BLUFF BOOM (Green Co.): ("Bl(uh)f Būm") 2½ air miles up Green R. from Greensb. or 5-6 river miles. Name derived "from the fact that there was many millions of board ft. of logs rafted down Green R. The rr runs right along this bluff; the railroad's betw. the river and the bluff and this--in fact, they had to blast the bluff out to get the rr around the edge of the river. And to stop these rafts as they came down the river--they had to have some way to stop them, they built a thing called a boon across the river that was nothing more or less than logs that were chained together that run (sic) out in the river to a man-made island.

PO: 05-26 1946
and that they could push the raft over next to the bank, and this boom would catch them. So actually it translates into the boom by the bluff, I guess. And it's called Bluff Boom. (When was this built?) Well, the rr came in here in 1873, so sometime after 1873 this boom got built. When the vil. got called Bluff Boom I d.k. but I guess after it was know as the Boom. And logs from a hundred mile up Green R. were floated down there and loaded on rr cars and shipped out. In fact, at one time there was a great big sawmill there that employed 65-70 people ...betw. 1875 and 1900. It caught on fire and burned up; I dk when that was. It never was built back. I suspect the loggin days were over anyhow by that time, the good timber, at any rate." Never called anything before BB. Now: nothing but home. The one store is gone. Farming commu. Stil locally called Bluff Boom... (Sam Moore, interview, 7/20/1978); BLUFF BOOM (Green Co.): PO est. 1/8/1908, Isaac Henson...(NA); c½ mi. up US68 to Campbellsyv. A small antique store run by Buddy Lowe & Jimmy Wright. Was a gen. store run by J.R. Jones, 1900-47. On US68, go c. 3/4 mi. ar under the L&N trestle to B.B. site. It was named, in part, for a high bluff overlooking the Green R. Acc. to Rev. Gilbert Larimore who was raised in that vic., "Around 1885, the Whitney Bros. leased some land from John Russell. It was bottomland, and on it they built a (large) sawmill./Timber for Whitneys Mill was drifted down the Green R. from far up stream. The Whitneys built several structures to help bring the logs directly to their lumber yard. The main structure was a canal. It left the river several 100 yards upstream. At the head of the canal a pier was built that helped shoot the drifting logs into the manmade channel. The Whitneys also built a dam across the river a little below the canal entrance. The dam slowed the river current and further helped divert the logs into the canal. The dam and canal are still there.

The word boom is a logging term from the Whitney days. Before sending the logs downstream, timbermen bound them together into rafts. The act of binding logs was called booming, and the rafts, themselves, were log booms. It's likely that the logs crowded together in the stretch of river above the canal. Webster's New 20th Cent. Dict. defines boom as 'a line of connected floating timbers,' and 'the area in which logs are thus confined.' All along the channel from Meadow Creek to the canal, you can see drifting log booms. The booms gradually thicken until they form a mass at the canal entrance...." (Clifton Jones, "Bluff Boom--Where Did the Boom Originate?" GREENSBURG RECORD-HERALD, 10/9/1975, P. 2).

