MSU OUTDOOR SCULPTURE: A PICTURE STORY

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- For the past few months Morehead State University's scenic campus has served as host to a most unusual outdoor contemporary art exhibition. The exhibition entitled "Morehead Sculpture '85" consists of 16 abstract pieces from four states. The exhibit is the first of its kind in eastern Kentucky and the brainchild of Thomas Sternal, chair of MSU's Department of Art. Marsha Moss, a sculpture exhibit consultant from Philadelphia, served as guest curator of the exhibit.

The pieces were chosen for the show on basis of their diversity in scale, size, material, nature, and intent. The show features the work of MSU art faculty as well. The show is free and open to the public. The closing of the show is set for Sept. 15.

- 1--Bill Shanhouse's "Evolution" fits right into the peaceful surroundings and invites you to stroll around it. Doing just that are Kim O'Cull and Tony Grayson, MSU students from Tollesboro.
- 2--Sternal's "Table Form '85", made of hemlock wood and stone, has become a favorite studying and resting spot for many a weary student. Enjoying the peaceful setting is Bill Warner, MSU student from Mt. Sterling.
- 3--Janelle Delicata created these "Sentinels" of natural materials to eventually "deteriorate and return to the land". They now stand guard and watch over the land they will someday return to.
- 4--Another one of the unique pieces exhibited is the "Ornythopterus", created by John Parker of Philadelphia. According to Parker, "this species is constructed of planes and transform line to mass, through a metamorphosis of bird, insect, and dinosaur".

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "It has been a good life," Robert W. Stokes said of his 36 years as a Morehead State University employee. "I enjoyed every person I worked for and with," he said.

He began his career with MSU as an accountant in August 1949--the same year he received his Bachelor of Business Administration degree from the University of Cincinnati--and has held several positions, including assistant business manager and assistant director of fiscal affairs.

"Bob is always a professional and exceptional person who gets things done and enjoys his work," said Charlotte Dowdy, MSU buyer. Dowdy began working as Stokes' secretary in 1963 and has worked with him for 22 years. According to her, Stokes has "grown up with the university and seen all the changes that have taken place."

Stokes worked under the administrations of five MSU presidents and acting presidents. "A lot of people would come to Bob for answers," Dowdy said, adding that Stokes saw the university as a whole and knew what would benefit it as such.

Virginia Caudill, MSU payroll officer, is one of the few employees to have been with the university longer than Stokes. She was a secretary when Stokes began his career at MSU and recalls that "in those days everyone knew everyone." She said, "Bob is a delightful person to work with."

Stokes said that in terms of construction of buildings and increase in enrollment he believes that the 1950s and 60s were MSU's "growth years."

Originally from Cincinnati, Ohio, Stokes said he found in Morehead a small town atmosphere that was good for the family and a life centered on the university and its activities. He and his wife, the former Rosemary Grower, have two sons, Paul and John.

A little travel is part of the future plan for Stokes and his wife. He is looking forward to retirement but will remain involved with the university in a "different way." He plans to support and attend university activities as a member of the Morehead community.

Stokes has been a member of several professional and civic organizations, some of which include, the Kentucky Educational Buyers Association, the National Association of Educational Buyers, the Lexington Purchasing Management Association, the Parish Council of the Morehead Catholic Church, the Kiwanis Club, the Red Cross, the United Way, and the Morehead Little League.

Sept. 5, 1985
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Counselors at Morehead State University are taking their services to the students instead of waiting for the students to come to the counseling offices.

According to Dr. Gary Silker, director of MSU's Counseling Center, the recent addition of three staff members has allowed the center to adopt a more aggressive approach to campus counseling.

"We have changed our focus," Silker said, "and now we can be more proactive or preventative. In the past, we were more of a medical model in which symptoms appeared before students would seek us out or be referred here. Now, we will go to the students in an attempt to educate them about ways they can manage their lives by acquiring improved coping skills."

