COUNTY ATTORNEY BERATES CITY COUNCIL AT TUESDAY MEETING OVER SHUTTING OFF HIS WATER

Says They Know Nothing, Do Nothing And Have No Laws And No Government

The city council meeting held Tuesday was turned into more of a three-tinged circus effect by the presence and oratory of Wes Proctor, county attorney of Rowan county.

As the meeting opened, according to one of the members of the council, suspicious footsteps were heard on the steps. The council passed in amazement and the head of the county attorney appeared.

The battle was on, that it proved to be a battle of words, made it all the more amusing.

Councilman Rice made a motion that a street light be installed on Rowan Street for the benefit of the residents of the city who have their gas been shut off. The county attorney rose up in his might and his wrath and vociferously objected as a citizen and a taxpayer. Mr. Rice asked that his motion be entered on the book.

"Then my objection on your book, too" shouted the county attorney.

Mr. Rice agreed and Mr. Larkin seconded the Rice motion and it carried unanimously over the objection of the county attorney.

In the meantime, the County Attorney was raging about having had his water cut off for failure to pay a $35.00 water bill. N. L. Willis, water commissioner, had shut off water commissioner, had shut off the water. According to reports the county attorney had taken it upon himself to turn it back on, and Willis again turned it off, and the county attorney turned it back on, still according to reports. By the time the game of tag had continued for a considerable interval, Mr. Willis became somewhat disgruntled and turned it off for the last time. It was not turned back on.

WHO SAID "DAZED"

Along in August a certain article appeared in a certain paper, headed "Happy Daze" and went as great length to tell how some people waked up after the avalanche of votes was counted, it would be changed to "Happy Daze." We pause only long enough to ask, Who's "dazed" now?

Mrs. Claude Kesler was chairwoman for the Republican party of Rowan county. She did a good job and deserves a lot of credit from the Republican viewpoint and not criticism from the Democratic angle.

Mrs. Kesler was being invited by her Democratic friends to attend the inaugural at Frankfort on December 10. If Swann had won she was to take a party of Democratic friends to that event.

ELECTION BETS

Some peculiar bets originated during the course of the election. A young man named Crain from over Fleming county way had placed some money—a rather sizable way—on Senator W. A. Crockett to win. Then the returns began to come in in Fleming county and it looked to him as if the world had gone haywire. He had visions of his entire bet going the way a number of good bets have gone in the past and will continue to go in the future.

He hopped into his little car and headed for Morehead. He inquired

Eagles Will Meet Louisville Saturday

The Morehead Eagles, rejuvenated by their 7 to 0 victory over Holbrook, will play Louisville Saturday where they meet the University of Louisville. The Eagles will be favored in this contest since the Louisville organization has failed to win a game and are thus a notch lower than the Eagles.

Mineral came out of the Holbrook game with no injuries and should be able to have their strongest team of the year to throw against Louisville.

The Cardinals, with the laughter of the students and supporters in their ears will fight hard to get a victory over Morehead. THE CARDINAL college publication, recently advocated buying a football team for the college.

NOTED FILM ACTOR TO VISIT COLLEGE

Roscoe Ates, film and stage comedian, is expected here today. He will visit Naomi Claypool, head of the department of art at the college. Mr. Ates comes from Gulfport, Mississippi, which is Mrs. Claypool's home town. It is probable that Mr. Ates will appear on a program at the college, if his services are available.

Congratulations on your victory. It is my earnest wish that you will give this district the representation "deserved" and Mrs. Ethel Ellington of Morehead in a telegram received by Walter Allen Crockett, best successful opponent in the recent election for state senator from the Thirty-first district.

Mr. Crockett's unofficial margin of victory was 683.

She will be greatly missed by a devoted family and a wide circle of friends. She is survived by her husband, 3 daughters, Mrs. Charles P. Duley, Mrs. Floyd Crain and Miss Lina Garnett, and three sons, H. Eckert Garnett, Jay Garnett and Wayne Garnett.

