Thursday Morning, August 5, 1937. HAMSTRINGING THE IRON HORSE

In a recent address, Matthew S. Sloan, Chairman of the Board of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas line, succinctly summed up the railroad situation. "The railroad problem is not a question of whether we shall continue to enjoy the benefits of railroad service, but whether that service is to be rendered under private ownership along progressive, efficient and low cost lines, or whether the rail lines shall be forced into bankruptcy, and, finally, into government ownership—and politics."

There is no public demand for ownership of railroads. Various surveys of the views of chambers of commerce, industries, and individuals show that the public sentiment is strongly in favor of private operation. But if we hamstring the railroads with laws that place management functions in the hands of government bureaus, artificially restrict operations, and arbitrarily add to the cost of operation so the railroads cannot balance income with expense, the stage is set for government ownership of the rails (socialism), for only the government, by assessing the taxpayer, can get money to meet deficits.

It is periodically proposed that length of freight trains be rigidly limited—even though the best experts say this would not add to the safety of railway operation, would increase railroad crossing hazards and slow shipping. It is likewise proposed that railroad workers be limited to a 30-hour week at 40-hour pay—even though these workers are among the best paid in the country. And under existing laws, most railroad competitors are virtually unregulated while the railroads are regulated in every particular.

Under private ownership, America has been given the best and cheapest railroad service in the world. Progress in railroad development never ends, as higher train speeds, more comfortable train accommodations, better coupling, etc., demand it. Fair legislative policy will assure continuation of this progress—and save the public from being forced to pay the vast bill that government socialization of railroads would require.

JOBS FOR THE UNDERTAKER

Four out of every five automobile accidents occur on dry roads in clear weather. Four out of every five automobile accidents involve cars driving straight ahead.

Here is the statistical proof of the disregard for every rule of courtesy and safety that characterizes the reckless or incompetent motorist. He constantly overestimates the "safety factors" of good roads and modern cars. A straight highway and a clear day act as bait to make him "open her up" with the result that the undertaker gets 37,000 new accounts each year.

A National Safety Council survey lists the seven most important causes of fatal accidents, in order, as follows: Exceeding speed limit or driving too fast for road and weather conditions, driving on the wrong side of the road; disregarding stop signs and signals; swerving right of way; cutting in; passing on hills and curves; failure to signal for stopping and turning.

These driving errors cause the great bulk of all serious accidents, and one in 5.3 per cent. Every one of them is a human error—and every accident they produce could be prevented if individual drivers would observe the most elementary rules of caution and proper driving.

In conclusion, here is one more fact you might think over next time you feel the urge to step on it: At 20 miles per hour, one accident in 61 is fatal, while at 50 or more miles per hour, one accident in every 11 produces a corpse.

RURAL FIRE LOSS GREAT

The most fertile field for reduction of fire loss is in the rural sections of the country. That is the gist of a report by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Last year, for instance, the per capita fire loss for the nation as a whole was $2.05—an increase of 10.8 per cent over 1935. But the per capita loss in cities with more than 20,000 population was but $1.40, an increase of only 5.3 per cent. The better record of the cities is accredited not only to the efficiency of municipal fire departments, but also to the cumulative effects of fire prevention activities.

ilities and of modern building code requirements." Adequate fire prevention in rural sections presents difficult problems. But, as many sections of the country have shown, they are by no means insoluble. The interest of farmers should be aroused in sponsoring prevention campaigns, and in learning the relatively simple lessons that make it possible for individuals to eliminate the great bulk of the hazards in homes and places of business. It is practical for a group of small towns to acquire fire-fighting apparatus that can be strategically located to respond to calls quickly over a fairly wide area. The cost of this is far outweighed by the benefits.

Each year, tens of millions of dollars worth of property is destroyed on farms and in villages. Lives are lost. This waste can be largely prevented if the public is aroused to how it may be obviated. Let's make our towns and homes safe from fire.

PILING UP THE OVERHEAD

Millions of citizens have a direct connection with our leading security exchanges, through periodic buying and selling of stocks and bonds. Every citizen has an indirect connection, in that industry relies on these exchanges to provide capital for new enterprises, industrial expansion, and other job-creating activities.

