FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.--The Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, nationally prominent civil rights leader, will be the keynote speaker for Morehead State University's celebration of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday on Thursday, Jan. 15.

Shuttlesworth, now pastor of the Greater New Light Baptist Church in Cincinnati, will speak at 7 p.m. Thursday in Breckinridge Auditorium. Prior to his speech, there will be a campus candlelight memorial march at 6 p.m., beginning at Allie Young Hall.

In May 1956, when Alabama political leaders outlawed the NAACP, a group of ministers in Birmingham came together under the leadership of Shuttlesworth to organize the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights (ACMHR). One of the five founders and first secretary of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), Shuttlesworth still serves on its board and is president of the Cincinnati Chapter.

After being bombed twice, beaten and jailed more than 25 times during the struggle, Shuttlesworth was honored in 1978 by the Birmingham City Council for his "courageous efforts" in leading peaceful demonstrations which eventually led to the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the 1965 Voting Rights Act guaranteeing all citizens the right to vote.

"Actually, the University will mark the anniversary of Dr. King's birthday with a week-long observance, beginning Monday, Jan. 12, and featuring a variety of events including films and slide presentations," said Jerry Gore, MSU's minority student affairs director.

The activities have been organized under the auspices of MSU's Office of Minority Student Affairs and the Black Coalition.

Jan. 17, 1987
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.--To the rest of the world Jan. 25 may be Super Bowl Sunday, but for those who remember him at Morehead State University, it will really be "Phil Simms Day."

As quarterback for MSU's Eagles from 1975 to 1978, "Whitey" Simms wore a blue jersey. Now calling plays for the New York Giants he still wears blue.

But, Simms' loyalty to MSU goes further than the color of his football jersey. Maintaining close ties to the school since picked by the Giants in the first round of the 1979 draft, the MSU alumnus always helps out when needed.

"Morehead State University is extremely proud of Phil Simms' accomplishments, but it is even more gratifying to know that he takes such pride in his association with this institution," said MSU President A.D. Albright. "He has many friends here on campus and throughout Eastern Kentucky wishing him well on Super Bowl Sunday," Dr. Albright added.

"He's always been there for us," said MSU Head Football Coach Bill Baldrige. Baldrige was an assistant coach during Simms' days as an MSU Eagle.

"Besides being a role model for the players, he has supported our program, including providing the team with 150 pairs of shoes, and visits here frequently," Baldrige added.

This summer Simms, whom sportscasters have dubbed the NFL's most outstanding quarterback, will conduct a summer camp on the campus.

"He's handled success well," said Baldrige. "He's pretty much the same guy and he hasn't forgotten his friends."

Simms' ability to "mesh with all types of people" even as a student has been one of the Louisville native's biggest assets, according to Dr. Mike Brown, associate professor of health, physical education and recreation. He was Simms' academic adviser during his days as a physical education major at MSU.

"An intelligent young man, polite and gregarious, he was a better than average student," Dr. Brown said. "He had tremendous competitive athletic drive," added Dr. Brown, who noted that watching Simms' as a pro player gives him tremendous satisfaction.

A classmate of the star quarterback and now MSU's development director, Bill Redwine remembers Simms as "somewhat quiet and well-liked. It's really a personal thrill to see somebody you were friends with now on national television, but it's even more satisfying to know you can reach him by phone." Redwine added that Simms serves on an advisory committee for the Eagle Athletic Fund and comes back to help with fund-raising golf outings.

"I wish I could be there, but I'll be watching and there in spirit," said Myron Doan, adviser to MSU's Chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity in which Simms was an active member.

"He's still supportive of his fraternity brothers and rarely fails to stop to visit the actives when on campus," Doan said.

Fraternity brother Tim Wagner of Lexington recalls Simms as a "fun-loving guy" but who was serious about his football. "He was a real determined guy and, obviously, it paid off, but he always went out of his way to help other people," said Wagner, regional account manager for WKQQ Radio.

Wagner, who will be enroute to a sales meeting, will miss the Super Bowl, but he has no doubt how Simms will perform.

"His Eagle pride will carry him through."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--"There is a strong community feeling about helping people."