Lee Stewart Gives Voters Appreciation

I desire to express my thanks to the citizens of Morehead for their vote of confidence in my race for Police Judge last Tuesday, and will try to show my appreciation by giving good service during my term of office.

I will need the aid, assistance and cooperation of every one and trust that the people will give their cooperation in the enforcement of the law and not be too ready to criticize acts of those in charge of enforcement until cause is shown for such and they all work together to make Morehead a good place to live in.

Freshmen To Play Transylvania Here

The Morehead freshmen will meet the fresh of Transylvania on Jayne Field here Friday afternoon at 2:30. The Eagles have not had a chance to show their wares since the Lindsay-Wilson encounter and are eager to get into a fray again.

The freshmen will have the advantage over Transy in that they have played more games. The Eagles lost a 20 to 0 decision to the University of Kentucky freshmen, Georgetown 20 to 6, and won from Lindsey-Wilson 26 to 9. They had a game scheduled with Eastern last week but it was cancelled.

The Eagles will also try to avenge the 26 to 0 beating which the Transy variety handed the Eagles last week. The freshmen were anxious for a crack at Eastern and since they did not get it they will take it all out on Transy.

Lowman, Hofstetter and Reynolds will be the big guns in the Eagle attack. Warmack, Murphy and Herman will tote the ball for the freshmen.

Science Building To Be Most Modern Hall in State

Hogge Property

Two new buildings, a new four story science building and a four story dormitory are planned for the Morehead State Teachers College. Construction to begin not later than December 15, according to announcements from the college. Advertisement of the letting of the contracts appears in this issue of the News.

The construction of the two buildings calls for an outlay of upward of half a million dollars, and when they are completed Morehead will have one of the most modern school plants in the entire south.

Certainly she will have not only one of the most modern science buildings, but what is said to be the most modern and up-to-date science building in the entire country.

The science hall will be erected on the Arthur Hogge property which was recently purchased by the college. The frontage will be to the east of the boulevard. The building will be 130 feet long by 60 feet wide. Its architecture will correspond to that of the other buildings of the campus, with the surface of the same colored brick and with Bowling Green limestone decorations.

The building will house, when completed the physics, chemistry, biology, geography, Home Economics, agriculture, mathematics and industrial arts departments of the college. The library, medical science and education departments will remain in the present administration building.

With the ultra modern conveniences planned for the new science building, it will undoubtedly be the most modern possessed by any college in the state or probably in the South. No effort has been spared to bring this about. Schools and colleges all over the South and North have all been visited and the ideas in mind of incorporating in the plans for the building the best ideas found in all. The results are, in the estimation of the planners, a building that will give the year classes the best of the modern science buildings in the future.

Former Student Is Head Of E. K. E. A.

David Morris, Morehead graduate of 1927, was elected president of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association in Ashland, last weekend. This marks the first time that a Morehead graduate has been elected head of the educational body.

Mr. Morris is at present superintendent of the Lawrence County schools.

Edna Wilkes, instructor in the geography department, was elected chairman of her group. Edna Paulson, critic teacher in the Training school, was elected chairman of the teachers in her division.

The convention had the largest attendance of its history. Prominent educators from Illinois to New York addressed; capacity crowds in the different sessions.

The Morehead College dinner was a huge success. Dr. J. D. Fain presided. Col. B. F. Forgy, editor of the ASHLAND DAILY INDEPENDENT, made an address of welcome. The theme of the banquet, "What Place Should the Morehead State Teachers College have in the educational program of Eastern Kentucky," was discussed by various graduates of the college. The Morehead department of music furnished a string quartette, a marimba solo, a violin solo and a concert-tombone duet for the entertainment of the guests. Group singing was led by Marvin E. George, band instructor.