It is for this reason that the recent announcement that brokers' commissions may have to be increased is of general national interest. Increased restrictions on security market dealings have been partially responsible for a decline in trading with the result that brokers' income is insufficient to pay costs at old rates. A special committee of the New York Stock Exchange says: "There can be no doubt now that a broker's costs have increased heavily and much of the increase is quite beyond his control—as, for instance, expenses incurred to meet direct requirements of Federal and state governments... with prospects of an increase in succeeding years under statutory requirements."

The public has to pay all increased costs of doing business including commissions to name their stocks. Decreased stock market activity has an adverse effect on all business.

The utmost care must be taken in preparing, passing or revising regulations governing security operations. Every protection must be given to the investing citizen and the study operator must be outlawed and punished. But it is possible, with the best of intentions, to over-extend the scope of regulation.

CONSIDER BEFORE YOU VOTE

Approximately five thousand citizens of Rowan County will go to the polls Saturday to name their party nominees for county offices. In addition the Democrats will select a nominee for Attorney General and Representative from the Bath and Rowan County district.

Citizens, interested in good government and a progressive county should carefully weigh the merits of each candidate. Do not be weighed by the past. A citizen should not vote for a candidate because he needs the office, but because the office needs him. Go to the polls Saturday and cast your ballot for the men on your ticket whom you believe from his past record, either in business or in politics, will serve you and Rowan County the best if he is elected. Don't be misled by vote-getters at the polls but vote your ballot as you weigh the men on the ticket.

THE FARMERS OWN CREATION

Agriculture is gradually becoming a closely knit national industry, organized on a sound, efficient basis. This fact was revealed at a two-day conference of leaders of farmers' cooperatives held in Springfield, Massachusetts, recently.

The marketing cooperative movement is the outgrowth of problems that have confronted agricultural producers. Organized "co-ops" have given the farmer a feeling of security by assuring him fairer and more stable prices, and a better market for his produce.

A survey now being undertaken for all the farmer cooperatives promises to furnish startling statistics in this respect. At the present time, with the survey little more than a third completed, 19,000 producer cooperative organizations have been listed.

Marketing cooperatives are the farmers' own creation. The "yardstick" for measuring their efficiency and utility value consists of four principal sections: 1, Economic need; 2, member support; 3, adequate capital; 4, efficient operation. There are no illusions behind the "co-ops." They came into existence to fill a basic need. Sound business practices—not politics—have accompanied the growth of the "co-ops," and American farmers are to be congratulated on the job they are doing in solving their own troubles.

BE AN EXCEPTION TO THE RULE

Only 5 out of each 100 men, on reaching the age of 65 or over, have incomes sufficient for them to retire in decent comfort. The rest must continue to work, or subsist on charity or the bounty of relatives.

Here is the strongest possible argument for savings and investment plans, such as those provided by life insurance, whose purpose is to assure old age security. Nothing is more pitiable than dependent children. The tragic lessons of millions whose plight cannot be remedied speak louder than anything else for systematic saving.

"Those 'good old days' when the country could go for perhaps six months without having to worry the time to do things that are done in the ordinary way, seem to have gone, and fear is the order of the day."—Chester M. Wright.

PUBLIC WHIPPINGS CUT JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

Public whipping—or "barrel beating"—was credited today by a county judge with reducing juvenile delinquency nearly 60 per cent in the coal mining village of Powhatan, Ohio.

"It's the only way we can keep the upper hand on these young offenders," Carpenter asserted. "They know very well that if they are caught they will be whipped over the barrel in public for their misdeeds."

Carpenter declared that he believed "by getting at the root of crime—"juvenile delinquency"—he had made this Ohio River town one of the most law-abiding in the state.

"I know this," said County Probate Judge Harry A. Albright, "juvenile delinquency in Powhatan has fallen off nearly 60 per cent since the public whipping of Carpenter's 'barrel justice' went into effect. "They can dispense justice in five minutes over a barrel in a rather effective way."

KENTUCKY TESTS SHOW HIGH VALUE OF MANURE

The value of manure is strikingly shown in an experiment on the Mayfield, Graves county, soil experiment field which was being conducted by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

Two sets of plots treated with sufficient limestone and superphosphate were used for the first period. The other set of plots, the cornstalks and wheat straw were returned from 1916 to 1921, after the first year. No manure was used in this set. The manure was used in this set at any time. A four-year rotation of corn, soybeans, wheat and hay (mixed grass and timothy) was used until 1931. Since then a four year rotation of corn, wheat and two years of hay has been used.

