PICTURE STORY: MSU's Handicapped Awareness Day

In 1975, Congress passed the "Education for All Handicapped Children Act." In view of the 10th anniversary of its passage, Morehead State University's Student Council for Exceptional Children Chapter conducted "Handicapped Awareness Day" on Tuesday, Oct. 29. As part of the observance, University officials, faculty and students adopted handicaps to increase their understanding of the disabled and their problems.

Cutlines:

1. Most of us take walking down the street for granted. Clyde I. James, left, MSU coordinator for Greek affairs and student organizations, finds that it isn't as easy for those who can not see. Assisting him is Louisa sophomore Katsumi Wellman.
2. Normally Troy Meadows, Morehead sophomore, can race to his classes on foot without obstacles, but on "Handicapped Awareness Day" he discovered the challenges met daily by students who make their way to classes in wheelchairs.
3. Again just stepping up on a curb seems so very simple to most of us, but Janet Janszen, Westchester, Ohio, junior, finds out that it is a major challenge to the visually-impaired. Helping her is Robin Werner, Portsmouth, Ohio, sophomore, who coordinated the day's activities.
4. Giving dictation to his administrative secretary Ruth Davis, Richard Baxter, MSU's executive assistant to the president, finds being in a wheelchair to be confining. "It was a real eye-opener for me," he said. "I think I have more of an appreciation for what our handicapped students face."

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Undaunted by fog or early morning chill, members of the Morehead State University equestrian team practice at 6 a.m. nearly every day in hopes of winning a second national championship.

In 1984, the MSU Intercollegiate Show Team won the National Stockseat Team Championship and team member David Davis of Hardinsburg, Ind., was the 1985 High Point Stockseat Champion.

"We are well on our way to another championship," said Tammy McMillan, the team's coach and an instructor for MSU's horsemanship program.

MSU won its first show of the season Oct. 12 at Hiwassee College in Tennessee. That competition was the first of ten horse shows MSU will enter this season to qualify for the national championship to be held May 2-3 in Charlottesville, Va.

"It's important to get as many points as possible right now because only the team which accumulates the most points in each region gets to go to the nationals," McMillan explained.

The equestrian team is sponsored by MSU's horsemanship program which trains students for careers as farm managers, trainers, breeding technicians, teachers and riding instructors. In addition to horse show competition, the program offers courses in horse nutrition, breeding, farm records, horseshoeing, rider training and other equine-related subjects.

A breeding facility provides students with experience in breeding procedures such as artificial insemination and semen evaluation.

The team practices at MSU's Derrickson Agricultural Complex which features a 325-acre farm; a 2,000-seat, heated, indoor arena; an an outdoor show ring.

According to McMillan, the early morning hours are the only time the 30-member squad and coach can get together.

"We have to practice before classes begin or we would never find a time that's right for everybody," McMillan said.

"But nobody seems to mind," she added. "We don't have any trouble getting up and going that early because we are all really excited about this season."

Nov. 2, 1985

MOREHEAD, Ky.--"One reason we are so easily duped and so susceptible to Madison Avenue propaganda is because we just don't know how to think."

Those are the words of Dr. Stephen S. Young, Morehead State University associate professor of education, who says educators should teach students "how to think" not "what to think."

"Current education practices do not teach mental discipline but emphasize memorization," he said. "Teachers don't teach students how to process and use information."

Young has taken his theory to the classroom. He is currently teaching a class of Rowan County Middle School seventh and eighth grade students the techniques of critical thinking, the term he uses to describe "the next great wave in education."

"People - especially kids - are likely to react off the cuff without analyzing the components of an issue," he said. "They make up their minds about things based on their emotions. At some point they need to consider all the options before they act."

"For example, television has convinced us that a certain brand of aspirin is better than other brands although the Food and Drug Administration requires all aspirin to be exactly the same," he said. "But people will react to the emotional appeal of the commercial anyway."

Young
2-2-2-2-2

One of the ways Young's middle school students learn the procedures of critical thinking is by playing the board game "Clue."

"That is a good game to use to teach the step by step process involved in analysis," Young explained. "If you react emotionally, you lose the game."

Many of Young's lesson plans for the class are based on a curriculum package developed by Edward de Bono, one of the pioneers of the critical thinking movement.

"De Bono says there is an intelligence trap," Young said. Intelligent people are more likely to make snap judgments because they are more confident of their mental processes. Intelligent people then are able to gather data to build a strong case to back up their position."

To help his students avoid making quick, emotional judgments, Young suggest they use a critical thinking tool called PMI, an acronym for "pluses, minuses and interesting points."

"With PMI, you do not make any judgement for three minutes," Young said. "First, you make a list of positive or plus points about the issue. Then, you make a minus list. After that, you make a list of things not good or bad but interesting."

A judgment based on a review of the list is often more valid than a quick decision, Young said.

Young hopes that his experience with the middle school class will encourage other teachers to become interested in the critical thinking theory.

Young
3-3-3-3-3-3

"I would like to get a lot of teachers excited about this," he said. "The last wave in education was computers. I believe the next great wave will be critical thinking instruction."

