Elliott James, Scientist, To Lecture In College Auditorium

Elliott James, an experienced instructor and specialist in liquid air and low temperature, will give a demonstration on this subject at the January 17 lyceum program in the Morehead College Auditorium.

This experience and the type of program he alone presents are the reasons for his selection to head all of the demonstrations through the two great fairs at "A Century of Progress" in the Hall of Science, Chicago. These were 5,680 fifteen minute demonstration programs witnessed by more than a million people. These were given by Mr. James and his own selected group of personally coached assistants.

INCREASE IN THE MOREHEAD APPROPRIATION

That the appropriation to the Morehead State Teachers College from the State will be at least 14 thousand dollars over last year became assured this week with the announcement of the clauses in the budget bill.

However, a further increase, the amount of which has not been ascertained, is hoped for at the local institution, with a strong possibility that this additional amount will be received.

Last year the Morehead State Teachers College received an appropriation of $180,000. Only by the strictest economy measures was the institution able to operate on this amount. Governor Chanler deserves due credit from the college and people of Eastern Kentucky for increasing this allotment. Certainly the money could have been put to no better purpose by the State of Kentucky.

President H. A. Babb and Representative Z. Taylor Young have both been working for the last three months to have Morehead's appropriation increased. The $14,000 jump is ample evidence for their work, while if an additional increase comes through their efforts will have been entirely fruitful.

THE LOCOMOTIVE'S TOOT

The locomotive's toot has entered the tootological laboratory. The Union Pacific has had a corps of experts analyzing the coat of a toot and as a result the top arch of tootology has announced that every toot of the tooter coats the railroad the huge and almost incomprehensible sum of one-eighth of a cent. Presumably the laboratory also took up the coat of a tootie, but no report thus far has been made.

When it is considered that one fullgrown and vigorous engine may develop a tooter capable of producing a thousand or more toots a day, the importance of this investigation becomes apparent. Extravagance and waste in the dissemination of toots must cease.

Even the gentle little toots that are released as the signal of a passing engineer to the good wife on the back steps must be omitted. A great many toots are necessary to the safety of the public, but even these should be trimmed to where it may be possible to shoot them across the countryside at a cost of not more than one-twelfth of a cent per toot.

As a matter of fact, most of the toots are of a robust character that complaints of their sleeping propensities have become quite general throughout the small towns and rural areas. It is evident that the time is ripe for a reorganization of the vast toot system, which prevails all over the United States.

PROOFREADERS SAVE TWO CONGRESSMEN'S BLUSHES

Proofreaders who work all night at the government printing office in Washington got credited recently from Representative Maverick, Democrat, Texas, for not allowing congressmen in the Congressional Record to put a coat of many colors on David and sink the Merrimac in Manila bay.

Maverick wrote the printing office that it was he who spoke of David's coat of many colors. But the next morning, he said, the Congressional Record read:

"Mr. Maverick: Well, Joseph's coat was of many colors. The printing office told Maverick another member had 'Hobson sinking the Merrimac in Manila bay' instead of Santiago bay."

The appointment of O. L. Bozeman of Morehead as Journal Clerk in the State Senate certainly didn't hurt the State Administration any in this section of the State. Mr. Bozeman is one of those gentlemen that is liked by all with whom he comes in contact and admired for his ability and experience. Qualified and experienced with a wonderful personality are adjectives that describe this astute Morehead gentleman.

QUALITY VS. PRICE

All works of quality must bear a price in proportion to the skill, time, expense and risk attending their invention and manufacture. Those things called dear are, when justly estimated, the cheapest. A composition for cheapness and not for excellence of workmanship is the most frequent and certain cause of the rapid decay and entire destruction of art and manufactures.—Ruskin.

ABROAD AT HOME

An interested audience in New York heard recently the exposition of a plan which, as described by an attendant reporter, "would enable the population of congested areas to enjoy the advantages of the world's exclusive summer resorts and spas at a cost of sub way fare and $1 admission." For brief intervals at least one could do something about the weather besides talk about it.