SOMEBODY PULLED ONE

There has never been any trouble in this county during an election. There was no indication of trouble last Tuesday except the trouble that naturally came from the resentment of the citizens that they had been imposed upon by that officer. For the first time in the history of voting at Number Ten, there was almost an outbreak, an outbreak caused simply by the fact that there was a guard.

Nor do we blame the guards. They were county patrolmen sworn to do their duty and to serve. They could not have done otherwise than they did. We do criticize as strongly as possible the man who thinking he was pulling a clever trick proved that after all he was only a peanut politician, stooping to scurvy methods to gain his end.

Bad as the guards were they were not a start to the idea of the voting place arranged at the courthouse. For years and years the voting has been done upstairs in the county court room. There was neither rhyme nor reason nor excuse for changing it to the basement. The stairs were nailed up, so that no ventilation was possible. The voting place was located in front of a man's filthy toilet, from which fluid poured. The place was foul with horrible odors, and wet as well. The drunks of which there are always many on election day forced their way through to the toilet, cursing and reeling. The doors to that place were continually open.

And the decent women of Morehead and Rowan county were forced if they would cast their votes to stand in that rotten, filthy foul atmosphere, rub elbows with drunks, breathe the foul air and wait, some of them by the hour, before they were able to cast their vote.

To our mind it was the most flagrant violation of common decency ever offered to the decent folks of Rowan county. Every man, Republican and Democrat who has an ounce of respect for the women of the community resent it and are not slow in expressing that resentment.

And that the insult was offered intentionally there can be no doubt. The place was chosen deliberately after the booths had been erected, according to sheriff Mort May, in the usual place.

We do not blame the Republican party in the least for the things that took place. The Republicans as well as the Democrats resented both the guards and the voting place. Decent citizens do not approve of actions of the sort that cast reflections on the citizenship of the county, as a whole and not on either party.

The election is over and whether the Democrats carried Rowan county or not, they should feel decidedly elated over the results of the voting. With the exception of one candidate they elected their entire ticket, a thing which seldom happens.

The results of last Tuesday's election is history. As a whole the election was satisfactory. So far as we have been able to learn there are no spots and there is little criticism and that only of individuals.

There were, however two things that no red-blooded American citizen be he Republican or Democrat can allow to pass unchallenged. Those are the use of armed guards at the election polls in Morehead and the use of a foul, filthy, unsanitary, disgusting men's toilet for a voting place in the Court house precinct. Those things are entirely inexcusable, because both were entirely unnecessary.

The sheriff of Rowan county disclaims all blame for the use of the guards at the Morehead precincts. He places the blame on the shoulders of one man. He stated to the editor of the News that he knew nothing about it until he went to vote Tuesday morning. If there had been any necessity for guards, it is certainly reasonable to suppose that the matter would at least have been discussed with the law enforcement officers of the county.

In our opinion the man, whoever he was who ordered the county patrolmen to the polls in Morehead to guard them offered an insult to every citizen of Morehead and Rowan county an insult as despicable as it was petty and trifling. An officer of the county who would offer such an insult to the citizenry, is certainly unworthy of being an officer in that or any other county.

Chilling the carcass is an important step in home butchering. A temperature of freezing or a little above is ideal for butchering. After the hog has been cleaned, splitting down the center of the backbone and removal of the leaf lard and the head will assist in the chilling.

Many farmers consider it good practice to drench sheep before the Unless there is an abundance of rain, the ground around young trees should be thoroughly soaked with water before frosting weather. This is especially true of evergreens. Two or three good waterings at intervals of 10 days to two weeks may be necessary.

MOREHEAD WINS (Continued From Page One) the ball on the 15 and returned to the thirty. Triplett crashed through and blocked a punt and Varnley fell on it on the 15 yard line. Four drives at the line failed to get a first down and the ball went over to Holbrook. Both teams exchanged punts until Vinson made his 50 yard run for a touchdown, and converted a line back. Morehead threatened again when Alley made a 27 yard run and Tim Wraynt added enough to place the ball on the Holbrook 22, but Morehead received a penalty of 15 yards at the quarter ended.

