ATTEND CHRISTMAS SEAL SHOW AT COZY THEATRE AND HELP BUILD FUND FOR T. B. SEAL SALE

Show To Be Sponsored By Morehead Womens Club Committee.

The big drive is on for the Christmas Seal sale. Morehead is determined to go over the top in this great work of saving Kentucky tuberculosis patients for the state. Last year, this county went beyond its quota in the raising of funds for this cause, and expectations are that this year will do even better. The sale this year will be directed under the auspices of the Morehead Women's Club, with Mrs. J. S. Riley as chairman of the committee conducting the drive.

Arrangements have been made with the management of the Cozy Theatre to give a show on Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week, with half of the proceeds from the entertainment to be devoted to the fund. Expenses will be paid and the proceeds then divided. A considerable sum is expected to be realized from this entertainment.

The show, "One More Spring" is a Fox Film starring Janet Gaynor and Warren Baxter, and is the story of a modern girl's search for romance.

Tickets are now being offered for sale by the school children of Morehead. If you have not yet bought a ticket from one of the children, do so. Ask whether you buy a ticket in advance or not, make arrangements to attend the show one of the five nights. Your money will be well spent and the good-will without cause of them all.

INAUGURAL

With the electing-out of the way for several weeks, and with the inaugural just around the corner, all eyes are beginning to turn to Frankfort, which, if indications mean anything, will be the Mecca for Kentuckians on December 18.

If everyone goes to the inaugural, who has indicated a desire to attend, there will be only a corporal's guard left to care for the business of the town and county.

While plans have not yet been made, there is a possibility that a motorcade will be formed here to join up with cars from surrounding county to drive to Frankfort on Tuesday morning, December 18. There will be more about this in the next issue of the News.

HUNTING SEASON

The hunting season is not only at hand but right now we are directly in the middle of it. And hunting season always brings with it its full quota of accidents, and near accidents. One of the first to be reported was that Dr. H. L. Nickell was shot.

Oh, not seriously. In fact: while it crippled Doc up considerably he is still able to get about and to laugh at the manner in which it occurred.

Doc and a boy pal went hunting early Monday morning. It might have been Sunday since that was the first day of the bird season, only Doc doesn't go hunting on Sunday. Anyway, Doc and his pal both were armed with guns, located a covey of birds. Doc instructed the boy to climb a nearby tree to locate them more accurately. The boy got out on a limb, the limb broke, down came the boy, limb and what have you, and as he fell his gun went off.

ANNUAL THANKSGIVING DAY FESTIVAL GIVES OPPORTUNITY TO EXPRESS THANKS

It is long years since the first Thanksgiving Day was held by the Pilgrim Fathers. Then as now there was much for which to be thankful. They had survived the hard and bitter climate of the New England shore; they had overcome the obstacles that confronted them, obstacles that in this day would make the strongest man quail before them.

Yet after their first year in America, with the wilderness surrounding them, with death stalking them, with only a meagre handful of food to carry them through the winter, they knelt in the snows of that bitter New England day, and offered their thanks to Him who Rules, for the blessings they had received.

There is much that we of today overlook, there is so much for which we should be truly grateful, that it is truly just that we should bow our heads in mute thanksgiving to the Powers that be.

Let us, then, be truly Thankful for all of our blessings.

Hicks Released On Bond Of $10,000.00

Arthur Hicks, charged with the murder of John Bessok and Robert Stewart, Cattleshop, cattle buyers, is held in the Rowan County jail under $10,000 bond. Hicks testified that he shot in self-defense.

At an examining trial held last Saturday, the commonwealth sought to connect the slaying of the two men at a filling station here with the mysterious killing of Marion Smith, several weeks ago. Hicks was charged with the slaying of both men and bond set for $5,000 in each case by County Judge C. E. Jennings.

Bill Smith, father of Marion Smith, whose body was found on a railroad track six weeks ago, testified that Bessok and Stewart had told him several hours before their death that "Arthur Hicks had something to do with the murder" of his son. He also testified that they inquired if there was a reward for information leading to the arrest of the murderer.

Clarence Pigman, the only witness of the slaying, testified that Bessok and Stewart attempted to hold up Hicks.

Hicks said that both the slain men had been drinking and that they demanded the money in his cash drawer. He surrendered to officers immediately after the shooting.

Manford Winkelman, charged with the shooting of Fowler Nickell in a dispute over a strip of fence land, was released under $2,500 bond. His first bond was $1,000, but when Nickell was reported dying, his bond was raised to $2,500.

OPENS DOUGHNUT SHOP TO SUPPLY LOCAL TRADE

A new concern called the Morehead Doughnut Company will open today in the west side of Candie's garage on Main Street.

Joe Pigg, pastry artist who is a student at the college, will have charge. The company will wholesale and retail doughnuts.

A new doughnut machine has been installed and the store will be open for business Thursday, according to Mr. Pigg.

A pastry department will be added at a later date. Machines for mixing the pastry have been ordered. The public is invited to come in and see the doughnuts made.

J. A. LEWIS LOSES HIS HOME IN MONDAY FIRE

A two-story frame house located near Charity Creek and belonging to J. A. Lewis was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon. The only one in the house at the time of the conflagration was Mr. Lewis' son, Kenneth, named. The building was partially covered by insurance.

Will Find Market For Quilt Makers

Have you any quilts that you want to sell?

Nearly every woman has a few and right now there is a demand for quilts of every kind. In order to meet that demand, Mr. Harry Goldberg of the Goldie's Department Store has made arrangements to take care of your sales without any cost to you.

If you have quilts that you wish to offer for sale simply mark the selling price on them, bring them to Goldie's Department Store and he will send them to the market for you. If your price is right and the quilts are purchased the money will be sent to Goldie's for you.

This should be of interest to everyone in the community who has quilts for sale. See Mr. Goldberg for details.

Senator Nickell On Planning Program

State Senator Clarence Nickell attended a two day conference in Lexington last week at which problems of taxation, city, county, and state reorganization and state planning were discussed. Fifty public officials, business men, educators, and political economists attended the meeting at the Phoenix Hotel, held under the auspices of the subcommittee on political education of the American Political Science Association.

