The Kentucky convention for the revision of the State Constitution, is now in session at Frankfort. A large body of the revision is supposed to be to modify the provisions relating to slavery so as to permit its gradual abolition.

A great mistake, friend! The Delegates to compose said Convention have not yet been elected, nor will they be until the 1st Monday in August next. It is not a leading object of the revision, to modify the provisions relating to slavery, so as to permit a gradual emancipation.

There were other defects in the constitution which the people desired to see remedied, of vast more importance to the welfare of the State; and, to secure these, the masses are contending against the office seekers and political aspirants, who have sprung the abolition question upon us.

The "misce and confusion" making in this State arises alone from a few hot-headed zealots, who wish to attract public attention and make themselves conspicuous. The people, themselves, are against it, and so it will be found when they come to make a selection of delegates to the Convention.

Though no politician, I have read with some care, the address of each of the gentlemen, announced as candidates for the Convention. In common with all good citizens, I, of course, feel deeply interested in the present and future prosperity of my State, and as the contemplated change in its organic law, will effect the interests of us all—reflection upon each issue formed and each proposition advanced by the aspirants for a seat in the convention, is necessary for safety.

Now this idea, may be very pleasing to the aura populi—it may tickle the fancies of the masses; and the opposite ground may now be very repugnant, to extreme feelings of the people; but it is something, which if carried out and made a part parcel of the new constitution, will result in incalculable mischief.

In a good old Atlantic State, one of the original thirteen; one upon the forming thought of whose constitution as much talent was brought to bear as any other; one formed in the good old days of '76, only a month after the Declaration of Independence was made public—a similar paper was composed, one suggested by Mr. Taylor was contemplated within the constitution. And lo! what was intended for good resulted in the greatest of evils. Amendment after amendment was called for—scarce a meeting of the Legislature was had, but some change was made—something new was introduced or something old cast aside—so that at the end of half a century after its adoption, there was only one person in the State who really understood its provisions.

A military man in his last moments, opening his eyes beheld three doctors in consultation over him. "Gentlemen," he said, "I surrender, if you propose to fix in place of my arms, and extending his limbs stretched his last.

Every time the Legislature meets, there will be plenty of young hot-spurs, panting for fame, no difference what kind it is, and they will of course hammer at the constitution. Such was the case, after the adoption of our Federal Constitution. At each succeeding meeting of Congress, for a few years, faults were thought apparent and numerous amendments were proposed. Well if that instrument, the creation of a new assembly of men, whose equals have never since been assembled together in the body, was thought defective and needed amendment; will not the new constitution of Kentucky, which will be work of men in the main, far less talent and experience, be like subject to supposed defects? Certainly it will. Then to save us, and our posterity from evils which are evils, let the new constitution be well guarded and so plain that every school boy can readily understand its principles.

A CONVENTION MAN.

Ma. Editor:—Some persons are more formidable and dangerous in the night than in the day, for the world abounds in individuals who are to be feared only when unseen.

Thus it is with the imported correspondent of the Herald, signing himself "A LOOKER ON," whose mighty (!) REASONING powers have been brought to bear against one of the candidates for the convention—a Kentuckian, for many years the Representative of old Mason, in the Kentucky Senate—where his course was marked by an upright and honest heart.

I had hoped that no notice whatever would be taken of this person, and that he, whose earnest desire for your "editorial gifts" is to run in him, might be left unnoticed and unheeded; his ignominious repose only broken as in plaintive tones he would exclaim, "O, that mine adversary would write a communication!" But it seems that a "Spectator" has looked on, and attaching an undue importance to the pusillanimous effort of this anonymous scribbler, has dealt a blow in defence of the "ex-Senator," calm and mild, but telling blow which will dispell the mist raised by the foul breath of calumny, which might involve his true position—a blow, which will place in a truer light the ex-Senator's services, and strengthen the bonds which unite him to the people of Mason.

Thus, that which was intended for evil, will redound for good, and the dagger of this imported assassin, aimed at the ex-Senator, will fall at his feet.

A KENTUCKIAN.

Thos. Y. PAYNE, Esq. Now the time is fast approaching when it will become necessary for the people to select from their body a number of candidates to represent them in the State Convention for the purpose of revising and forming a new Constitution. Many questions, no doubt, will be introduced into the canvass, such as the new suggested notions of Emancipation, the continuation of life-tenure offices. Believing that you possess the ability, honesty and patriotism, you are requested to become a candidate for a seat in the Convention in becoming a candidate you will receive the hearty and cordial support of very many voters in the Mayfield precinct.

Democrat Review.

DEMOCRATIC REVIEW. GREATLY REDUCED PRICE—FROM $5 TO $3 PER ANNUM.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE NUMBER BY ONE FIFTH THE PRICE. PROSPECTUS OF THE 22D VOL.

IN commencing the twenty-second Volume of the Review, we have to acknowledge the continuance of a liberal patronage on the part of the public and of an enthusiastic response from the Democratic ranks.