Joining Silker and Dr. Daniel Anderson, clinical psychologist, on the counseling staff are Dr. Perry Le Roy, international student adviser, Anna Mae Riggle, counselor for non-traditional students, and Jerry Gore, director of minority student affairs. The appointments were effective July 1.

Silker said that MSU's counselors will conduct workshops at residence halls concerning such topics as roommate conflict, test anxiety, wellness concepts, and general stress management.

Le Roy, who is also an official with the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), said that international students have urgent needs when they arrive on campus such as the location of housing, financial arrangements, the acquisition of auto licenses, and arrangements with the INS which they can deal with more effectively through the counseling center than they can on their own.

"Once those immediate requirements are taken care of," he said, "we can offer them counseling for social, personal, and economic needs as well as counseling on intercommunity relations."

There were 130 international students enrolled at MSU during the spring semester and Le Roy expects at least that many to register for fall classes. Two-thirds of those students are Moslem who have special needs.

"Since they pray five times a day and follow strict dietary rules, we can offer them help in locating premises for prayer and in finding a place to have their food prepared," Le Roy said.

According to Riggle, the number of non-traditional students attending MSU, as well as other universities throughout the nation, is increasing.

"Last spring we had 700 non-traditional students and we believe there will be even more this semester, she said.

Riggle defined non-traditional students as undergraduates who are at least 25 years old. This category includes persons who have never attended college and those who return after a period out of school.

"Our first priority is to conduct a needs assessment," Riggle said. "That is a difficult task since most non-traditional students are commuters and it is very difficult to get in touch with them."

Most of the persons who have contacted her so far have been potential students who are curious about attending college at a non-traditional age.

"They are usually surprised and pleased to learn that there are so many others like themselves," she said.

The counseling center is located on the first floor of Mays Hall. The telephone number is (606) 784-2123.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. David R. Rudy, professor of sociology, has been appointed chair of Morehead State University's newly-approved Department of Sociology, Social Work and Corrections.

Rudy's promotion to the administrative ranks was approved at the Board of Regents' Aug. 23 meeting at which time the Board also approved separating the Department of Psychology and Sociology into two distinct academic units.

The department's social work and corrections programs are much more applied in nature than the general sociology program, according to Dr. Roberta T. Anderson, MSU vice president for academic affairs.

"Only one-fourth of the majors are in the general sociology track," Anderson said. "The faculty felt it would be more than appropriate to provide a greater visibility to its sister programs of social work and corrections by renaming the department," she added.

"We feel that as chair Dr. Rudy not only will enhance the visibility, but also strengthen the already excellent curriculum to create one of the best programs in the state," the vice president said.

Rudy earned the B.A. degree from Gannon University, the M.A. degree from Akron University and the Ph. D. degree from Syracuse University. Prior to joining MSU's faculty in 1980, he taught at Alfred University and Colorado Women's College. He has written several articles for publication and presented numerous papers at professional meetings.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. James M. Gifford of Morehead State University has been named the first full-time executive director of the Jesse Stuart Foundation in Ashland.

The Sept. 1 appointment was announced jointly by Dr. Roberta T. Anderson, MSU vice president for academic affairs, and Judy B. Thomas, Jesse Stuart Foundation chairperson.

Gifford, MSU associate professor of history and Appalachian Studies assistant director since 1978, has been reassigned by the University for a two-year period to assist the Foundation.

The Foundation was established in 1979 to promote educational and cultural programs relevant to the eastern Kentucky author's life and work and to maintain a 726-acre nature preserve near the Stuart homeplace, W-Hollow, in Greenup County.

"With his interest in Appalachia and his previous work with the Foundation, we believe Dr. Gifford is an ideal choice for the executive director," said Thomas, Foundation chairperson. "He is not only a distinguished scholar, but is a very capable administrator. We are grateful to Morehead State for providing us his services," she added.

"Morehead State has a commitment to regional service and through its Appalachian Studies program has promoted an appreciation of the mountain culture and heritage, so we are delighted to provide this additional assistance to the Foundation," Dr. Anderson said.

