MOREHEAD, Ky.--When Morehead State University's fall semester begins in mid-August, it won't be a moment too soon for Deborah Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ross of Wellington.

"I'm really looking forward to being on campus," said Ross, a recipient of MSU's Distinguished Scholar Award, the University's most prestigious scholarship.

Earmarked for National Merit Scholar finalists and semi-finalists, the Distinguished Scholar Award is a four-year, fully-funded scholarship covering tuition and fees, room, board and books.

Ross, who graduated this spring from Menifee County High School, was a National Merit finalist. She is one of three finalists and three semi-finalists who will be attending MSU as freshmen this fall.

The awards were established just last year to encourage National Merit Scholars to study at Morehead State, according to MSU President Herb F. Reinhard. "Those students who excel in National Merit competition are scholastic all-stars--academic blue chippers--and we want them on our campus," Dr. Reinhard said.

Ross plans to major in government or pre-law in preparation for law school after graduation from MSU. "I'm really interested in that field," she said. "I've always wanted to help people," she added.

In high school, Ross was editor of the student newspaper and was a member of the yearbook staff, Student Council, Computer and Astronomy clubs.

"I had some great teachers," she said. Ross added that the small school atmosphere contributed to her scholastic success because it provided for more individualized instruction by the teachers.

Ross has spent the summer indulging in her favorite activity--reading. She said she reads nearly everything, but particularly enjoyed romances. "I like a happy ending," she noted.

Information about scholarship opportunities at MSU is available from the Office of Admissions. The toll-free number for Kentucky residents is 1-800-262-7474.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Kentucky is on the threshold of a new beginning as educational reform sweeps the Commonwealth, Regent Lloyd Cassity told Morehead State University's summer graduates Saturday (Aug. 3).

"Although the past may have been difficult and at times bleak, now is a most exciting time to be in Kentucky," said Cassity, who has served on the MSU Board of Regents since 1963.

Nearly 1,000 people attended the commencement ceremony held in Button Auditorium. Approximately 320 undergraduate and graduate degrees were conferred by President Herb F. Reinhard.

Cassity, a native of Morgan County now residing in Ashland, told the graduates they were Kentucky's future. "You are her success stories. You must take up the challenge to make her educational light shine brightly," he said.

"Your commitment to educational attainment has been rewarded, but your search for an education has just begun," he continued. He added that with the rapidly changing world, the graduates would need a continuing program of professional development and a philosophy of life-long learning.

"You cannot be content at the plateau of accomplishment. There are higher mountains to climb, larger challenges to meet," said the MSU alumnus.

Linda Oakley Carter of Olive Hill, student speaker, raised poet Langston Hughes' question, "What happens to the dream deferred?" and told her classmates that 20 years ago she had deferred her dream.

"Now I know the answer. Sometimes the dream can be resurrected," Carter said. A mother of three, she received her B.A. degree in elementary education, graduating with a 4.0 average.

Reminding her peers that they lived in a complex world where men plan the exploration of the stars while others go hungry, Carter said: "I dare you to dream with me; then to work toward those dreams and in so doing make a more perfect world and time for the sharing of those dreams."

President Reinhard called on the new graduates to have "an ongoing quest for excellence" and to be vocal supporters of education.

"Morehead State University will only be as great as its graduates. It will always be a part of you and I hope you will always be a part of it."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--A public hearing for the Council on Higher Education's proposed plan for improving the state system of higher education will be held at Morehead State University Thursday, Aug. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center.

Persons wishing to speak to the plan may register that evening at 7 p.m. or in advance by calling MSU's Office of the Executive Assistant to the President, (606) 783-2145. A copy of the plan will be available for review in Camden-Carroll Library, beginning Monday, Aug. 12.

Members of the public are encouraged to attend either as speakers or spectators.

The 84-page plan, released last week, calls for the establishment of "centers of excellence" at the eight state universities and community colleges, allowing schools to concentrate on specific degree programs while curtailing programs available elsewhere.

MSU Graduate Student Journalist

MOREHEAD, Ky.--"A deferred dream can be resurrected and realized."