Young said he has conducted critical thinking workshops with teachers in Greenup County and that educators in Rowan County "have been very cooperative and receptive to the idea."

"I would really like to see this catch on," he said. "I think education in general needs a radical revision in curriculum. We need to teach children how to make decisions. We need to teach them how to think."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University's Department of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences will offer a workshop for nurses on follow-up procedures for childbearing women and their families from 4 to 8:50 p.m. Monday, Nov. 14, in Reed Hall 237.

Linda McNabb, MSU clinical instructor of nursing and obstetric unit manager at Mary Chiles Hospital, Mt. Sterling, will conduct the workshop.

The workshop will provide information on the techniques of assessment and care of high-risk childbearing women and their families, according to Pauline Ramey, MSU coordinator of continuing education for nursing.

"The objective of the seminar is to aid nurses employed in settings which provide family-oriented care," Ramey said.

Specific topics will include identification of community resources, development of a care plan, recognition of risk factors and self-prejudices of nurses.

Registered nurses will receive four contact hours credit from MSU for participating in the workshop, which is approved by the Kentucky Board of Nursing. Registered nurses are asked to present their nursing licenses and Social Security numbers in order to receive continuing education credit. Participants other than registered nurses will receive MSU continuing education units.

The fee is $20 and includes dinner. Additional information may be obtained by calling (606) 783-2635 or 783-2632.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Bob Edwards, host of National Public Radio's Morning Edition will speak at Morehead State University Tuesday, Nov. 12, at 8 p.m. in Button Auditorium.

His campus appearance is part of Arts in Morehead (AIM) 1985-86 Concert and Lecture Series. Admission will be by season ticket or by general admission tickets which will be available at the door for $5 each. MSU students with valid I.D. cards will be admitted free.

Morning Edition is aired over WMKY, FM 90, public radio from Morehead State University, weekdays at 8 p.m. While at MSU, Edwards will co-host WMKY's New Day with Gail Wilson on Wednesday, Nov. 13. New Day airs from 6 to 8 a.m. and Edwards will appear on the 7 to 8 a.m. segment.

Edwards, a native of Louisville, has hosted Morning Edition since its first broadcast in November 1979. In its first year, the daily news program won a George Polk Award and an Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Award. It has continued to capture honors for excellence in broadcast journalism as has Edwards himself.

When Edwards won the 1984 Edward R. Murrow Award for "outstanding contributions to public radio," Chairman of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting Board of Directors Sharon Percy Rockefeller said, "Bob comes as close as anyone in the business-commercial or public-to being a young Ed Murrow."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--More than 800 high school students are expected to visit Morehead State University for World of Technology Day on Tuesday, Nov. 12.

MSU's College of Applied Sciences and Technology sponsors the annual World of Technology exhibition for high school juniors and seniors, according to Wes Blakely, chair of the exhibition and MSU's MAPCO Chair in Mining Technology.

"The purpose of the exhibition is to acquaint regional students with the various aspects of technology and to interest them in coming to MSU to study in those areas," Blakely said.

High school students, teachers, principals and counselors in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia will participate in the event, he said.

Exhibitions in agriculture, home economics, industrial education and nursing will be presented from 9 a.m. to noon in Reed Hall and Lloyd Cassity Building. MSU students will serve as guides for the high school groups, Blakely said.

The demonstrations will include displays in horsemanship, agribusiness, animal science, horticulture, agronomy, veterinarian technology, mining, textiles, food service, interior design, construction, graphic arts, electricity, electronics, robotics, machine shop, milling, manufacturing, plastics, mechanics, woodworking and welding as well as a fashion show and a film on coal mining techniques.

More information on World of Technology Day may be obtained by calling Blakely at (606) 783-2633 or Dr. Lawrence McWard at (606) 783-2421.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--William H. Redwine, Morehead State University's director of development, is the subject of an article in the Fall 1985 issue of The Delta of Sigma Nu, a quarterly international publication.

The article on the role of advisers for collegiate fraternities profiles Redwine's efforts and philosophy as adviser for MSU's Theta Tau Chapter of Sigma Nu. Sharing the spotlight on Sigma Nu advisers with Redwine is Gene Peery, adviser for Epsilon Xi Chapter, Sigma Nu, at the University of Mississippi.

The Delta is distributed to all alumni and active members of Sigma Nu.

Redwine, a 1979 graduate of Morehead State with a B.A. degree in government and public affairs, has served as adviser for his fraternity since 1980. While an undergraduate, he held numerous offices in it as well.

A former instructor/counselor with Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program, Redwine assumed the development post at MSU in 1981.

A native of Elliott County, he is the son of William R. and Mattie H. Redwine of Sandy Hook. Named an "Outstanding Young Man" in 1980, Redwine is a past master of Hepburn Lodge 576 and a noble in the El Hasa Shrine.

He and his wife, the former Susette Dalton, are the parents of a son.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University's Chamber Singers have been invited to perform at New York City's historic Carnegie Hall on April 13.