"This partnership between MSU, an educational institution, and the Stuart Foundation, a cultural agency, is a most exciting project," she added. "It's one that we have had interest in for some time and President (Herb. F.) Reinhard serves as the University's representative on the Foundation's board of directors," she noted.

One of the first projects will be planning for a state-wide observance of the 80th anniversary of Stuart's birth in 1986, according to Gifford, who also said he was investigating possibilities for an outdoor drama based on Stuart's writings.

He and a Murray State University professor are compiling a bibliography on Stuart and his work as a reference guide for Appalachian scholars, teachers and librarians.

Gifford earned the B.A. degree from Maryville College, the M.A. degree from Middle Tennessee State University and the Ph. D. degree from the University of Georgia. MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Morehead State University Board of Regents has approved the renaming of the Office of Continuing Education to the Office of Extended Campus Programs.

The change, approved Aug. 23, was necessary because added responsibilities and diversification of services have altered the function of the office, according to Dr. Roberta Anderson, vice president for academic affairs.

"It was apparent that the office needed a title which more clearly defined its scope and functions," Anderson said.

The renamed office will be responsible for traditional continuing education programs such as community education, preparatory and adult basic education, and community service. The office will also coordinate services for programs initiated by external agencies.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Cosmopolitan Club will hold its Fall Semester organizational meeting on Friday, Sept. 13, at 7:30 p.m. in Rader Hall 104.

The club is designed to broaden the knowledge of foreign cultures for foreign and American students alike, according to Dr. Perry LeRoy, foreign student adviser.

Membership in the Cosmopolitan Club is open to the community, as well as to the University, LeRoy said. "The club provides cultural experiences for both the international and our own students," he said. "Members learn things about each other's country and culture that they otherwise might not have the opportunity to," he added.

Currently, MSU has students enrolled from 19 foreign countries. The largest number is from Malaysia, Great Britain, and Nigeria, respectively. Students have come from as far as Japan, Singapore, the Republic of China, and Zimbabwe.

"These students are gaining much more than just an education in their chosen fields," said the adviser. "They are also gaining valuable experiences in other cultures," LeRoy added.

Area residents can help these students adjust to our country by becoming a host family. "Host families help the students from foreign cultures understand our culture while experiencing a little foreign culture themselves," explained LeRoy.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Cosmopolitan Club or in being a host family may attend the meeting on Friday. Additional information may be obtained by calling LeRoy at 783-2759.

According to Judy Rogers, committee director and professor of English at MSU, the award is presented each year to a full-time student who plans to major in English. "Our selection is based on past performance, ACT scores and the student's overall potential," said Rogers.

Bentley, a National Merit finalist and valedictorian of the 1974 Tollesboro High School senior class, returned to MSU this fall as a full-time student. She entered MSU in 1974 as a freshman, and since then, has continued as a part-time student, earning credits through several summer terms and the College Level Examination Program (CLEP).

In the case of transfer students, the college transcript will be reviewed.

The award has a value of $300 ($150 per semester) and is renewable for one year, providing the recipient remains an MSU student with an English major and has a minimum overall GPA of 3.0.

"I feel honored to be chosen for this award," Bentley said. "I look forward to completing my degree at MSU and to teaching in the public school system."

Bentley and her husband, Norman, have two daughters; Letisha, age 10, and Karissa, age 4.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has joined the Ohio River Basin Research Consortium, an environmental research association of universities, government agencies and private industries, according to Dr. Robert L. Burns, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

The consortium, which begins its research work this fall, will study environmental problems, particularly water quality topics, Burns said.

Dr. David McNeely, assistant professor of biological sciences, will represent MSU as a member of the consortium's Board of Trustees. Hugh Archer, of Frankfort, director of the Kentucky Chapter of Nature Conservancy, has been chosen as the MSU community representative to the consortium.

"Our research will concern the influence of industrial activity, economic development and land use patterns on water quality," McNeely said.

The consortium represents an 11 state region drained by the Ohio River and its tributaries. Among its members are Ohio State University, DePaul University, Eastern Kentucky University, Ohio University, the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Monsanto, Proctor and Gamble, and others.

