Thursday Morning, December 9, 1937. THE CONTROLLING OF DANGEROUS FORCES

As Albert W. Whitney of the National Conservation Bureau and the National Safety Council, points out, civilization is constantly introducing new hazards into life, such as steam, electricity, explosives, poisons, locomotives and airplanes. Gradually, as our knowledge increases, we learn how to use them and how to control them so that they may perform the utmost in public service with a minimum of risk.

The automobile is in the same category. And it can be dealt with in the same manner as other dangerous forces whose menace has been eliminated or greatly subdued, and whose contributions to better living and working conditions have been correspondingly increased.

Education is the essential thing. And it must not be hit-and-miss education. It must represent a permanent, planned program, administered by experts.

So far as the traffic problem is involved, it is difficult to educate the adult. But the adults of tomorrow can be taught to use our streets and highways carefully and properly. Amazing progress has been made in expanding safety education, and training in school curricula. Students are not only taught the rudiments of safe driving, but what is equally important, the rudiments of safe walking. The result is found in the steady decline in traffic fatalities to children of school age, even though fatalities to adults greatly increased during the same years.

The school which does not teach safety shirks its responsibility to the children in its care, and to the community at large. Comparatively little expense is required to adopt and carry out a safety course—and the saving, measured in dollars as well as in the more important coin of lives, is incalculably greater.

PLOT UNCOVERED BY FRANCE

Discovery in France of a widespread powerfully organized Fascist plot to overthrow the Government again focuses attention on democracy's struggle for preservation. The forces of the Fascist Right in France are weaker than in Spain. The soldiers of the French Army are traditionally Republican. Democracy in France has proved its vitality many times. Yet testimony by Andre Tardieu in a recent trial indicated that many of the most powerful interests in France had supported movements hostile to the democratic form of government. The recent declaration of the Count of Paris, pretender to the French throne, that he would work actively for the restoration shows that one section of the Right believes itself strong enough to come into the open. And now the discovery of huge stores of munitions, underground fortifications and battle plans indicate that the struggle for power was not expected to follow parliamentary lines.

However, the French people seem not to be forgetting that discoveries of plots against the Republic can usually be turned to good account by any Government in power. Circumstances at present within the Popular Front probably will encourage the Government to adopt such a policy.

HOW TO ELIMINATE HOME FIRE HAZARDS

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has just released a bulletin entitled, "How to Look for Dwellings House Inspections." While the bulletin is specially designed for firemen, the advice it gives can easily be followed to advantage by home owners.

Items to be checked from outside the house include: 1. Condition of roof, old or warped roofing collect sparks. 2. Condition of chimneys. Loose bricks open joints cracks in masonry support. 3. Signs of frost on roof. 4. Condition of gutters. 5. Cleanliness and good maintenance are essential precautions. 5. The storage of hazardous materials such as oil and kerosene. Inside the house a thorough fire inspection must include the checking of accumulated waste and discarded materials; storage of fuel; the condition of furnaces, stoves and other heating appliances; possible defects in inside chimneys, fire steps, etc. The citizen who is uncertain as to hazards and their elimination can get the necessary information from the National Board of Fire Underwriters, 85 John Street, New York, or can doubtless obtain the assistance of local fire marshals. Periodic inspection by owners would unquestionably prevent the great majority of the dwelling fires which destroy millions of dollars in property values and take thousands of lives annually.

KEEP YOUR FAMILY CLEAR OF THIS TOLL

The safest way to burn trash is in an incinerator. But even then, constant care must be taken. In one instance, a man who had lighted some papers in an incinerator, attempted to push them down and put more in. The flames ignited the sleeve of his shirt and burned him seriously. In another case, a woman was watching trash burn in an incinerator which was too full. The wind veered, the flames ignited her clothing. She was so badly burned that she died in agony.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters advises against burning trash, even in an incinerator, if any wind at all is blowing.

Much clothing worn today is made partly of compositions that ignite easily and burn furiously. Accordingly, greater care must be taken to avoid the danger of setting clothing on fire. Load your incinerator, but don't stuff it. Once the fire is started, let it burn down before adding more. Stay well out of reach of the flames and keep children at a distance.

READY FOR THE HOLIDAY RUSH

Morehead stores are ready for the big holiday season just ahead. The business houses are filled with gay, irrefutable Christmas merchandise to meet the demand of the most exacting shopper. Enormous stocks of new merchandise offered by local merchants will make Christmas shopping a real adventure in Morehead. There is no need to go elsewhere.

They early while stocks are complete and help the postoffice department by mailing early this year. By doing your Christmas shopping at home you will avoid the crush and congestion of the metropolitan centers, and you will find stocks are fully on a par with those in the larger cities taking into consideration quality, variety and prices. When you buy at home you will also be creating jobs for local citizens and helping stores that greatly contribute to the upkeep of the city, schools and county. Which is the gift suggestion of merchants that appear in the independent? They will greatly aid you in making your purchases.

THE FOOL AND HIS MONEY

In a talk given over a Chicago radio station, a representative of the Better Business Bureau of that city pointed out that unscrupulous salesmen of various commodities, many of them worthless, were trying to persuade their potential victims to borrow on their life insurance to "invest" in the salesman's wares. The Better Business Bureau speaker warned vigorously against falling for this bait, and advised: "Before you invest investigate." The title of his talk was, "Use Your Life Insurance Cash Value? Use Your Head Instead." That is first class advice. To reduce the value of the capital built up to provide protection for dependents and self-sustaining old age, in order to invest in some quick scheme, is the very height of folly. The public must consistently be on its toes to guard against the unscrupulous salesman of phony stocks, useless property and unworkable inventions who are always trying to separate the fool and his money.