Fourth Quarter Alley punted over goal line. Holbrook ball on own 20. Morehead penalized for 15 yards. Pass completed Games to Grooms, good for nine yards. McAuley hit center for first down. Two passes were butted down. A fake around right was good for 5 yards. Punted to Morehead's 12 yard line. A fake by Alley was good for 6 yards. Alley punted to Morehead 48. Holbrook tried a pass and then punted to the Morehead 17. Vinson hit center for 4 yards. A fumble in the Morehead back field was recovered by Holbrook on the 20 yard line. Morehead held for downs and was punning the line as the game ended.

NEW BUILDING (Continued From Page One) There will be no basement. The ground floor will open directly on the boulevard with an entrance at either end as well. The building will have four floors, each of which will be devoted to one or more departments. Department heads have been consulted as to the best and most convenient arrangement of their section to fit in with their work. The new district which is expected to be used to house men students, will have accommodations for at least 150 students. It will be built on the Hall property directly back of the tennis courts. It will also be four stories in height without a basement. The plans for this building call for a number of two and four roomed apartments which will be rented to students or faculty members who desire. For families the apartments may be turned into four roomed homes, or smaller groups into two roomed apartments. Bids will be opened on November 22, and are expected to be let officially by December 1, with construction date set for not later than Dec. 15. Architectural plans are under the supervision of Joseph and Joseph of Louisville, who have been responsible for the plans for the entire group of buildings at the Morehead State Teachers College.

PROCTOR BÉRATES (Continued From Page One) The county attorney then beard the lions or opponents in their meeting place. He stood in the course of his discourse that the councilmen were ignorant, insolent, and knew no law. He said that they had no laws and no government, that they had no ordinance and no right to shut off his water. He said that the water rates were too high in the first place. At this point he was interrupted to be told that it was the plan of the council to reduce the rates by fifty percent as soon as the water bonds were paid. The county attorney's wrath knew no bounds. He became incoherent. He finally turned his guns on the attorney. Then he wound up by taking several shots at the water commissioner, N. L. Wells, accusing him of not knowing his business.

The council finally gathered from his remarks that he would pay his water bill if the council tested the water meter and it proved to be measuring the fluid correctly. In the midst of the racket, and in order to avoid further "water" works the council adjourned with the county attorney still occupying the center of the floor. It is said that a good time was enjoyed by all present. It may be said in passing that the new fire truck ordered by the city arrived last week and is on exhibition in the city hall. It is a best improvement over the out-of-date model T Ford that has done duty for the past ten years, and should give the city much more ample protection from fires.

ABOUT TOWN (Continued From Page One) how the count, was going here and learned that Crockett was trailing in Rowan county as well as not going so hot in Mason at that time. He usually dropped into Democratic headquarters where the Rowan county mourners were gathered to pick up any stray morsels of comfort they might be able to give each other, as the local precincts were counted. The news so far as Rowan county was concerned were few and far between. Mr. Crain, as we said dropped into this one too hilarious group and casually offered to bet $50,000 against Crockett. That was a little too much for the embattled Democrats gathered as they sat in their own ballpit. They forthwith and unanimously rose up and surrounded Mr. Crain and his money was as covered before he could withdraw it. Needless to say there were some anxious moments during the next few hours when it was learned what happened in Fleming county and it looked considerably like Fleming would be spending a few of the decidedly scarce Rowan county dollars. One bet will never be paid, according to Dan Parker. Dan and his neighbor, Mrs. E. D. Patton, had made one of those good natured bets according to which Mrs. Patton was to give Dan a wheelchair ride down the Main street if Chandler was elected and Dan was to do the same for Mrs. Patton if Swope won. Needless to say Dan won the ride. However, he proved that he was in every way a gentleman by refusing to collect after he had won. One of the funniest offers we have heard was made Saturday afternoon after the greater part of the vote was counted. One of our close Republican friends offered to bet that Chandler's majority would not run over 20,000. At that time the majority was well over 20,000 with but few precincts to hear from. Well, it's all over, that election. The vote has been counted and the post mortems have been held. The plans for the next four years have been laid and Kentucky will again go forward on its usual way. It is the sincere wish of every citizen of Kentucky whether they voted for Governor Chandler or not, that the next four years be history making years for Kentucky. That they be years of prosperity, years of growth, years of happiness. That they be years in which the great common people, the people who as a mass voted for A. B. "Happy" Chandler, come into their own. And that they be years in which all industry, as well shall make great forward strides, so that Kentucky may take and keep her usual place at the head of the pro-