Member institutions are given priority for research grants, McNeely said.

"Rather than going to someone outside, the consortium will choose a person from the faculty of those institutions which belong to the consortium to conduct research if that faculty member has a specialty in the area under study," he said.

Mine drainage effects on streams, ground water in the Ohio River basin and acid rain transportation will be other research topics, he said.

McNeely, who came to MSU in 1983, received a Ph.D. degree from Oklahoma State University, a M.S. degree from North Texas State University and a B.S. degree from the University of Texas at Arlington. He has published several articles on aquatic biology and is active in the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Ecological Society of America, the American Society of Limnologists and Oceanographers, and the American Society of Ichthyologists and Herpetologists.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Parents visiting Morehead State University's campus on the weekend of Sept. 20-22 may find themselves in "hog heaven."

Activities for the annual Parents Weekend have all been designed around the theme "I'm Hog Wild over MSU," according to Susette Redwine, coordinator of University Center programs and special events.

MSU students will welcome their moms and dads with a hog calling competition, a prize pig contest, a "pig out" buffet dinner, a Swine Ball and a pigskin battle between the MSU and Salem College football teams.

Parents Weekend activities will begin with registration of parents at 6 p.m. Friday, Sept. 20, in the third floor lobby of Adron Doran University Center. A buffet dinner will be offered at 7 p.m. in the Crager Room at the University Center followed by a prize pig contest. Rules of the contest prohibit the participation of living beasts. Instead, entries will consist of the artistic - and less aromatic - creations of contestants. Dinner tickets are $6.

The Swine Ball is scheduled for 9 p.m. Friday in the Crager Room and will feature the bluegrass music of the Muddy River Band. Judging for the hog calling and tacky dress contests will be held during the dance. Hog callers will be judged on originality, clarity, tonal quality and volume. Tacky dress contestants will be rated on inventiveness and the absence of sensible wardrobe coordination.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Charles Gilley is looking for talent.

As coordinator of Morehead State University's Educational Talent Search (ETS), a U.S. Department of Education funded program, Gilley has begun his annual search for high school students and adults who have the ability but not the money, motivation or information to continue their education.

The ETS staff, which includes Gilley, Ann Upchurch and Sandra Adkins, will arrange programs at 21 high schools in 17 Eastern and Northeastern Kentucky counties.

"Although we are funded for only 750 students, we will probably work with a lot more than that," Gilley said.

ETS is a program designed to decrease the dropout rate in high schools, to encourage students to enroll in post-secondary schools and to aid adults who wish to return to school.

Last year, only two of 705 students who completed the program, dropped out of high school. In 1983-84, two students dropped out and there were no dropouts among ETS participants in 1982-83, according to Gilley.

"We had 59.4 percent of last year's group to enroll in post-secondary institutions, while the average for Kentucky's high schools is only about 52 percent," Gilley said.

ETS services supplement existing counseling programs at participating high schools.

"Our job is to assist the counselors and to try to relieve some of the enormous burden they are under," Gilley said. "In many of these schools, the counselors are outnumbered 500 to 1 by the students. If there is one thing I would like to say about our program, it would be that ETS would never work without the dedicated counselors and principals we have in this area."

At least once a month Gilley--a former principal, coach and teacher in Eastern Kentucky--and the ETS staff conduct a workshop at each high school in the program.

"We teach students how to take tests, how to acquire good study skills, the importance of grades and how to take effective notes in class. Later, we will provide them with information about college, careers, vocational schools and financial aid," he said.

"We are prohibited from recruiting for any single school, but we often bring students to visit the MSU campus or to a ballgame so they can see what college life is like. It helps them get over their fear of the unknown," Gilley explained.

High school students eligible for the program must meet low-income requirements or have parents who did not graduate from college.

The ETS program includes "stopouts," adults who have ceased their formal educational progress.

"We work closely with the MSU Appalachian Adult Learning Center and encourage these adults to get their GED (General Education Diploma) or to go on to vocational school or college if they are high school graduates," Gilley said. "Adults are very timid, but we can help their confidence and lessen the red tape."

