Chandler Sweeps State

WINS BY GREAT MARGIN

Rowan Bolts Into Republican Ranks

County Goes Against Democrats By 370 Majority.

JENNINGS IS ELECTED

Rowan county, with a coalition of bolting Democrats and loyal Republicans did their bit toward keeping the Chandler majority down in the election of Tuesday when they definitely went into the Republican column by a majority of 300. Along with the state ticket they carried the two local candidates for office. Troy Jennings for State Representative and Mrs. Ethel Ellington for State Senator.

One of the largest votes ever cast in a general election went to the polls on Tuesday in spite of the rain and bad weather. Practically every precinct in the county went into the Republican column, and those that were carried by the Democrats were carried by greatly decreased majorities. Precinct Number One at the court house, with a normal Democratic majority of 125, saw that majority cut away and whittled until the Democrats breathed a sigh of relief when the precinct vote was finally counted and they had carried it by 14, the smallest majority ever given the Democratic ticket in the court house precinct.

Precinct Number Seven which has in recent years given a large Democratic majority, finally ended by giving Swope a majority of 1 vote.

Haldean, normally Democratic gave the Republican ticket a majority of 100, something they have never done before.

In both the above precincts the King Swope and the Republican corporation organizations supported ticket openly.

In the city precincts and at Haldean for the first time in the history of elections in Rowan county, it was deemed necessary or expedient to hold the election under armed guards, a fact that came near causing the only trouble that has ever occurred at a local election.

Mrs. Ethel Ellington and Troy Jennings ran well ahead of the state ticket in every precinct in the county. Late returns gave Mrs. Ellington a substantial majority in Fleming county while Mr. Crockett carried built up an early lead which went to 1200 in Mason county in the final tabulation. He had also carried apparently both Menifee, Bath and Powell counties by majorities sufficient to overcome Mrs. Ellington's lead in Fleming and Rowan.

Facing the situation, the Democrats analyzing the vote in Rowan county, are voicing their sentiments. They are not in the least ashamed of the showing they made in the county under the most adverse conditions that prevailed in any county in the state. With more bolting Democrats in proportion to the number of votes than any county in the state, with two strong corporations listed up definitely against them, with the courts of the county and all the county officials supporting the Republican ticket, with the exception of the sheriff, the majority to the Democrats is that Rowan county did not go a thousand majority Republican.

In Precinct One, an analysis of the vote indicates that at least 70 voters took part in the election. Number Seven had at least an equal number, while Haldean went even beyond that number, charging a normal Democratic majority to an extent.

On this page will be found the overwhelming Republican victory, tabulated returns from Rowan county. A careful analysis of the vote by precincts will give our readers the trend toward Swope and the reasons for it.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR PILES UP HUGE LEAD AS RETURNS COME IN FROM PRECINCTS ALL OVER STATE

'HAPPY DAZE' ARE HERE

Late returns throughout the state, with almost two thirds of precincts heard from, indicate a lead of between 130,000 and 150,000 for A. B. "Happy" Chandler, Surely "Happy Daze" are here again!

President's Reception To Be Held Monday

The annual fall semester reception given by the president of the Morehead State Teachers College each semester for the purpose of meeting and welcoming the old and new students, will have special significance this fall when it is held next Monday night. It will give old and new students the opportunity to meet and become acquainted with the newly elected president of the college, President Harvey A. Babb, formerly superintendent of the Mt. Sterling city schools. Mr. Babb officially assumed his duties as president of the local institution on November 1.

Post-Office Site To Be Decided Soon

While the federal government has not officially approved the site for the new post office building, to be erected here and has not purchased the lot, indications are that the site chosen will be that on the corner of Wilson avenue and Main street, city and at present in the possession of the Citizens Bank.

Engineers are at present giving the lot a close survey and are sending samples of the soil and stone to Washington for examination before finally approving the site. It is expected that definite information will be given out within a few days. However, it is certain that if the soil stands the required tests the lot will be selected. It will include the Cassidy lot as well as a strip from the Laura Clayton property.

Majority Expected To Total 135,000 As Largest Vote Is Tallied

ROWAN GOES REPUBLICAN

With every return building up an overwhelming majority for A. B. "Happy" Chandler throughout the state, the present indications are that he has been swept into the governor's chair by a majority that will certainly be the greatest ever given any candidate for that office at any time, a majority that may when the final vote is counted reach the unprecedented total of 150,000.