The new year will be marked by one of the most exciting presidential elections, under circumstances of more grave importance to our institutions than have ever occurred in our national history.

Therefore of the highest consequence that the great questions which shake the union to its centre, should be discussed with calmness, laboriously investigated and impartially reported.

The Democratic party is apparently split into several divisions through the very success which has caused it to triumph in the election of our old President until new ones have been necessary.

The heart of the nation beats in unison with a noble patriotism, and swells in an honest satisfaction at the rising glories of our country.

The accession of features of the Review will be continued, including Portraits and Biographies of Distinguished Statesmen, men whose patriotic principles and achievements have endeared them to the people.

We have to remind our readers that the Roman Catholicism will have a large number of subscribers should be addressed to the Editor, office of the Democratic Review, 170 Broadway.

THE GLOBE. A Congressional, Agricultural, and Literary Newspaper. THE EDITORS of the Congressional Globe propose a new publication.

To devote the persons who Congress were invited to enter into any detail of its proceedings, or that its conductors should be new pledges to the public, by way of assisting the Democratic party to rally to its support.

Aware, however, that hundreds and thousands of the people of Kentucky, and other Western States, have never yet had an opportunity of subscribing for it, the publishers have come to the conclusion to issue this Prospectus, in the hope that those into whose hands it may fall, will exert every possible exertion to induce those in their respective neighborhoods to subscribe at once, and thus give the paper that patronage which its intrinsic value merits, and which should be extended to it by a fair-minded, a liberal, and an intelligent people.

The paper has now been in existence for two years and five months; and, notwithstanding the enterprise was looked upon as extremely hazardous at the outset, the FLAG has, by pursuing a fearless, bold, and unwavering course, and the most untiring energy and industry, upon the part of its conductors, succeeded in producing the most successful and profitable paper in the State, and can boast of having done as much good service as any other, during the period of its existence.

In Politics, the Editor is a radical Democrat, and the paper will never, while under his control, swerve from the original landmarks of the party to which he is pledged. He continues, as heretofore, to advocate the great measures and principles of that party, and to defend them against the foul calumnies and aspersions which are so constantly hurled at it by the scurrilous and illiberal organs of the Whig party.

In all things, it shall be his aim to promote the best interests of the people, and to preserve, inviolate, their rights, and to sustain, as far as the power may rest with him to do so; and he would here beg leave to remind the public, that a crisis is rapidly approaching in the affairs of this State, when prudence and patriotism will call upon every man to prepare himself for a great struggle. The approaching State Convention will involve questions of the most vital interest to the people of this State, and will undergo distribution in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe and Appendix.

The Weekly Globe will be the vehicle of the dissemination of the articles of the daily print, with a synopsis of congressional proceedings.

The Congressional Globe will embody, in a concise and readable form, the proceedings of the session of Congress, and will be published weekly, and will undergo distribution in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe and Appendix.

The Appendix will embrace the revised reports separately and the messages of the President, and the reports of the heads of the executive departments.

The Congressional Globe and Appendix will be published as fast as the proceedings of Congress shall be reported. Subscribers may expect one number of each a week during the first four weeks of the session, and two or three numbers of each a week afterwards, until the end of the session.

Nothing of a political or party aspect will appear in the Globe save that which will be found in the congressional reports. A paper which will not be influenced by party spirit, and which will be impartial in its views, cannot maintain a high character for itself, and will not be able to act as a faithful and reliable medium of communication between the people and their representatives.

The Editors of the Globe have just published a new and complete edition of the Constitution of the United States, and will be glad to receive orders for it.

For one copy of the Daily Globe (daily during the session of Congress, and weekly during the recess) a year, 5 00 For one copy of the Weekly Globe one year, 2 00 For one copy of the Congressional Globe during the next session, if subscribed for before the first of January, 1 00 For one copy of the Appendix during the next session, if subscribed for before the first of January, 1 00 For six copies of either the Congressional Globe or the Appendix, or part of both, if subscribed for before the first of January, 5 00

The subscription for the Congressional Globe or the Appendix, after the first of January, will be $1 50. The original price of one dollar does not pay the expenses of the publication, and the consequence of the great increase of matter published.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out; therefore no persons need consume time in ordering them unless they subscribe in advance to the publishers.

PROSPECTUS FOR THE Weekly Kentucky Flag.

THE name and character of this paper, having become so universally known, it seems to be almost unnecessary to enter into any detail of its merits, or that its conductors should be new pledges to the public, by way of assisting the Democratic party to rally to its support.

Aware, however, that hundreds and thousands of the people of Kentucky, and other Western States, have never yet had an opportunity of subscribing for it, the publishers have come to the conclusion to issue this Prospectus, in the hope that those into whose hands it may fall, will exert every possible exertion to induce those in their respective neighborhoods to subscribe at once, and thus give the paper that patronage which its intrinsic value merits, and which should be extended to it by a fair-minded, a liberal, and an intelligent people.