The 21-member MSU chorus will join four other choral groups and the American Symphony Orchestra for the Carnegie Hall performance, one of a series of concerts featuring student performers.

"This series is designed to bring together talented young musicians from various parts of the country for exceptional musical experiences," said James Ross Beane, director of MSU's Chamber Singers and coordinator of MSU's voice and choral studies.

The Carnegie Hall invitation is the result of MSU's "reputation for outstanding quality" in its music program, said Dr. Robert L. Burns, dean of MSU's College of Arts and Sciences.

"It is good to know that our reputation and talent can lead to this kind of national opportunity. The faculty and students involved with the Chamber Singers have worked hard for years to build their program to a very professional level," Dr. Burns said.

MSU's Chamber Singers will join the Memphis State University Chorus, the University of Nebraska Chorus, the Mars Hill College Choir and the Cincinnati Boy Choir to perform Carl Nielsen's "Hymus Amoris" and Kodaly's "Te Deum." Also on the program will be Greek piano prodigy Dimitris Squoros, who will perform Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

Our Carnegie Hall appearance will be an excellent learning experience and an exciting challenge for the students involved. College students seldom are offered the chance to sing with a major symphony in one of the world's most glamorous music halls," Beane said.

In addition to the Carnegie Hall appearance, each choral group will give a 15-minute concert for the other groups in St. Bartholomew's Church on Madison Avenue.

"We look forward to the opportunity to meet the other performers and to work with them on such an ambitious project," Beane said.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University will conduct pre-registration for its Spring Semester Monday through Friday, Nov. 18-22.

Course schedules with registration procedures are available from academic advisers, according to Gene Ranvier, MSU registrar. "A visit with his or her academic adviser to prepare a trial schedule is the student's first step in the pre-registration process," Ranvier said.

Students without advisers should check with the dean of their college or the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Once a trial schedule has been made out, students then go to the office of their major department where registrations will be processed from 8 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. each day.

Regular registration for the Spring Semester is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 13-14. Classes begin Wednesday, Jan. 15. The semester ends with commencement Saturday, May 17.

Additional information on pre-registration for Morehead State's Spring Semester may be obtained by calling the Office of the Registrar (606) 783-2008.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--A physical science textbook by two Morehead State University scientists is now in its fourth printing by Wm. C. Brown Publishers.

Dr. Charles Payne, retired dean of the former School of Science and Mathematics, and Dr. William R. Falls, professor of science, are the co-authors of "Physical Science: Principles and Applications."

According to Dr. Falls, more than 55,000 copies of the book have been sold since the first edition was published in 1974. He also estimated that at one point 170 colleges and universities were using the text.

The book covers traditional topics such as Newton's law of motion to current subjects ranging from acid rain and the eruptions of Mt. St. Helens. The more than 700-page volume also comes with an instructor's manual and 32 transparencies to illustrate the lectures.

The text has received praise from other physical science educators, including this from Dr. Aaron W. Todd of Middle Tennessee State University:

"No other physical science text does as good a job of relating the science to everyday phenomenon and showing the applications of basic science...."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--After a 15-year history of deficiency, better days are ahead for science and technology in Kentucky.

That was the message of hope that Harry Snyder, executive director of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education, brought members of the Kentucky Academy of Science (KAS) at its 71st annual meeting last weekend (Nov. 8-9) at Morehead State University.

More than 300 scientists from educational institutions, business and industry attended the two-day meeting, according to Dr. Joe Winstead of Western Kentucky University, KAS president.

Serving as arrangements chairman was Dr. John C. Philley, chair of MSU's Department of Physical Sciences and a former KAS president. This was the fourth time Morehead State has hosted the annual meeting.

Snyder, who was the Friday night awards banquet speaker, reported that the state is last in its science and technology potential and performance. "It has been last or near to last for the past 15 years. No matter how you look at it, in science and technology, ours is truly a history of deficiency."

After painting a dismal picture of those deficiencies, Snyder told the KAS that the Council's Strategic Plan for Higher Education which had been approved earlier that day offered more hope for a new day in higher education than ever before.

Snyder then outlined some of the things the plan could mean to the Academy "if we work together to make it happen." Among these were:

--Enough funds, from bond issues and other innovative processes, to catch up in research and instructional equipment.

--A research and development committee to help the state obtain maximum benefits from the research and services of its colleges and universities.

--A process to monitor research equipment against obsolescence.

Saying he had saved the best for last, Snyder announced that the Council was behind the KAS in its efforts to obtain an Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (EPSCor) Grant and had included in the agency's budget request $600,000 for EPSCor in each year of the biennium.

Earlier in the evening, Dr. Manuel Schwartz of the University of Louisville, chair of the KAS board of directors, presented the awards for excellence in science.

Named as Kentucky's Distinguished Scientist was Dr. J.G. Rodriguez of the University of Kentucky's Department of Entomology and one of the foremost authorities on mites.

Dr. Dwight M. Lindsay of Georgetown College was named Outstanding Science Teacher at the College or University Level.