That was the message that Linda Oakley Carter of Olive Hill delivered to her fellow students during Morehead State University's Summer Commencement, Aug. 3.

Carter spoke from experience. The nearly 1,000 people attending the commencement ceremony witnessed the fulfillment of her life-long dream, as Carter walked across the stage in Button Auditorium to receive her Bachelor of Arts degree in elementary education.

The wife of Johnny Austin Carter, MSU Physical Plant employee, and mother of 12-year-old Dovie, nine-year-old J.B. and eight-year-old Stacey, Carter became the only one among her eight brothers and sisters to hold a college degree.

Due to the urging of family, friends and--most of all--her husband, Carter enrolled in MSU's 1982 Summer Session, 17 years after graduating from high school.

She knew that she wanted to become a teacher from the time she attended a one-room school in Carter County. Upon her graduation from Olive Hill High School however, she deferred her hopes of a college education.

Carter said, "Once I started I didn't want to stop." She attended MSU continuously until completing her degree work.

Looking back Carter remembers that she was afraid she wouldn't fit in. "I thought I'd feel out of place" she said, "but the young people today are so warm and outgoing, I had no problem."

Carter attributes much of the success of her college career to the support and encouragement she received from her husband, family and friends. The "instructors were also supportive and encouraging," she said.

Carter's own determination and faith in her abilities played a major role in her achievement of a perfect academic record at MSU. She graduated with a 4.0 grade point average. "The A's meant something, but after a while it was what I got out of it that counted," Carter said. She missed only one class during her three years at MSU.

Referring to her college experience Carter said that "sacrifices must be made when you have a family, but it's worth it."

Carter did her student teaching in a third grade class at Haldeman Elementary School. She was also a member of the MSU Honors Program. Future plans for Carter include graduate study at MSU in the area of elementary education and teaching.

To those like herself, who are now considering returning to school, Carter offered definite encouragement saying, "if the door is open, go in. It is open for a reason."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--With winter not too far away, it's not too early to be concerned about energy conservation, according to Dr. John C. Philley, chair of the Department of Physical Sciences, Morehead State University.

"If you are looking for more information about energy conservation and ways to ease the high winter fuel costs, MSU probably can help at no cost to you," Philley said.

As a member of the Kentucky Continuing Education Energy Consortium, MSU will provide programs on energy conservation to interested civic and professional groups, business and industrial organizations, senior citizens and others.

The KECP program includes audio-visual presentations, discussions, energy calendars and practical experience in energy conservation.

Philley, who attended the consortium meeting last month, will be coordinating MSU's efforts. One of 13 schools participating in the Kentucky Energy Cabinet's educational service, MSU will work with interested public groups in Rowan, Bath, Fleming, Carter, Lewis and Menifee counties.

Additional information is available from Philley by calling (606) 783-2913 or 783-2914.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University will conduct an Orientation and Pre-Registration program Saturday, Aug. 17, for all freshman and transfer students who missed the SOAR sessions held earlier this summer.

"The day is actually designed as a mini-SOAR program for new students and their parents," said Al Bowen, MSU director of admissions. "Our earlier sessions were extremely popular with both the students and their parents, so we scheduled this extra one," he said.

After checking into residence halls from 8 to 10 a.m., students will be welcomed by MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard in Button Drill Room and then meet with Dr. Roberta Anderson, vice president for academic affairs, and her staff for skill assessments and explanations of special academic programs.

After lunch, the new students will meet with academic advisers in Laughlin Health Building prior to beginning the registration process for fall classes. Capping the day will be a cookout at Eagle Lake followed by a dance at the University Center.

Meeting separately from their offspring, parents will hear Dr. Reinhard discuss what the University expects of its students.

A panel discussion of educational and support services available at Morehead State will follow. Participants will include Michael Mincey, representing academic affairs; Tim Rhodes, business services; Dr. Nida Saavedra, food services; James Morton, student housing, and Bowen.