On the s. side of the Little Barren R, nr Crail Ford Bridge, ½ way up the Crail Hill on Ky 218. Fam. of Jas. Crail; Crail's Ford was across the Little Barren on land owned by the Crail fam. On nearby hill is Gourdneck. (Lanny Tucker, P. 44); CRAILHOPE (Green Co., Ky): "The 2nd site of this settlement with epo, of which little remains, is at the jct. of Ky 218 and 1048, 10½ (air) mi sw of Greensburg. At a place, perhaps on the Little Barren R., that may also have been called New York, D.D. Higgason & Wm. Dan'l. Myers opened the Crailhope Store in which, on 9/12/1883, Myers est. the Crailhope po. The name recalls the pion. Jas. Crail & his fam. who arr. on the Little Barren around 1800. Three theories have been offered for the 2nd part of the name: local people hoped they would survive a smallpox outbreak, or they hoped they would be able to make it up the difficult Crails Hill during the winter, or it was early considered such a 'trifling' place that it was hoped it would fare better in time. In any event, the po moved up Ky 218 to more level terrain, and later closed. (Book-P. 70); CRAILHOPE (Green Co., Ky): Acc. to Wm. Daniel Myers, 7/24/1883, the prop. name for this new po was Crails Hill and it would be 1 mi w of Little Barren R, 2 mi w of Trammell Ck, 3 mi ne of Center po, 5 mi nw of Liletown po. CRAILHOPE (Green Co.): One word. Had been called New York and (still) called that as long as the store was there. Named for Crail family. Before the po was est., there was a smallpox outbreak and people hoped everything would be all right. Jas. Crail, the 1st of his family there, arr. c1800. Nearby ford on the river, called Crails Ford, was also named for James. The 1st store and po was named for James. The store was owned by D.D. Higgason & Wm. Dan'l. Meyers, bros. in law. ("Krail Hohp" Crailhope was moved c. 3/4 mi. up the road, west, on Ky. 218 to the site where it was whe it was discontinued. Kidds Mill was a few hundred yards from Crailhope's 1st site. Wm. B. Kidd (informant's grandfather) ran a po, watermill, and store there and called it Kidds Mills ("K(ih)dz M(ih)l") on Ky. 218. Only a cem. is left at the K.M. site. It was a water-powered grist mill. Now at Crailhope's 2nd site: garage, near by Bethel Chu. Store bldg. still standing. The Crails have all moved away or died out. Nothing at the old site of C'hope. A new bridge is being constructed at Crails Ford. Another acct. of Crailhope name origin: the place "was pretty trifling and they hoped they'd do better." Kidd thinks there was a store there before the post office was established. And the community got its name probably when the store was built. Higgason & Meyers built the store. At one time, Higgason had stockyards there. Drove stock to Horse Cave for shipment. Also, there was a distillery near Crailhope. (Leon Kidd of Crailhope, Ky., interview, 7/20/1978);
CREAL (Green Co., Ky): "This hamlet with po is on Ky 61 and the Tom Bill Br. of Brush Ck, 13 ½ (air) mi nw of Greensburg. The Crail name was changed to Creal in record ca. 1840. (KY. ANC. Vol. 28 (4), 1993, P.232) CREAL (Green Co.): ("Kreel") Named for a local family of Creals. Once known as Dezarn ("D'z/(ah)rn"), in fact 1st called Dezarn, another family name. N.ch. to Creal but dk why. Big Dezarn cem. there. Now: store and the cem. Used to have 2-3 stores. No Creals left in Green Co. They were once a very prominent family in Green Co., its 1st exporters of tol to N.O. and later to Mex. Reuben Creal went to Mex. during the Mex. War as an interpreter for Gen'ls. Ward and Hobson and later was appointed amb. from US to Mex. He married the daughter of the wealthiest man in Mex...who owned 65 million acres. They had one son, Enrique or Henry Clay Creal...and he, in turn, was appointed Mexico's amb. to the US....

The Green Co. commu. was founded many yrs. before Creelsboro in Russell Co. The 1st Creals came into Green Co. in c. 1796-7. Later they went to Russell Co. to est. Creelsboro as a tob. shipping pt. on the Cumb. R. Doesn't think the Creals ever lived at Creelsboro for any length of time. No record of it... (Sam Moore. interview, 7/20/1978);

When he est.the po in his store on 12/26/1906, he named it Grab. In another, less plausible, acct., the store had 2 rms., each with an outside door and a door betw. them. When the prop. was in one rm. people would enter the other, grab a handful of merchandize, and skedaddle. The po has since closed.” (Book-P. 120);
"...Consider the case of the post office that was set up in D.K. Cramer's general store in southwestern Green County years ago. Among other things, the Cramer store sold old-fashioned chocolate drops, the kind that came in large barrels. Children in the area used to buy the drops a penny's worth at a time. But storekeeper Cramer didn't sell just so many pieces for a penny—he'd simply reach down in the barrel and grab a handful. In time, children and then older folks started calling it the 'grab store.' When the post office was started in his place, (it) merely adopted the then-common name worn by the store and thus Grab, Ky. was born." (Joe Creason, LCJ, 3/4/64, A-7).