YOU CAN'T LEGISLATE BRAINS

There is a growing realization on the part of merchandising groups, that those merchants who back laws to penalize their competitors, are courting disaster. This point of view dominates some remarks recently made by Hector Lazo, Executive Vice President of the Cooperative Food Distributors of America, who said: "Merchants who prefer to place their reliance on discriminatory or class legislation will find themselves left behind in the parade. There is no law that can legislate brains for the man who fails to use his own, nor inject ambition and self-reliance into the heart of the lazy." Under a process of free competition, with equitable laws and tax and labor policies applying to all, the merchandising system which gives the public the most for its money will make the fastest progress. Brains and energy and ideas—not restrictive laws—are what make for merchandising development, and for better service to the consumer.

INSURANCE THAT FITS

Much of the controversy over life insurance could be avoided if we simply realized that a program that is sound for one man may be unsound for another. Thus, one person's needs may call for insurance that contains both protection and investment features—and another for insurance which provides for protection alone. Both kinds are good—but only if they fit the specific buyer.

WORRIES

"There seems to be a lot of worry as to whether the salmon will be able to get over the Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River, but no one seems to be worrying whether the taxpayers will ever get over.—The Commentator."

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP LESSON TOPIC— The Fellowship Home JUNIOR TOPIC— God's Great Family INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Comradeship with Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC— Daily Fellowship with Christ and Christians.

Fellowship—the word is rich in meaning even as it concerns the ordinary relationships of life. It speaks of the association of man down and put more in. The flames ignited the sleeve of his shirt and burned him seriously. In another case, a woman was watching trash burn in an incinerator which was too full. The wind veered, the flames ignited her clothing. She was so badly burned that she died in agony. Our Scripture selections for today are from two books of the Bible. Both speak of an eternal Christian fellowship with God which is his most glorious partnership with each other, but we do two other very important things—first, we emphasize this fellowship to those who are followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, and 2. We broaden the fellowship beyond the bounds of men with each other, and bring them into the circle of Christ. This is the most glorious partnership. Do you belong? Christ says, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in he shall be saved" (John 10:9).

Our Scripture selections for today are from two books of the Bible. Both speak of an eternal Christian fellowship with God which is his most glorious partnership with each other, but we do two other very important things—first, we emphasize this fellowship to those who are followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, and 2. We broaden the fellowship beyond the bounds of men with each other, and bring them into the circle of Christ. This is the most glorious partnership. Do you belong? Christ says, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in he shall be saved" (John 10:9).

The first Epistle of John presents to us fellowship with God as depending on three things—faith, love and truth. When these are in their combination a very beautiful picture of truth is given. It is the fellowship with God depends on our walking in the light. God is righteousness—God is truth. Fellowship with God depends on our walking in the light. God is righteousness—God is truth. Fellowship with God depends on our walking in the light. God is righteousness—God is truth.

Let us open the hidden recesses of the heart to the light of God and put every evil thing under the sun into the light of Christ which cleanseth us from all sin.—v. 7. Christian Fellowship—For Fellowship is with God and with one another. It is the fellowship of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.—v. 7.

Our present communion with God and with one another is most precious—but how often it is marred by sin and stained by the wickedness that surrounds us in the world. We look forward to that day when we who are the followers of Christ shall be delivered not only from the penalty and the power of sin, but also from the very presence. While we have no pleasure in the destruction of the sinner and would plead with him to turn to God, his sin is marred by Scripture that a time will come when God will have been judged and taken away to follow their leader—Satan in eternal punishment for sin. There will be a new heaven and a new earth, in which shall be dwelling every elect which has been renewed in righteousness. Then will come the resurrection and glorification of all things when God shall come to dwell with them forever and ever. Amen. God himself shall be with them and be their God.—v. 3.

That communion shall never be disturbed by the falling of any tear. There will be no mourning, no crying, no pain.—v. 4. We wonder that these words have been so often repeated to the people in their darkest hours. They are not the futile words of human solace. They come from the eternal God. Three questions have intrigued the curiosity of man: First, where did I come from? Why am I here? and third, where am I going? The Christian is the only one who has a satisfying solution for the problem of the origin of all things. "In the beginning God;" a reason for the existence of things. "God gave life to Christ;" and a satisfactory consummation of all things. "And complete the deed ... Already most of the buildings inside the old men have been razed. One dormitory and the old "factory" are the only buildings left. The block B is gradually "biting the dust." A new office building would be a great aid here. There are a half dozen departments that need room, having outgrown their old quarters.

Pressure is being brought to bear on the new legislators concerning the freeing of the state owned toll bridges. Henry Ward Democratic representative of Paducah, is barnstorming over the state holding meetings at which he outlines a proposed bill to free the bridges ... He invites the members of the General Assembly to meet with him ... He has held meetings in Paducah, Owensboro, Louisville, Lexington, and has circulated Ashland, Pineville, Kyngonsville and Bowling Green listed for meetings ... Henry, whose ideas have not always been in the general accord with those of the governor, emphatically denies that he is meeting the state's solons to help of his own initiative. There was a rumor that he was seeking the speakership of the house ... He says that he has pledged himself to John Kirtley.