MSU OPENS FOR FALL: A Picture Story

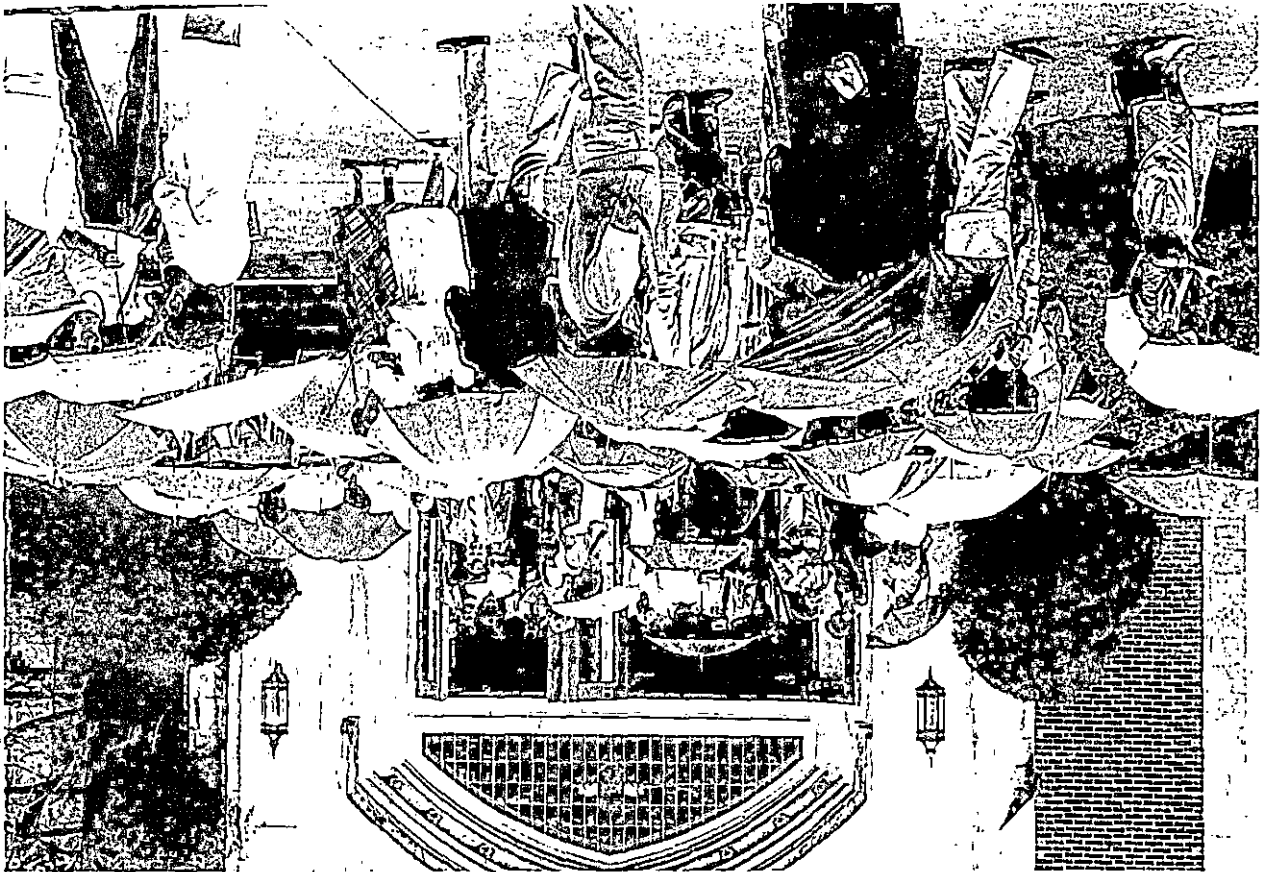

Fall classes begin Wednesday for Morehead State University students, but the 1985-86 academic year began Friday (Aug. 16) for faculty and staff with a morning opening assembly and a pot luck pig roast that evening for employees and their families. At the assembly, MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard told employees that the University's mission was to improve the quality of life in the region. Dr. Reinhard also said: "I request that everyday, each and every one of you--no matter what your role--make every decision not on the basis of what's good for me, but what's good for the future of Morehead State."

