Redwine Is Selected As Chairman Here For Sen. Barkley

Committee Of 8 Also Named To Manage Campaign In County

J. T. Redwine, local attorney, was elected Tuesday night as Rowan County chairman for Senator Alben W. Barkley at an open meeting of supporters of the Senator, held in the courthouse.

E. E. Maggard, manager of the Consolidated Hardware Company, was elected Secretary and N. L. Wells, treasurer. Mr. Redwine appointed an executive committee to pass on all major matters regarding the campaign which is composed of Arthur Hogg, Dr. H. L. Nickell, Dr. A. W. Adkins, Charles Holbrook, Jack Wilson, Orville Carter and Warren Fletcher, who was also named on the committee declined to serve because of being in the government service.

Judge J. W. Riley opened the meeting, presiding as temporary chairman. Short speeches were given by Judge Riley, Mr. Redwine, Dr. Adkins, A. S. Seymour, Jack Wilson and Glenn Lane.

Campaign headquarters will be opened today in the Consolidated Hardware Building in the room formerly occupied by the telephone company.

Precinct chairmen and managerial leaders will be named later, Mr. Redwine stated.

M. S. Bowne to Head Drive For Crippled Children Fund

Announcement was made this week of the selection of M. S. Bowne, general manager of the Lee-Clay Products Company at Clearfield, as chairman in Rowan County for the solicitation of funds for the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children.

Membership in the Association is as follows: Associate, $1; Active $2; Contributing, $5; Sustaining, $10; Co-operating, $25; Honorary $50; and Patron $100.

Mr. Bowne points out that the commission holds free diagnostic clinics throughout the State with 11,285 cases examined. It provides free hospital care, surgical treatment and corrective appliances for crippled children under the age of 18 years whose parents are unable to pay for such treatment. Almost six thousand cases have been treated with approximately forty per cent being re-admitted to hospitals from one to nine times.

The commission pays for hospital care for children in three centers: The Kings Daughters Hospital in Ashland; the Good Samaritan in Lexington; and at six hospitals and clinics in Louisville.

Donations should be mailed to Mr. Bowne at Clearfield, Ky.

Title Being Ironed Out On 100 Tracts Of Federal Lands

Coleman S. Moffett, Special Master from Winchester, has been in Morehead this week taking evidence in the condemnation proceedings of approximately 100 tracts of land under option by the Federal Government.

This land, which consists of more than 20,000 acres will be purchased by the government as an addition to the Cumberland National Park area, provided that the title is cleared up at the hearing now presided over by Mr. Moffett. A price has already been agreed upon but the government must obtain final approval of the purchase until the title is cleared by court action.

Mr. Moffett was appointed by Federal Judge H. Church Ford. He will continue hearing evidence in the matter until all tracts are cleared up which may be for two weeks or more.

The largest single tract that is in the court action is that of Sam Bradley which consists of more than 6,000 acres. This tract lies in the heart of the forest area and has already been optioned to the Federal Government.

Templeton Redwine handled the purchase and the clearing of titles of the land that has already been purchased.

Mr. Moffett was appointed by Federal Judge H. Church Ford. He will continue hearing evidence in the matter until all tracts are cleared up which may be for two weeks or more.

Keen Johnson To Speak Here On Friday

Lieutenant-Governor Keen Johnson will deliver an address in the auditorium of the Morehead State Teachers College Friday morning at 10 o'clock. This is the regular convocation hour at the college, but President Babb states that everyone is invited to hear Mr. Johnson speak.

Mr. Johnson, editor of the Richmond Daily Register, was elected Lieutenant-Governor by an overwhelming majority. He has been an active leader of the Kentucky Press Association for many years and is recognized as one of the foremost statesmen and newspaper editors in the Commonwealth.

The name of Mr. Johnson has been put forth as a likely candidate for Governor two years hence. He has been selected by the likelihood of his candidacy, but it is generally recognized throughout the State that he will be the probable choice of Governor Chandler as his successor.

MOREHEAD THIS WEEK . . .