Receiving the Outstanding Science Teacher at the Secondary School Level was Bradley A. Matthews of Giens Development Center, who serves the Jefferson County Schools as resource science teacher for staff development.

The academy also honored Herbert Leopold, retired associate professor of chemistry at Western Kentucky, for his service as director of the Kentucky Junior Academy of Science since 1975.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Writer Bobbie Ann Mason will represent Morehead State University at the Kentucky Book Fair on Saturday, Nov. 23, in Frankfort.

The book fair will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Kentucky Department for Library and Archives. Approximately 80 writers--many of them sponsored by Kentucky's colleges and universities--will attend the fair, according to Dr. Eugene Young, MSU associate professor of English and coordinator of MSU's participation in the fair.

"MSU is proud to be associated with Bobbie Ann Mason, one of the nation's most respected writers," Dr. Young said.

The book fair is a charitable event held to aid Kentucky's writers and libraries. During the fair, the writers will be available to talk with visitors and to sign copies of the books on sale at the fair.

Mason, a native of Mayfield, sets most of her fiction in Western Kentucky. Her collection of short stories, "Shiloh and Other Stories," won the Hemingway Award for most distinguished first-published work of fiction in 1982 and was nominated for the National Book Critic's Circle Award for Fiction, the American Book Award for Fiction and the PEN Faulkner Award.

Recently, she published her first novel, "In Country," a Book-of-the-Month Club selection.

Additional information on the Kentucky Book Fair may be obtained by calling Dr. Young at (606) 783-2201.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Arts in Morehead (AIM) will present "Some Like It Cole," a musical revue based on the music of Cole Porter, at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 21, in Breckinridge Auditorium on Morehead State University's campus.

Admission will be by AIM Concert and Lecture Series season membership or general admission ticket which can be purchased at the door for $5 for adults. MSU students with valid I.D. cards will be admitted free.

"Bright and sassy" is how the New York Post described the cabaret-style show highlighted by 50 of Cole Porter's tunes from "I Get a Kick Out of You" to "Count Your Blessings."

A 1940 nightclub act serves as the backdrop for the show which features a trio of female vocalists and 22 dazzling costumes.

AIM is a cooperative effort between Morehead State University and the Morehead-Rowan County Arts Council, Inc.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --The Morehead State University Orchestra will make its debut Sunday, Nov. 17, at 8:15 p.m. in Duncan Recital Hall.

Comprised of MSU music faculty and students, as well as community musicians, the 42-member orchestra will present a program of works by Beethoven, Bach, Vaughn Williams and others.

James Ross Beane, associate professor, will be the conductor, assisted by Leo Blair, associate professor, and Suanne Blair, assistant professor.

"Beane is an outstanding conductor as well as a superb musician," said Dr. Chris Gallaher, chair of MSU's Department of Music. "Add to these qualities, his leadership abilities and the end result is a person who is the perfect 'synthesizer' for this ensemble," Dr. Gallaher added.

Orchestra members include:

Oboe: Etsuyo Tsuchiya, Japan sophomore, and David Anderson, assistant professor.

Clarinet: Christine Affinito, Dresden, Ohio, sophomore, and Craig Doolin, Ashland senior.

Bassoon: Dr. Frederick Mueller, professor, and Anna Spotts, Lexington sophomore.

Trumpet: Harper Baugh, Louisville senior, and Tony Sparks, Maysville junior.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) will be the topic for a two-hour seminar at Morehead State University on Wednesday, Nov. 20, in the Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center, beginning at 10:20 a.m.

Sponsored by MSU's Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, honor society for social science students, the seminar will feature two guest speakers, according to Vicki Woodward, Morehead senior and seminar committee chairperson.

Dr. Edward Elliott, pathologist and director of health professions education at St. Claire Medical Center, will discuss how AIDS affects the human body.

Michael Ritchie of the Cincinnati Health Department will discuss the development of the disease and the various support services now available to AIDS victims. Ritchie is administrative director of the Sexually Transmitted Diseases Center for the health department.

The sessions are open to the public, Woodward said.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University's Department of Art will present the second annual Beaux-Arts Ball from 8 p.m. to midnight on Friday, Nov. 22, in Claypool-Young Art Building.

"It's a great party and the proceeds from the ball go to our MSU Freshman Art Scholarship Fund," said Tom Sternal, department chair.

The event also includes a silent auction of six pieces of art by regional artists, refreshments and music by Jay Flippin's Dance Band, Sternal said. "We'll have a little bit of everything as far as dance music goes, from music of the 1940s to contemporary rock," he added.

"We hope to see participation not just from the faculty and staff, but students and residents of the region," Sternal said. "I'm extremely pleased that Dr. and Mrs. Ewell Scott of Morehead have agreed to be chairpersons for the event which serves to help our students," he noted.

Ticket contributions will be $12.50 per person for adults and $3.50 for MSU students. Reservations may be made by calling MSU's art offices at (606) 783-2766 or the Scotts at (606) 784-8339.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University will welcome prospective students to its campus Saturday, Nov. 23, for an open house reception.

The open house is designed to introduce the students to the University and to answer questions they may have about studies, finances and social life, according to Al Bowen, MSU director of admissions.