MOREHEAD, Ky. -- Prior to World War II, Eastern Kentucky was a major producer of sheep and if Morehead State University has its way, sheep production again will be a vital part of the region's economy.

The Appalachian Regional Commission has awarded MSU a $136,404 grant to develop a sheep industry program, according to Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, dean, College of Applied Sciences and Technology.

The program will be operated by MSU's Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources in cooperation with the Appalachian Development Center.

"As the amount of farm land utilized for tobacco production declines in the state, we need to find viable alternatives and sheep production is one," the dean said.

"It's an industry well suited to the region's steep and hilly land," he noted. "There are a number of small land owners, who are now working at something else, but who want to be fully supportive on land. This is an industry that will provide them that option," Derrickson said.

"The program is most appropriate as part of Morehead State's service mission," said President Herb. F. Reinhard. "The University is committed to improving the economy of the region, especially with long range programs --like this--rather than short-term ones," Dr. Reinhard said.

The first step already is under way, according to Wilson Grier, ADC assistant director for business development, who is coordinator for the program. "We are in the process of hiring a sheep specialist to assist interested farmers in preparing their facilities and to develop educational programs on sheep production, ranging from lambing to parasites," Grier said.

"We will be holding meetings with prospective sheep farmers in the near future, here on campus and then out in the region on a county by county basis," Grier said. "Our initial target area will be Rowan, Bath, Montgomery, Fleming, and Morgan counties as well as some adjacent counties," he added.

According to Derrickson, the program calls for 18 farms of 30 ewes each to be established initially. The sheep will be provided participants by MSU on a lend-lease agreement at $55 per ewe and $200 for purebred ram. "We'll be crossing white-faced ewes with black-faced rams, the dean added. Participants will be allowed to pay back from their lamb crops over a three-year period.

"The project is in the organizational stage and we are still looking for more farmers interested in participating," Derrickson said.

Additional information on MSU's sheep production program may be obtained by calling Grier or Phil Kenkel at ADC, (606) 783-2077.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University's Student Association will sponsor performances by "Weird Al" Yankovic and Dr. Demento at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 24, in MSU's Academic-Athletic Center.

Tickets are available from the MSU Student Association ticket window on the second floor of Adron Doran University Center, the Music Machine in Trademore Shopping Center and at Martin's Department Store, Main Street, Morehead. They also will be sold at the door.

General admission tickets are $8 each and MSU students with valid ID cards may purchase tickets at half-price ($4). Student tickets will be sold at the University Center only.

"Weird Al," the clown prince of rock music, turned Michael Jackson's hit "Beat It" into a pop parody "Eat It" and saw it hit Number 15 in Japan, Number 12 on Billboard charts and Number 1 in Australia. It won him a Grammy for Best Comedy Recording and an American Video Award for Best Male Performance. He followed "Eat It" with a satire on Madonna's "Like a Virgin," called "Like a Surgeon" which has been equally successful.

Known to his mother as Barry Hansen, Dr. Demento is recognized by millions of teenagers and adults as the host of the "Dr. Demento Show" which can be heard in the Morehead area over WMOR Radio at midnight on Sundays.

His show features classic comedy records by Spike Jones, Tom Lehrer, and Alan Sherman as well as some of the newer brand of mad humor produced by Monty Python and "Weird Al" Yankovic.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University's Kentucky Gamma Chapter, Pi Gamma Mu, international honor society in social science, has been named to the society's Roll of Merit for the 13th time in the chapter's 15 year history.

MSU's chapter was selected by the society's board of trustees on the basis of its activity on campus, initiative, fiscal responsibility and the high level of involvement by both its faculty and student members, according to Margaret D. Patton, who founded the campus chapter in 1970 and serves as its executive secretary.

"Only about 10 percent of the chapters nationally received this recognition," said Patton, who also is chancellor of Pi Gamma Mu's Central Region, composed of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

Lola Crosthwaite and Dr. Edward Reeves, assistant professors of sociology, are the faculty co-sponsors of Gamma Chapter.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Ten outstanding programs will be on tap for season subscribers to the 1985-86 Concert and Lecture Series of Arts in Morehead (AIM).