The proposed naming of the new concrete highway, U. S. 60 from Shelbyville to Louisville the Chandler Highway is almost a certainty ... There has been little objection to it ... The idea was first broached several months ago by a Louisville newspaper and later given further momentum by the Louisville Automobile Club. Regardless of whether it is ever named Chandler Highway, it will always be known as that. That name was the first impression and the first is always the most lasting and besides no one has been able to present a better name for the strip.

Here are some settings on the tobacco crop which is now going to market. The dark leaf markets opened in Western Kentucky last week and the first average was slightly more than a dollar less than the average of last year ... This alone gave the farmer high hopes for top prices for his crop again this season ... Now for something discouraging. This from various burley warehouses which have been taking in baskets in preparation for the opening of the market. They say that burley will weigh light, much heavier than usual, this year ... A tornado passed through the central section of the tobacco belt last week and the farmers in Clark, Bourbon, Bath, Fleming, Montgomery, Mason, Scott, Pendleton, Hickman and Nicholas felt considerable damage. Most of the crops injured were in the barns and were damaged when barns caved in as a result of the blow ... Clark county will send 5,000 acres of wheat to the market this season ... That is 1,350 acres more than was raised in this county last year ... Anyway the auctioneers are busy and the biggest market in years is now being held ...

Some weeks back your correspondent told of tobacco thieves who dallied forth in the middle of the night and swiped the weed from its hangings in the barns and made away with many, many pounds ... This warning appears to have served a good purpose at least there has been but little to date and just a few days ago there were several apprehended in Cynthiana, three of them, and are awaiting trial for their efforts.

As was intimated in this plister a couple of issues back, the purchase of the 1,000 acres of land in Franklin and Owen counties by the State for a State Game Preserve, did not go through ... Although it was announced at the time that negotiations had been completed and the deal was definitely on ... However at that time the Game and Fish Budget had not been thoroughly persuaded of the wisdom of the proposal. After giving it a good look over it was found that the budget was too weak to stand a 125,000 dollar ... And spending of budgets, that all one hears are the trods the deck on this ship of State ... New budgets for the next two years are being prepared in Cynthiana, three of them, and are awaiting trial for their efforts.

State labor leaders were gathered together this week in Frankfort for the first time ... The meeting, the first of its kind ever held in Kentucky, was a bit ragged but several things were accomplished ... One thing outstanding was the body's adoption of a resolution to ask the next session of Legislature to pass a law to forever dispense of deputy sheriffs in the pay of private concerns ... This was done to do away with those employed by mine in Eastern Kentucky ... Ed H. Weyler, Louisville, Vice-President of the Kentucky Federation of Labor, offered a resolution asking that the Legislature provide for the removal of judges found to be "partial" and seek jury trials for those held in contempt of court orders during strikes ...

RESUME
All her life Marie Walewski has worshipped Napoleon as a great hero. After she becomes the bride of Count Walewski, aged Polish Statesman, her one hope is that Napoleon will free Poland from Russia. One night she learns that Napoleon, who has begun his occupation of Poland in earnest to Warsaw, and will change horses at Bronie, three miles from her country estate Walewicz. Marie drives secretly to Bronie just for a glimpse of her idol. Napoleon discovers her hiding in the shadows of an old shrine. At pistol-point she is commanded to come into the light. He is amazed at her beauty and flattered when she confesses her reason for being at Bronie. He asks her name and then, suddenly, kisses her. He rides off, leaving Marie in a daze.

CHAPTER TWO

INVITATION TO THE DANCE
The Poniatowski palace in Warsaw blazed with candlelight and jewels. Poland's great were assembled to pay homage to Napoleon. There were more reasons than one for the magnificent gathering. The Emperor might think it his just due; but every statesman present hoped that this night Napoleon would agree to throw his weight against Russia in Poland's favor.

Prince Poniatowski, Senator Malachowski and Count Walewski waited anxiously. What impression would this brilliant assemblage make on the Emperor? "God grant the year of our exile are over," whispered Walewski.

"If Napoleon consents, God will grant," replied Malachowski with a wry smile.

At that moment the majordomo tapped the floor for silence. There was a stir of excitement as the people took their places against the side of the ballroom. Duric, Napoleon's Marshal, surveyed the room for an impressive moment. "The Emperor," he cried.

The strains of the Marseillaise rang through the room. Down the stairs marched Napoleon, followed by his aides. At the sight of him, the throng burst into cheers. Walewski hurried to Marie. "Let us take our places, my dear," he whispered. "I promised you a surprise, if you remember. Well—here it is. We're going to be presented to your Emperor."

Marie paled with excitement. "Presented to the Emperor? For a brief moment words failed her; would Napoleon, upon seeing her had braved the night to glimpse him at Bronie... would he remember he had kissed her? Would he make mention of the incident? "Anastasia, I must tell you something," but her words were lost in another roar of cheers and applause.

Napoleon's glance swept down the line of gorgeously dressed women and handsomely costumed men, to alight with pleased surprise on Marie's face. His greetings grew briefer as he advanced toward her, as if he were hastening to reach some given point. At last he stood smiling before her.

"The Chamberlain, Count Anastasia Walewski," announced the host. "The Countess Walewska; also his son, Count Augustus Walewski, and the Countess Augustus."

The Walewska family bowed low. Napoleon's eyes never left Marie's face. "Walewski," he murmured. "The name is not unfamiliar. You are the Chamberlain's granddaughter?"