Any tax program adopted by the state administration should be based on "ability to pay," leaders in the discussion on "planning a tax program," agreed. Various methods of tax revenue were discussed by former Congressman John Young Brown.

WPA PROJECTS IN COUNTY ARE ALLOCATED AND WORK STARTED TO CARE FOR EMPLOYABLES

Christmas Savings Accounts On Dec. 5

Santa Clause is a little early this year, around at the Citizens Bank—for the Christmas Club pay-off is scheduled for around Dec. 5 this year. At that time checks will be mailed out to those thrifty, forward-looking girls and boys—and older folks, still young at heart—who have been faithfully and systematically saving up against the time when we all want to make others happy by spending something extra for their comfort or pleasure. Members of this year's Christmas Club will have money to do this with without worry or "figgerin'." The amount distributed isn't so staggering, but it'll help Christmas trade a lot—and the popularity of the Club is evidenced by the fact that it is more than three as large as last year.

Many Roads And Projects Expected To Furnish Work For Many

An extensive program of construction, road building, and training centers has been approved for Rowan County under the Works Progress Administration, according to Dixon Shouse, project officer, Branch District No. 31, Morehead. L. H. Meredith, district engineer, has approved construction of seventeen stone retaining houses in Rowan County. Work on these houses, one for every election precinct, will start immediately. These buildings will be constructed according to standard specifications at a cost of approximately $1,000 each.

A project for the construction of a road from Farmers to the Bath-Fleming line (Lower Licking Road) has also been approved and approximately fifty men will be employed on its construction immediately. The length of the road is nine miles and twelve months will be required to finish it.

Another project calls for the construction of the Oak Grove Road. This road is six and a half miles in length and will employ approximately eighty men for a period of ten months. All roads are grade and drain, and surface with native stone. Both Federal and County equipment will be used.

The Big Perry Road (U. S. 69 near Gates, Ky. to Tar Branch on North Fork of Triplice Creek) will also be built. This road is eight miles long and will employ approximately eighty men for a period of several months.

These roads are termed farm-to-market roads and will open up a lot of back territory which is more or less isolated in the winter.

A training work center (Sewing school) will employ about sixty women of the county. There will probably be four centers but their location is at present uncertain.

This extensive works program should do much to alleviate the conditions which will exist after the cessation of activities by the K. E. R. A.

Jesse Stuart, On College Program

Jesse Stuart, a native Kentuckian who is fast gaining prominence as a writer, will come to Morehead State Teachers College, Monday, December 2, for a series of lectures. He will speak in chapel on the "Fraternal of Life through Poetry," and will address students of English in other sessions.

Stuart has been writing since he was eight years old. His first publication in a large magazine was in the AMERICAN MERCURY, January 1933. His contribution was a poem entitled "Elegy for Old Miss Church." Since that time his proand poetry has appeared in practically all of the important magazines of the country.

His first book, the largest book of sonnets ever published was printed in October, 1934. "The Man with the Bull-Tongue Flow," was immediately recognized as the work of a man with real talent. Containing 10,000 lines, it was the largest first book to be accepted by a publisher. His next publication will be a book of short stories which will appear in the near future.

OLDER BOYS' CONFERENCE TO BE HELD AT COLLEGE

Morehead State Teachers College will play host to young men of eastern Kentucky on December 13, 14, and 15, when an Eastern Kentucky Older Boys Conference will be held here under the auspices of the State Young Men's Christian Association of Kentucky. The theme of the conference will be "Security." For information concerning the conference ask the principal of your school or write E. H. Ludwig, district secretary, State Y. M. C. A., Ashland, Ky.

Why Be Thankful?

Once again we come to that season of the year wherein we pause to render thanks to almighty God for spiritual and temporal blessings received.

Thanksgiving Day in our country had its beginning more than three centuries ago, when at a gathering of the first harvest in the new world, the Pilgrims met to render into God their thanks for the blessings of liberty and prosperity.

Turn back the hands of the clock of time for twelve months. Ring down the curtain on the future! With our faces backward and our eyes piercing into the experience of past years, we cry aloud: "For what may we be thankful."

"DEATH AFTER DARK"

"Of 36,000 motor fatalities last year, 20,000 occurred at night," writes Governor Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, in an article in Liberty entitled "Death After Dark."

"The total economic waste of night time automobile accidents is estimated at nearly one and a half billion dollars."

"Sixty-nine per cent of those killed are pedestrians." "As a nation, we have failed to grasp the fact that as the sun goes down, so must our speed. We are simply driving too fast for our eyes."

Night driving, Governor Hoffman points out, involves three definite factors, each of which contributes to the hazard: 1. Overdriving our headlights; 2. Slow perception due to poor illumination; 3. The night pedestrian hazard.

Thousands of us are driving 50 and 60 miles an hour in cars equipped with 30-mile headlights. One solution to that is better illumination for streets and highways—irrefutable figures, based on extensive tests, show that the saving in economic waste, to say nothing of the human waste, pays the cost of good lighting many times over.

ONE, TWO, THREE AND FOUR

- (1) The speed of an automobile depends upon the horsepower of its motor. (2) The condition of business depends upon the buying power of the public. (3) To get faster speed from an automobile, increase its horsepower. (4) Need we go any further? And so what? (1) Every reader of the Rowan County News would like to buy many things that he, or she, needs. (2) The merchants of Morehead have these things and would like to sell them. (3) Every individual will buy what he or she needs when money is available—when there is individual buying power. (4) It is "good business" on the part of our merchants to see that our people possess buying power.