Dividing the 24 years of the test into three periods of eight years each, the results are: Corn and manure, first period 32 bushels; second period 44 bushels and third period 44 bushels. Corn without manure, first period 33 bushels; second period, 38 bushels, and third period 47 bushels. Soybean hay, first period 3.25 tons, second period 3.91 tons on manured land, and 3.22 tons on unmanured land. First period, 3.71 tons; second period, 4.32 tons, and third period, 5.26 tons. Hay on unmanured land, first period, 2.94 tons; second period, 3.40 tons, and third period 3.92 tons.

HEN TAKES CHARGE OF LITTER OF SEVEN PUPS

An indiscriminating mother hen went to the doghouse today at Gainesville, N. Y.—to tend a litter of seven pups.

Attendees at the Elizabeth Cuddyback farm reported the hen drove a mother dog away from her new born litter. She let the dog come back at feeding time, but between meals tries to teach the pups to savor cracked corn and wheat.

CHILD SWIFT INTO SEAWATER DROWNED BY HEAVY RAIN

Atlanta, Georgia's hardest rain in more than three months swept an 8-year-old boy down a city street to his death Monday.

The child, Herald Rogers, was sucked in the sewer while wading in a pool created by the 1.48 inches of rain that fell. His body was recovered at the end of the line about a mile from the point of his entrance.

WILLIAM JOYCE COWEN THEY GAVE HIM A GUN HALSEY RAINES

THE STORY THIS FAR: When Rose Duffy, a Red Cross nurse, agreed to marry Jimmy Davis she had no idea that his closest pal and the man she loved, Fred Willis, was not dead. Fred turns up, and sacrifices his own interests rather than wreck Jimmy's happiness, telling Rose he had a wife at home. After the war, working at his old job of circus Barker, Fred is shocked to discover that Jimmy is involved in some gang murders. He appeals to him in vain, then tells Rose. She informs the police. Jimmy, arrested for carrying firearms, admits the charge and is sentenced to three years. Rose parts from him tenderly, believing this will redeem him. Jimmy's gangster confederates trail her, seeking revenge; she escapes to her apartment but as she opens the door sees a half dozen shadowy figures there waiting for her.

Rose felt herself sagging toward the wall. She cried out, but er of the two, exchanging open-mouthed glances with his partner. "That's what a figgered you all wanted," responded the Negro. The little cavalcade, Rose in the center, walked to the front doorway. Across the street the gangster car had been joined by a second machine. Rose looked anxiously up at Fred. "Hold everything!" he told her with a broad smile. "From far off came the sounds of a gay, blaring tune. It grew louder, and came closer, till down the street, Rose caught sight of a circus procession, led by a raucous, ear-deafening caliope. "The rest of the outfit," explained "Fred, grinning.

Along the street came the carnival troupe, elephants and all. When it had reached Rose's apartment the cars in the uncutting off the cars across the way, were—slowly as a snail's pace. Taking Rose by the arm, a couple of handy men on each side, Fred bolted out with Rose. He swung her aboard the caliope, which Laro was driving, then he leaped into the seat be-

"I s'pose you wonder what a guy with my kisser can know about the trails," said the other good-naturedly. "Well, the fact is, I ain't had the pleasure of knowing any since along in July, 1918." He fingered the marks on his cheeks and forehead. "I got a lot of nice things out of the war myself," said Jimmy soberly. "Maybe all of us did." The other man studied Jimmy's convict numbers, and extended his hand in fraternization. "What's your beef?" "Red on me," replied Jimmy. "Well, well! Me too. You and me ought to get on pretty good."

One of the guards had noted them in close conversation. He beckoned to Jimmy, who rose and went over. "Lay off that gorilla," Jimmy said nothing, but went back to his seat. "So now we're back in the army," chuckled the scared one. "Same old pumbers, same kind of food, same old spoons, same old uniform, and plenty of the same boys. First they learn us how to handle a gun, then they squawk Holy Moses when we do it!" "I've been here long enough so I know the rules," said Jimmy. "Two months and eleven days." "From three years! Still like it?" "Anyway," said Jimmy, "I sure ain't gettin' any more added onto it."

