Also the eastern and central time zones line passe thru here. "It's divided by the line separa­ting" the 2 time zones. c. doz. brick homes, Pyles' gro. & serv. sta., 2 churches & cem's. Local lore claims the community got its name 80 years ago, or more, when the old one room schoolhouse, now abandoned but still standing was built and got a fresh coat of paint. A swarm of little black gnats hit that school and made the awfulest mess you ever saw, says (Buck) Larimore (age 49) who claims his father knew people who remembered when it happened."

("Black Gnat Show an Interest in Sandwiches Instead of the Polls" by Beverly Fortune, LCJ, 11/3/1971);
BLACK GNAT (Taylor Co.): Acc. to one acct., a man was painting a house white up there and by the time he got through with it, it was covered with black gnats and he just remarked "this sure is a lot of black gnats here." This was back in the 19th cent. (Sam Moore, interview, 7/20/1978);
BLACK GNAT (Taylor Co.): ("Bl(ae)k N(ae)t" Grover "Toad" Smith "says that since he was a small child he's been told the story of how Black Gnat rec'd. its name. A schoolhouse was built and painted and while the paint was still wet, an army of black gnats stuck to it. The sch. was then called Black Gnat Sch. As the surrounding community began to grow, it picked up the name Black Gnat. Grover said that Eb Larimore had always repeated this story too and he died a few yrs. ago as an elderly man." (quoting

CAMPBELLSVILLE (Taylor County, Ky.)

Named for Adam Campbell, the area's first settler. Incorp. 1817. Thru the town ran the road from Lexington to Nashville. First settlers from Va. and N.C. "A sulphur well at Campbellsville with three veins, one each of sulphur, fresh and salt water, was quite popular (c1820). The water had fine curative properties and was resorted to by health seekers for many miles around. It was famous in pioneer times, as a deer lick." (W.M. Watkins, THE MEN, WOMEN, EVENTS, INSTITUTIONS & LORE CASEY COUNTY, KENTUCKY, Louisville, 1939 pp.8-9) CAMPBELLSVILLE (Taylor Co.): Est. by the Ky. Leg. 1/3/1817. Acc. to Green Co. Deed Book 6, 5/4/1814, P. 558, Andrew Campbell conveyed to Jos. Taylor some land in a small town just laid off by Andrew at Buckhorn Lick and called Campbellsville, and it stated that Andrew was the prop. of the town... The plat of 85 lots was recorded in 1820 (Green Co. Deed Book 9, P. 321). Andrew was one of 5 bros. who, ac to trad., came from Augusta Co., Va. to settl this area....All were active in the early affairs of the town. Collins, etc. erred in crediting bro. Adam with co-founding the town tho' (after) Andrew's death in 1819, all of his land was left to his bros. and Adam deeded some of his land to others, incl. an acre for a school. ... Mrs. Gorin thinks that the town existed as early as 1811 tho' no records of this. Acc. to Green Co. Order Book 5, P. 1, 2/29/1809 (sic) petitioned the ct. to build a water-powered grist mill on Buckhorn Cr. Acc. to Green Co. C. C. Ct. ELK HORN (Taylor Co.): po est. with this sp. 5/10/1876, Wm. O. Robinson ...(NA); Elkhorn is current spelling. "(Eh)lk/h(aw)rn") Acc. an article entitled "Elk Horns Brought Back to Namesake" by Roger St. Clair from a local news. "130 yrs. ago, the commu. of Elkhorn was founded. During the early days in its hist., a name for the town was being sought. A hunter's kill solved the problem when an unknown hunter brought a 12 pt. set of elk horns to the commu. mill. There in the mill which, at that time, was the center of commu. activity, the elk horns were placed on display. The mill at that time was owned and operated by John Dearen, and due to the display of the large elk horns hanging on the wall, the early citizens of the commu. named the commu. Elkhorn. On Dec. of 1881, Thos. W. Creek purchased the mill from Dearen and the elk horns remained on the wall of the mill during this period. In 1896, Thos. Creek and his family left Elkhorn and moved to Charlottesville, Indiana and with him carried the famed elk horns.... The Green R. Reservoir has consumed a vast part of Elkhorn...." son, of the horns for display at the po. Mrs. Ora Mae St. Clair was then pm. Reed St. Clair=her husband.

Talbot Allen is an authority on Elk­horn. His father owned a mill there for years (927 Gans Ave., Lou.) MANNSVILLE (Taylor Co.): ("M(ae)nz/v(ih)l.") Named for Moses Mann, a Rev. War vet. who settled in that area. Acc. to Perrin, he had 6-7000 acres of wild land on Robinsons Creek and was the 1st settler in that area. After a while it became known as Manns Lick and later Mannsville. May also have been called Buena Vista. Thinks that the Manns Lick name predated this since the B.V. name would be derived from Mex. War battle. The commu. definitely preceded the est. of the po since it's older than C'ville. Acc. to Howard Perr (interviewed for an article in the GREEN R.
SPRITE, 5/23/1971 om MANNSVILLE), there was an old salt works there. And the rd that goes out there is still called The Salt Works Rd. in the old deeds. In the article he says that "Mose Mann was the 1st to build a log cabin and bring his family; hence the name of the commu..." Penn said that the 1st name given to it was Manns Lick. 'Oliver Murrell...could scarcely wait until sch. was out to dash to the home of U.C. Clarkson and tell him of the battle betw.
the Monitor and the Merrimac. The Monitor had checked the Confederate ram, Merrimac in Hampton Roads, Va. on Mar. 9, 1862. Oliver, being in sympathy with the south, grew hot under the collar as he read of the battle and he was vehement in his razing the Monitor and lauding the Merrimac. "I'm trying to get a po for Robinson (sic) Creek Chu." (the name of Merrimac at that time) - Mr. Clarkson told Oliver. "And when we get it, we'll name this place Merrimac." And so it was in 1885 (sic) that the town, now known as Merrimac was changed from Robinsons Creek (sic) Chu., which it had been called since before 1825." (This is from Max Heath's col.) This was not the old Robinson Creek Bapt. Chu. (Betty Jane Gorin, interview, 10/18/1978);

For some time during the 19th cent., the commu. was also known as Pinchem, for which several explanations have been given. The most generally accepted refers to the practice of customers at the local store of pinching the storekeeper when a bottle or jug of illicit whiskey was desired. Acc. to another trad. the storekeeper 'was hard of hearing and would pinch a customer if he wanted him to repeat an order.' The origin of the name Saloma is unknown, but an ass'n. with that of the Old Siloam Mtg. House in Green Co., built around 1800, has been conjectured." (Book-P. 262)"