News of Yesteryear FROM THE FILES OF THE "NEWS"

8 YEARS AGO, DEC. 1, 1927 Mrs. Abel Caudill, 78, passed away at her home in this city on Monday evening, following a long illness. Henry (Tug) Howard was instantly killed on Saturday of last week, when the car which he was driving plunged from the road and turned turtle in the ditch. The accident occurred near the home of Charles Hezre on the Midland Trail. Announcement is made of the birth of Nancy Jane to Mr. and Mrs. John Will Holbrook. HOPES DIM IN HUNT OF MEN

SINGAPORE, Straights Settlement Renewed hopes of finding Sir Charles Kingford-Smith alive were dimmed Sunday when a rescue airplane reported it had failed to find him on Sayer Island, in the Bay of Bengal off Siam. The airplane went to Alor Star, British Malaya, for the night and will resume its search along the east coast Peninsula tomorrow.

U. S. STRIKES AT SHIPPER TO WAR ZONE

The United States put financial pressure on would-be shipper Friday while Great Britain and France turned aside Premier Benito Mussolini's sanctions protest with renewed avowal of allegiance to the League of Nations covenant. An implied Shipping Board threat to tighten the purse strings on debtor shipowners to the theater of war, was disclosed at Washington. On the heels of this revelation, the Italian Ambassador, Augusto Rocco, was cloistered for an hour with Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

STREAMS OF LAVA FROM HAWAIIAN VOLCANO

Hilo, Hawaii. — Five rivers of blazing lava surged down the slopes of Mauna Loa Sunday in one of Hawaii's most spectacular volcanic eruptions in years.

One sizzling stream, a mile wide, became for a time a potential menace to this city of 20,000, but it changed its course away from the city. Dr. Thomas a Jaggar, Government volcanologist, made plans to direct the flow by blasting in case it headed again toward Hilo.

FACES 25 YEAR PRISON TERM

Twenty-five years in prison faces Edith Maxwell, 21, because a hill folk jury in Wise, Va., upholding the law of the mountains that a girl cannot be away from her fireside after 9 o'clock at night, convicted her of the murder of her father, Triggs Maxwell, last July. In 40 minutes they rejected her plea that she beat her parent to death with a shoe when he tried to punish her for her "sin."

CHANDLER'S SUCCESS TOLD IN YEARBOOK

Columbus, O., Nov. 22 — Prof. Girdler Fitch of Ohio State University disclaims any credit for a college yearbook prophetic of success for Governor-elect Albert B. 'Happy' Chandler of Kentucky. Fitch and Chandler were classmates at Transylvania college, Lexington Ky. Fitch was editor of the yearbook. When they were seniors he inserted this quotation from Psalms 125:2 under Chandler's picture: "Happy shalt thou be and it shall be well with thee." "I didn't have any idea that he ever would be governor when that quotation was applied to him," Fitch related. "He's been called Happy ever since I knew him and the quotation was taken to fit his nickname." "We took all of the quotations from the Bible, as part of a general plan. That one just happened to fit him best. It was a case of wishing a classmate all the success in the world. It's done every year in all colleges. Fitch is an instructor in the department of romance languages at Ohio State.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written Each Week by Rev. B. H. Kasse.

SUBJECT: Ezra's Mission To Jerusalem. Ezra 7:6-19; 8:21-23, 31, 32.
GOLDEN TEXT: The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him. (Ezra 8:22.)

We left the people last Sunday with the Temple completed and dedicated in 516 B. C. From that date to 458 B. C. we know little of God's Chosen People. Zerubbabel was the governor appointed by the Persian kings to rule over Jerusalem. Haggai and Zechariah were the faithful prophets of God who stirred up the people to build the Temple. Then for forty-eight years there is silence. During this period occurred the Persian invasions of Greece from which they were, heroically routed by the Greeks. During this period, naturally there came a slump in the religious life of Israel. They soon became careless about the Temple and the spirit of worship.

"Where there is no vision the people perish" said someone. That was true here. They had no interpreter of the Scriptures and the worship was reduced to mere formality. Heathen customs entered in. For this work of revival God had a man named Ezra. He was a "ready scribe in the law," and he was in high favor with the king. The king granted him permission to take about six thousand of his people and make the nine-hundred-mile journey to Jerusalem, taking with him nearly five million dollars in gold as gifts from the king with the added privilege of drawing on the king's treasury for whatever else was needed to carry on the worship of Israel's people in Jerusalem.

Christian statesmanship is the counterpart of spiritual leadership through the church. A Christian state should be the result of spiritual churches.

The departing throng gathered at the river Ahava, a little distance from Babylon. There Ezra exercised practical wisdom in appointing twelve priests to bear the gold, weighing it out carefully to them and asking that it be weighed in again when they arrived at Jerusalem. By this he fixed responsibility.

The journey would be dangerous what about objection? Ezra had boasted to the King of Jehovah's protection and power, and, he said, "I am ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to go with me." He was not unaware of God's care and help when he said in simple fashion, describing that nine-hundred-mile journey, "And we came to Jerusalem." He knew the "street of their success was in God. Then came the joy of the Scriptures to receive and carry on the work of God in Jerusalem. Before departing from Babylon he had gone to the Levite college or seminary and had secured enough Levites to carry on in God's way. From all points of view a great, challenging undertaking had been successfully completed to the glory of God. God honors recognition, trust, and daring faith.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tabs the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of acid poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

FROSH BOXER WINS BOUT OVER PRIDE OF C A M P

Denver "Dynamite" Ball, frosh pugilist ace, blasted his way to a decision over "Taran" Flour, the Pride of the three 'C's in a five round bout in the local high school gymnasium Thursday night.

The frosh flash battled the C. C. C. hon from the start and pummeled him in every round to take all five and win the unanimous decision of the judges.

COLLEGE HEAD IS HONORED AT MEET

President Harvey A. Babb presided over the annual meeting of the Department of Superintendence in Frankfort, November 20, 21, and 22. Mr. Babb is president of the body which is composed of city and county superintendents of the state.

At the first session, Wednesday evening, the Hon. H. W. Peters, Superintendent of Public Instruction, elected, made the principal address.

The general session, Thursday morning, was presided over by Supt. E. F. Birchhead, Winchester. James W. Cammack, Jr., State Director of the N. R. A.; Emma J. Woerner, Atherton Girls High School, Louisville; and W. P. King, executive secretary, Kentucky Education Association, made addresses at this meeting.