Earl May, who is rapidly gaining renown as an amateur photographer, has taken a number of pictures depicting scenes of Rowan County's famous "hoss-tradin'" days. They will appear shortly in this newspaper.

It is little short of remarkable the success that Mr. May has achieved in his new line of pictures. As we write this we glance through a number of these pictures. On top of the heap is a picture of a "hoss-tradin'" man, sitting in the saddle with his whip in one hand and a bridle in the other. Mr. May has caught this "hoss-tradin'" picture in a remarkable pose. The picture is of Sant Batevilla, well known farmer and "hoss-trader."

The next picture we come to shows a crowd gathered around two men who are attempting to trade guns. One is a long 36-caliber while the other carries a repeating 22-caliber gun. Apparently the only thing that is holding this trade is the fact that the "boss" is you are going to fight. The interest engendered in the trade is shown by the fact that the traders and the assembled spectators.

The swagging of blow-towers is another interesting picture in the series.

In our opinion the prize of the entire set is that of the stably colored brown white, which Mr. May classified as "probably an on-looker." The picture is of Jim Sluss.

In still another film a trader is shown examining a horse's teeth to determine his age in anticipation of a trade. All horse-traders examine the teeth first.

John Caudill, well known school teacher and "hoss-trader" is in another film, apparently depicting the merits of whatever he is trying to trade for. Other films show shots of a portion of the jockey grounds and close-ups of some of the horses that have been brought in for trading purposes.

"Is many a man that has made a comfortable living trading everything from 'hosses' to corn-plasters."

One of the persons, unfortunately on staff, who received a sack of oranges given out by the WPA this week, offers a new recipe for using citrus fruit. We owe this to telling our Circuit Clerk Joe McKinney about how good this concoction was while Mr. McKinney's questions he explained that neither he nor his wife cared for oranges but that in an effort to consume them they had prepared the gravy from the juice. He explained that it was made the same as any (Continued on page 8)

GIVE TO THE FUND FOR KENTUCKY CRIPPLED CHILDREN

In selecting M. S. Bowne, general and popular manager of the Lee-Clay Products Company, as chairman of the group to help solicit funds in this county for the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children, the state department was wise.

Every man and woman who loves little children should be a member of the Kentucky Society, if the slogan that appears at the bottom of some of the literature being distributed in this drive.

As this is written we are looking at the picture of a little girl, "Mary Lou." With a smile on her face, her hands outstretched and her eyes beaming.

Do you know what is being done for crippled children in this community? Do you know their needs? Unfortunately most of us are not aware of these things.

Getting to the basic truth about this work, we quote from information released by the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children some of the present needs:

- 1. Increased appropriations to meet increasing demands for help. Approximately 50 per cent of all cases treated should be kept under observation from 1 to 5 years as they often need additional hospital care, braces, etc. This means that the number of new cases needing attention cannot always receive it as promptly as desirable and there is a long line to meet emergency cases such as infantile paralysis epidemics.

WARRIOR NATIONS CAN BE WHIPPED

Mark Twain somewhere tells an unforgettable story about the rough, tough Mississippi river ruffian who was carried downstream on a lumber barge and telling all his companions what a vicious and fearless fighter he was.

He was, he said, a child of calamity and an author of misfortunes. No one could stand before him to fight with him, no one could, to cross his path was to risk violent dismemberment. And so he went on and on, impressing his companions mightily and gaining a great name as a terrible man.

Until at last a quiet little man who had been sitting in a corner got up, walked over to the tough guy, and proceeded to knock the everlasting day-draft out of him... after which the men on the raft were distinguished to accept anyone's reputation at face value.

There is something dimly reminiscent of this in the news dispatches from China these days. For it begins to look very much as if the fearsome, invulnerable military bully from Japan has taken an equally mean of a fight than he can digest properly.

A few months ago the Japanese military machine looked like something to shudder at. It had a record of unbroken successes. It had the finest strategic direction, the finest traditions of military victory. It was going to breeze through China like nobody's business, and anyone who tangled with it was due to spend years in the cloth and ashes of repentance.