ELECTRIC COOKING

... and you certainly can enjoy its advantages even on a very modest income

YOU CAN reduce the time you spend in the kitchen many hours each week by using electric cooking. You'll have a cleaner, cooler kitchen. You'll have less housework and more opportunity for leisure. You'll get highly satisfactory cooking results with meats, vegetables, breads, pies, cakes.

Electric cooking is very economical. A majority of the families (now more than 1,250,000) using it are folks in moderate circumstances, with the wives doing their own housework.

Come in tomorrow for a full explanation of the advantages of electric cooking. See our line of Westinghouse and Hoopwax ranges. Local dealers sell other standard makes.

"You're right about that three year business," he said. "It's more than I can stand. What you got on your mind?"

URGES FARMERS TO SAVE CLOVER SEED
The suggestion that farmers consider saving clover seed from this year's plantings is made in a statement from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. In many instances clover sowed last spring did so well that it should be cut either for hay or for seed.

Since there may be a shortage of clover seed next spring, together with the fact that much of this year's crop came from native seed, it is doubly important to save seed, crops men at the college believe.

$15 PROFIT PER ACRE IN KENTUCKY
Forty western ewes, purchased as lambs two years ago, returned a labor income of $15 each this year for Virgil Williams, a farmer in Larue county, Ky., according to County Agent Frank G. Mellon.

As three-year-olds this year, the flock produced 415 pounds of wool which sold for 40 cents a pound, a total of $166, or more than the feed bill.

Asks The Democratic Voters of Rowan County TO CONSIDER HIS CAMPAIGN For

COUNTY COURT CLERK

At The Polls Saturday

The qualifications that Mike Flood possesses for the office of County Court Clerk are unquestioned. He can make an efficient officer to serve all the people of Rowan County. If nominated in this primary he will add strength to the Democratic ticket in November.

Mike Flood has never asked the voters to favor him with their ballot, but in every general election for several years he has helped to lead the Democratic campaign for other candidates.

Mike Flood has always been outstanding in carrying the party's banner to victory. He deserves the support of the party in his own race.

MORE AND BETTER HAY FOR KENTUCKY

More and better hay for Kentucky. So say county planning committees, according to a College of Agriculture summary of their recommendations.

These committees, which have been at work about a year on the needs of agriculture in Kentucky, want greatly increased acreages of clover, alfalfa and lespedeza. Three or four times more alfalfa should be grown, they think, and clover and lespedeza should be preferred to redbud, timothy and wild grasses.

Soybeans and cowpeas would be relegated to bottom land where conditions prevent growing other crops, or to upland where crop failures call for emergency crops. It is recommended that the production of these two annuals be materially reduced.

Because alfalfa and lespedeza permit excessive washing, it is suggested that orchard grass be sowed with alfalfa and redbud or orchard grass or both with lespedeza. On sloping land neither lespedeza nor alfalfa should be seeded alone. Bluegrass or other grasses should be seeded with hay when hay grasses tend to "play and out," it is stated, thus greatly improving the resulting pastures. In the case of lespedeza grown alone, disking in the fall and seeding to a small grain cover crop are indicated. The small grain can be grazed or cut for hay or grain and another crop of lespedeza hay secured, if the season is favorable. Such a plan also protects the land over the winter.

CATTLE MEN TO DISCUSS BUSINESS AND SEE HERDS

H. M. Conway, Chicago live-stock marketing specialist, Professor E. S. Good and Wayland Rhoads of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and local feeders will speak at a series of cattle feeders' tours and meetings in Kentucky this month. The economic conditions, outlook for cattle feeding, methods of feeding and systems of handling cattle under Kentucky conditions will be considered.

Dates of the meetings are: Fayette and Bourbon counties, August 7; Montgomery county, August 9; Caldwell county, August 10; Union county, August 11; Hopkins and Huhlenberg counties, August 12; Todd county, August 13; and Logan and Simpson counties, August 14.