"His wife, Sir," replied Marie.

"Your wife?" Napoleon glanced at Walewski in surprise. "To whom were you Chamberlain, Count?"

"To the last King of Poland, Your Majesty."

"That was forty years ago," mused Napoleon. "You must have been a very young man, Chamberlain?"

The Count met the challenge squarely: "I am seventy-six years old, Sir," he answered quietly.

"And Madame is your first wife?"

"My third, Sir."

"Permit me to congratulate you, Chamberlain, on your excellent taste," Napoleon observed Marie with interest. "And how old are you, Madame?"

She gazed at him calmly. "If that is a command, Sir, it is one women have the right to disobey."

"Bravely spoken," he said. "I do not forget courage, Madame, in either man or woman." He turned, his eye lighting on Augustus. "This gentleman is your son, Count?"

Walewski nodded. Napoleon pointed to a younger man at the end of the line. "And that one?"

"My grandson, Sir."

Napoleon smiled broadly, then broke Marie's congratulatory words. "Madame! For a grandmother you are extraordinarily well preserved. I regret I did not know you when you were young." He bowed swiftly and signalled that he was ready for the next presentation.

Marie relaxed. The Emperor had remembered—but had spared her embarrassment.

Eventually the presentations were completed and Napoleon had seated himself. Polish nobles and his suite on either side.

Napoleon turned to the Polish statesman, addressing them frankly. "Let me warn you gentlemen, against my Foreign Minister. Duc de Talleyrand will promise you everything—and give you—well, considerably less. While I promise you nothing."

"Nothing, Sir?" interposed Malachowski.

"Nothing, Senator; but I will give you considerably more." He broke off abruptly, his eyes searching the ballroom for Marie. He sighted her at last and fixed his gaze upon her.

"We have not depended on promises," observed Poniatowski. "We have sent for our soldiers. We have offered you our best blood."

"I have no more gallant soldiers than you Poles," Napoleon answered absently, his eyes intent on Marie's face.

Malachowski sensed Napoleon's flagging interest. "We are prepared to bleed ourselves white, Your Majesty."

"Tallyrand will tell you what we need," Napoleon interrupted brusquely. He focused his complete attention on Marie.

"This Count Walewski," he said suddenly, "he must be excessively rich to afford a wife so young and beautiful."

"He is rich, Your Majesty," replied Poniatowski gravely.

"We need your protection desperately, Sir," pleaded Malachowski.

Napoleon waved him aside. "Now. This Countess of Walewska. She must have been excessively poor."

"She was poor Your Majesty," answered Malachowski wearily.

"Duroc" called Napoleon. Duroc stood at immediate attention. Napoleon whispered to him. He turned and made his way across the floor to the place where Marie stood smiling and chatting with D'Ornano. Duroc saluted. "His Majesty suggests that Captain D'Ornano get some sleep. We have had a hard journey. D'Ornano raised his eye brows, and with a shrug of his shoulders, bowed and was off. Duroc turned to Marie. "Madame, may I have the honor of this dance with you?" Marie curtsied in acquiescence. As they approached the center of the floor, Napoleon rose from his seat and other." "When you come to see me tomorrow, Countess?" he asked gently.

"No, Sir."

"You came to see me, the other night, did you not?"

"But not to be seen; that night I obeyed an impulse of hero-worship."

"And can you not follow such an impulse again?"

She shook her head.

"Stop—the dance!" he shouted angrily.

joined them.

Marie found herself face to face with the Emperor.

"I should have carried you off with me at Bronie," he whispered.

"The Promenade of the dance ended, the ladies going to one side, the men to the other. Napoleon, impervious to it, remained in line holding Marie's hand.

"You are attracting attention, Sir," cautioned Marie.

"It's not the first time," he answered casually. "I am delighted to see you again."

"But Sir, we are breaking the rules of the dance!"

He glanced about briefly. The dancers observing Napoleon still in the figure of the Promenade, changed the routine to suit the Emperor's pleasure.

"You see how the rules follow conduct," observed Napoleon with satisfaction.

"Among the Poles, Sir, the guest is sacred."

"Any guest?" he flared.

"It would be poor hospitality, Your Majesty, that made distinction between one guest and another."

IMPORTANT ADDITION MADE TO KY. UNIVERSITY MUSEUM

An important addition to the collection of meteorites in the Museum of Geology at the University of Kentucky has been announced by David M. Young, curator. The new specimen is a portion of the Eagle Station meteorite which was found in 1880 near Eagle Station in Carroll County, Kentucky. This meteorite is of the pallasite variety, being composed of a network of nickel-iron, the interstices of which are filled with crystals of olivine. The latter mineral is an iron-magnesium silicate and is one of the common rock forming minerals on our own earth.

The original mass of the Eagle Station meteorite weighed about 80 pounds, most of which is in the Natur Historische Museum of Vienna. The portion secured by the Museum of Geology at the University weighs 31 grams and was originally of London and placed on the market for sale. The specimen was reserved for the University by cablegram about one month ago and arrived in Lexington recently.

The meteorite collection in the Museum of Geology at the University now contains specimens of "That does not become a conqueror, Sir," she observed.

"When you have conquered, Madame," he flared, "you may instruct me."

"I should not presume to instruct you, Sir," she answered simply. "I am a country girl. This is my first visit to Warsaw."