ANNA KARENINA

Adapted by GERTRUDE GELEIN From the Novel by Leo Tolstoy

CHAPTER TWO

What Dolly did not know was that Anna's gaiety arose from the fact she knew she would soon see Vronsky again. Surely he would be at the Korsunsky's ball which all of them were to attend!

And then, just before they left for the Korsunsky's ball, Kitty, Dolly's debutante sister, drew Anna aside and in a burst of confidence confessed her own love for Vronsky.

Anna's joyous anticipation trembled. If Kitty loved Vronsky she must do nothing to hurt her. Throughout the ball she avoided Vronsky taking her place among the chaperones lined against the wall of the brilliant saloon.

But Vronsky willed it otherwise. And Kitty, taking refuge in the attention of Levin, who loved her, felt her heart break as she watched Vronsky's endless pursuit of Anna throughout the evening.

It was not until the supper dance that Anna at last consented to dance with him.

I knew it at the railroad station, Vronsky whispered to her as he held her in his arms. Nothing had mattered since.

Anna was radiant with happiness. She was seized with an overwhelming desire to live—to love—to see—to be tender—to live! I will forget everything but this moment, she promised herself—And then, tomorrow, I shall return to St. Petersburg and end forever this mad attraction. In an ecstasy of joy she gave herself up to the delight of dancing in Vronsky's arms.

At the conclusion of the dance, she smilingly announced her plan to return home on the morning train. She saw Kitty's face light, and her heart ached with the full realization of the hurt the evening had dealt Kitty, and with her own pain in renouncing Vronsky.

As the St. Petersburg train carried her through the morning snow storm, Anna brooded upon the bleak countryside, her heart filled with a restless sadness. At the first station stop she strode out onto the platform. The cold cleared her head and after a short brisk walk, she turned to enter her car.

A man in military garb stood before her, blocking her path. May I help you, at all he asked.

She looked up into the ardent gaze of Vronsky. In spite of herself her face shone with joy. I didn't know you were going to St. Petersburg today, she said. Why this sudden change of plan?

Why? Vronsky's voice grew soft. To be where you are. You know that. She brushed past him, but he seized her hand. Forgive me, he pleaded. I had to say it.

You shouldn't have said it, she answered. You must forget you said it.

I'll never forget anything of you, he murmured and drew close to her.

Stop! She wrenched herself away. Please, she begged. She rushed into her compartment, her face a mixture of bewilderment, terror and delight, and locked the door behind her.

And there she remained throughout the journey, her heart pounding with the joy of his words, her mind helpless in its effort to concentrate on thoughts of her home, her husband and her child.

Sergei, her son, was ecstatic at her return. Anna doubted her attempts to carry out the social obligations that were hers as the wife of the great government official. But the memory of Vronsky pierced through the meaningless formalities of her duties and only with Sergei would she find some measure of peace. She sought the child out continually, until Karenin accused her of spoiling the boy and of interfering with the routine of his studies and playtime.

Vronsky continued his pursuit of her. For years, Anna had gone everywhere alone, except for those few times when her husband found leisure from his work. Now that Vronsky was in St. Petersburg, and attached hostesses threw them to either continually. Soon they were seen everywhere together.