The open house will begin with coffee and doughnuts at 8:30 a.m. in Adron Doran University Center. The reception will include welcoming remarks by MSU administration and faculty representatives. Faculty members will be available to answer questions on specific areas of study. Bus and walking tours of the campus will be conducted from 11:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. Lunch will follow.

Saturday's open house is the second of five scheduled for 1985-86. Dates for the other receptions--also to be held on Saturdays--are March 1 and 22 and April 19.

Information on MSU open house receptions may be obtained by calling toll-free 1-800-262-7474 (in-state) or 1-800-354-2090 (out-of-state).

MOREHEAD, Ky.--The varied educational opportunities offered by Morehead State University's Appalachian Adult Learning Center are available to all residents of the region, according to Bonnie Burrell, director.

The Center provides adults age 16 and older with materials and instruction to develop reading, writing and mathematical skills through several programs, said Burrell.

A practice General Educational Development (GED) test is available to adults working on high school diploma equivalency certificates. It covers the same subject areas as the real test, but is half as long. "The practice exam is a good indicator of how the student will perform on the GED itself," Burrell said.

Educational levels can be determined through the Test for Adult Basic Education (TABE), a diagnostic test measuring reading, English and mathematical ability and allowing instructors to identify student strengths and weaknesses. For those reading below the fifth grade level, the Center offers several programs for reading improvement, Burrell said.

Other basic skills development services include the Out-of-School Youth Program, Sentenced to Read Program and the newly-funded Adult Literacy Program, all funded by the federal Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA).

The Out-of-School Youth Program, taught by Debbie Law at the Rowan County Senior High School, concentrates on developing educational skills for employment. Students then attend sessions at the Center for about six hours a week and learn how to write business letters, fill out job applications and other job related skills.

Serving youth ages 16 to 21 referred to the program by the court, the Sentenced to Read Program also works on basic skills of its participants. Betty Adams is the instructor.

Scheduled to begin soon, the Adult Literacy Program is designed for adults needing basic educational skill development. "Clients using this program to prepare for the GED will have the $10 test fee waived," Burrell said.

The Center also works closely with the Rowan County Volunteer Literacy Program coordinated by Ruth Bradley of Morehead in which tutors at community sites are matched to students and with the Paraprofessional Home Instructors Program. The latter, Burrell said, involves 14 instructors who work in nine counties taking basic skill development programs to homebound persons.

Information on the Appalachian Adult Learning Center and its varied programs is available by calling (606) 783-2871. The center is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday and from 1 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Katherine K. Sohn of Pikeville has been appointed regional coordinator of the Appalachian Graduate Consortium, a cooperative program between Morehead State University and Pikeville College.

Her responsibilities will include coordinating graduate classes in the region and assisting graduate students with registration, according to Dr. Robert Morasky, dean of MSU's Office of Graduate and Special Academic Programs.

The new coordinator and Dr. Morasky will be honored with a reception Thursday, Nov. 21, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in Armington Science Center at the college.

"The event is designed to introduce both Ms. Sohn and Dr. Morasky to Pikeville area residents and the region's graduate students in particular," said George Eyster, director of MSU's extended campus programs. "It is also an opportunity for us to discuss with residents the needs of the area as far as graduate-level education is concerned," Eyster added.

The Consortium Office will be open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Students with questions related to graduate programs may call the office at 432-9212 or MSU toll-free at 1-800-354-2090.

A resident of Pikeville since 1975, Sohn earned the B.A. degree from St. Joseph College and a Master of Education degree in counseling at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro.

BY SHELLEY TOBERGTA
MSU Student Journalist

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Although attending school in a foreign country can be scary at times, foreign students attending Morehead State University seem to be adjusting well with help from MSU's International Student Program.

Twenty countries are represented in MSU's foreign student population, with about 100 foreign students on campus, according to Dr. Perry LeRoy, professor of history, who also serves as international student adviser.

LeRoy believes there are two main reasons why foreign students choose to attend MSU. One reason is that their friends, who have attended MSU, encourage them to come here too. The other reason is that they see the brochures advertising MSU which are sent to their embassies.

LeRoy travels a lot and has found that foreigners have a "great desire to come to America to learn."

Several foreign students cited MSU's beautiful campus, size and better programs in their fields as definite pluses in attending MSU.

Etsuyo Tsuchiya, a sophomore in the two-year University Studies program, is from Hamamatsu, "a big, crowded industrialized city on the coastline of Japan."

foreign students

"At first I was surprised," said Tsuchiya. "I was used to living in a big city in Japan, but I really like the surroundings here. I think it's a very beautiful campus."

The 20-year-old first attended a smaller two-year school in Kentucky, but then visited MSU. She liked the campus, thought it had a better music program and she transferred.

Tsuchiya said the cost of living is less expensive here compared to Tokyo, where she would have gone to school. This makes it easier for her parents, she noted.

Also, she said, there are no dorms in Tokyo. "Students have to rent apartments, so they can't make as many friends because they live by themselves. I like dorms a lot," said Tsuchiya.

