BURGLARS BREAK INTO DOWNING DWELLING AND STEAL LARGE SUM OF CASH FROM TRUNK IN ATTIC

Caught In Portsmouth With $269 Out Of $450 In Possession

Alfred Hall and his brother Cecil Hall are under arrest here for the robbery of the home of Coach and Mrs. G. D. Downing, a raid in which $450 which Coach Downing had put away in 1923, was stolen, as well as the contents of a bank belonging to their son, Dewey, Jr., an onyx ring belonging to Mrs. Downing and a revolver belonging to Coach. The robbers were captured at Portsmouth, Ohio, where they had been taken by Lester Caskey, whose trap they had hired for the trip. They were returned to Morehead Monday afternoon, after Mr. Caskey had returned from the trip and reported that he had taken the men to the Ohio city and left them.

The robbery took place Sunday evening between the hours of 7:45 and 8:45 o'clock. Coach and Mrs. Downing left their home about 7:45 with the children, leaving the kitchen door open, as they expected their colored maid to return during the absence. When they returned at 8:45, they noticed that the secretary desk in the living room had been forced open, Mrs. Downing then went to the bed room where she found the family clothing strewn about. She called Coach, who called the police.

Further investigation disclosed that the robbers had not entered through the kitchen door, but had forced a screen from the kitchen window. They had thoroughly ransacked the entire house, going up stairs to the attic and tearing open the three trunks that were stored there, filled with money.

Alternating the meetings between the Christians and the Methodist Churches, the offerings taken at these services will be given to the hostess church. First Merchant's Gift Day Bring Fine Crowd To Morehead Saturday

Morehead Merchants enjoyed a big day Saturday, eight Rowan county citizens went home somewhat richer, as the result of the first of a series of big week-ends to be held here. Those who profited by the Gift Day Program inaugurated by the Morehead Merchants were Lonnie Porter who went home enriched by $25.00; E. D. Burrows; H. H. Hensley; Everett Hall; J. H. Reynolds; Farmers; W. C. Lappin; Sarah Parsons; Corrine Bradley; and Mrs. Maude Peters.

The Gift money drew a large crowd at the court house where the awards were made Saturday afternoon. Considering the fact that it is an entirely new proposition to the citizens of this community, and that the idea had just begun to take hold, the results were very satisfactory to both the merchants and the patrons of the local business places which were taking part.

The second big Saturday Gift Day will be held on Saturday of this week. Merchants are giving out tickets with each 25 cent purchase. Don't fail to ask for them. They are worth money. Remember the Morehead Merchants whose names appear below are giving away $50.00 Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The big affair will be held this next Saturday in front of the Midland

ROTO SECTION WILL BE FOUND IN THIS ISSUE

The re-organization of the Rowan County News which was to have been included in the last issue, failed to arrive in time for this issue. The section is included in this week's issue. Judging from the number of inquiries about its omission last week, the farm section is creating a great deal of interest both in the city and in the county. The Farm section is proving to be one of the most popular features we have ever carried, so much so that our subscribers are hoping that it will become a weekly rather than a monthly feature.

Wilburn Evidence Goes To Grand Jury

The results of the investigation and court of inquiry into the rape of Ruby Wilburn held by County Judge Chas. E. Jennings were turned over to the Grand Jury for further investigation with a view to returning an indictment, if possible. The investigation produced considerable excitement last week, when it became known that the father of the little girl was suspected of being the cause of her trouble.

Wilburn is still being held in the county jail at Lexington for safe keeping, pending the action of the Grand Jury.

JUNE TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT OPENS WITH HEAVY DOCKET HERE MONDAY

The June term of the Rowan Circuit Court opened Monday morning of this week, with the selection of the Grand and Petit juries for the term, followed by the instructions of Judge D. B. Caudill to the Grand Jury. Prominent among the cases to be tried at this term are the case of Ed Hall, Morehead city policeman who is charged with the murder of Charles Crum last September. Due to the fact that Judge Caudill is related to Hall, Judge J. W. Riley has been agreed upon by the attorneys to try the case. It is probable that the case will go to trial Thursday morning, when the jury will be selected. Judge Caudill stressed general law enforcement in his instructions to the Grand Jury. He insisted that

Rowan Veterans Get $142,000 Elliott, $99,000 In Distribution

Lyle Howard, was the first veteran of the World War to sign up for and receive his Bonus Bonds here, early Monday morning, according to Mrs. Mattie Burns, local post master. Several of the bonds done up in square brown envelopes, registered and deliverable only to the veterans themselves, arrived on the early train Monday morning and since that time the local office has been besieged by veterans who were expecting packages.