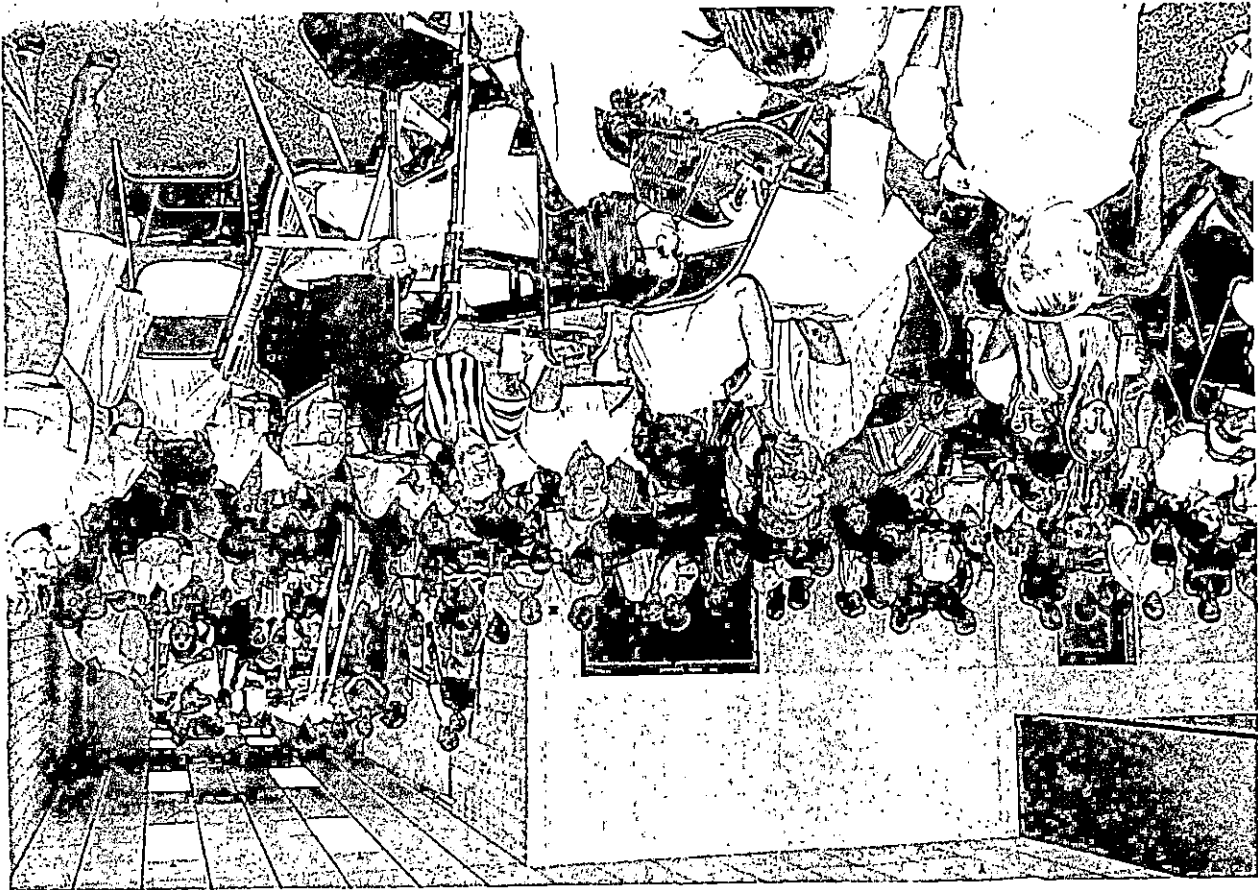

Cutlines

- 1--Rain did little to dampen spirits as Morehead State University began the fall semester with its traditional opening assembly for faculty and staff.
- 2--This MSU employee was listening intently as Dr. Reinhard told the faculty and staff that the University should be a "role model for Eastern Kentucky."
- 3--More than 500 employees and their families took part in the first "pot luck" pig roast held at the Academic Athletic Center Friday evening.
- 4--With employees providing covered dishes to go with roast pork from the University, there was a groaning board of delicacies to select.
- 5--This little fellow found a big sized cookie to hold his attention while the grownups enjoyed bluegrass music and clogging demonstrations.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Patrons of Morehead State University's Camden-Carroll Library can look forward to the convenience of computerized services, some of which are in use already, according to Faye Belcher, associate director of libraries.