"The upcoming season offers a stellar lineup of attractions," said Dr. Glenn C. Rogers, series committee chairman. "In addition to four nationally known speakers, the series' programs range from a Shakespearean tragedy to a Cole Porter musical revue," he said.

The series will open on Monday, Oct. 7, with a slide-illustrated lecture on Halley's comet by Dr. Mark Littman, co-author of "Comet Halley: Once in a Lifetime" and a NASA science communicator, at 8 p.m. in Button Auditorium.

The series also includes:

Season subscription tickets to all events are available for $25 for individual and $40 for family, according to Elizabeth Paxson of Hillsboro, performing arts chairman. "Season memberships are a real bargain, as they represent a savings of nearly 50 percent over single admissions," she said.

"For those who want to encourage bringing such programming to the region in the future, we have supporting membership categories in which a portion of your contribution is tax deductible," Paxson said. These are: Contributor, $50; Patron, $75 and Benefactor, $125.

Additional information on tickets may be obtained by calling Rogers at 606-783-2788 or Paxson at 606-876-4921. Brochures on the program are available by writing Arts in "This year, for the first time, we are offering one of the programs off campus and in the community with the Oct. 16 performance by the New York Trumpet Ensemble in the United Methodist Church," Paxson pointed out.

"We really think it is a season offering something for every cultural palate, whether you are a music lover, theatre goer, looking for intellectual stimulation or just for fun," Rogers said.

Littman, who opens the series Oct. 7, is the former director of Hansen Planetarium in Salt Lake City. He is the author of several books and is a columnist for "Starwatch" magazine.

Founded in 1973 and considered the only professional ensemble of its kind in the world, the New York Trumpet Ensemble performs baroque works for multiple trumpets and has performed at the Madeira Bach Festival in Portugal as well as at Carnegie Hall.

Bell, former U.S. Secretary of Education and now a professor of educational administration at the University of Utah, chartered the National Commission of Excellence in Education, which produced the report "Nation at Risk."

Edwards, a Louisville native, is in his sixth year as host of "Morning Edition," having been co-host of "All Things Considered." He's considered responsible for helping sensitize metropolitan areas to issues affecting Middle America.

"Bright and sassy" is how the New York Post describes the musical revue "Some Like It Cole," which features 50 Cole Porter tunes performed by a trio of female vocalists with 22 dazzling costumes.

Winner of the Young Concert Artists International Auditions in 1982, cellist Brey has performed with a number of the country's major symphonies. A member of the highly acclaimed Rogeri Trio, he also won a top prize in the first Rostropovich International Cello Competition.

Acclaimed by critics from Los Angeles to New York, the Maria Benitez Dance Company has been touring for more than a decade with performances of flamenco and Spanish dance. This appearance at MSU has been made possible by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts through the Southern Arts Federation of which the Kentucky Arts Council is a member.

A former member of the U.S. House of Representatives from New York, Shirley Chisholm now holds the Purington Chair at Mount Holyoke College and is in demand as a lecturer on education, women's issues and civil rights.

A jazz/chamber wind ensemble, Mozart on Fifth plays everything from Mozart to the Beatles, from Bourbon Street to Broadway and has been hailed by critics for its "highly crafted musicianship melded with a casual 'user-friendly' atmosphere."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--An exhibit of photographs by Olivia Parker will be on display in the Gallery of Morehead State University's Claypool-Young Art Building, beginning Wednesday, Sept. 25.

A total of 42 black and white and color photographs of collages and assemblages are included in the exhibit, which may be viewed weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Oct. 19.

"We are fortunate to have the exhibit because Ms. Parker has an international reputation as a photographer and her work is very interesting and moving," said David Bartlett, MSU associate professor of photography art. "Parker's work is in numerous private and public collections all over the world and has been reproduced in a large number of books and periodicals, he noted.