When early returns began to seep in the trend indicated was approximately 30 majority to the precinct. Later returns verified this trend with a slight increase showing on every return. With 276 precincts reported, Chandler's majority was 10,700; 700 precincts gave him 21,000; 900 precincts gave him 28,000; 1100 precincts gave him 33,000. Early morning returns Thursday had increased his margin to 50,000 with a third of the precincts heard from. If the trend continues to the end, he will carry the state by approximately 150,000 votes.

In piling up this majestic total, GOVERNOR CHANDLER carried the entire state ticket and in the majority of instances the legislative officers along with him.

Present indications are that W. A. Crockett has defeated Mrs. Ethel Ellington for the office of State Senator, while it appears that Troy Jennings has defeated J. J. Thomas of Owingsville for the office of State representative.

Along with the Democratic ticket, the Old Age Pension amendment was carried in the state by an overwhelming majority. This amendment was passed for the purpose of permitting the state legislature to pass a law awarding the pensions, so that pensions will be done under the regular session of the legislature in January.

The Dry Law of Kentucky was also repealed by the voters in the election of Tuesday, according to returns. The majority was also overwhelming.

MOREHEAD HIGH HAS HALLOWEEN CARNIVAL

The Morehead High School sponsored its annual Halloween Carnival in the gymnasium Wednesday evening at 7:30 P. M.

Total receipts from the door and all concessions amounted to about $35, which will go toward supporting the Viking Voice, athletic fund, etc.

MIXED CHORUS IS ON PROGRAM AT E. K. E. A.

A mixed chorus made up of high school students from all parts of Eastern Kentucky will open the annual program of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association in the First Methodist Church at Ashland on Thursday evening, November 7. This chorus which is expected to number a hundred voices will be recruited from fifteen high schools in the E. K. E. A. district. L. H. Horton of M. S. T. C. is to direct this chorus.

In addition to singing for the E. K. E. A. members Thursday night the chorus will broadcast the same program on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 P. M. from WCFM (1510 bicycles). Locally, both the Consolidated School and Breckinridge Training School will be represented.

WHAT DO WE CELEBRATE?

As we observe Armistice Day, what is it that we really celebrate? There will be a belt of silence around the entire civilized world, a sort of universal closet into which all of us shall be expected to enter and say our prayers—for what? Do you know? Does anybody know? Are we merely to be grateful, as we were on a November day in 1918, that the war is over, that it is no longer required of us that we shall hate some of our neighbors as they once were required by their war lords to hate us?

The answer to these questions we should like to know. No one wishes to believe that the generation that fought the World War is not able to devise guarantees against the repetition of such a conflict. No one wishes to believe that the inhumanities which men perpetrated in time of war are to mar civilization forever. But if they are not to mar it forever, why should they ever mar it again? Has this generation some inferiority complex in the presence of the brutish god of war? War is only mass emotion in action. War will be a thing of the past just as soon as the leaders who control and direct popular emotions refuse ever again to direct these emotions to the battlefield.

Nevertheless, who can find, no matter where he looks, anything but sound reasons for believing that we have not come to the end of war and its costly armament at all, but are living in a period of truce with war that may end nobody knows how soon? — Ashland Independent.

The Question of Chiselers

The question of chiselers continues to remain in the forefront even though codes of fair competition have been abolished. The Macon Telegraph thus discusses the matter.

The textile industry again rushed to the front with voluntary agreements to preserve wages and hours as fixed under the repudiated codes of NRA, but now the 85 per cent who entered into the argument find that the 15 per cent who refused or didn't join them are playing havoc as competitors, and the industry, if all engaged in it will do likewise, but the chiseler is not only an enemy of labor, but of an improved social order generally. He presses the crown of thorns heavily and harshly against the brow of his worker so he can get a temporary advantage over his competitor, and can sell his goods at a lower price. The competitor must cut his labor likewise, and so ad infinitum. This is why it is so necessary for labor to organize, and make all in a given industry respect an established minimum wage. And this is why labor is driving so hard to protect itself in all industry.

The textile people are now trying to see if they cannot get a universal agreement among employers, establish a selling agency plan, and turn discipline into the hands of the Federal Trade Commission.