The Camden-Carroll Library offers an alternative to the tedious process of searching the library for the best sources of material--the Library Online Information Services (LOIS). Retrieval of information with LOIS is a matter of computer commands instead of hours of scanning indexes and thumbing through cards.

LOIS, located in the library's Learning Resource Center, provides faculty, students and townspeople access to materials collected in libraries world-wide. By scanning any of more than 200 subject files within the computer, LOIS can print out the references for books, journals and articles on even the most esoteric topic.

Trained librarians aid in the running of computer searches which are arranged by appointment. Most computer searches take three to five minutes to run and the average cost is $1 to $1.50 a minute.

Helen Williams, Learning Resource Center librarian, called LOIS "a trade off" and asked, "Which do you value more, your time or your money?"

Not all of the material found during a computer search will be available in the Camden-Carroll Library, but computerized services make it possible to obtain much of it.

Camden-Carroll Library is a member of the Online Computer Library Catalog (OCLC) in the Southeastern Library Network division. More than 3,000 libraries nationwide belong to this organization. Interlibrary loan librarians can search and request materials from any of the OCLC libraries.

This service is available to faculty, graduate students, and undergraduates involved in "serious" research, MSU interlibrary loan librarian Carole Nutter said.

Ultimately, the Camden-Carroll Library will place its entire card catalog into the computer as part of OCLC's shared catalog project. The wooden cabinets, which now house the cards, will be replaced by approximately 40 computer terminals throughout the library, creating an "online public catalog," accessible from dorms, offices, or anywhere there is a computer terminal.

Already two-thirds of the Camden-Carroll collection is available on the computer. Under the retrospective conversion project materials acquired by the Library before 1979 are being entered.

Belcher projected a December 1986 completion date for this phase.

She said the aim of the Camden-Carroll Library was to become a completely automated-integrated library system to better serve the public.

Information on the computerized services available at the Camden-Carroll Library may be obtained from Faye Belcher, by calling (606) 783-2142.

MSU BAND CAMP: A Picture Story

Westchester, Ohio's own Lakota High School was one of the many high school bands that kept the eastern Kentucky hills alive with the sound of music this summer. Morehead State University serves as host each summer to bands from all over the region. The bands and their directors buckled down to perfect field shows and ready themselves for the fall competition season. Hosted by Frank Oddis, assistant professor of music and band camp director, the more than 1,000 students participating had the opportunity to make music come alive and gain valuable instruction in a beautiful setting.

- 1--Caught in the act of relaxing on the practice field were Trish Vaughn, Christy Carabello, Dana Denning, Karen Bailey, Laura Harmon, and Amy Hayner.
- 2--Even if you can't stay cool in the summer heat, you can look cool, as baritone player Gina Axt did so well.
- 3--Concentration is a must to any good percussionist. Showing why they are good are Chris Kloesz, Ellen Freeman, and Julie Glass.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Larry X. Besant has been named director of libraries at Morehead State University, Dr. Roberta T. Anderson, vice president for academic affairs, announced today.

Besant, who assumed the post earlier this month, was formerly director of the Linda Hall Library in Kansas City, Mo., and previously was assistant director of libraries at Ohio State University.

"Mr. Besant has an impressive background in the field of library management and we are delighted to have him join our staff at Morehead," Anderson said. "His background in the computerized aspects of library service will be beneficial as MSU's Camden-Carroll Library moves in that direction," she added.