AVOID CULL EWE IN BUILDING UP FLOCK

Kentucky farmers are in the market at this time for ewes to start flocks of sheep or to replace ewes that are being culled. While some dealers and commission men have secured good ewes which should prove profitable in spring lamb production under our conditions, unfortunately many native ewes that have been culled from flocks in neighboring states because they proved unprofitable as producers are showing up on some of our markets. Any ewe older than a yearling should be looked on with suspicion unless it can be determined that she has raised a lamb this year.

Most yearling native ewes have been developed through the saving of late parasite-infested ewe lambs and embody most of the undesirable and few of the good qualities wanted in a breeding ewe. Such ewes generally lack constitution and size and will tend to be late breeders themselves. If native ewes are purchased at all, selection should be confined to well-developed animals with plenty of frame and size that are capable of yielding a good fleece, as well as producing lambs that will reach a marketable weight of 80 pounds in 3½ to 4 months time. Usually western range ewes will prove more profitable than natives. Range ewes have the early breeding instinct, yield more wool and are generally free from parasites.

Several types of crossbred range ewes are admirably suited to our conditions. The first or second cross of a Hampshire or Suffolk ram on the Rambouillet range ewe, which results in a dark, brown or mottled faced sheep with plenty of size and constitution, makes ideal farmers' ewes under Kentucky conditions. Certain types of long-wool crosses, if not too high in long-wool blood, are satisfactory where Southdown rams of good quality are used on them. Likewise the big-bone, smooth bodied Rambouillet type has proved profitable on many Kentucky farms. There is danger, however, of confusing this type with the small undesirable East Texas sheep. Many of these sheep unfortunately find their way to Kentucky markets.

Range ewes selected should produce a minimum of 8 pounds of wool per head under normal conditions and be capable after the first year of producing 100 pounds of lamb per ewe that can be made ready for market at about 80 pounds per lamb in a maximum of 120 days. The percentage of lambs produced by yearlings is, of course, smaller than produced by older ewes.

Farmers who want additional information should secure a copy of Circular 288, "Ewes for Commercial Flocks." This can be had from county farm agents or by writing to the College of Agriculture, Lexington.

Union county 4-H club members won several premiums at the Evansville, Ind., tri-state lamb show and sale.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

The McElroy farm in Washington county is now equipped with a modern sheep-dipping vat. Purebred sheep are raised.

Market demands in Bell county for poultry have exceeded the available supply.

Both lespedeza pasture and hay are plentiful in Lee county where soil was limed and phosphated last year.

Jesse W. Caudill, Letcher county, sold 70 gallons of cherries for $35, after carrying them 3½ miles across mountain ridges on a mule.

An offer of 5 cents per dozen premium on their high quality eggs has been made to Grayson county farmers by a Chicago firm.

A total of 3,000 crates of strawberry berries were sold cooperatively by Crittenden county farmers.

Twelve dozen wooden salad bowls were finished by Campbell county homemakers last month.

Gross return of $20,700 on 16 carloads of strawberries were received by Ohio county farmers.

A good hard red spring wheat crop has been raised by R. M. Fisher, Carlisle county farmer.

Weber county homemakers have lawns in unusually good condition following a project on summer care of lawns.

In Barren county, farmers in the dairy herd improvement association have completed a thorough check-up on their stock.

A canning demonstration sponsored by Bourbon county homemakers attracted approximately 150 women.

THE FARM AND HOME

In planning wiring a house for electricity, lights should not be stairways. They are not only convenient but may save injury from falls. The same is true of lights for front and back entrances to the house.

Milk and cream kept in tightly closed containers tend to develop undesirable "smothered" tastes and odors. It is better to cover with cheese cloth. Immediate cooling of milk by placing the cans in cold water is important, especially in summer.

Where wanted for hay only, Korean lespedeza is usually not cut until in full bloom, which is about the middle of August in most of Kentucky. Kobe, Tennessee 76 and Common lespedeza are not ready until two or three weeks later.

Three years of tests at the Kentucky Experiment Station gave alfalfa the prize for swine grazing. Oats and rape placed second, with Korean lespedeza and bluegrass about equal as third. Alfalfa-grazed pigs made better gains and consumed less corn.

Topping and suckering tobacco are receiving more attention, on the theory that these practices influence the thickness of the leaf. Over-grown tobacco is often of poor quality, is easily injured and requires more space in the barn.