But something strange has been happening of late. In southern Shantung it becomes apparent that this mighty machine has met with one of the greatest reverses in Japanese history. A dispatch to the New York Times says that barely 30,000 men survive out of an army of 60,000. The troops whose proud boast it was that they never retreated who had to retreat on a 24-hour-a-day basis to escape annihilation.

This, of course, doesn't mean that Japan has lost its best war reinforcements as pouring in, and the reverse may soon be made good. But the significant thing is that this mighty machine has developed some glaring flaws. The Japanese war god is only mortal, after all. He can be licked, if someone puts up a fight.

All of which is worth keeping in mind. For the world these days seems to lie at the mercy of the "invincible" war machines. The dictators and the war-mongers have been swaggering up and down the globe, blustering about the dreadful things that will happen if they don't get their own way. The rest of the world has listened.

But behold—they aren't so tough after all. Perhaps the loaf of them can be taken, anyone someone finds the nerve to try it.

RAILROADS BOOST KENTUCKY BUSINESS

Kentucky benefited substantially from the expenditures of the railroads in 1937 for materials, supplies, fuel, new equipment and payrolls. It is reported in a special study which has just been completed by the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads.

Railway purchases in Kentucky last year totaled $18,646,807, the report shows. Of this sum $18,642,000 was spent for materials, supplies and fuel, while $4,624 went for new equipment (not including that built in company shops). These purchases were made in 377 towns and cities located in 102 counties of the state.

Wages paid to railway employees in Kentucky during 1937 amounted to $45,998,184.

The review discloses that, for the nation as a whole, the railroads last year paid $1,133,361,468 for the more than 70,000 different items which they use in their operations and the $2,223,223,223 and expenditures for all equipment (except that constructed in railway shops) totaled $166,978,468.

More than 12,000 towns and cities located in 2,638 of the 3,072 counties of the United States derived direct benefits from this large volume of railroad buying.

In 1937, the country's rail carriers also distributed $1,983,990,485 in wages to their employees, the report says.

FAMILY-STYLE OUTINGS

The great American family—whose desire to enjoy the shifting vacation scene amid "all the comforts of home" led to purchase the 1937 version of the "squire schooner" in astonishing numbers—has hit upon a new highway or, rather, waterway.

To those with a distaste for carter highways and a distaste for comparative solitude, this modern form of aquatic gipping would seem to possess distinct advantages. To those of limited income it may be pointed out that the seagoing trailer is less costly than its landlubbery cousin. Food, provided judiciously, is excellent in selecting a mooring place, may be as conveniently and economically purchased as on a motoring trip, and there are, at present, none of the oftentimes inconvenient regulations which enmesh its ground-going counterpart.

Undoubtedly an outgrowth of recent economic experience, the automobile trailer and its seagoing sister, the erstwhile houseboat, have opened a pleasant panorama of new vistas to thousands of moderate income who otherwise might have remained huddled at home.

THE HIRED GIRL

The hired girl is vanishing, if not almost gone, according to the Bureau of Home Economics in Washington. With her going she takes one more of the things that was truly American. She was housekeeper, washerwoman, dressmaker, cook and often a valuable family counselor. The Bureau lists as one of the causes that "sums paid out for household help are no longer so high as they were. They always were, no matter what she was paid.

To many the deepest memories are those of a kindly understanding confidante of childhood. If a little boy wanted a special favor from a parent or if the best way was through the good offices of Martha-May. She knew how well-behaved he had been for the past week; she conveniently forgot about last Thursday when he had tracked the kitchen with his muddy boots.

RIDING AGAIN

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR MAY 1 FOLLOWING VISION WITH SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:14-29 GOLDEN TEXT—All things are possible to him that believeth.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Only Jesus Could Help. JUNIOR TOPIC—At the Foot of the Mountain.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living Up to Our Knowledge of Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Following Vision With Service.