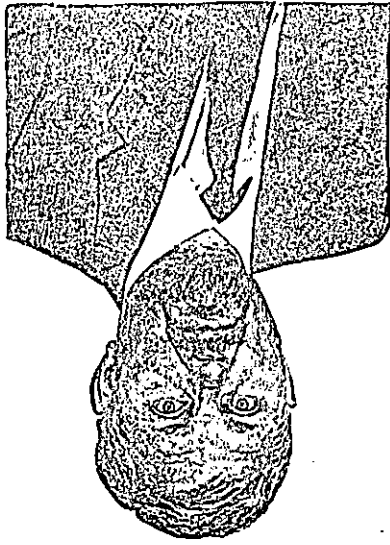

A former assistant librarian with the Chemical Abstracts Service, Besant also has served as acting director of libraries at the University of Houston.

He holds the B.S. degree in chemistry and the M.S. degree in library science from the University of Illinois and served in the U.S. Air Force from 1954 to 1957.

Besant has written several articles for professional journals and has served as a consultant to Memphis State University Library and to the Lunar Science Institute of the Universities Space Research Association. He is active in the American Library Association, the National Information Standards Organization and the Special Libraries Association. He was a member of the Research Libraries Advisory Committee's Document Delivery Task Force for Online Computer Library Center (OCLC).

He and his wife, the former Jean Hofstetter, are the parents of five children and have three grandchildren.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Nine Morehead State University students are members of the first year classes in Kentucky's two dental schools this fall.

Attending dental school at the University of Louisville are Jeffrey S. Bailey, White Oak; Timothy Hall, Myra; Danny Collins, Clearfield; Leslie Spradlin, Mt. Sterling; Michael Trosper, London, and Marc A. Wilson, South Gate.

Enrolled at the University of Kentucky dental school are Larry Arnett, Owingsville; Mitchell Patton, Morehead, and Thomas Ison, Flemingsburg.

Each year approximately 110 new dental students are accepted by the state's two schools, according to Dr. David Brumagen, MSU's pre-dental adviser and professor of biology.

"We are very pleased that nearly nine percent of the new students accepted started their pre-dental training at MSU," said Brumagen.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Northeastern Kentucky beef producers and Morehead State University agricultural specialists will conduct the weigh-in for the second annual bull performance testing program Nov. 2 at MSU's Derrickson Agricultural Complex, Rt. 32.

The testing and sale of qualified bulls is a joint project of the MSU Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources and the Northeast Kentucky Beef Improvement Federation (NKBIF), a non-profit organization of area cattle farmers.

Registered or percentage-recorded bulls born between Jan. 1 and May 1, 1985 are eligible for the program which identifies superior sires through tests of weight-gain patterns. The bulls will be monitored at home for 140 days and then returned to MSU's farm for a final test and auction.

"Bull performance testing allows purebred producers to demonstrate the success of their breeding programs and to showcase the potential of their young bulls," said Phil Kenkel, MSU Appalachian Development Center agri-business specialist.

According to Kenkel, the program offers area bull producers an opportunity to base herd sire selections on standardized information and to compare breeding programs and feeding practices with other cattlemen.

Thirty-five bulls were enrolled in the first program and more than 300 beef producers attended the auction. Last year's bulls weighed an average of 1,038 pounds and the top performance bull gained more than four pounds per day.

MSU personnel will be available at the farm on weigh-in day to provide technical assistance and advice concerning feeding and management procedures. Cattlemen may also have their bulls vaccinated and dewormed at that time for the cost of medicines.

Bulls may be consigned to the program from now through Nov. 2, although the program's organizers encourage pre-registration.

Additional information is available from Kenkel by calling 606-783-2077.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University's Academy of Arts will hold registration for fall classes Sept. 3-16.

The Academy provides individualized or group instruction in many areas of the performing arts for students of all ages. The Academy's central offices and main classes are on the MSU campus, although classes are also available at many other locations.

According to Milford Kuhn, director, the Academy provides the opportunity for residents of the region to broaden their horizons and develop new talents as well as perfecting old ones.

The Academy offers classes in most major musical instruments, theatre, pottery, quilting, fiber art, ballet, creative movement, and jazz and modern dance. Theatre classes, taught by MSU instructors, include a youth acting class as well as a creative dramatics class especially for ages 11-13. High school students may also take classes in photography, journalism, and creative writing.