Mr. Howard stepped up to the window and presented his slip announcing that he had a package awaiting him. He signed the registry book, then signed the receipt, and another slip and his package containing over $1,200 in bonds was passed into his possession. It was not long before others were calling, some receiving them, others being told that their package had not yet arrived.

Later in the day, on 22 which arrived at 6:00 p. m., more bonds arrived and were brought under guard from the station to the post office, where the local force worked the greater part of the night getting the packages ready for delivery Tuesday morning.

Morehead is more or less a center for distribution, as routes go from here to Sandy Hook, Wrigley, Vale and numerous other post offices. The result was that the local post office force was an important cog in the distribution of the bonds, many of

ROOSEVELT AND FLAG DAY

It was fitting that the visit of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to Kentucky should come on Flag Day, June 14, for no living man has done more to make the flag mean what it does to the people of America, especially those in the large class for the past six years commonly referred to as the submerged tenth. And the reference, has been apt. How these people have lived through these six years has been a mystery to many of us and there is no question that starvation and disease would have taken an even greater toll but for the humanitarian measure put into effect by the President and his administration.

The President spent part of Saturday at Old Vincennes, Indiana, the site of the monument to George Rogers Clark and his fellow heroes who won a battle decisive in history to insure the safety of the Northwest Territory. The afternoon in Kentucky included a visit to the cabin of Abraham Lincoln at Hodgenville and the memorial to the martyr erection on the site of the cabin and enclosing it as a protection against the passing of the years.

Mr. Lincoln was himself a great humanitarian. It was the South's greatest misfortune when the assassin's bullet struck him down, when forgiveness was in his heart and on his pen. His sympathy for the poor was not unlike that of the present President. Never were two men born under more different horoscopes. Lincoln the son of a farmer so poor he could not even afford candles, Roosevelt the scion of a family of wealth and distinction, yet with a heart beating in tune to the aspirations, the wishes, the needs of the very poor.

We know the President came to a state in which he has lots of friends, people who voted for him and who have heard him on the radio and who feel that they know the genuineness of the concern he feels for the great common people, whom, Lincoln is reputed to have said, are "God's chosen people, because He made so many of them."

Kentucky is honored to receive a visit from the President on his political mission. Our people have the greatest admiration for this man who conquered a physical infirmity to become governor of a great state and to undergo the grueling test of a Presidential campaign to emerge the victor by a greater vote than ever was given to any candidate for the Presidency. We are glad to have had the President here, glad to join in honoring him, as he came to pay tribute to our own honoring dead. We do not think it exaggeration to say that he is held in as warm affection as is the thought of the martyr President whose memory he came to honor, by the people of Kentucky.

KENTUCKY AND EDUCATION

Perhaps few persons know that Kentucky rates near the bottom of the list in education in the United States. Governor Chandler, in a recent commencement address, cited this fact and we presume he knows what he is talking about. He said that Kentucky's rating is forty-second among the 48 states.

We cannot help but feel a degree of humiliation over this fact but, on the other hand, we may feel encouraged that efforts are afoot, and have been for several years, to improve Kentucky's education facilities. The state department of education is tackling the problem with the support of the educational associations and friendly legislators and our public school systems are gaining rapidly in efficiency.

The governor has indicated his interest in education by providing a $12 per capita, as well as free text books and legislative appropriations for the schools and universities. About 10 million dollars will be available for the public school system for the coming year against five millions appropriated in 1933.

We think it will not be long before Kentucky will stand much higher among her sister states, from the point of view of education.

division of the next three weeks—Mr. Talbott as Commissioner of Finance, Mr. Beckham as Commissioner of Business Regulations and Dr. Martin as Commissioner of Revenue.

The heads of some of the departments have not been decided on, and in many instances no selections have been made for division heads under many of the departments. Frederic A. Wallis, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, may become commissioner of Welfare under the reorganization set-up, but his selection is not as definitely settled as the appointment of Mr. Talbott.

The posts of Advisory Highway Commissioners, of less importance than membership on the old commission, are not definitely settled in all districts. Zack Justice, Pikeville, is sure to be named in the Seventh District; Herb Smith in the Ninth. Roy McFarland, Owensboro, may get the Second, Isaac Hilliard has been mentioned for the Third. The Fifth may go to O. M. Rogers, Co. Commissioner of set-up, but his selection is being fought by powerful influences in the district.

If Bernard Coughlin, Mayville, Highway Commissioner in the eighth would consent he probably would be named Advisory Commissioner from his section. A. P. Plummer may come in for consideration otherwise.

In the Department of Highway there will be a Division of Rural Highways presided over by Cecil Williams, Somerset publisher. This division will have charge of Governor Chandler's plan for maintenance of way roads, in the Highway Department, The Division of Highways, will be headed by Ed O. Huey, present Superintendent of the State Police. The Highway Patrol force will be a consolidation of the present State Police and Highway Patrol forces. At the coming session of the General Assembly the Governor will ask for expansion of the power of the Highway Patrol force.