One could go anytime to the box office and buy a ticket for whatever climate one just then preferred. If, for example, the customer elected Florida, his ticket would admit him to an artificial beach of fine sand on the verge of a vast pool, warmed by an artificial sun and atmosphere, and all around him a scenic panorama would create the "perfect illusion of a vast 'tandscape.' It was not stated in the report what he would do about clothes. Presumably he could check his overcoat; but even so, the climate he had escaped would hardly have allowed him to reach the ticket window in a costume otherwise suitable to the climate he had elected. This is a detail which, it seems, should be taken into consideration.

The idea that such a "climate paradise for the millions" could be built and operated illustrates how far invention has nowadays gone toward imitating nature. The characteristics that make climate—humidity, temperature, temperature, and artificiality produced within a limited space; skillful painting of a scenic panorama can add an illusion of reality. The customer could no doubt "back" in artificial sunshine on an artificial beach of real sand; but he would not find himself literally up against it if he thought to take a stroll in the inviting panorama.

One feels also that however pleasantly plausible the panorama when the customer first found a place to bask in it, it presently palls. Dreamily watching a distant sail, he would notice that it remained in the same place.

As idle, as a painted ship, Upon a painted ocean, and awake to a disturbing realization that it was just that.

THE FROLICHSOME HAWK

Audubon not only raised tame geese but wild ones; he had found a clutch of wild goose eggs which a tame goose had hatched, and during a harsh winter he had been able to join the flock by a careful scattering of corn, and a few came back the following autumn. He had a tame trumpeter swan that had been wounded, and he found a small sparrow hawk in the woods nearby, dropped from the nest and still covered with soft white down, that he brought home for his "Kentucky boys" and he called Victor and John, naming it Nero because of the murderous look in its bold eye.

Soon Nero was out on the wing. . . . For a time the parents and the other young of the brood seemed outraged by this domestication, and chased him. He would then swiftly retire to his home behind a shutter. Gradually his family let him alone. He was fastidious about his food; . . . and became somewhat of a joker, sailing down from a hidden perch, falling upon the back of a tame duck, which would waddle off, fluttering, squeaking, outraged but helpless, with Nero sticking close until an insect or small bird drew him away.

"The last he was kind to us," said Audubon, "who thought of the sparrow hawk, so graceful and swift on the wing, so erect on the branch, and one of the most beautiful of this family. 'Kind is not the word, you say, for a hawk? Well, but this Nero was like a friend. Frolicsome, then—his was frolicsome."—From "Audubon," by Constance Rourke.

REAPPRAISING THE STOCK EXCHANGE

A nine-man committee to study and recommend changes in the organization and administration of the New York Stock Exchange, has been appointed by the Exchange's President, Charles R. Gay. The committee includes, besides five members of the Exchange, two representatives of companies with listed stocks, and two who represent the general public.

By doing this, in the words of Norman Starbuck, financial editor of the New York Herald Tribune, the Exchange "has reasonably taken the position that it is ready to have its form of organization and administration reappraised by a group of qualified and representative men, selected from the officials of large corporations whose securities are on its track." One but from members of the investment and banking and brokerage community, and from the public.

"The Exchange, obviously, is determined to have an open-minded study made of its organization to the end that it may conform, so far as that may be determined, to the Security and Exchange Commission's wishes. The committee will be expected to submit its recommendations as promptly as possible. If remedial changes are necessary for the Exchange better to serve the public, it will be ready to do so." There is, in the present condition of business, imperative need of a reappraisal between Wall Street and Washington. The Stock Exchange recognizes this and has taken steps in that direction."

GANGING UP ON CONSUMERS

The people want reasonably priced living, food, clothes, commodities.

"For a number of years, self-seeking 'groups' have tried to raise prices by artificial means. This upsets the logical balance between income and output. It has led between the consumer and price boosters, has been the main merchandising system. Laws, regulations and taxation which hamper the reasonable and normal operation of mass merchandising, penalize the consumer least able to stand it.