Parker has published two books--"Under the Looking Glass" (1983) and "Signs of Life" (1978). She began her career as a painter but later took an interest in photography.

Born in Boston, Mass., Parker earned a B.A. degree in art history at Wellesley College and has participated in several photography workshops in the Boston area. Parker studied the view camera technique, which she uses in her still life work, with Kipton Kumler in 1975. She describes herself as a collector of objects and has said that all objects, whether dead or alive, are signs of life.

Columnist and reviewers across the country have called Parker's work "stirring" and "captivating." Some have classified her photographs as "surrealistic still lifes."

In conjunction with the photography exhibit, MSU's Camden-Carroll Library will display Parker's books in the third floor gallery.

MOREHEAD, Ky.-- Faculty and students from Morehead State University's Department of Music are singing and acting their way through Japan this month in the first international tour of "The Stephen Foster Story."

The 25-day tour began Sept. 7 in Tokyo. The 60 cast members, including nine from MSU, will give 10 performances in four major theaters throughout Japan before separating to conduct concert tours in the northern and southern parts of the country.

"Foster music is very popular in Japan," said Larry Keenan, MSU associate professor of music who has served as the associate music director and organist for the production for the past 23 years. Presenting the performances in English "shows the universality of music," said Keenan.

Keenan's wife, JoAnn, has played the role of Mrs. Foster for 16 years and is also on the MSU music faculty. She called the tour "a nice way of promoting international relations." At the close of each show the cast conducts a sing-a-long with the audience. Most Japanese know the English lyrics by heart, according to the Keenans.

"The tour of Japan is an exciting and valuable experience for our students and faculty," said Dr. Robert Burns, dean of MSU's College of Arts and Sciences. "Our music program is among the best in the country and these professional contacts help keep it strong."

The tour idea originated due to the large Japanese crowd drawn to Bardstown each summer for the drama. The cast and crew have played to 2 million people during the past 27 years. The international tour is sponsored by Kentucky Fried Chicken of Japan, Asahi Newspapers of Japan and Japan Airlines. The Bardstown set was duplicated for the tour.

MSU former student Stanton Garr plays the title role. Other MSU cast members include: Jeff Caswell, Falmouth; Rhea Spicer, Portage, Ind., and Tom Stafford, Camp Dix. MSU alumni taking part in the tour are Wayne Cusick, Bardstown; La Toye Montgomery, Louisville; and Susan Peddicord-Bottom, Williamstown.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University has instituted a campus-wide hiring freeze to help alleviate a $727,400 budget problem in the current fiscal year.

Shortfalls in tuition and housing revenue combined with increases in unavoidable fixed costs imposed by external agencies necessitated cutting the $39.2 million budget, according to Porter Dailey, MSU's vice president for administrative and fiscal services.

"The University's enrollment decline is greater than projected when the budget was prepared last April," Dailey said. "We are faced with a $360,190 shortfall in tuition revenue and $197,100 in housing revenue. The budget was based on a projected 4 percent decrease and, in reality, we have an 8.5 percent decline in students" Dailey explained. "That also affects our housing revenue."

According to Dailey, the University also must reallocate $170,100 to cover increases in premiums for Workers Compensation and general liability insurance.

"In July, we were notified by the Kentucky Department of Personnel that our Workers Compensation Insurance had increased from $45,000 to $185,000," he explained. "An increase of this magnitude certainly was not anticipated last spring," he added.

"We have several positions vacant at the moment and are identifying those jobs which can be left unfilled for the balance of the fiscal year without jeopardizing existing services," Dailey said. The vice president estimated that $477,400 could be realized through personnel vacancies.

The remaining $250,000 will come from unallotted funds in student financial aid programs. "The bulk of this is from our former Ohio waiver and MSU Grant programs, which are institutional programs and not federal. The funds represent committed financial aid to more than 200 students who either did not return or who did not enroll after receiving the award," Dailey explained.