Supt. D. J. Garty, Salersville, presided over the general session, Thursday afternoon. At this meeting, Warren C. Lippin, spoke on "Training Teachers to Meet the Requirements of the Modern School."

A six o'clock dinner was held in the ball room of the New Capital Hotel, Thursday evening, honoring Dr. James H. Richmond, retiring Superintendent of Public Instruction. Dr. Frederick Archer acted as toastmaster. Speakers on the program included Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University of Kentucky, Mr. Wenz and Mr. Richmond.

Frosh Basketeers Start Practice Sessions Early

Gather 'round, all ye basketeers and let's take a peek at the Eagles basketball prospects. There is sure to be a goodly number, there always is, but never before has the quality of the material exceeded that secured this season, by the freshman coach "Cap" Bill Scroggins. If there is anything in past performances, these boys should be world-beaters. Look 'em over!

Stan Arnsper, tried shot artist from Newport; Ed Kiser, versatile floor man from Ashland; John Cassidy, the Inex flash; Peebles of "Piner Giants" fame; Horton and Ishmael, those all-around men from Mt. Sterling; Ishmael, if pre-season dope is right, is "hot stuff." Norman, all state man from W. Va.; H. C. Smith, the smooth-working red-head from Hazel Green; Thornton, you want to watch this boy, from Williams; Hester and Moseley of Hazard; "Lefty" Anderson, the whiz from Russell, and last but not least, the big-dog of Ceredo--Kenova, "Curley" Wilson.

There are other boys who will undoubtedly develop before the season gets under way--these so called dark horses will only make the race for positions a more wide open affair.

Get on the band-wagon froshmen! Back the team from the start! Win, lose or draw, you can bet the farm!

CHANGES TO BE MADE IN W. P. A. ARRANGEMENTS

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 28. -- In order to speed the starting of Works Progress Administration Projects in Kentucky George H. Goodman, 30 administrator, today announced the 30 per cent relief labor required, as originally set up by Washington from the entire program in Kentucky.

It was found some of projects were being delayed because of an inefficiency of the right kind of labor to prosecute them to the best advantage. Recently Washington gave Mr. Goodman authority to nullify the rule that 50 per cent relief should be based on all contract projects and only 10 per cent to non relief labor.

Under Mr. Goodman's new edict all contract projects starting in Kentucky will first be financed, as far as possible, with certified work from relief rolls from the list of the Federal Employment Agency. In the event skilled workers are necessary and are not available from relief rolls the contractor, through the National Reemployment Service, is empowered to draw labor first from the precinct or locality in which the project is located, and then from the city or county at large.

Mr. Goodman pointed out, gives the operation of projects greater flexibility and touches a class of needy families heretofore eliminated from employment on Works Progress Administration projects, the borderline cases.

Five Veterans Back For Varsity Basketball

Shroy, Francis, Ryan, Parsley And Reason Out For Team.

This year the Eagles are looking forward to another highly successful season on the hardwood. Back from last year's first ten, who went to the semi-finals in the K. I. A. C. tournament, there are John Shroy, John Francis, Tommy Ryan, J. B. Parsley, and John Reason. These men are among the leading basketeers in the S. I. A. A.

Last year's freshmen who will give the veterans a run for a starting post are Carter, all-Eastern Kentucky forward, Pierce, McKeckie, and Mitchell. Leslie who played last season in "back in school" will be eligible for second semester.

Most of the men are already working out, but regular practice does not open until Dec. 2.

The schedule proper will not open until after the Christmas holidays but the basketeers will probably play several practice tilts. They will probably meet the Alumni and the C. C. C. boys.

Former Teacher Here Dies At Lexington

Mrs. Lillard Carter, who formerly taught in the Morehead Normal died at her home in Lexington last Thursday. The following article was taken from the Courier-Journal.

The body of Mrs. Gertrude Carter, 72, who died at Lexington last Thursday of pneumonia, was buried in the Lawrenceburg Cemetery this afternoon. Funeral services were conducted in Lexington by the Rev. Dr. J. Archer Gray, pastor of Every body's Church.

Mrs. Carter was the widow of Senator Lillard H. Carter, Lawrenceburg, who had represented his county and district in both branches of the Kentucky Legislature, and was president pro tempore of the Senate at the time of the assassination of Gov. William Goebel. He automatically became Lieutenant Governor when J. C. W. Beckham was appointed chief executive.

She spent the most of her life in Lawrenceburg, leaving here after Mr. Carter's death to reside in Lexington with her son, Nolan Carter.

FARM AND HOME

Economists predict better prices for poultry during the rest of the winter, well into the next year. The larger supply of eggs is expected to hold prices off extreme heights. The poultry industry, as a whole, is considered to be in a good position.

Due to the fact that feeding is on the increase, cattle prices are expected to drop during the late winter and spring. Prices of the lower grades of cattle, on the other hand, are expected to rise, due to reduced supply of this type and continued shortage of pork.

It is now believed that the flavor of lamb is not affected by the fall, which is this paper's outer covering of the carcass. Leg of lamb is in shape better if cooked with the fall, but the appearance of the shoulder, saddle and chops is improved by its removal.

Tests made at the Western Experiment Substation showed that for each 100 pounds of fire-cured tobacco hung on sticks, 75 pounds remained when wilted, 53 pounds when yellowed, 25 pounds when colored, and 18 pounds when the leaf and stems were dry, but the stalk still green.

Cleaning up and burning of fence rows and destroying and removing debris and grass from around fruit trees will kill many injurious insects. If codling moth damage has been severe, scrape and burn the rough bark from the trunks and limbs.

FRUIT MEN TO TALK MARKETS AND NUTS

Members of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, in their annual winter meeting in Louisville, December 5-6, will discuss local markets, nut growing, and insect and disease control.