And so winter passed, and spring bloomed and summer waned. But it was not until the Countess Lidia's garden party that society openly declared them a scandal.

Anna and Vronsky played croquet on the lawn far removed from the terrace where Lidia poured tea for her guests.

Do you get the sense we are being watched? he whispered.

Watched? she exclaimed. We're being devoured.

Then let's deprive these charming people of their pleasure, he laughed and with a purposeful, vicious swing he sent her ball and his careening out onto a field which was walled off from the terrace by thick ivy leaved birch trees.

Lidia smiled knowingly at her guests as Anna and Vronsky disappeared behind the trees. At that moment, Karenin arrived and inquired for Anna. Lidia pointed vaguely in the direction of the trees. A tense silence fell.

My dear, said Lidia, after a pause. Anna has always been so conservative when she suddenly encourages the attention of a man like Vronsky people—the spreads her legs out as if to include everyone assembled, are shocked. I tell you this only because I am your friend and hence, Karenin stiffened at her attack.

My dear Lidia, A woman like Anna is naturally subject to certain attentions from young men whose enthusiasm overcomes their discretion. For me to be disturbed by such trifling matters would be undignified.

Splendid! Lidia beamed sarcastically. If Cessar's wife is above suspicion, it is because of the tone set by Caesar. She turned her attention to the trees which had Anna and Vronsky from sight.

Vronsky held Anna tenderly in his arms. You're all my life, he murmured.

She made a last desperate attempt to help herself, but found herself powerless against her love for the man whose kiss was sweeter than any other. The thought of the answered his kiss with the fervor of his embrace.

No, no, she begged. Please help me.

She broke from his arms and hurried back to the lawn. Her heart missed a beat as she looked up onto the terrace into the frowning stare of her husband, Countess Lidia and the guests.

Anna and Vronsky are now the scandal of St. Petersburg! How will she cope with the situation. What will her husband do? Don't miss the next chapter of this thrilling romance.

THE STORY

Barbary Coast

COLLEGE THEATRE

In the early days of San Francisco's gold rush, a roistering lawless colony sprang into being: the Barbary Coast. No white woman inhabited the town until Mary Rutledge arrived to marry Don Morgan.

When Mary discovers Morgan is dead, Colonel Cobb, who has come to establish San Francisco's first newspaper, offers her his protection and urges her to return to New York, but she is determined to stay.

At the Bella Donna she meets Louis Chamalis, its owner and the most powerful and ruthless man in San Francisco. The transformation of Mary into the woman known as Swan is soon complete, she presides at Chamalis' roulette wheel. None of the miners who flock to her table suspects that the wheel is crooked until two Scotsmen lose their year's diggings and a protest from Sandy Ferguson costs him his life.

SINGING CUPID ROLE FOR SHIRLEY TEMPLE IN ROMANTIC COMEDY

Shirley Temple seems to have no limit to her resources for winning and holding audiences. In one picture she tugs at the heart strings of her audience, and in still others she sends them home roaring at her comedy antics.

But her newest starring picture "Curly Top," which comes Friday and Saturday Nov. 15 & 16 to the Cozy Theatre, combines all of Shirley Temple's many talents and adds still another. Shirley, sings, dances, laughs—and plays Cupid in bringing sweethearts together.

"Curly Top" opens with scenes in an orphanage where Shirley is the Irrepressible cut-up, forever getting into trouble and forever laughing herself out of it.

John Bole, the millionaire patron of the orphanage, adopts the child, who has won his heart with her gaiety and wholesomeness. But he is so fast to adopt her pet pony, her duck, and her lovely grown sister, Rochelle Hudson, in the bargain.

The ensuing scenes of the film show how a romance grows up, and reaches its happy climax. And, between John Bole and Miss Hudson when rifts or misunderstandings threaten, it's always Shirley who beats the breach.