It is the fact that seems hard to learn and to keep constantly effective in the life of a Christian is that mountain-top experiences of spiritual uplift are not an end in themselves, but a preparation for service. All too often we come to regard such visions of peculiar blessing, whether in the privacy of our own room, or in the great experience of Christian workers, as something which should glow warmly in our own hearts, making us glad in the Lord, and not as a background and preparation for ministry to others.

One just might as well hope to feed the physical body constantly without any work or exercise and keep in good health, as to feed the soul on good things, do nothing for God or fellowman, and still avoid what someone has called "spiritual dyspepsia."

The writer has just attended a most unusual and blessed Bible conference, the leaders of which rightly apprehended this truth. Evangelism was the matter chiefly in the mind, but the theme of the week's meetings was "Evangelism" the program presented it as "Preparation for Evangelism."

Jesus rightly characterized the time in which he lived as I. A Faithful Generation—vv. 14-19.

He found in the valley disputing scribes, a distracted father, a demon-possessed boy, and dejected disciples. The unbeliever which called for the rebuke of Jesus is revealed in different phases. There were the scribes, the father and the boy, the unbeliever, and the dejected disciples. The unbeliever which called for the rebuke of Jesus is revealed in different phases.

As we look at this depressing picture of our age, let us consider ourselves less also as tempted to "flee to God" by our faithlessness. The most casual reader of Scripture cannot help but wonder that, as we begin to study that God seeks out and honors faith, and as we begin to see God's Word with care we realize that the fundamentals of all fundamentalism is really to believe God. Some Christian men and women are living out a tremendous testimony for God by fully believing Him and His Word, but many of those who profess to follow Him actually make Him appear ridiculous before the world because their "unbelief" makes Him out to be a "small"

THE ALL-POWERFUL SAVIOUR

The keynote of the first division might well have been the sad words "they could not" in verse 18. But now the Son of God has come and the new keynote is the inspiring words of verse 22, "all things are possible to him that believeth."

A distressing fact that emerges as one becomes acquainted with Christian work and workers is that the work of God is being hindered by men and women who deny their testimony by their destructive works.

One wonders if much of it might not be stopped "dead in its tracks" if the ones against whom the attacks are directed were first to see that their own life is blameless before God and then trust Him to meet the same. He is able. Read Isaiah 54:17, and if you are a true "servant of the Lord" claim your "heritage."

III. Prayer the Connecting Link—vv. 28, 29. The disciplinarian in their inability to deal with the difficulty of the demon-possessed boy, having witnessed the power of Christ in delivering him, begin now to realize that evidently even though unconscious of it, they had come into the power-eries position of unbeliever.

What a solemn warning there is for us in the experience of these followers of the Lord. Like the termites who destroy the very life strength of wood—and yet leave it apparently whole, only to crumble in dust when it is put under the pressure of daily use—there are spiritually destructive influences which all but unconsciously destroy the virile strength of the Christian. The weakness is the most effective weapon of Satan at this point. Without prayer there is no power. Real problems are not successfully met nor are opportunities grasped "but by prayer."

Bradley Talks On Old Drama and New

Speaks To Student Body At Monday Morning Convocation

Mr. Emmet Bradley, professor of the department of English, addressed the student body briefly on the subject, "The Old Drama and the New," at convocation April 18. Opening his speech with a little drama of school life in the style of the immortal dramatist, Shakespeare, he referred to "The Rise of Lawrence Carter," as written by Tim Woyant. He said that this play was similar to the capture of his soul while writing of our age depict man as an insignificant bit of matter buffeted by fate. Mr. Bradley said that even in the tragedies of the old writers, as in the death of the hero for ideals, the audience left with hope in their minds. But the new dramas impressed on the listeners a sense of utter defeat.

THE BRIDE WORE RED

BEATRICE FABER

SYNOPSIS: Anni, formerly a singer in a waterfront cafe in a woman of position. Her two weeks' adventure is the result of wealthy Count Armalia's drunken whim. She finds herself desperately in love with Guilio, the village postman, but wanting luxury, she resolves to win Rudi Pal from his fiancée, Maddelena. On the night of the wine festa, Rudi proposes. Next day, he says he will tell Maddelena. Suddenly, however, they meet Guilio on the mountain path and Anni is afraid, for he knows her secret and has read the telegram which Armalia has sent to Maddelena's friend, the Contessa. He reveals her true identity and Guilio has only to deliver it to ruin her.