The afternoon of the first day will be devoted to discussions of local markets. Speakers include Ben E. Niles, Henderson, secretary of the society; Vincent Desunzio, Louisville county agricultural agent; ville merchant; S. W. Anderson, Jeff-Meade Pottinger, president of Cincinnati; Wm. and Dr. Morton Cooper of the United States Depart-

J. N. Kennard Says. Record Will Win

J. N. Kennard, Ashland candidate for Railroad Commissioner in the third railroad district, denied today that he was defeated in the November '6 election by C. C. Stanfill of Rarava.

The ballots in Floyd and several other counties involved in litigation will show the receiving in the district majorities of 2,900 to 4,900 he stated today.

The official count, according to the secretary of state's office, has never been tabulated and I feel confident that when all the counties' votes now in question are recounted, I will have been elected by a safe majority, he added.

A recount of the ballots of the counties involved is expected to be made this week.

of Lexington and by Dr. James W. Martin, head of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Kentucky.

Mr. Nickell, instructor in the department of education at the college here, declared that centralization of the various bureaus and commissions in state government was a step in the right direction.

A night session will consist of an exhibition of nuts and discussions of nut growing and marketing. Speakers include J. F. Williamson, Rockport, Ind., and John H. Hershey, Dowlington, Pa., noted nut producers and Prof. N. R. Elliott of the state College of Agriculture.

The following suggestions regarding the use of allotment cards and the handling of excess tobacco were issued by the tobacco-section of the A. S. through the State Tobacco Office at Lexington: Experiment Station at Lexington.

"Use of Allotment cards." As a contract tobacco grower, your attention is called to the following points in connection with the allotment card:

1. All sales of tobacco produced under your contract must be entered on your allotment card, which must be presented to the agent of the secretary of agriculture at the time you have the remaining payment warrant may be issued, before you obtain payment for your tobacco.

2. If tenants or share croppers produce any of the tobacco under your contract in 1935, you are obliged to apply the tax-payment warrant without discrimination among producers, tenants and share croppers, in proportion to the amount of tobacco produced by each.

3. After each sale you should check the entries on the allotment card against your sale bill to see that the number of pounds are added correctly on the sale bill, entered correctly on the allotment card and correctly subtracted from the Un-sold Allotment!

4. When all of your sales have been completed, your allotment card must be returned to the county office before the remaining payment warrant may be made on your contract. If your allotment card is lost, the secretary of agriculture is not obliged to replace the lost card, nor to issue tax-payment warrants. Such loss of allotment card should be reported immediately to the county agent's office.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

As Translated Into The English

By IRVIN S. COBB

SOMETIMES a story taken on added value in the re-telling of it even though the man who repeats it gets it twisted. This doesn't happen often, still it does happen. I recall an instance.

One day at dinner in hotel at Lexington, Virginia, I was reminded of a yarn which I had from Sam Bythe and when I was called upon by the chairman to speak a few words I told it and it went very well. It had to do with a prospector in Oklahoma who, on a Saturday night, bought a quart of moonshine whiskey and took it to his lonely cabin, anticipating a pleasant Sunday. But as he crossed the threshold he stumbled and fell, dropping his precious burden and smashing the bottle, so that its aromatic contents were washed upon the floor. Depressed by his misfortune, the unfortunate man went to bed. As he lay there brooding his loss, a snappy, fat-tailed, long-tail rat with one ear and part of a tail, emerged limberly from a hole in the boardwalk, sat up, sniffed the laden air and then, darning stride he where the liquor made a puddle in a depression of the planking, ran out the tiny pink nose, took one quick sip of the stuff and fled in sudden panic to his retreat. But it didn't stay shortly it scampered and, and now a student of rats would have discerned that a translation had taken place in the spirits of this particular rat. Suddenly he had grown cocky, disdainful, almost reckless. It straddled deliberately back to the liquor and imbibed again. Seemingly satisfied it started for home but, changing its mind, it returned and partook a third time of the refreshment. Immediately over its far forehead, and end, its eyes burned red, like pigeon-blood rubies, and straightening itself upon its hind legs it waved its forepaws in a gesture of defiance and shrilly cried out: "Now, bring on that dad-blame cat!"

No one seemed to enjoy my little story more than did the great old one again. After the party broke up he made me tell it to him to remember it. In fact, he confessed to me that he expected to use it when he got home as a typical example of American humor. So I told him the whole later, was in London. I attended a dinner. My English friend was the toastmaster. Perhaps my presence recalled to him the incident he had so liked. At any rate, he undertook to repeat it.

This version of it ran for perhaps twenty minutes. He entered into a full exposition of the potency of the illicit distillation known as the Yankies, he said, at which time he was interrupted by a remark about the habits of rats, pointing out that because as rats did not customarily indulge in intoxicants a few drops of any liquor containing high alcoholic content would be likely, for the time being, to alter the nature of almost any rat. At length he reached his point. It ran like this: "And then, this little rodent, being now completely transformed by the repeated portions, reared both upright and, voicing the potential of other indignation both in tone and manner, it cried out in a voice like this: "I say, I wonder if there isn't a cat about somewhere?" Club Plans Aid For Grid Stars

Would Have Morehead Merchants Assist Football Players.

A program of local merchant aid for football players was discussed at a meeting of the Campus Club, Wednesday. The plan is to help financially high school graduates who desire a college education and who can help Morehead's grid future.

"If we can bring ten good men here, whether former M. S. T. C. football stars or outstanding prep school grads with a real football record, we will be doing not only the boys themselves, but also the school, a real service," said president William Thompson.

This work was roughly planned was to request the merchants and other townspeople to find employment in their business or around their homes for these men.

Dr. Rex Livingston Hoke, professor in the education department, is delivering a series of lectures before the City Teachers Association of Paris, Kentucky. These lectures will continue throughout the fall and winter and will deal with the subjects, "Teaching Children How to Study," and "Teaching Children How to Read."

Dr. Ross of the University of Kentucky, and Dr. Cuff of Eastern State Teachers College, are also lecturers in the series of six meetings.

The next meeting of the Association is set for December 9. Each program includes a lecture followed by an open forum and question period.