"The student aid surplus is not from the academic scholarship and leadership awards program instituted earlier this year and will not affect existing financial aid awards to students currently enrolled," Dailey said.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--An education at Morehead State University currently costs $1,314 less per year than the national average, according to Charles Myers, MSU's associate director of admissions.

MSU's 1985-86 cost is $4,000, 25 percent less than the average cost of $5,314 at other four-year public institutions. The national average is based on a survey of 1,820 colleges and universities conducted by the College Entrance Examination Board, published in the Aug. 14 issue of "The Chronicle of Higher Education."

"Recent information in the national media concerning rising higher education costs is depressing," Myers said. "We don't want people to write off a college education because they think it has gotten too expensive."

A comparison of costs at MSU and other institutions indicates that MSU's policy of providing affordable quality shows that you can still get your money's worth when it comes to an education," he said.

The national average for tuition and fees is $1,242 for in-state undergraduates attending public institutions while tuition and fees at private institutions cost $5,418, according to the survey. MSU's tuition and fees are $974, Myers said.

(Transportation, books and personal expenses were not included in this portion of the report.) Colorado School of Mines, Golden, Colo., will top public institutions at $6,300.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Area hospitals can find the latest medical information with speed and ease now with the help of the Eastern Kentucky Health Science Information Network (EKHSIN), headquartered at Morehead State University.

"It's a service that not too many people are aware of yet," said Bonnie McNeely, coordinator.

The consortium of health sciences libraries includes MSU's Camden-Carroll Library which serves as leader and five regional hospitals: Highlands Regional Medical Center, Prestonsburg; Humana-Louisa Hospital, Louisa; Methodist Hospital of Kentucky, Pikeville; Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin, and Williamson Appalachian Regional Hospital, South Williamson.

Established in October 1983, EKHSIN evolved from a grant-funded Health Information Library Program at the University of Kentucky's Medical Center Library.

As coordinator of the service, McNeely travels to each of the member hospitals periodically, providing professional development and library skills training to the hospital personnel.

Bonnie McNeely

In addition to this technical training for personnel, MSU's EKHSIN office also catalogs library materials, aids in answering reference questions with a computerized bibliographic retrieval system, assists in record maintenance, provides additional continuing education services and serves as a consultant to those libraries wishing for accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

"We receive requests for all sorts of information in relation to the hospital/medical field," said McNeely. Once, a hospital was involved in a court case and needed an oversized picture of the arm, showing muscles, blood vessels and other information. Another time, a teacher wanted to know how to handle students' epileptic seizures. "We were able to help in both instances," McNeely said.

Currently EKHSIN is assisting in cataloging of materials for the Nursing Inservice Departments at the Methodist Hospital of Kentucky and Williamson Appalachian Regional Hospital. Recently completed projects have included organizing the journal collection at Our Lady of the Way for more efficient usage and aiding Highlands Regional with relocating its journal collection to a renovated area.

MSU contributes approximately $4,500 annually to this project and each member hospital contributes about $3,000 each year, according to McNeely. "There's no federal money involved now. This is a good example of a program, initiated with federal funds, that is now an independent, self-standing project," she said.

Any hospital interested in joining the EKHSIN may contact Larry Besant, libraries director, Morehead State University, Morehead, KY 40351, (606) 783-2143.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--If you are a typical science fantasy fan, you can't resist a good story about exploding Tookahs and clever Kapoorians.

Well, get ready. A great one is on the way with some technowitches murderous slimies and the ever-popular Mole People tossed in for extra fun.

All of these and more are included in "Ruby," a National Public Radio presentation to air this fall on WMKY FM 90.3, Public Radio from Morehead State University, according to Judy Flavell, WMKY's acting director of promotion and development.

"Ruby," the adventures of a 21st-century female detective, will be broadcast at 12:30 p.m. each Tuesday for 13 weeks beginning Oct. 1, Flavell said.

The title character is a beautiful private eye living on the planet Summa Nulla at the crossroads of the galaxy. The program is a parody of tough guy detective stories and science fiction epics, according to Flavell.

"Ruby" is the most recent in a series of NPR dramas and adventures broadcast by WMKY, she said.