Out-riding in the gold fields. Swan meets Jim Carmichael, a young man from the East who has made his fortune. They are instantly attracted to each other and Swan suddenly sees her life at the Bella Donna as hideous.

Jim wanders into the Bella Donna and is disillusioned to discover Swan's identity. Recklessly he gambles and loses everything.

MacFarish', Sandy's partner, past signs all over town denouncing Chamalis. He is murdered by Knuckles, Chamalis' confederate. Cobb protests and meets a similar fate.

An outraged mob forms the Vigilantes and hangs Knuckles. Chamalis learns that Swan let Jim win back his money and, in a fit of jealous rage vows to kill him. Jim confesses his love to Swan. They escape together.

Jim is shot by one of Chamalis' pursuing men. Swan promises Chamalis that she will be his slave if he will let Jim go. Chamalis knows he is beaten. In one last generous gesture he gives both their freedom. At this moment the Vigilantes surround him with drawn guns. As he marches off to his fate, Swan runs wildly to the ship where Jim is being cared for.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

BY WILL ROGERS

There was a young lawyer that married the biggest kind of bony ideas. Of course, she didn't have any teeth to speak of, but he was hoping. And he always said he wouldn't.

"You're a guilty man. You can imagine how much business a guy like that would have."

"So a lawyer came to him to be defended."

"You're guilty?"

"I should say not! If I had anything to do with that robbery, I would have moved out of this city!"

"If I ever took anything that belonged to another guy, I would have strangled my dead dog before I gave another drink! I'm as innocent as a babe!"

"The prosecuting lawyer was terrible, pathetic, and began to make a case for bail and defense all evening."

"I feel sure we can clear you, my good fellow," he says. "It is unbelievable that an innocent man like you should go to prison for a year for a crime he never even heard of. I'll be arrested. And now about the fee. What do you feel you can afford to pay me?"

"Well, boss, I ain't got much. I had to split the loot from that last job fifty-fifty with my pal, and that leaves me only about fifty thousand, but I'll give you half of that if you get me free!"

THERE ARE NO SAFER BRAKES MADE

than the Super-Safety Brakes of the 1936 Ford V-8

FOUR PERMANENT WHEELBASES
Rear rods [1] brace the front axle like a pair of giant arms. Radius rods and Torque-tube [2] give rigid bracing to the rear axle. This means that the front and rear axles of a Ford car are always held equidistant—in perfect alignment. On this permanent wheelbase any braking system now common use could be used. Only with this Ford-type wheelbase can mechanical, Super-Safety brakes be used to the fullest advantage.

4 INDEPENDENT BRAKE-BOSS
Four brake-rods [3] of strong, tempered steel link the pressure of your foot on the pedal with the four big brake-drums on the wheels. They do this positively, surely, under all road conditions. None especially that no one Ford brake has to depend on the other three. Failure of one—practically impossible—would still leave three perfectly operating brakes.

Teat out this chart and check it with the car you are driving now.

NO other car in America has the same basic design as the Ford V-8. Because of this design, the Ford could use any type of braking system now in common use. (Diagram at left shows why.)

With the whole field to choose from, Ford stands by mechanically-operated Super-Safety brakes as safest, surest, and most positive for the Ford V-8.

This is the type braking system used on many of America's costliest cars and most racing cars. Because of unique chassis design, Ford can use it to better effect than any other car built today.

All it all, no safer brakes are made than you get with the 1936 Ford V-8. Drive it today—and see for yourself.

The VOGUE

It isn't necessary, we feel sure for us to remind you that Dame Fashion this season is going in for trimmings in a big way.

A novelty which is sure to prove popular is the all-pleated frock. Several versions are shown for the afternoon and evening, with some knife-pleated and others accorion-pleated. They meet the requirements of the present style-trend, giving the molded silhouette and the necessary skirt fullness.

Frocks of all descriptions and for wear at all times of the day are bedecked with all sorts of trimmings, forsaking for a while at least, the tailored, untrimmied frocks of the past season or so.