DEBATE CLUB

The initial meeting of the debate team was held Monday afternoon with sixteen aspirants present. Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, debate coach, was well pleased with the interest shown. He advanced the possibility of both freshmen and women teams.

The question, RESOLVED: That Congress should be permitted, by a two-thirds majority vote, to override any decision of the Supreme Court declaring a law unconstitutional, was briefly discussed. A list of books pertaining to the subject was given out by Dr. Lloyd.

Those present were: Thomas E. Rogers, W. K. Hall, Nathaniel Griswold, David S. Leslie, Jr., Charles Schweitzer, Clyde - Barton, Alton Payne, Howard Hadden, John Shuey, Earl Dean, Howard Eckles, Elijah Hogg, Martha Francis Harman, Betty Blank, Edith Hays, and Sus-

anne Langford. Study of the question and practice in speaking will start immediately, according to Dr. Lloyd. It is possible that a series of practice debates may be held before the Christmas vacation.

The men's team will probably go east this year and if the women's team materializes they will probably take a trip to the north.

TEACHERS MEET

Dean W. H. Vaughan and Romie D. Judd, acting head of the department of education, attended a meeting of the Teacher Training Council, advisory committee to the Council on Higher Education in Kentucky, at Frankfort, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The council decided that they would recommend that all but four courses may be taken by correspondence or extension work. Courses to be included would be Practice Teaching in the Elementary School, Practice Teaching in the Secondary School, Fundamentals of Elementary Education, and the course prerequisite for teaching in the secondary school.

Morehead however, will not allow a great many courses to be completed by extension, according to Dean Vaughan. The recommendations apply to the state at large and are not binding on individual institutions.

The committee also discussed the nature of the course, Fundamentals of Elementary Education.

BEAUX ARTS CLUB

Over 20 members of the Beaux Arts Club left Saturday morning for an art tour in Cincinnati in Caskey's new blue and gold bus. The group visited the Rookwood Pottery and the Cincinnati art museum in Eden park, the Botanical gardens, and the New Terminal. The terminal was included in the tour because of its modern architecture, sculpture, and decoration; the mosaic murals being the work of Winold Reiss. The campus artists had lunch in the art museum cafeteria.

Some of the group took in current plays or concerts during the evening.

The following were among those who went with the artists: Joe Marshall, Mary M. Barber, Kathleen Morris, Shirley Bradley, Willis Queen, Woodson Dale, Mollie Day, Francis Abrams, H. K. Collins, Burnell Vice, Aileen Wall, Hubert Webb, Ruth Lensing, Clyde Wooten, Nancy Botts, Dorothy Prichard, George Rafter, Lorene Colborn, Naomi Baker, Harold Blair and Georgia Martin, Naomi Clappolt, art department head and Ralph Hudson, art instructor, club sponsors, accompanied the group. A large part of the art club through making the miniature football players sold at Homecoming and in making block-printed banquet place cards.

In making apple butter, add grated lemon rind at the rate of a teaspoonful to a pound of the apples after they have been cooked until soft in just enough water to keep them from burning. The recipe also calls for half as much sugar as apples.

What is a TATOOM?

A TATOOM is something edible? Yes! It's a vegetable. In fact, if it were not for the present fad for puzzles and mixing up the letters in a word and then deriving you to unscramble them, you would recognize it immediately as tomato.

You recognize it immediately, too, whenever you meet it in physical form, whether it is scrambled up with eggs or mingled with many other foods. For the particular virtue of tomatoes is that they add their own individual touch of flavor to any dish in which they are included.

Always Recognizable. Take a tomato on a plate, for instance. Here's the way to make a most appetizing one. Chop one small onion and half a green pepper fine and saute in one tablespoon butter till tender but not brown. Add one cup canned tomato sauce, one-half teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper if necessary, and three tablespoons chopped ripe olives. Heat to boiling and pour over the onion-pepper mixture. Do you think you would ever mistake the tomato in this combination for onions, green pepper, olives or an egg?

Or take scalloped tomatoes and peas. Here is the way to prepare this delicious dish. Cut one No. 2 can tomatoes, with three-fourths teaspoon salt, one tablespoon onion, one-half cup finely chopped peas and one-third cup grated cheese. Then put alternate layers of the tomatoes, peas and cheese into a buttered baking dish. Cover the top with three-fourths cup hot, melted crumble and bake in a 400 degree oven for twenty-five minutes. Serves six. The peas and the cheese contribute their distinctive flavors to this recipe. But it is the tomatoes which make it a triumphant success.

Housing Hints

CHECK CHIMNEY When the wind howls outside do you ever consider the chimney perched aloft on the roof? It might be a good idea to go up, or send someone up, to see how your chimney is standing the years and the heat. Then, while you're up there, examine the coping, the mortar joints and the flashing. These items, if in bad condition, can be repaired under the Modernization Credit Plan of the Federal Housing Administration, and it will help give it added life.

WIDE POARCHES A wide covered porch casts out a great portion of the light which would, if the porch were removed, be available for the room which has windows opening onto it.

Before Winter comes, and the living or dining room opening onto the porch becomes dark and gloomy, remove the old porch. An attractive open terrace, protected by a green hedge, will be far more pleasant. During the Summer an awning may be used for protection from the sun.

LIGHTNING In determining what procedure to follow in providing lightning protection for specific cases it is necessary to consider a number of factors. Take into consideration the frequency and severity of thunderstorms. The value and nature of the building and its contents, and local conditions.

In addition, the home owner should determine the relation of the cost of lightning protection to insurance premiums and the personal hazards and indirect losses which may result.

The other evening we heard a woman ask what in the world would become of the younger generation. That's an easy one. They'll fall in love, get married, have children and trouble and all that sort of thing, and as they get older they will worry about what's to become of the younger generation.

New Golden-Moyet Motives

CHAPTER FOUR

Ann and Vronsky returned to St. Petersburg and found themselves in a world of problems. Public appearance for her was impossible. He was still acceptable to society, but his loyalty and devotion to her made it impossible for him to accept the invitations which poured in on him from all sides. They found themselves isolated and no one but Yashvin, Vronsky's regimental companion, visited their apartment.