CHAPTER NINE

Guilio made a sweeping, drunken gesture. "The night in her bluest gown, the moon in his most clever face. There are pearls on the grass where tomorrow there will be dew." He bowed and said ironically. "And there is Signorina here to blind them with her light."

Rudi laughed good naturedly. "All this was Festa night. Wonderful, Guilio. I've never heard you say that much in a week."

"I have been known to say less, Signor and I have been known to say more."

Anni's voice quivered with suppressed anguish. "I think you've said just about enough. Shall we go now Rudi?"

"Of course." But Guilio put out a detaining hand. "A moment please. This being the night of the Festa, I ask your permission, Signorina, to dance once with the Signorina."

"Certainly not," Anni said quickly. "You're drunk."

Rudi laughed. Why not be generous on such a night when it had brought him the gorgeous Anni? "It's the one night in the year, darling, when we forget about—well, Guilio's a harmless fellow. I'd trust him with you anywhere."

Guilio bowed with drunken dignity. "I have never been known to damage the wind of a lady."

"You're drunk," Anni said sharply. "Signor Pal says that sober, I am harmless. Drunk, I must be pitiful."

She shrugged resignedly. As Rudi started away, he said to her tenderly, "I shall have to bow with the Contessa, but dolls with Maddelena and kiss the Admiral's name when his knees turn blue. But I'll find you darling."

Anni nodded. Then, with a quick defiant look at Guilio, she kissed Rudi full on the lips.

"Take good care of her, Guilio," Rudi enjoined him.

"As I would my own, Signor."

And so they were alone. And now somehow, the music was not sweet and romantic but poignant, filled with despair and heartbreak. What was there to do, what to say to the Guilio she faced her, with nothing but torment and ache in his eyes?

He shattered the silence. "How much did he pay you for this kiss?" She was shocked into utter stillness. "How much did he pay you?"

With a sudden pitying instinct her hands went out to him. Her heart was filled with dangerous longing as the memory of that day on the mountain-top came back.

"Guilio, don't look at me like that," she implored. "Guilio, can make you understand. I can explain. Let me talk to you."

"Talk, Anni? Talk?" "Guilio," she burst out. "Do you remember when I came to your little house?"

He nodded. "The day I received the telegram from the Contessa."

Her heart dropped. Was that the way he remembered her? When he thought of that day, he thought of the telegram. And suddenly, a searing thought came to her. Maybe Guilio didn't love her. Perhaps he was simply resentful because she had chosen a man who was an aristocrat instead of a peasant. Perhaps it was just his pride that was touched.

The telegram? You—think of it!" "Constantly. In a way to make me sing without knowing and laugh for no reason." He stopped abruptly. "It's unimportant."

Her eyes were bright with unshed tears. Then it was love that his harshness cloaked. "Guilio," she began in agony of confession, "I came to your house that day the year, darling, when we forget about—well, Guilio's a harmless fellow. I'd trust him with you anywhere."

"I didn't know exactly how to hide it. I had to keep my mouth shut."

"I was afraid to come."

"Why?" Her heart seemed to stand still. "Because for a long time I felt that I loved you." She had never loved before like that, way inside of her and it had frightened her and made her angry. It frightened her now, but she no longer hated him for it as she had that day.

"I thought so too," he said slowly. "But tonight, I know only that the telegram was not delivered."

"You think everything I said and did that day was for a purpose."

"It must have been. I know what was in the telegram."

Was there no way to reach him? To penetrate the barrier? "But I love you now, Guilio. It was like a match to tinder. 'Be as cheap as you like,' he burst out, 'but not about that any more. His net our love now, or yours. It's only mine. So leave it to me.'"

At that, she rose and stood before him. Her face was radiant. "Then hear this, I love you this minute, more than I did that day."

"Anni—please."