In serving meals, many families follow the practical and simple method of placing the food on the table and having each person help himself. This method is informal and tends to promote a spirit of congeniality.

CHINESE CABBAGE

A "fall garden" vegetable whose acquaintance is well worth making is Chinese cabbage, or "celery cabbage," as it is sometimes called.

Its leaves are somewhat similar to mustard in appearance, but there the likeness ends, for Chinese cabbage has superb quality and tenderness.

Unlike ordinary late cabbage which must have been started in June, and which must accordingly have undergone the rigors of an unpropitious season, so that nothing of having had to survive insect onslaughts at that time, Chinese cabbage need not be started until early August, after which time the season has become easier and the number of insects less.

Chinese cabbage is a rank feeder, particularly of nitrogen. Accordingly, the first step in preparing for it is to spread a generous coat of stable manure, before the land is turned.

caught and held. Although "slips" for transplanting may be grown in a separate seed bed, it is more safe making the seed scantily in the rows direct, and thin the seedlings to a final stand of 12 inches.

Cultivation should be thorough enough to remove all weeds, but not deep. Mere "shaving" of the soil is best. No more should be drawn to the rows than takes place in cultivating; the surface should be kept level.

Although insect trouble should wane in August, there are several pests that may cause concern, particularly while the seedlings are coming up. These are the flea-beetle, the leaf-hopper, the cabbage louse and sometimes the green cabbage worm.

Bert Proctor Lists Sheriff's Platform

TO THE VOTERS OF ROWAN COUNTY.

Although it has been impossible for me to see all the Republican voters of the county, I have attempted to see and talk with each one that I possibly could since I announced my candidacy as Sheriff.

I feel that most of you know me personally since I have had dealings with you over a span of many years. I feel that if nominated in this primary I can add strength to the ticket in the November election.

I am an ex-soldier and believe that I have demonstrated in years past that I am a true friend of the working man and of the poor people. I know that I am qualified to fill this important post and pledge that if nominated and elected as your Sheriff I will always have my duty foremost in my mind and will answer your call at anytime of the day or night.

I will sincerely appreciate anything you might do in behalf of my candidacy.

Eldon Evans Describes Slaying Of CCC Boy

Noah Ally, 21, Prestonsburg, Ky., died in a local hospital this afternoon from a bullet wound in his abdomen, inflicted, Lieutenant Eldon Evans said, in an affray at a roadhouse near the CCC camp in Clay county.

At Manchester, county seat of Clay county, officers were reported they held two men, whose names they gave as Bert Lash and Taylor England, on charges of shooting with intent to kill. The said the charges would be changed to murder in event Ally died. Other than that, they declined to discuss the shooting, which occurred Sunday night.

Ally, son of Lee Ally, died without naming his assailant. Lieutenant Evans is junior officer at the CCC camp, at which Ally and Roy Anderson, 19, Barbourville, Ky., also wounded in the fight, were enrollees. Anderson was treated at the camp for an arm injury.

Give Rowan County A Business Administration
BY NOMINATING AND ELECTING
Dave C. CAUDILL
FOR COUNTY JUDGE

HE HAS SPENT A LIFETIME MASTERING THE PRINCIPLES OF SOUND BUSINESS. HIS HONESTY IS UNQUESTIONED. HIS QUALIFICATIONS ARE UNDENIED. HIS SINCERITY IS THE SAME THAT HE HAS SHOWN DURING HIS ENTIRE LIFE.

Dave C. Caudill Is The Man That Can Put Rowan County On A Sound And Economical Basis.

Dave Caudill was born and raised on a farm in this county and has had all the rugged experience of a farmer's boy in the hills. He attended the country schools and taught in them three terms. He was a student at the old Morehead Normal School under Brother Button and obtained a college degree in the Commercial Department at Valparaiso, Indiana. He entered the banking business in 1905 and has been connected with the Peoples Bank of Morehead for more than 29 years.

He has, at all times, had a personal interest in the things that will improve the conditions of our county—more and better roads and bridges, schools and churches. He has always taken an active interest in the fiscal affairs of the county. He wants to see the indebtedness of the county reduced and the affairs of the county carried on so as to save the taxpayers all the money possible.