Democrats object when the Republicans call it depression and the Republicans protest when the Democrats call it a recession. Why not call it a New Dealism?

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON FOR JANUARY 16

BEGINNING A LIFE OF SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:14-28. GOLDEN TEXT—The time is fulfilled and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the gospel. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' First Helpers.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why the Fishermen Followed Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving Now.

YOUTH PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Adjusting Life to Service.

The public ministry of our Lord was not begun with any great fanfare of publicity. Leaving Judea where the entrenched forces of formal religion had gathered with the forces of sin and degradation in opposition to him, and with the general contempt of the Pharisees and Sadducees, he appeared in his home country, Galilee.

Preaching the Gospel—vv. 14, 15, 21, 22.

His first activity is worthy of careful note, for it is exactly what one might expect in this gospel of Mark, which we have already characterized as a gospel of deeds rather than of words. Jesus came to work miracles, and he did work them, and continues to do the miracles in our day. It is therefore significant that His first recorded work of that preaching, his second that of calling and sending forth fellow workers, and last of all the miraculous healing of the demoniac.

From a human viewpoint one would think that the opposite order would prevail. First let the Master do some mighty miracle in Capernaum, and then let the people then organize a "party," and then preach. Much of the so-called evangelistic effort in our day fails to follow this formula and fails of lasting results. Observe the man who magnifies preaching and gives the Word of God first-primacy, and you will see real spiritual accomplishments. Notice that also when Jesus began his ministry in Capernaum, it was with teaching, essentially the same as preaching. There is no substitute for the personal presentation of the gospel.

Jesus preached faith and repentance, or perhaps one should say repentance and faith—v. 15. They together, in our Lord's preaching. Let us follow this example.

We read in verse 2 that the hearers were amazed because he spoke with authority. They had been accustomed to hearing the lawyers dispute on the basis of the authority of the law, now the law-giver himself stood in their midst. He did not set aside the law, but he gave it an interpretation and direction which surprised them.

The preacher of our day, truly called of the Lord, is fully proclaiming the full counsel of God, may well be encouraged by the importance our Lord gave to that ministry. He too may speak with authority because he speaks for Christ.

Calling Disciples—vv. 16-29.

The orderly development of any work calls for the choosing and training of associates. Moody is said to have observed that it is a greater thing to put ten men to work than it is to do ten men's work." Our Lord was no exception. He too desired and used fellow-workers and he committed to them the carrying on of his work after he departed.

God's still calls men into his service. Would that grace might be given to each one to whom such a call may come to respond "straightaway," as did the disciples. The writer has just read the letter of a heart-broken man who had answered the Lord's call for four long years, and now comes with a broken body which may hinder his usefulness for life. Such a tragedy may be averted by prompt and willing obedience.

Healing the Demoniac—vv. 23-28.

Three things stand out in this story. The first is that the Son of God has power over the demons of this world. His effort to "fight the Devil" in our own power is foredoomed to failure. But in the name of Jesus Christ, we may bid him depart from us. Thank God, it works! The other thought is also of vital importance. As we recognized Jesus, they knew that he was "the Holy One of God"—vv. 24—and they bore public testimony to it. As a result, they were demons, the enemies of God. Saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is more than a religion; it is a power, even though it be done in public. Let us make sure that we have a living faith in the Son of God. Our final observation is that our Lord did not permit the de-

This bill is the outgrowth of the hanging of "Fate" Montjoy, Negro, last December 17, at Covington. . . . It was the first legal hanging there in the memory of those now living and as the time neared for the hanging of this convicted rapist the horror of the thing grew on the people there. . . . Up until the time Montjoy was to be hanged they were all for it but when it became a necessity for him to pay his debt to society, it was a hard matter to find anyone who wanted to collect it. . . . Finally a dogcatcher was named to spring the trap and when it was sprung there came a storm that rapists should be given the "Hot Squat"

FORWARD NOT BACKWARD!

SUPPOSE this newspaper had presses capable of printing 140 newspapers per minute and a law was imposed limiting its production to only 70 copies during the same time. Wouldn't you say that law was literally turning the wheels of progress backward?