They realize that the commission could not be merely a punitive institution, always snooping around to see what they can find that is wrong; but it is hoped they can act as a business advisory group.

The idea has not yet taken shape in a law, because nobody has suggested how such a law could be written. The Supreme Court is like the Sphinx. It is more feared and more highly respected right now than it has been at any time since the New Deal was born. And it is safe to say that the lawyers who will rush in precipitately with a law to be passed would be irrational.

But the fact that industry is seeking to put itself in position to keep its labor happy and contented without waiting for strong arm measures from unions portends a new day for America.

ANNA KARENINA

Adapted by CELESTINE GALBRAITH Melita Goldwyn-Mayer

ANN KARENINA

Vronsky and Anna quirked their pack as the whistle sounded, the approach of the St. Petersburg train. "Quite a coincidence that you should be meeting your mother and I my sister at the same time," said Stiva.

"Not so much of a coincidence as my stumbling across you last night at the Gypsy Cafe," Vronsky laughed. "If I hadn't spent the rest of the night sobbing, you up you'd never have gotten here this morning."

Stiva nodded gloomily. "Well, my sister Anna will fix things at home for me," he said at length when "She'll have to be a miracle worker to do it," answered Vronsky. "After all, Stiva, you tell me that Dolly knows the other woman—and found the letters. And you still expect your sister to make her believe you are a model husband?"

"You don't know Anna or you wouldn't be so doubtful," sighed Stiva. "She's the wife of Alexander Karenin, the St. Petersburg official. And Dolly not only loves her, but respects her good judgement."

They entered the depot as the train changed its way alongside the platform.

Vronsky moved slowly along the line of carriage windows until he saw his mother smiling and signalling to him. Then he stopped short in surprise.

On the top step stood an exquisitely beautiful young woman, her bearing, dress and manner poised and elegant. Vronsky stared openly in admiration.

Countess Vronsky greeted her son with the proud affection of a mother for her only child—and that child a handsome man, the brilliant toast of his regiment and social world. The beautiful unknown stood nearby, smiling upon the two of them. Vronsky's face lit with pleasure, as he realized his mother was heading straight for her. "This is Madame Karenina, the Countess said. "Her husband put her in my charge when we left St. Petersburg and a more delightful traveling companion I've never met."

"So this was Stiva's sister? He bowed.

"You don't know me, of course, Madame Karenina—" he began. "But I do," smiled Anna. "Your mother and I have been talking about you all the way from St. Petersburg. She talks about her son and I talked about mine."

"Madame Karenina has a little boy," the Countess explained. "It's the first time she ever left him—and she hates leaving him, don't you my dear?"

She felt Vronsky's burning eager gaze upon her and she blushed nervously. "I must find Stiva. She murmured.

"Anna!" She wheeled about at Stiva's call and rushed blindly in the direction of his voice, colliding with an old railroad worker who was shuffling down the platform.

"Forgive me, your Excellency," the man whispered humbly.

"My fault," smiled Anna graciously; and the next moment she was in Stiva's arms, greeting him happily. Immediately she felt at ease. She knew she could command her voice if she avoided Vronsky's eyes. With this in mind she watched the old workman as he tested the rails and couplings. Tap, tap, tap, went his hammer. Now the couplings. Now the rails. The rhythm of his work forced itself into Anna's consciousness. It placed the obligato, to the brief exchange of pleasantries between the Countess, Vronsky, Stiva and herself. It somehow sustained her as Vronsky took her hand in parting and she felt a tremor rush through her at his touch.

A scream of terror rent the air.

As she withdrew her hand sharply, way out of the depot. Out of no. The train puffed and chugged its way where broke a maelstrom of confusion horror and chaos. Anna looked about wildly as people rushed from all sides to the end of the platform.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have used for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Cromocin. Serious trouble may be brewing that you can't afford to take a chance with anything less than Cromocin, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal inflamed membranes as the germ and phlegm is loosened and expelled. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Cromocin and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Cromocin right now. (Ad.)

There on the rails, in the wake of the crushed figure of the workman, the dazed figure of the workman who so few minutes before had murmured his apology basked in the kindness of her smile.

Vronsky moved toward her, taking her hand in his to reassure her. She raised her tear-filled eyes to his and he bent over her hand and kissed it. She thrilled to the touch of his lips. For a brief moment she lost all sense of the accident, the station, the very people about her. She came to herself with a start, her first glance falling upon men carrying the crushed body from the rails. Anna shivered.