Tsuchiya's parents were opposed to her going to school in the United States because they thought it might be dangerous, but she said, "they are happy now because I'm doing real well here."

"I was very embarrassed when I first came here," Tsuchiya said. "Japanese girls are real conservative and few girls are eager to study. They prefer marriage instead, and boys like girls to be that way. Here, girls are as active as boys and they say what they want. That's one of the reasons I came to the United States. I didn't want to be too conservative," she said.

Sinsook Chirachant, a freshman majoring in data processing, is from Bangkok, Thailand. The 26-year-old transferred from a school in North Carolina.

"MSU is bigger, the teachers and the way they teach are more interesting and the computer center is better," said Chirachant.

foreign students

Chirachant feels MSU's campus is beautiful and good for studying because of its quiet surroundings. "It keeps me here studying," she said.

There's not much difference between colleges here and colleges in Thailand, she said, but she came to the United States because she "wanted to see more of the world."

After graduating, Chirachant plans to go back to Thailand to work. She said her family likes the idea of her attending school in the United States, but they miss her.

Dyi Hsia, a graduate student in radio-television, is from Taiwan, where he had been a newspaper investigative reporter for the past six years.

The 30-year-old said he needed time to relax, so he decided to come back to school. His best friend graduated from MSU, so he decided to come here. He also chose MSU because of its "beautiful campus and relaxing atmosphere," ideal for his purpose of returning to school.

Foreign students gain admission to MSU by submitting transcripts, an affidavit of support and by taking various tests, such as the TOEFL, a Test of English as a Foreign Language, according to LeRoy.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--A reception for area graduate students will be held Monday, Nov. 25, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the Martin Student Center at Prestonsburg Community College.

The reception is designed to provide students with an opportunity to meet and talk with Dr. Robert L. Morasky, Morehead State University's new dean of graduate and special programs.

The reception is sponsored by MSU's Office of Extended Campus Programs and its regional coordinator James Ratcliff of PCC.

Dr. Morasky, who joined MSU's administrative ranks in September, previously was head of the Psychology Department at Montana State University at Bozeman. He earned his Ph.D. degree in psychology from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

A former public school teacher, the MSU dean also was chairman of the Psychology Department at State University of New York-Plattsburgh and has been a visiting scholar at Kumamoto National University in Japan.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Deborah A. Atkinson, acting director of Computing Services at Morehead State University, has been appointed to the post full-time.

Her promotion, effective Nov. 1, was announced by Porter Dailey, MSU's vice president for administrative and fiscal services.

As director, she will be responsible for managing and coordinating the computing resources serving the University's instructional, research and administrative needs.

"Ms. Atkinson has been serving in the post since May and we know how extremely fortunate Morehead State is to have someone of her abilities on the staff," Dailey said.

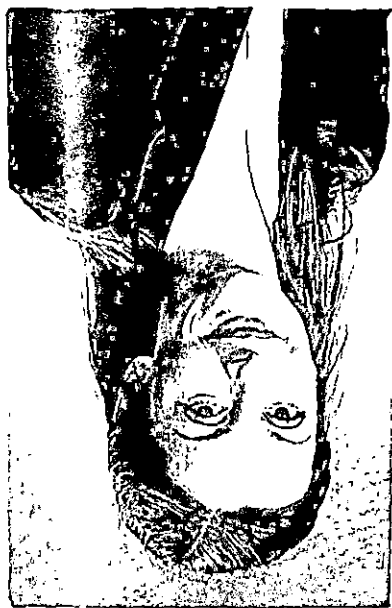

"We had some excellent candidates from our national search for the director, but Ms. Atkinson's credentials were equally outstanding," he added.

A graduate of Columbia (Mo.) College, Atkinson came to MSU in 1982 as a systems analyst and shortly afterwards was named data base manager. Prior to joining MSU's staff, she was director of computer services at Columbia College.

Ms. Atkinson, who resides in Morehead, is treasurer of the National AIMS User Group and serves on the board of directors of ByteBaack, a software corporation.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Burns of Shelbyville, Ind.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University junior David Davis has won a free clinic with nationally known horse trainers Marty and Jerry Stanford of Bureleson, Texas, through a national contest sponsored by Strongid Paste Wormer.

Davis, son of Mary K. and David Davis of Hardinsburg, Ind., is an animal science major and member of MSU's equestrian team. He won the contest by writing an essay, in 50 words or less, telling why he would like to win a free day-long clinic with a champion trainer.

"I was tickled to death," said David. "It's like a dream come true. I've read about them (the Stanford's) all my life. I was bound and determined to meet them."

MSU's Equestrian Club will be the host of the clinic to be held Dec. 7 at the MSU Agricultural Complex. University horses will be used for the demonstrations, according to Tammy McMillan, MSU instructor of horsemanship.

The topic of the day-long lecture/demonstration will be training Western pleasure horses. The clinic will be free and open to the public.

Additional information on the clinic is available from MSU's Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources, 330 Reed Hall, (606) 783-2662.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Eight institutional grants totaling nearly $22,800 have been awarded for research at Morehead State University.