As the months rolled by, both realized sadly that their dream of claiming their right to belong to each other—their very love—held them prisoners.

Anna ached to see Sergei but it was impossible for her even to glimpse the child. The news of her efforts to prevent this. Her various return had doubled Karenin's efforts to meet with heartbreaking failure until at last she determined to force an opportunity.

Early in the morning of Sergei's birthday, she set for Karenin's house, her arms laden with gifts for her child.

Karenin was still asleep and the servant trembling under her that she might see Sergei only until the master rang the bell that announced his awakening.

She entered Sergei's room swiftly and silently, her joy at seeing him all but suffocating her. The child seized her in his arms as she covered his face, his hands, his shoulders and his arms with kisses.

"Mother! Mother!" he cried. You have come! His eyes filled with tears. They told me you were dead. But I didn't believe it. I told father it wasn't true—

Anna couldn't trust herself to speak, but the child, happy in her arms, rambled on. He told her of his doing, breaking her heart a thousand times by his unconsciously cruel revelations of his sense of loss since her departure. And even as Anna clasped him to her she heard the servant's bell ring. Sergei looked up in dismay, his child mind somehow comprehending the fact that his father must not find her there. Don't go yet, he begged. He's just ringing for his servant. He won't come in until he never comes in until nine o'clock.

The footman ran into the room. Please your Excellency, he begged. Hurry.

Anna's eyes overflowed as she strained to kiss her child, kissing him wildly. Darling—Darling—she wept. She felt the footman's hand upon her arm. Yes—she faltered. I'm leaving.

On the landing she paused uncertainly, dazed by the suddenness of her departure. With a shock she realized that Karenin's door had opened and that she was face to face with her husband.

This is impossible! Karenin trembled with rage as he spoke.

Anna gestured helplessly toward Sergei's room. His birthday—she pleaded.

I told my son you were dead! he answered. You will never see this house again. You will never see Sergei again.

She reached the street blind with tears and without knowing where she was going, somehow found her way. Only Vronsky could help her now. She rang for her servant and learned that he had gone to his club with Yashvin.

Gone to the club with Yashvin. Her mind mullied over the meaning of this. Why had Vronsky left the house at that hour of the morning for an outing with his regimental cronies. Was he tired of her? This possibility smote her with fresh anguish. Her visit to Sergei had proven all too clearly the price she had paid for her love and now when she needed Vronsky he was away seeking diversion.

Vronsky returned, his mind busy with the details of his day. He was sadly pensive. For the time he realized what it meant to be shut off so completely from those deep layers of his life in which he had been embedded before he met Anna. How low worth the sacrifice of career, duty and a man's place among men in the world? The question thrust itself into his consciousness try as he might to drown it.

And Anna sensed his thoughts and precipitated the terrible quarrel from which there seemed to be no return to happiness. His anger frightened her and in an attempt to placate him she suggested they attend the opera. Vronsky was contemptuous of the idea—he knew society's attitude to them both, too well, to try it. But Anna forced the issue with cold disdain for each other in their hearts they set out for the opera.

From the moment of their entrance into the opera house until the lights dimmed and the overture began she was tortured by the staves, whistlings and open hostility of the world which had once been hers.

Vronsky, stricken with compassion for her, grew tender and protective again. Both now knew that it was impossible for them to remain in St. Petersburg, and together they fled to his country estate, hoping to reclaim the happiness which had been theirs in Italy.

Peace returned to them there, and summer passed gaily and happily. But as fall approached the rainy season set in. Anna was content to wait for better weather, but the inactivity began to tell on Vronsky.

He made innumerable trips to Moscow, ostensibly to discuss the management of his estate with his mother. Anna learned that her mother was harboring a guest at her home in the person of the charming Princess Sorokina, loveliest debutante of the season. Her heart trembled at his every departure and return.

His quarrels grew more numerous and more deadly, but each time their love renewed itself more desperately and fiercely than ever before. At last Anna realized she must attempt some social diversion. With this in mind, she suggested a dinner party to his former regimental companions.

She put into the dinner the charm of wit, beauty and good taste which had made her St. Petersburg's outstanding hostess. Every man there was fascinated by her loveliness—and felt pity in his heart for her and envy for Vronsky.

As Anna looked over the brilliant assemblage of officers and into Vronsky's glowing face, hope beat high in her heart. Vronsky was talking excitedly to his colonel. The latter rose to his feet.

"Get up!" he shouted! Good news! Vronsky has agreed to volunteer with us in the Servian-Turkish uprising.

Anna fell back in her chair and wept. Her eyes were dimmed as she heard cheers and shouts of congratulation echoed about her.

He answered their toast jubilantly, his defiant gaze at her hurling the distance between them. Her eyes filled with tears. She knew that everything was over between them.

"Throughout the sleepless night she clung desperately to the hope that her love might yet be salvaged. She waited until the dawn burst to his room and found him surrounded by his luggage. She clutched his arm in horror.

It's true, she cried. You are really leaving!

"Yes," he said. I have a telegram from Yashvin. We are to go to the front. I have to go to Moscow to say goodbye to my mother.

He was going to war immediately! Her rage died as a tear and love overwhelmed her. Her eyes filled with tears.

Let me go to the station with you, she begged.

Vronsky refused; he believed it better for his sake and hers that they say goodbye where they were.

You're tired of me, she cried, deeply wounded by his refusal. This volunteering is only an excuse for leaving me. The gallant heroic, excited, she accused bitterly.

Vronsky turned to her in a passion. You know me—and yet you think me capable of any baseness of any deception. I love you, you know that. But—the paused and then faced the issue squarely. Love isn't everything.

One only says that when love is over—and done with, she pleaded desperately.

He stared ahead of him in silence. Her calm was ominous and foreboding as she walked slowly out of the room. She heard the front door slam. She sprang to the window and saw him enter his carriage and drive off without a backward glance.