"It is an omen," she whispered. "An evil omen," and seizing Stiva's arm, she nodded briefly in farewell.

to Vronsky and his mother and hurried away from the station.

Once at home with Stiva and his family, Anna forgot the tragedy—but the memory of Vronsky she could not banish, he persisted through out the long hours in which she pleaded with Dolly. It hovered over the days in which she devoted herself to Stiva's cause. It colored the happiness of her success—for eventually Dolly did forgive Stiva.

In her heart, Dolly pitied Anna more than herself. Despite his faults, she loved her husband; but Anna could never love Karenin. Poor Anna. So young and so beautiful—and yet, tied for life to an elderly, pompous, egotistical, stupidly cold and formal husband. (Continued—Next Week)

Senior Boys Win Class Tournament

The basketball class tournament opened at Morehead High School on Friday afternoon, Oct. 18. Three games were played, with all three of them running true to predictions of "would-be prophets." In the first game, the Freshmen were defeated by the Sophomores, 27-6. Rex Little and Clester Riddle played outstanding ball for the Sophomores and Ora Kleyer played a nice game for the Freshmen outfit. The next game of the afternoon was a stubbornly fought battle between the Seniors and the eighth grade. The Seniors played fine ball, however, and emerged the victor, 23-14. The eighth grade team was an inspired bunch until Lloyd Brown, their star center, faded out of the game, and then the Seniors forged ahead to win by a comfortable margin. Davis and Good played best for the winners, while Brown was best on the eighth grade team. The Juniors' camped over the seventh graders by 33-2. The lone marker was made by Dick McKinley, guard for the losers. Wilson and Hays played "heads up" ball for the victors.

The tournament was resumed the next Wednesday, when the strong Senior team engaged the Sophomores in a hard fought game the first half, which turned into a scoring spree in the last quarter of the game. The Sophomores led the Seniors 5-3 at the half. The three points were made by a goal flipped in by Justice and a foul shot by Caudill. In the second half the Seniors really turned on and submerged the helpless Sophs between a 17-7 score.

HOLBROOK NOV. 11
So that makes the Ohio team 36 points better than the Eagles, on paper. The Union win was considered a fluke and the first for Holbrook in three seasons, but shows that they have something.

Comedy Hit At College

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey come right down to earth (as does the moisture) in R. R. O's new thrilling satire on science, farming, the railroad industry and even Mother Nature herself.

Dust storms, rain storms, brain storms, snow storms and love storms sweep in merry, ludicrous disorder through the rollicking reels, unless water can be brought to the parched fields. Enter "Roscoe the Rainmaker" (Bob Woolsey), and his some-what chuckle-headed assistant,

"Billy" (Bert Wheeler), brought to Luma Junction by the kindly local banker to produce yarn. But Simon Parker, the big lug bean and burly bag man, took hold of the rainmaker. He wants to build a dam across the mountains, and to divert cash from his fellow farmers. Parker, aided and abetted by his dragstore cowboy son, losses many a monkey wrench into Woolsey's rain making machine. Wheeler, in love with the banker's daughter, played by Dorothy Lee in a featured role, also stuns his toe on rocks strewn the road to romance.

Cozy Features Smilin' Thru

Although Norma Shearer has never stepped before the footlights of the speaking stage, the dramatic shoes of many of the stage's greatest actresses have served as Cinderella slippers for her talkie success. The triumph of Miss' Shearer's biggest triumphs have been won in screen versions of plays which had their premiers on the New York stage. Of these one of the greatest was her triumphant film version of the stage classic, "Smilin' Through," which served as an outstanding Broadway vehicle for Jane Cowell.

In answer to hundreds of thousands of requests received at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, the producers of "Smilin' Through" are bringing back this great picture which boasts one of the industry's most brilliant casts headed by Miss Shearer, Fredric March and Leslie Howard. It will be shown starting Wednesday at the Cozy Theatre.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed bids for the construction of a Science Building and a Dormitory will be received at the office of Joseph and Joseph, Architects and Engineers, 404 Breslin Building, Louisville, Kentucky, by the Board of Regents, Morehead State Teachers College, Morehead, Kentucky, until 1 P.