Button clips, leaves and grides of leather, frogs of silk, fringes, ruffles, pleats, and even beads are being used in a variety of ways to add just the right touch to one's frock.

Even woollens are being now used for dress-up occasions, draped and shirred.

Tips On The Household

PUTTY WINDOWS
In wood windows the glass is secured by small triangles driven into the wood, and putty is used to make the joint tight. If the putty has hardened, it will crack off and the window will leak.

Proper cooking, lavory and relatively cheap dishes can be prepared from the shoulder, breast, flank and neck of lamb. The flavor of lamb combines especially well with certain fishes and vegetables. Salads and flavoring dressings also may be used.

An adequate supper is necessary to prevent children awakening early from hunger. The evening meal, even for rather young children, should include fruit and vegetables, in order to insure the proper amount of minerals and vitamins.

If there is no closet in the bedroom, one may be built in if space permits. A closet door protects the clothing from dust and light. A curtain may be used to shut off the closet from the room, where there is no door.

How and What to Improve

COLORED FLOORS
In a small colonial house it may be found effective to stain floors a dull cherry color. Varnish or wax over the color to preserve it, his color makes an appropriate background for bright hooked rugs and light maple furnishings. A proper tone of blue green used as a floor border and recalled in the other furnishings will contrast pleasingly with the dull cherry color.

PROTECT SHRUBS
When exterior painting work is being done it is advisable for painters to use drop cloths to cover any shrubbery or walls that may be defaced by paint spots. In hiring a painting contractor skilled workman.

FALL CHECK-UP
We live at home more hours during the winter months than in any other season. We can overlook the fact that comfort can come only in a well-maintained home, and we do not consider making repairs during the winter. This condition is purely the result of habit. There are a great many things which can be done to our houses to make them more livable and comfy which are badly needed to prevent the rapid deterioration which occurs when repairs are not promptly made. Be sure to check up your house during the Fall to prepare it for Winter.

COOKIES

"The children ran from near and far To dip into the cookie jar."

THAT'S one of the immemorial prerogatives of childhood. So prevalent is it, in fact, that a vast cookie baking industry has been built up to keep all the cookie jars in the country comfortably full so that children can exercise that prerogative.

But, after all it's fun to surprise them. They all know the content of the innumerable cartons of delicious cookies that save modern housewives so much preparation and baking. But when they plunge their eager hands into a cookie jar—a real old-fashioned cookie jar—which they know contains cookies made at home, the pleasure of uncertainty is added to their anticipation of something delicious.

Apricots Inside!
Almond Apricot Squares: Cream one-half cup shortening and one-half cup sugar, add one well-beaten egg, and then one-fourth cup apricot puree. Sift together

David Applesauce Van Cookies: Put one cup dried applesauce through a food chopper. Then combine them with one and a half cups condensed milk, one cup canned moist coconut and one cup chopped nuts, drop by spoonfuls onto a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven, 25 degrees, for from twelve to fifteen minutes. Makes about thirty cookies.

Molasses and Coconut Cookies: Boil one cup molasses a minute, add one cup sifted applesauce, one cup shortening, two teaspoons vanilla, two teaspoons cinnamon and two well-beaten eggs. Add four teaspoons soda mixed with one-fourth cup vinegar. Add about five cups of flour to make a stiff dough. Roll thin. Cut as desired. Bake in a moderate oven, 275 degrees—oven about twelve minutes. Use also for making decorative nuts. May combine with sugar before baking if desired.

Woodruff Bars: Cream one-third cup shortening and three-fourths cup sugar, add one well-beaten egg and then one-third cup canned raspberries, mashed but not strained. Sift together one and a half cups pastry flour, one and a half teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, and add. Add one cup bran and one cup canned moist coconut and chill. Drop by small spoonfuls on a greased pan, about two inches square. Bake in a moderate oven—250 degrees—oven for about ten minutes. Makes three and a half dozen cookies.