"Mine, too," he admitted. "What a charming coincidence. We shall compare our impressions tomorrow."

Marie could not help laughing at his quip.

"I shall send for you," continued Napoleon. "Duroc will bring you to my quarters."

Marie flushed. "I have a husband, Sir."

"He's four times your age," said Napoleon, brutally.

"His years have made him wise and gentle," she replied with cutting directness. "He has his dignity, he has his honored name. He has his pride—so have I, Sir."

With a deep courtesy she withdrew from the dance. He stood, trembling with rage, as she crossed the room to her husband.

11 of the 17 described meteorites from Kentucky, the recently acquired Eagle Station piece being from one of the two pallasites or iron-stone meteorites. Three of the total are aerolites or stony meteorites and the remaining 12 are siderites of iron-nickel composition.

The specimen of the Eagle Station pallasite is now on exhibition at the Museum of Geology which is open to the public at all times.

It appears that educators in Kentucky have, in the past allowed only news to get into the columns of this college publication that was favored.

One of the most enlightening addresses on college press censorship that we have ever heard came from Dr. J. B. Shannon.

The hope of these men was that the university and the college. It is here that man's most fruitful ideas are born.

Without this liberty education becomes a farce, a maneuver and where supported by public funds a waste of time and of the people's substance.

Dr. Shannon's address came at a time when the action-traitors at the University and editors of the Kentucky Courier, in their publication, are at odds over censorship material in the newspaper.

It becomes more apparent here today that Joe Bates of Greenup will be one man that will be difficult to handle in next year's congressional election.

EXPOSED TOBACCO STALKS LOSE FERTILIZER VALUE

Tobacco stalks thrown out into the weather when stripping is done lose much of their fertilizer value, since the nitrogen and potash in them are partly soluble in water.

The Kentucky College of Agriculture says that a ton of stalks from Burley tobacco contains about 60 pounds of nitrogen and 65 pounds of potash. At 15 cents a pound for nitrogen and 5 cents a pound for potash, a ton of Burley stalks is worth $12.25 and a ton of dark tobacco stalks $14.50, when used as fertilizer.

If stalks cannot be kept inside, they should be scattered on the land as soon as possible after stripping. If they can be sheltered from the rain, it is best to hold them until early spring. It is not advisable to use stalks, stems or leaf as a fertilizer for tobacco because of the danger of transmitting disease.

Capitol Comments

Praise has been sung in every key about Kentucky's current crop of turkeys... Yard after yard of blue ribbon has been strung around the neck of this glorious bird... It has been featured in every vintage... In other words, Kentucky's turkey crop this year has been what the elite commonly refer to as "a humdinger."

But there is something amiss somewhere... The figures just don't add up and such miscalculations are consistent in each section of this old Commonwealth... This pillar persuades every county paper in the State and probably reads them as carefully as any other person... In virtually every one of the papers, at some spot or another, the current prices of farm produce, which includes turkeys on the hoof, is mentioned... A careful survey shows that Kentucky has averaged 20 cents per pound in their stocking feet this year... 20 cents per pound, alive and well and in good voice.

The price is not regarded as spectacular but apparently is satisfactory to the producer of this champion table adornment... $20 per your nearest market and ask the price of dressed turkey... This corner has been watching this also... The price is from 30 cents per pound to 40 cents per pound, ready for the roaster... Somewhere between the barnyard and the oven this fowl gains from ten to twenty cents per pound in value... A turkey is said to lose one-fourth in dressing... A 16-pound fowl will bring 3.20 on foot... It is dressed and becomes a 12 model worth 4.20 at the store... $1.00 is a lot of money for dressing a turkey, especially as most turkey pens pay but ten cents for picking out a

Understand that this column is not complaining, but a number of turkey raisers have brought up a question here in the Blugrass and are getting a little discouraged at trying to raise them and have the middleman get all of the profit. Inasmuch as the turkey crop is the farm housewife's money crop, some method of protecting her should be devised.

It costs the State but one cent to collect each taxpayer's dollar... In other states the collection of such dollar costs from three cents upward...

EXCELLENT TOBACCO CROP IN ONTARIO

The 1937 flue-cured tobacco crop of Ontario, Canada, is reported to be of excellent quality and one of the best crops ever grown in Ontario, and it has been estimated that the yield will total $6,000,000 pounds compared with 24,000,000 pounds produced in 1936.

Cultivation of land to tobacco in Ontario has greatly increased during recent years with this year's area being recorded at approximately 50,000 acres against 36,000 acres last year. The Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Board has set the current price at 24 1/2 cents per pound compared with an appraisal price of 25 cents and an actual purchase price of 29 1/2 cents per pound in 1936. It is expected the tobacco growers will receive approximately $17,000,000 for this year's crop should it grade as high as that which was produced in 1936.

In Rockcastle and Madison counties, a crowd exceeding 4,500 person attended fair fairs.

DRESSED TURKEYS SELL FOR MORE

Since turkeys lose about a fourth of their weight in dressing, consumers must expect to pay considerably more for dressed birds than for live ones, points out the State College of Agriculture at Lexington. A turkey that weighs 16 pounds in the field may be reduced to 12 pounds when fully dressed. If the price is 25 cents a pound on foot, it should be about 34 cents when ready for the oven. There also is a charge for the labor of dressing and for refrigeration.

The average gain for the United States for the ten month period was eight per cent, as compared to the ten months ending October 31, 1936.

