The new year will be marked by one of the most exciting presidential elections, under circumstances of more grave importance to our institutions than have ever occurred in our national history. It is therefore of the highest consequence that the great questions which shake the with calmens, laboriously investigated and clearly understood. While the Democratic party is apparently split into several divisions through the very success which has caused it to triumph in the vindication of old issues until new ones have become necessary, he great democratic heart of the nation beats in unison our western Empire, the foundations of which are only now being laid, and well it becomes us to proceed dispassionstely and understandingly in the work committed to us. Although a "thousand generations" are not looking flow upon the democracy of the present generation, and that they will, as ever, discharge it faithfully, there can be no doubt. The efforts of the Review will be exerted with a fall sense of the importance of the companies and the Corillerars, all looking, back to curse or bless the transactions of 1444. A fearful responsibility rests upon the democracy of the present generation,