The awards, designed to stimulate campus research by helping defray project costs, were announced by Dr. Roberta T. Anderson, MSU's vice president for academic affairs.

The 1985-86 MSU Research Grant recipients are:

Dr. David Saxon, professor of biology, $4,360, for a study, "Genetic Susceptibility to Atherosclerosis in Relation to Mobilization of Arachidonic Acid in Platelets Exposed to Thrombin and Calcium Ionophore."

Dr. Craig T. Van Bell, assistant professor of biology, $3,520, for "Development and Evolution of Ciliated Protozoa."

Dr. David Magrane, professor of biology, $3,080, for "The Effect of High Dietary Fat and Caloric Restriction on Rat Mammary Tumorigenesis Following Induction by 7, 12 Dimethylbenz (a) anthracene."

Dr. Bruce A. Mattingly, associate professor of psychology, $3,065, for "Behavioral and Biochemical Effects of Repeated Apomorphine Treatments."

Dr. David McNeely, assistant professor of biology, $2,905, for "Ecological Inter-actions of Benthic Fishes and Crayfishes in Appalachian Streams."

Dr. Robert Prickett, assistant professor of education, $2,759, for "Specific Competencies Needed by the Eastern Kentucky School Administrator."

Research Grants
2-2-2-2-2-2

Philip Kenkel, agri-business specialist with Appalachian Development Center, $2,194, for "Farming Systems Research for the Eastern Kentucky Region."

Dr. Edward B. Reeves, assistant professor of sociology, $900, for "Sociological Analysis of Eastern Kentucky Farming Systems."

Proposals for specific research projects with potential for adding to the current pool of knowledge are solicited by MSU's Research and Patent Committee, which reviews them under the University's research guidelines and makes funding recommendations to the vice president for academic affairs.

The committee includes six faculty members--two from each college--elected annually by the Faculty Senate, three full-time graduate students--one from each college--and the director of the Office of Research, Grants and Contracts, who serves as committee chairperson.

Additional information on institutional research grants may be obtained from Carole Morella, chairperson of MSU's Research and Patent Committee, Office of Research and Contracts.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--The Morehead State University Planetarium will present eight showings of its annual Christmas program, "The Star of Bethlehem," during the first two weeks of December.

The program will be shown daily Monday through Thursday, Dec. 2-5 and Dec. 9-12. The Monday/Wednesday programs will be presented at 7:30 p.m. with the Tuesday/Thursday shows at 4:10 p.m.

"The program looks at various possibilities for the Christmas Star and it also studies the origin of many Christmas traditions," said Dr. John C. Philley, chair of the Department of Physical Sciences.

Dr. Philley said that persons who wish to attend should make reservations as early as possible due to the limited seating capacity of the Planetarium and the popularity of the Christmas program.

The Planetarium is located at Lappin Hall 212. The program is free and open to the public.

Reservations and additional information may be obtained by calling (606) 783-2914.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University's Adron Doran University Center will soon be filled with the "Songs of Christmas."

"Songs of Christmas" is the theme for the University's annual floral design show of exhibits by students taught by Martha Norris, associate professor of agriculture.

Located in the Gold Room, ADUC, the exhibit will be open to the public from 3 to 7:30 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 2.

There will be 66 fresh and silk floral arrangements inspired by traditional carols as well as songs of the season, according to Norris, who has taught floral design classes at MSU for nine years.

Awards will be given in the following categories: Tri-color, Creativity and Best-in-Show. The Tri-color Award is for the most original display. A panel of four judges, headed by Mrs. Doris Galloway of Ashland, will select the award-winning exhibits.

"The show is an attempt to capture the spirit of Christmas through the beauty of floral design," said Norris.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University has tied with the University of Kentucky for the honor of "Outstanding Phi Delta Kappa Chapter" in the state of Kentucky.

MSU received its certificate of recognition at the 40th Biennial Council of PDK, international professional fraternity for educators, which met earlier this month in Toronto, Canada.

The award recognizes the chapter's efforts in promoting education in Eastern Kentucky last year, according to Dr. Kent Freeland, MSU professor of education and the 1984-85 chapter president.

Points are earned by chapters for involvement in research, service and scholarship activities, Dr. Freeland said. "We were active in all three areas," he added.

For the past two years, MSU's Phi Delta Kappa Chapter, which is composed public school and university teachers and administrators, has made scholarship awards to public school and university students, he explained.

"The honor that Morehead State's Phi Delta Kappa Chapter has received not only reflects on the faculty, but also speaks volumes for the University's efforts to serve the education needs of Eastern Kentucky," Dr. Roberta T. Anderson, MSU vice president for academic affairs, said. "I commend the members for their efforts," she added.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--"I'm a spinner of yarn and yarns," Granny Toothman tells visitors to Morehead State University's Folk Art Gallery as she pedals her 150-year-old saxony spinning wheel to a steady, mesmerizing hum.