That is the basis of the Adult Learning Center, a service of Morehead State University's Department of Education. It is a tool for building a closer community, according to Bonnie Burrell, the Center's coordinator.

The Adult Learning Center, located on the corner of Tippet and Second Streets, serves as a base for a variety of programs designed for those 16 years and older who are interested in improving their math, reading and writing skills. Serving as an outreach to community service, the Center's programs include personal counseling and individual skill assessment.

According to Burrell, more than 100 students are taking advantage of the Center's many services which include assistance in studying for the General Educational Development Tests (GED), diagnostic Tests of Adult Basic Education (TABE), and such programs as Volunteer Literacy, Sentenced to Read and Catch 22.

"Many of our students have an uneven knowledge and we try to fill the gaps," said Burrell. "Some are successful men and women who never finished high school."

A common goal of those attending the Center is to pass the GED test which earns them a high school equivalency certificate. The Center offers the official GED Practice Test and TABE which tests reading, language and math skills, indicating in what areas students need improvement.

"After diagnostic testing, we concentrate on building students' skills in weak areas so they meet their goals," Burrell said.

Another component of the Center is the Volunteer Literacy Program. Currently enrolling 21 students, the program is coordinated by Ruth Bradley.

"Our main focus is teaching adults to read," said Bradley. "Some students just want to write their names, while others feel reading will help them perform better at work," she added.

Bradley assigns volunteer tutors from the community to meet with students at the Center, the public library and a community church to assist students with reading and writing skills.

(MORE)

Other community service programs based at the Center are Sentenced to Read and Catch 22. These programs emphasize life-coping skills and GED assistance for students who have been court-referred.

Sentenced to Read offers job training and pre-employment skill building. Students 14 to 21 years old are trained in resume writing and filling out employment forms.

Catch 22 instructs those 22 years and older in communication skills. Instructors also assist students in completing forms and writing to relatives.

"We emphasize that a person is not alone in not having a GED or not knowing how to read," Burrell said.

Additional information on the Adult Learning Center and its programs is available from Burrell or Bradley at (606) 783-2871.

As MSU's coordinator of the economic development survey, Dr. Whitaker is one of eight liaisons from each of the state's institutions of higher education involved in the inventory.

Assisting him in the design and distribution of MSU's campus survey will be Dr. Bernard Davis, Kilpatrick professor of banking.

"When the survey is completed statewide, we will have a data base to be used by the office on the services available from higher education institutions to firms seeking either to locate or expand in the state," Dr. Whitaker said.

"We will be looking at programs offered by higher education ranging from centers and special laboratories--similar to MSU's Water Testing Laboratory--to workshops and seminars," he noted.

In addition to creating a data base, the survey also will identify the contributions that higher education makes to Kentucky's economic development, according to Dr. Whitaker.

A native of Maysville, Dr. Whitaker joined MSU's faculty in 1977 and has held various administrative posts including acting vice president for academic affairs. He holds a bachelor's degree from MSU and the M.B.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Kentucky.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University has established the Office of University Enrollment Services with Frenchburg native Tim Rhodes as director.

Combining the areas of admissions, financial aid and housing, the new unit brings together those university functions most directly associated with enrollment, according to MSU President A.D. Albright.

University Enrollment Services will be part of the Division of Student Development with Rhodes reporting to Mike Mincey, vice president for student development.

Rhodes, a member of the administrative staff since 1972, will continue to serve as director of financial aid, a post he assumed last year. He is an alumnus of MSU.

"The whole idea behind this new structure is to provide better service to enrolling students," said Dr. Albright. "The concept really came into being last summer informally with Mr. Rhodes coordinating the efforts. We have had time to observe how it worked and refine elements before creating a formalized structure," Dr. Albright explained. "As a student-related service, it follows that it should be a natural function of student development," he added.

Vice President Mincey said that he hoped to see all campus resources--faculty, staff, students and alumni--working with the new unit. "Enrollment services involves more than just form processing and within our own division we plan to utilize counseling and career planning and placement resources," Mincey said.

"Helping ease the path for students who want to enroll at Morehead State is what the Office of Enrollment Services is all about," said Rhodes. "Going to college is a big step and we are going to be there to make that step easier," he added.