Other states to show gain for the 1937 ten month period are California, up 10 per cent; Carolinas, up 15 per cent; Illinois, up 14 per cent; Kentucky, up 22 per cent; and Michigan up 13 per cent.

400 DEMONSTRATIONS IN TOBACCO GRADING

Neighborhood tobacco grading demonstrations, numbering probably 400, will be held in about 100 Kentucky counties during November and December by the State College of Agriculture, in cooperation with the tobacco section of the United States Department of Agriculture, vocational agriculture teachers and county farm agents. Government men and field agents of the College of Agriculture will show farmers the latest information in stripping and sorting leaf.

About 300 of the demonstrations will be in burley tobacco in 88 counties, and 75 to 100 will be in dark air-cured and dark fire-cured tobacco. The meetings will be by neighborhoods, so that farmers need not go more than six miles to attend, according to Russell Hunt, who has charge of the part taken by the College of Agriculture.

Home Plate Moved At Crosley Field

Distances To Fences Will Be Closer Next Season

In the past, line drive hitters have been most effective at Crosley Field and the situation will be no different under the new arrangements.

The shortening was ordered to slightly increase the offensive of all teams appearing at Crosley Field. It was done to insure a bit more scoring by both sides, and this being the case, the Reds cannot hope to do any better just because their field will be shorter.

The hopes the Reds have of climbing higher in the race lie in the ball players who will represent them. Better play by the athletes themselves must be the answer to an increase in effectiveness.

It is expected that additional scoring by all teams will help make the games at Crosley Field most attractive. This is the principal reason for the switch, although there are other minor causes.

Since the park was remodeled about ten years ago, patrons sitting in the field boxes along the left and rightfield lines were unable to see home plate plainly. Also, the plate was off center and not in a direct line with the center of the curve in the grandstand. That's why the plate will be moved slightly toward the right instead of straight out.

In addition to the field changes, minor park improvements have been scheduled to make things more convenient for the fans. Two rest rooms under the third base section of the grandstand will be constructed and the box seat layout in the upper tier will be altered.

It is expected that additional scoring by all teams will help make the games at Crosley Field most attractive. This is the principal reason for the switch, although there are other minor causes.

The Reds have the Boston Bee's former manager, Bill McKechnie, and now they have the Bee's former South Atlantic League franchisee, T. C. Columbus. S. C. Columbus became the eleventh member of the Reds' minor league organization through a purchase from local interests effected recently. The Bee's surrendered the franchise midway last season.

Bill McKechnie smokes a curved stem pipe because it enable him to shoulder his gun while hunting without taking the pipe out of his mouth. The new Redleg skipper has spent most of his time hunting since the last season closed.

NINE TOBACCO SHOWS FOR 4-H CLUB BOYS

Nine tobacco shows for 4-H club members are announced from the College of Agriculture at Lexington. The first will be at Danville December 14. Another will be at Carrollton December 16 and on December 18 there will be shows at Harrodsburg, Covington, Horse Cave and Lexington. Others will be held at Bowling Green, Shelbyville and Owensboro.

It is expected that club members from at least 60 counties will enter a total of probably half of a million pounds of tobacco in the nine shows. Several thousand dollars in cash and trips to Junior Week and other prizes will be awarded. The state champion will receive a trip to Chicago.

Classes will include exhibits of individual crops, exhibits by counties, record books, and the like for both 4-H and Utopia club members. The tobacco will be sold in the regular way following the shows.

Only bona fide club members regularly enrolled in a tobacco project are eligible to enter tobacco. A complete and accurate record book must accompany each crop.

The shows will be sponsored by boards of trade, warehouse owners, merchants and other local interests.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

In Barren county C. R. Borders has proved that corn yield can be increased—to the tune of 35 bushels per acre. A tract of land that had yielded 20 bushels per acre was limed, phosphated and had a cover crop turned under. This year 55 bushels of corn resulted.

Webster county's first barley sold at a high price, so County Agent Raymond D. Ridley made a survey to see how many acres would be seeded next year. According to his figures, a 400 per cent increase may be expected.

A flock of high-grade pullets owned by Carl Osborne, Mason county, each produced an average of $1.57 worth of eggs during the laying year. With 259 hens, this meant a labor income of $408.

T. C. Hall's corn yield this year of 71 bushels per acre on his Potomac county river bottom farm sets a new record for him. He used both limestone and phosphate. Approximately 45 bushels per acre has hitherto been the top yield.

Jackson county farmers who have kept poultry records say that their egg production is the largest they've ever had for this time of year. More flocks are properly housed and fed, and most of them are high-grade or registered.

Limestone quarries in Whitley county proved inadequate to supply the large demand by farmers wishing to earn all of their soil building allowance, so lime was hauled from other points in the State and from Virginia and Tennessee.

U. S. EXPORTS OF WHEAT TO NETHERLANDS INCREASE

Not only has the Netherlands increased its takings of foreign wheat but the record shows that nearly half of the September arrivals of this commodity there came from the United States.

Total imports of wheat into the Netherlands during the first nine months of this year amounted to 421,690 tons compared with 342,210 tons during the same period of last year. Of this the United States supplied 72,339 tons.

CZECHS DEMONSTRATE A TRAVELING POSTOFFICE

A motorized postoffice designed to render postal, telephone, and telegraph service to the public at festivals, assemblies, exhibitions and other public gatherings was recently demonstrated by the Czechoslovak Government at the International Automobile Show at Prague.