"And as time goes on, I shall probably love you even more than now." Yes, here was the solemn wracking truth at last. There would never be an hour of her future when she wouldn't think of him, need him. But Guilio didn't know, he couldn't, what it was to have a driving friend inside you that told you to get someplace in the world, to snatch luxury and security for yourself. He face dher bewilderedly. "But if you love me now, how—what?"

"I'm going to marry Rudi Pal. I love you. That's what I feel, I can't help that. But the other's what I want."

"But you can't want it."

"Why not?" she demanded, fighting him, fighting herself. "He loved you, he said so and asked me to marry him."

He lowered over her and spoke as if every word were a wedge which he would drive between her and Rudi. "But we love each other. You'll marry me. There'll be no lies between us. I know what you are and you know what I am. We can be happy."

"He'll make me happy too. He's got what I need for happiness."

But even as she spoke she did not believe herself. There was much she wanted and would get from a life with Rudi but happiness was something she hadn't dared think of, nor ever would.

"You don't know what you need," Guilio cried. "Were you happy at that bar on the waterfront? Your life will be just the same. You'll be just the same. And who will there be to love? Who will love you?"

"I can deliver that telegram." Her voice rose hysterically. "You'll get into trouble. I'll report you. I'll tell them you should have delivered it days ago. Think of your family, your disgrace. You'll lose your job."

He caught her up and laughed exultantly. "I've never been hungry. My love for you is stronger than anything in my life so far."

"Then you love me, Guilio," she implied.

He shook his head and drew her even closer into the circle of his arms. "It's stronger even than you Anni. Stronger even than both of us."

"Guilio, then what are you going to do?"

His smile was strange and tender as if it were far, far away and yet closer to her than her own heart-beat. "At this moment Anni, there is nothing to do. Later—well tomorrow is another day."

He bent and his mouth closed over hers. Her senses were all one consuming fire. Finally, with a shaken and cold from turning and speeding away from him down the little path.

all the things that come with security.

All her life she'd wanted things she had seen and heard of and dreamed about, things like those lies she had told him that day. He had known she was lying. She couldn't believe them herself, they were too fantastic. Maybe she would never have all of them, maybe she'd never have any of them. But she had had a taste. And now there was a chance for more. And she was going to take it.

He looked at her helplessly. "But you belong here, Anni. Everything that you love in the world is here. The trees and the water and the wind. The wind comes a long way to see you. You should be here to greet it in the morning." He took a step toward her.

"I shall see to it that you are."

"We're leaving tomorrow night, Rudi and I."

"I won't let you marry him, Anni."

"You can't stop me," she flared. "There's nothing you can do."

"I can deliver that telegram."

Her voice rose hysterically. "You'll get into trouble. I'll report you. I'll tell them you should

SPRING TIME

Winter is gone with the wind. It's Springtime a new life to begin. Resurrection time, from death comes life. In this great land of peace we read of war and strife.

The beauty of Springtime, the old world looks so fair. The perfume of the blossoms heavy on the air.

The proud Kentucky hills dressed up in their new spring gown. The high towering mountains, their colorful crown.

We feel new life, new hope in the Springtime. Rhythm and happiness and life is sublime. Time to plow, and plant to till. Springtime is when the farmer toils.

We plant, we harvest the golden grain. We event make molasses from sugar cane. Molasses and hot cakes for cold winter days.

It's a funny life, in many ways. With all four seasons from East to West. I love the beauty of the Springtime best.

Sophie Meek Moffitt.

DONATES 250 POUNDS OF WALNUTS FOR SEED

J. B. Finch of Powell County, has given 250 pounds of black walnuts to the Cumberland National Forest. The walnuts have been planted near the Red River in Powell County on an area of about ten acres.

Mr. Finch's gift was prompted by his interest in reforestation and the work being carried on by the United States Forest Service in that area. The plantation has been designated as the Finch Experimental Plantation.

The Forest Service plans to place black locust seedlings in the plantation next spring, thus producing a mixed planting from which locust posts can be harvested some years prior to the time when the black walnut trees will be mature.