Course listings and registration materials are available from the Academy of Arts, 103 Baird Music Hall, Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky. 40351. Other information is available by calling 606-783-2483.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--A documentary concerning self-starvation and other eating disorders will air Wednesday, Sept. 4, at 9 p.m. on WMKY-FM 90, public radio from Morehead State University, followed by a call-in segment.

The 90-minute program, called "The Mirror Lies," concerns the quest for thinness which causes many persons, especially women, to dangerously alter their eating habits.

"We give a great deal of attention to the emotional issues surrounding eating disorders, as well as to the medical consequences of anorexia nervosa and bulmia," said Mary Jo Netherton, author of the documentary. Netherton is also MSU associate professor of French and faculty advisor for HOPE (Helping Ourselves with Eating Problem Eating), an affiliate of the national association of Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders (ANAD).

Anorexia nervosa is an affliction in which a person employs starvation to achieve a radical weight loss. Bulmia consists of gorging, then purging by vomiting, using laxatives or fasting.

Dr. Dan Anderson, clinical psychologist, MSU Counseling Center, Netherton, and several MSU students who have had eating disorders will answer questions during the 30-minute call-in portion of the program. Rowan County residents may call 783-2001 and others may call (606) 784-5303 collect.

Featured in the documentary are Anderson, Dr. Laurie Humphries, director, Eating Disorders Unit, Chandler Medical Center, University of Kentucky; Dr. Edward J. Scott, internal medicine specialist, Morehead Clinic, and members of HOPE.

The documentary is narrated by Dick Teubner, with technical production by Joe Hansen. Larry Netherton was the executive producer.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--The U.S. Navy Tuba Euphonium Quartet will present a free concert at Morehead State University's Duncan Recital Hall in Baird Music Building at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 3.

The Tuba-Euphonium Quartet is composed of members of the Navy Band which is based in Washington, D.C. The group performs a repertoire ranging from classical music and Joplin rags to original compositions written for the tuba.

Master Chief Musician Martin Erickson, director, is also the principal tubist and brass section leader of the parent band. Erickson has appeared with the National Symphony at Carnegie Hall and performed as a soloist with the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Erickson is also accomplished on the bass guitar, piano, and trumpet. He studied music on a scholarship to Michigan State University under the tutelage of Leonard Falcone and performed with the university's orchestra, brass choir, jazz band, and faculty brass quintet. While in school, he was a member of the Lansing (Mich.) Symphony and other local professional groups.

He joined the Navy in 1967 and was the director of the Recruit Band in Great Lakes, Ill., before his current duty. He has written several articles concerning the history and development of the tuba for publication.

The quartet also includes Musician 1st Class Keith Mehlan performing with Erickson on the tuba, and Musicians 1st Class Roger Behend and John Bowman on euphonium.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Carl D. Perkins Comprehensive Rehabilitation Center has renewed a contract with Morehead State University's Department of Psychology and Sociology for the 1985-86 fiscal year.

Under the 11-year-old agreement, MSU's Department of Psychology and Sociology supplies psychological services to the center, while providing the opportunity for graduate student interns from across the nation to gain practical experience.

Interns at the center aid in the testing, counseling, vocational evaluation, job training, and care of physically and psychologically impaired patients, according to Dr. George Tapp, MSU Department of Psychology chair.

Internships and practicums at the center are open to any clinical psychology student in the United States, who has completed the first year of graduate study in the field. MSU, as administrator of the program, nationally advertises the availability of applications, evaluates applicants and places interns. Tapp said that approximately seven internships and practicums are filled each year.

The Carl D. Perkins Comprehensive Rehabilitation Center, formerly known as the Eastern Kentucky Comprehensive Rehabilitation Center, is a residential care facility with a 200-bed capacity, located near Paintsville and operated by the Kentucky Office of Vocational Rehabilitation Services.

Additional information regarding the center or the availability of internships or practicums can be obtained from Dr. George Tapp; telephone (606) 783-2986.