All right, then, what do YOU think of a proposed law—one that has actually passed the United States Senate and is now before the House of Representatives—which would really reverse railroad progress? Modern railroads, with their big locomotives, heavy rails, and streamlined curves, are equipped efficiently to handle trains of 100 cars or more. Yet this law, if passed, would compel railroads to limit their trains to 70 cars.

Or suppose your local grocer's staff of clerks could serve 140 customers an hour and a proposed law would force your merchant to handle only 70 customers per hour. Common sense tells he could handle only one-half of his normal business. Wouldn't that be putting shackles on private initiative and private efficiency?

Don't you agree that such a law would needlessly increase the cost of railroad transportation; decrease railroad service to you and your community? We'd like to hear from you. Better still, we would like for your Congressman to hear from you. It is to your personal interest that railroad progress continue forward—not be forced backward!

If a father has a tractor capable of pulling six plows, how would he feel if a law was passed allowing his modern tractor to pull only three plows? Wouldn't that handicap the farmer and retard modern agricultural progress?

This bill honoring the railroads is known as the Train Limit Bill (Senate Bill 65). It is called a "safety measure" and the fact is that railroads have reduced accidents to employees by approximately three-fourths during the same years that modern, long trains were developed to give you faster and better service. Incidentally, the Train Limit Bill would increase the number of trains and proportionately increase gross crossing hazards. Facts and figures about this proposed legislation will be furnished gladly. Photographic Tellers Record Deposit Slips

"Photographic tellers, machines which record automatically deposit slips and checks inserted by bank customers, have been installed by two New York City financial institutions in an effort to protect clerks against the burden of rush hours and to save depositors the necessity of standing in line for long periods.

Trust Company and the Sterling National Bank and Trust Company, the equipment is operated by depositors themselves and was described by officials as so simple that "even a bank vice-president can work it."

When a customer wishes to make a deposit, he drops his slip into a slot and then inserts the checks, one by one, in the same manner. As each item passes through the machine it is photographed upon a strip of film. When the business day closes, the bank teller records every item again, consulting the photographed material in case of dispute.

One hundred items a minute can be passed through the recording machine. The device handles only check deposits, because the photographing of United States currency is forbidden by law.

When the question of displacement of employees was brought up, bank officials said that while the machine could be regarded as a labor-saving device, it was not intended to be a substitute for the regular personnel. Increased accuracy, better service to customers and less pressure upon tellers justified the installation, they added.

The photographic tellers are not intended as night depositories, and are installed in bank lobbies to be used only during the business hours of the day.

Lines of depositors waiting patiently before a teller's window gave an engineer of the Record-Examiner the idea of planning a photographic device that would eliminate the necessity of wasting time in such fashion.

Observing that many depositors had only a few checks to hand through the window, but that they had to wait while some clerk had a pay roll made up or a talkative customer passed the time of day with the teller, he planned to meet the need of the busy person. The "photographic teller" was the result.

psychiatrist of the Neuropsychiatric Institute and Hospital of the Hartford Retreat, Hartford, Conn., stressed the urgent need for cure instead of endless care for a large percentage of the now institutionalized mentally ill. "Do develop some accountability for results besides feeding and being kind to patients," he urged, "find out how many actually are getting out. Otherwise they might as well commit the State to bankruptcy."

He was shocked to discover, Dr. Burlingame told the group, that the State which boasts tirelessly of its beautiful women is prepared to spend no more than $22 weekly on a beautiful woman who has the misfortune to fall mentally ill. "It is the most uncharitable thing I have ever heard about Kentucky," he declared. Dr. Burlingame chided State institutions for taking so little advantage of cures developed for forms of mental disease. "It actually is true that you can buy back the lives of between 30 and 60 per cent of all your cases of general paresis," he said. "It is unthinkable that those lives are not being brought back." It also is true, the psychiatrist continued, that an average of 60 per cent of the victims of involution melancholia can be saved for a return to society.
