence, and publications relating to the system and other explanatory material as well as numerous pictures will be available for inspection. Corsia Whitaker and Jane Evans, NYA Listening Group organizers will be in charge of the exhibition.

'BIG APPLE' LATEST DANCE FLOOR RAGE IN THE SOUTH

New it's the "big apple" on Dixie dance floors.

From the mountains to the seacoast nimble-footed Southerners are "applying" the dance. It is a combination of the old-fashioned square dance and the modern "swing."

From four to twenty persons gather in a circle on the floor as the music begins in medium fast tempo. Then they go through a series of fancy wiggles and rhythm steps to the call of a leader. Individuals and couples step to the circle's center and "shine" the steps are a hodge-podge of the almost forgotten Charleston, drag, swing steps and Harlem's "trunkin" toned down now and then with the formal dignity of the Virginia Reel.

University of South Carolina students got the idea for the dance from the gallery of a Negro night club here when they saw the dusky dancers circle in finger-snapping abandon to the rhythm of a nickelodeon. They copied the dance, called it the "big apple" after the name of the night club.

Carole Lombard In Cozy Theatre Lead

"Swing High, Swing Low," Is Title Of Cinema Attraction.

When Carole Lombard was recently awarded a long term contract by Paramount Pictures she made two stipulations which she insisted be written in.

As a result Teddy Tetzlaff, her favorite cinematographer, will direct the camera work on all pictures in which she appears.

Tetzlaff was the first cinematographer to photograph Miss Lombard and she believes his skill is largely responsible for her career.

As a result, both Tetzlaff and Drew were employed in making "Swing High, Swing Low," the romance in which Miss Lombard co-stars with Fred MacMurray.

"WHY CHANGE HORSES IN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREAM" As the time draws near to select men to fill the county offices for the next four years, don't you think it appropriate and wise to take stock and see which of the present officers should be re-elected?

By our works we are judged. My record speaks for itself. Due to the duties of my office which keeps me on the job day and night, it will be impossible to see all the voters. But I do think I am due the consideration and support my faithfulness to duty merits.

Cards Cover Tree At Mammoth Cave. Personal Cards Tacked Up By Many Tourists From Everywhere. Every day of the year some adds another card to the calling card tree of Mammoth Cave.

control of the caves. Two guides, Louis Gramford and Schuyler Hunt were present when the practice was started. Today you may go there and see advertising cards, old letters, novelty cards, and every conceivable type of paper with people names and addresses written on them.

It was only a few years after that Christmas-Eve that the practice was started. Today you may go there and see advertising cards, old letters, novelty cards, and every conceivable type of paper with people names and addresses written on them.

This tree stands just to one side of the pulpit of the historic Methodist Church. This pulpit was used by miners who worked this part of the cave for the salt peter used in the manufacture of gun powder for the war of 1812.

The slaves after working at the salt peter vats during the week would probably come here on Sundays and hear sermons preached. The dust of many decades has covered the altar even at its majestic height of 30 feet.

On the other side is a series of oxen tracks which were made more than a century ago. They have had protection placed around them to preserve them so that future generations may know that the basic material of war, gun powder, was mined in Mammoth Cave.

More than a century ago oxen plodded along pulling a wooden cart loaded with "peter dirt" to be leached.