Since September, Granny--a name she encourages--has been the gallery's weaver/spinner in residence, storyteller and star attraction. Her demonstrations in traditional crafts often attract admiring crowds, but it is her flair for storytelling that keeps them gathered near her wheel, sometimes for hours at a stretch.

Most of Granny's stories are autobiographical. She was born Lyndall Toothman 75 years ago in Williamsburg, W.Va., where she lived in a log cabin until she was 20 making clothes, soap, toys and other items for her family. The hardships of the Depression further increased her knowledge of useful crafts. "We had to make everything just to get by," she said.

In the 1940s she taught weaving at a women's prison in Alderson, W.Va., where one of her students was "Axis Sally," the Nazi war criminal. "She was an old bat. A good weaver, but she never saw any good in anything," Granny said.

After 13 years with her prison job--and at an age when most people are more inclined toward dreams of retirement than adventure--Granny swapped her furniture for a pick-up truck and trailer and worked her way west picking cherries, apples and hops.

In the 1950s, Granny worked at amusement parks such as Knotts Berry Farm in California and Old Tucson in Arizona, where she gave demonstrations. "At Old Tuscon, they were filming the TV series 'High Chapparal,' and it was my job to entertain tourists between scenes," she said.

It was during one of those breaks in filming that Granny's career took another interesting turn. A woman watching Granny work challenged her to spin the hair of the woman's three Samoyed dogs into yarn. "I did it and we got 13 pounds of yarn from those dogs. It only takes about two pounds for a sweater," Granny said.

Since then, Granny has entertained thousands of amusement park, festival and fair visitors from California and Florida by spinning almost any fiber they can suggest. She has spun the hair from more than 100 breeds of dogs, buffalo fur, yucca plants, Clydesdale mane and penguin belly fuzz. According to Granny, the penguin fuzz was the most difficult to acquire, because it is only found on newborn penguins.

A board displays dozens of photos and yarn samples that Granny has collected during the 30 years she has been giving demonstrations.

Among the photos of camels, dogs, lions and other exotic creatures that have given their hair for Granny's yarn is a photo of a bald man with a chest-deep beard.

"That fellow bet me I couldn't make yarn out of his beard. He lost. Human hair makes excellent yarn, especially curly hair," she said.

Granny and MSU formed their current relationship as a result of her frequent visits to the Appalachian Celebration, a festival the University coordinates each summer.

"Tom Sternal (chair of MSU's Department of Art) asked me if I knew how to put together an old loom he had lying in a room at the school. We had to build a few new pieces, but we got it done in a day and a half. One thing led to another, and now I'm working at the gallery all of the time," she explained.

Granny's craft exhibitions at the gallery are jointly sponsored by MSU and the federal Green Thumb project, a supplementary program for Social Security recipients. She spends 24 hours a week at the gallery, which is located in the Claypool-Young Art Building.

Wearing traditional mountain clothing, Granny weaves, spins and entertains visitors with her talent and wit.

"I love doing this. Talking and spinning is the most relaxing thing I know," she said. "That's why men didn't use to cheat on their wives like they do today. They'd sit in a room with a spinning wheel and a big old fire and be content to stay put."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Preserving an oral literary heritage is the task currently confronting a Morehead State University faculty member.

Joyce LeMaster, MSU associate professor of English, is involved in editing 35 audio tapes by the late Jesse Stuart, noted Kentucky novelist, poet and essayist.

Assisting her is Dr. Morris L. Norfleet, special consultant to the president at MSU. Norfleet, the former chairman of the Jesse Stuart Foundation, serves on the Foundation's board of directors.

The tapes, on loan from the author's widow Mrs. Naomi Deane Stuart, include interviews, lectures and readings by Stuart, which must be analyzed, annotated, edited, and described for cataloging.

The tapes provide MSU with a "significant and important opportunity," said LeMaster. "This University is in the enviable position of having acquired a major editing project." LeMaster expects to complete the work within the next few months.

The cassette tapes will be duplicated and sold by the Jesse Stuart Foundation. MSU will receive one set of the tapes to be housed in the Jesse Stuart Room of Camden-Carroll Library. The original tapes will remain the property of Mrs. Stuart.

LeMaster has worked with various programs related to the Appalachian author and his work. In 1982, she assisted the Stuart Foundation in the promotion of "Land of the Honey-Colored Wind," an anthology of prose and poetry. A keynote speaker at the 1984 Jesse Stuart Literary Festival, LeMaster also coordinates MSU's Jesse Stuart Symposium.

LeMaster presented a paper on Stuart at the Mid-South Sociological Conference in Little Rock, Ark., last October and has reviewed recent books on his life and writings.

MSU began an Appalachian Literature course in 1981 which features Stuart's work along with other writers such as James Still, Harriette Arnow, Wilma Dykeman and Jim Wayne Miller, according to LeMaster. The tapes will be used in the course taught by LeMaster as well as in other literature classes.

"I commend the Stuart Foundation for its dedication to promoting a recognition of Jesse Stuart's contribution to Kentucky's literary heritage," LeMaster said. "The tapes will help to encourage the continued study of one of Kentucky's finest writers."