We can part like this. I can't bear it, she wept. He hates me. He mustn't hate me. I must see him before he goes.

She dressed feverishly and rode from the house to the depot and from the depot into Moscow without sending the passing of time or the movement of the train.

The Moscow station swarmed with departing soldiers and their beloved ones. She looked from one face to another—and then up and down the long line of trains. At last she saw Vronsky. He was leaning out of his coach window cheerfully bidding goodbye to two women—his mother and the Princess Sorokina, lovely, young and restrained.

Anna braced herself against a platform pillar to keep from falling. Her eyes opened and closed in a confusion of weeping. The whistle sounded and the train chugged out of the station, carrying with it all she held dear on earth.

Night time found her still resting against the pillar.

Suddenly she picked up her head. A rhythmic tapping had found its way into her unhearing ears.

An old, withered and bearded train man shuffled down the platform. He moved toward the platform. He moved toward the train and with his little hammer tested the rails and couplings. Tap, tap, tap, went his hammer. Now the rails and the couplings. Anna rose from her seat, her eyes filled with horror and fascination. Tap, tap, tap. The rhythm of his hammer called her to Vronsky. Why she could not fathom.

Anna hurried after the workman. She came to the end of the platform and saw him disappear into the crowd. His job was finished. But the tap, tap continued in her consciousness, drowning out the warning blast of the train whistle and the first puff of the engine.

Tap, tap, tap.

The rhythm echoed the sound of Vronsky's voice: You don't know me, of course, Madam Karenina. And her own: It is an omens—an evil omen. In a momentary burst of clarity, she saw again the station tragedy which marked her first meeting with Vronsky. And then all was submerged as the tap, tap, tap, now of the rail—now of the couplings—mingled furiously and tore through her mind in a gigantic, waiting and tortured crescendo.

With a quick movement, Anna thrust herself on the rails.

The train moved down upon her. And her bag, puffing in their crushed hand, fell open, throwing upon the tracks her miniature of Sergei. Its glass splintered in a million pieces.

News of the Week

COLLEGE THEATRE
Many figures drawn from real-life characters associated with the Western frontier come to life in the vivid screen drama, "Annie Oakley," in which Barbara Stanwyck is starred.

Annie Oakley, the central character, was born in the backwoods of Ohio. She became the most amazing rifle shot the world had ever known, the toast of America, welcomed by European royalty. Her whole life was a brilliant pattern of romance and action, said to be captured faithfully in the film.

COZY THEATRE
William Boyd, who creates the title role in the Harry Sherman production of "Hopalong Cassidy," adopted from the best seller, brings a new two-gangster film to the screen that, in the opinion of Clarence E. Mulford, author, personifies in flesh and blood the beloved fiction of his many books.

In William Boyd, the author feels he has the prototype of "Hopalong Cassidy," celebrated two-gangster character, a product of his own writing who has been a favorite western hero of thousands of readers through some twenty books in which Mulford has carried his colorful cowboy figure. The film comes Sunday and Monday December 1 and 2 to the Cozy Theatre.

For many years a screen favorite, Boyd himself feels that in "Hopalong Cassidy" he has found a role he thoroughly enjoys playing, in which there is a strength of character providing him with an opportunity to give a sincere, noteworthy portrayal.

The story of the first "Hopalong Cassidy" screen western revolves around the adventures of three cowboy comrades, William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison, and Frank McFlynn.

These and many other colorful characters live again in the film version of Annie Oakley's dramatic life. The romantic lead to Miss Stanwyck in the title role is Preston Foster portraying Toby Walker. Other principals are Melvyn Douglas; Moroni Olsen as Buffalo Bill; Pert Kelton; Alan Clyde; Chief Thunderbird as Sitting Bull; and Phillip Ar-Hen-Ta-Hain in "The Face." "Annie Oakley" is an RKO Radio Picture.

Sundays show at the College is "Transatlantic Tunnel" with Richard Dix, Madge Evans, Leslie Banks, Helen Vinson, C. Aubrey Smith, Basil Sidney in a stirring drama in the depths of the Atlantic.

Jr. Inseparable pals, Happy-go-lucky quick on the trigger, ready to die for each other, they concern themselves mostly with riding the range, looking for danger and generally finding it.

This particular episode serves to introduce the famous Mulford characters and reveals how William Boyd gets his nicknames, "Hopalong". As soon as Robert Warwick and his daughter, Paula Stone, move next to the Bar-20 ranch complications arise which lead to Ellison falling in love with Miss Stone, and the two ranches Bar-20 and H-2 becoming enemies through a third party, Kenneth Thompson, rustling cattle from both, but leading each to suspect the other.

When Boyd, Ellison—and McGlynn decide to track these rustlers and cattle brand forgers to their hideout, Thunder Mesa, and give them their just deserts, excitement, thrills and action run at full speed from start to finish. Sensational riding, dangerous cliff climbing, fast-lighted dynamic and desert terror are but a few of the difficulties these boys experience, until the bad men are brought to terms.

Charles Middleton, George Hayer and Willie Pung are in the cast.

RABBIT FEVER

Don't suppose anyone knows exactly how to spell it unless he is a doctor, but this is also the season when the "rabbit fever" takes its toll.

Rabbit fever is dangerous even though many people fail to recognize it. It is, according to doctors, caused by a tiny tick which is located in the skin of the rabbit and does not effect the meat. In skinning the rabbit, the tick will enter any slight cut or abrasion on the hand and cause the fever or disease to develop. There is only one way to absolutely prevent it. That is to wear rubber gloves when skinning rabbits.

That the disease is dangerous, we have a local case which is likely to result in the death of one of our long time respected residents, Mrs. T. W. Rose, wife of Captain Rose, is being at present at the point of death as the result of the infection.

One cannot be too careful in handling rabbits as anyone of them may be infected with the disease. Remember that it is said not to affect the meat, but to be located only in the skin of the rabbit. Proper care in handling while skinning is said to be an absolute protection against the disease.