From "The First Men in the County" art. #7 of a ser. of Hist'l. Sketches of Adair Co., Ky., by Judge Rollin Hurt, pub. in the Adair Co. News, 3/19/1919: "Within a short distance of the river, the party (of Long Hunters) encountered a solitary Indian in the forests whom some at once recognized as an Indian known as Capt. Dick and whom they had seen at the lead mines in the Holston River country. When the Indian learned they were seeking game, he informed them that to the westward there was a river which ran in a westwardly direction and he directed them to proceed to that river and after crossing same and passing over certain streams and ridges, traveling with the river upon their right hand, they would come into the Beech Woods Valley which abounded with game. His parting injunction to them was to kill as much game as they desired and then to return to their homes. Following the directions rec'd. from Capt. Dick, the party arrived at the Green River, which they crossed and very soon came into the Beech Woods Val. The vil. of Cane Valley in Adair Co. is situated in, and the country surrounding it, is a part of the Beech Woods Valley. (sic) The small stream which has its source at or near Cane Valley is one of the headwaters of the Caney Fork which from its source to its mouth, runs through the center of Beech Woods Valley." (qtd. by Ruth Paull Burdette & Nancy Montgomery Berley, "The Long Hunters of Skin House Branch" Columbia, Ky: Statesman Books, c197 and repro. in part in the (Taylor Co., Ky) News-Journ. Bicent., 7/25/1974, Pp. 1-6, 4); Quoting Burdette & Berley: "The hunters did not stay long in the region of Dick's R., says Draper, but 'Drake and Skaggs leading the way, the others followed driving their pack horses before them and directed their course sw to the headwaters of Green River down which they pursued until they reached a beautiful stream on the south side called the Skin House Branch of Canev Fork of Russell Creek which flows into Green River. The Skin House Branch is about 3 mi. in length. Draper describes it as 'formed by 10 or 12 pure limestone springs and gliding through a charming val. then covered with sugar maple, beech, walnut, ash and other timber which a undergrowth of luxurious cane.' On this crystal stream near the present vil. of Haskinsville in Green Co., the Long Hunters erected the station camp in the midst of a fine hunting region rich in mast for bear and turkey and plentiful supplies with cane and wild grasses for deer, elk, and buffalo.' As this location was to serve as a main depot for the pelfry for an entire winter's hunt, they built a more permanent type of camp. A pen was erected and covered with peeled bark. Here they stored their supplies and their furs. After the camp was set up the hunters divided into the usual small parties and hunted at the licks in the surrounding area. They returned to camp 'at a given time with their skins and to learn each other's welfare (sic) and whatever discovery of interest had been made,' and 'success attended their industrious effort and a large number of skins were brought into the station camp.'....."(Ibid)

"Among the (Long) hunters was an old man of the name of Russell...who got lost on the main creek and was missing for nineteen days in very cold weather before he was found by his companions.' The narrative does not give the first name of Russell nor who found him. One reference is made that it was his grandson, unnamed. If his physical condition was as is described, it would seem that someone more personal than his fellow hunters would be with him on the trip. 'He was so dimsighted that he was obliged to tie a piece of white paper to the muzzle of his gun..."
to direct his sight at the game and thus killed a number of deer and it was in consequence of this dimsightedness that he got lost. When found, he was helpless and quite speechless and so continued for three or four days. Being kindly nursed by his comrades he recovered and killed a number of deer afterwards. The circumstances gave name to Russell Creek on which the old hunter wandered and came so near losing his life."