The interior of the postoffice, which was mounted on a truck chassis, contained all of the innovations of a modern post and telegraph office, including a sound proof telephone booth and a writing desk for the use of the public.

The telephone service was operated by means of a long cable which could be connected to any telephone transmission line in the country.

MALAYA IS UNSUITED TO U. S. TYPE TOBACCO

Experiments conducted in Malaya which were designed to cultivate Bright tobacco from American seed have now been discontinued since it has been proven that the climate of that country is unsuited to the production of high-grade cigarette tobacco.

It is reported locally that future experimental work in the matter of cultivation of tobacco will be confined to those which are grown in Asiatic countries and which are consumed in the production of low-priced cheroots.

FISHERIES BUREAU IS UNABLE TO SUPPLY DEMAND

Sportsmen throughout the Middle West who have looked forward each year to receiving consignments of bass, sunfish, crappie, catfish, etc., may look in vain in the future for such consignments. The Bureau of Fisheries is attempting to propagate fish in large semi-controlled ponds within the Refuge area of the upper Mississippi River, but this program will not be developed to completion for a number of years and the available facilities will not produce the tens of millions of game and pan fish which the Mississippi River has hitherto furnished.

Paul Gehrman, Cincinnati rookie finger, is a member of the Bend, Ore., fire department.

The peach crop in Barren county brought the farmers several thousand dollars.

First Campus Concert Set For Monday, December 13

Giennemen students, make a date with your favorite coed and scurry to the College Auditorium Monday evening, December 13 to hear the first concert of the winter season. Unattached persons are equally and as heartily invited. The music, under the baton of Keith P. Davis, will offer a variety program unlike any concert prior to this time.

The College orchestra will enlist the services of twelve musicians, who will be known as toy band instrumentalists or guest artists. Each member of the special group of musicians will play one of the following instruments: triangle, castanet, cuckoo, tambourine, cymbals, toy flute, nightingale bell, tree, toy coronet, metallophone, and toy drum. Six people, so far, have signed contracts to perform, among them the inimitable Gilbert "Moon" Edwards, who, though generally known as a piano crooner and piano-leaser, will make his concert debut as a rat-le. The guests artists will stand in front of the regular orchestra and pipe, jingle or boe through a selection from Hyden. The composer wrote the music after returning from a fair where he heard sounds like those produced by the above instruments.

From Breckinridge Training School will come a honey-throated chorus of girls. In addition, there will be a trio of girl singers, and Miss Marion L. Oppenheimer will act as vocal soloist with the orchestra. The String Quartet, three young ladies and a gentleman, will distinguish the bill. Completing the group, will be violin solos with orchestral accompaniment.

Mr. Davis presented several concerts last year and a Japanese operetta with a cast of junior high school girls. These performances were highly enjoyable, and attracted large audiences.

There will be no admission fee. Don't forget the date. Miss crooner and piano-leaser, will make his concert debut as a rat-

Paula Lecler To Lecture Here On World Questions

Internationally Famous Newspaperman Appears in Auditorium Dec. 9

On Friday, December 9, at 7:30 p. m., Paula Lecler, internationally famous American newspaper writer, will lecture in the College Auditorium. College students and faculty will be admitted upon presentation of activity tickets, and general public tickets are fifteen and twenty-five cents.

Miss Lecler, who has traveled extensively and interviewed notable figures from over the entire world, will acquaint the students with different phases of world questions.

Her recent journey around the world was started in June 1936. Aboard the zeppelin, "Hindenburg," she traveled to Frankfurt, Germany, where she had her first interview . . . with Dr. Hugh Huxford.

Later, at Geneva, she chatted with Haile Selassie, "the sad little crowned Ethiopian emperor." This was her fifth interview with him. The four previous ones took place in Ethiopia. During the six month Miss Lecler spent in Ethiopia, she covered the Ethiopian crisis, news reporting for the Associated Press and found feature articles for Universal Service. She became very ill of malaria while there and was reported dead.

" . . . Trim, dark-haired Paula Lecler won a reputation as one of the most daring correspondents of the conflict (the Italian-Ethiopian struggle). She was one of the few correspondents of either side to visit both the Italian and Southern fronts while going on in the final months of 1935 . . ."

After numerous stops on Europe, northern Africa and in the Near East, Miss Lecler visited India, and the high spot of her stay was an interview with Mahatma Gandhi. She found him living an ascetic life in the rural village of Segons, four hundred miles from Bombay. When asked if he expected to leave retirement in order to again lead his people, Gandhi replied, "That depends on God. I never decide beforehand but wait for the contingency to decide. Planning ahead for myself, even for a few years, is opposed to my principles."

In Japan this woman, well known for her newspaper scoop, added to her achievements. She interviewed China's Generalissimo, Chiang Kai-shek, and his brilliant wife. When Miss Lecler asked Chiang Kai-shek if he were a dictator, he said, "I am against so-called dictatorship in China. I am not a dictator and refuse to be one . . . I am for constitutional government."

KENTUCKY WILD LIFE

The Department of Game and Fishery Authority with the preservation of the wildlife resources of the State was discussed by several government agencies at Knoxville this month, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce from the Bureau of Fisheries.

Representatives of the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey and the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries met with officials of the TVA, to seek means of protecting native wild life, especially fish and water fowl. From the harmful effects following the construction of dams, impoundment of large bodies of water, and encouragement of manufacturing.

Contrary to general opinion, the impoundment of large water areas is often harmful to aquatic life, the government conservation agencies maintain. The construction of a series of dams throughout the length of the Tennessee River will result in the destruction of water pools, each many miles in extent and in some cases hundreds of feet in depth, for the former winding stream of relatively clear water and moderate current.

This change will destroy much of the aquatic life that is adjusted to river, rather than lake, conditions. Among the species that will be completely destroyed, according to the Bureau of Fisheries, are the fresh water mussel, source of shells and provide the chief material for the manufacture of buttons in the United States. Valuable species of mussels are concentrated in the manufacture of Mississippi and Gulf drainage and virtually all require gravelly or sandy bottoms with good circulation of water relative to free flow. Such conditions were found in the Tennessee River where the annual production during recent years has averaged nearly 5,000,000 pounds of shells. The conversion of the river into a series of lakes will completely destroy this resource.

The Bureau of Fisheries also predicts that the bottom feeding fish once abundant in the Tennessee River, such as buffalo, carp, catfish, paddlefish, sheepshead, sturgeon and suckers will find their feeding areas drastically restricted because of silting over the bottom and destruction of aquatic vegetation and insects.

Surface feeders, such as minnows and hickory shad, and the Social Regulations Are More Stringent

Cooperation Urged By Committee in Staging All Functions

At a recent meeting of the social committee a set of new social regulations was drawn up. These rules will introduce a new policy concerning all social functions held on the campus.

Liberal in their content and condensed in form, they have been fixed to conform to the needs of Morehead College students.

It is urged that everyone cooperate with the social committee in enforcing these new rules, which follow:

- Section I
 - a. No dances shall be given other than those sponsored by the Social Committee of Morehead State Teachers College or by one of the recognized organizing groups of Morehead students, with the approval of the Social Committee.
 - b. There shall not be more than one formal dance a month.
 - c. No student organization may give more than one formal dance in any school year.
 - d. The Social Committee reserves the right to approve dates and hours for all dances.
- Section II
 - a. Each organization sponsoring a dance shall present to the chairman of the Social Committee at least two days before the date of the dance a list of at least five chaperones exclusive of the class sponsor who have accepted the responsibility of chaperoning.

Ryan Slated For Coaching Position

A clause of condition is all that stands between William "Teence" Ryan, former Morehead grid and hardwood luminary, and a coaching job at St. Patrick's High School in Maysville, Ky.

That clause is: If the St. Patrick hoopers can find a gym in which to practice. The fourteen game schedule planned, if and when the most part be played on the road. This will bring them down to tournament time which will take care of itself.

Ryan, who starred here in football, basketball and baseball, graduated from Morehead in the spring of 1936, and has been employed as a coach since then.

Knights of Columbus Hall, the former gym of the St. Patrick grid, was recently sold to the Standard Oil Company.

U. S. BECOMING MORE INTERESTED IN RUM

A growing production of rum in the United States and increasing imports from foreign producing countries have created a demand for information on rum which is supplied by the Commerce Department's bulletin on this subject, just received by its Louisville District Office.

Rum is produced to some extent practically wherever sugarpredations that feed on them, like basses, pike, perch, crabs and snails, will have a better chance of surviving in the newly created lakes.

The adoption of a comprehensive program of fishery management was proposed as the only means of restoring and developing the aquatic life of the region, and continuous and extended scientific research was urged for the intelligent direction of such a program.

Halt a day's work for a while, and let your skin cool down. Need it be said that Tom, if not before, became devoted to his employer?"

On another occasion Mr. Moody was driving a rather distinguished visitor about his farm, pointing out the buildings and the various crops. Suddenly Mr. Moody pulled his horse to a stop, halted a group of children playing by the wayside, and asked them: "Have you had any apples today, children?"

Then hustle over to my house and tell them to give you as many as you want," and the man who had held audiences of ten thousands in the hollow of his hand as he preached the truths of God's Word, clucked contentedly to his horse and resumed his journey.

GRAYSON COUNTY MAN CHAMPION HOG RAISER

To Earl Glenn, of Grayson county, goes the honor of producing Kentucky's champion ton litter in 1937. Thirteen pigs raised by a pure Boar and out of a Hampshire-Duroc sow weighed 2,995 pounds when 185 days old.

The total cost of the litter, including feed, pasture and labor, was $16,045. The selling price was $11,350 per hundredweight a total of $298.58, which left a net profit of $126.13. The litter ran on lampa pasture, which probably reduced cost of gain.

After they'd earned $55 for the clock treasury during 1937, Chancel Chapel club members in Logan county awarded themselves a tour to Mammoth Cave. They made a study of the cave from literary material before hand, so were well-prepared, fog the trip.

More than 1,200 Metcalfe county farmers have evidenced interest in hybrid seed corn, which has made excellent yields in that county. Local seed dealers report an unprecedented number of inquiries about the seed.

Two Whitley county farmers conducted a limestone project. Charles Frewitt obtained 10 bushels of corn on treated land, 12 on untreated, in the same field. J. T. Estes harvested two tons of tobacco. Manuel Creekmore of Pine Knot community in McCree county has found "The crop index" fully 25 per cent better.

Feed Smith, Todd county, sold $440 worth of lambs and $250 this year from a flock of 63 ewes. All of the feed for the flock was produced on the farm except $37 for shorts, oil-meal and salt.