Mr. Talbott, as head of the department of Finance, will have under him the Division of Budget, Division of personnel, Division of Purchases, Division of Accounts, Dr. J. W. Manning, now in charge of the Personnel Division, will remain under original plans under Mr. Talbott. Whether these plans will be changed, or he will be succeeded by another, is undetermined now. F. THE PATTERNS OF WOLFPEN

By Harlan Hatcher

A few new people were still coming in wherever they could find enough flat land to build a cabin on. She had heard her father talk about the growth of the mountains and wondering what would happen when there was no more land, wondering where it was all leading to. It seemed to him that it led first of all to a steam mill that would run all the year round and grind their corn a little faster. And there he was being low her, tall and calm of manner, greeting his neighbors, studying the diagram in his hand, speaking directions to his three sons, and ordering the complicated process as though it were a common thing for a man to be setting up the first steam mill in the hills of a new country that had, for a hundred years, got on very well with its native devices and handwork.

"The way he's been the last year about a steam-engine is the way I guess it was with Grandfather, Barton making the horse-mill and Grandfather Tivis making a water-mill. Only they made theirs and Daddy had to buy most of his. They never let well enough alone. Mother's loom and churns and cook-stove and things are just like they always were, but the menfolk always kept changing from one thing to another."

Of course the old mill of stone and wood was wearing out and needed repairs, badly, and since people could not be served if the season was too dry, he ought to improve it. When the good days of February came, round, he took the Fine mare and rode down to Greenup to visit his sister and to see a steam-driven mill actually at work. He was so taken with the mechanism and the quick trickle of yellow meal pouring into the sacks, that he decided forthwith to have one for himself. It came up from Cincinnati by boat, was transferred at Caltettaburg to the Canoe and set it off at the Big Sandy river. Now it was finally set up and adjusted, this evening it would be set in motion, and Cynthia was there on the ledge, by the overhanging bushes to witness the triumph of her father. She was near enough to hear the tall of the onlookers who knew that this mad contraption of Sparrow's couldn't possibly work, and even if it did (which it wouldn't) the meal wouldn't be so good.

One group was particularly interested in the boiler where Jesse and Abral were working. She watched a strange man hunched over the post of his saddle, ride around the boiler, inspecting and pointing.

"He sure ain't aimin to turn them big grist stones with that puny blackard little now you don't reckon," "Don't look near big enough."

"Who ever heard of a feller workin' a mill with a little of 'em that water?" "It sure beats me how it could."

"What do you fellows know about steam-engines when you never saw one in your lives. I don't reckon," Dough Mason said.

Cynthia, recognizing Dough's voice liked him more because of the way he had spoken.

She heard Sparrow laugh at their incredulity and watched him go on with his work, inspecting the boiler as it began to exhale little puffs of steam. Abral was putting more wood under the fire-box; the pale blue smoke curling over the mill was thinned into the air before it could reach the rock where Cynthia sat; but the gentle bits of its small came into her nose.

"You better get that water-wheel in the clear, Sparrow; you'll sure need it." The voice of the man on horseback irritated her.

"You think so?" her father said. She could feel light puffs of hot air on her face from the column set up from the boiler. Sparrow watched the steam gauge while Jasper and Abral attached the belt. There was excitement in the crowd in the mill yard as the boiler began to spunk and sputter under the expansion.

Then Sparrow tooted the whistle. She saw it first as a puff of vapor which melted instantly into a sound which roared in her ears. All the horses, mules and oxen jumped and cavorted about. One of the Darten boys splashed across the creek to safety.

Sparrow was full of great pride as he turned the steam into the cylinder of his new engine. It hissed and sped, the piston began to move, the belt jerked, the new timbers creaked, the old millstones faster whirled twenty revolutions began to turn ever before; a monster from the outside and finally got into the mountains.

Well boys, there she is, Sparrow shouted to the crowd which was now pressing forward and peering through the doors and windows. A stream of yellow meal slid down the chute into a sack.

"Well, now, I'll be dogged," the skeptical neighbor said. "Who'd ever study up a contraption like that to turn a millstone with, anyhow?"

"It runs all right, but it makes a sight of fuss about it," Cynthia said, and arose from the ledge where she sat. "I guess I better get back now."

As she started down the path, she looked across the bottom to the west, where an old stone slab at the head of old Grandfather Saul's grave on the Cranes-nest Shelf, and she felt that something out of the old life had been buried with him.

Down the winding course of the path to the creek, through the peach orchard, over the Long Bottom, up Sheepfold Hollow a few paces, then along the path and she was at Cranes-nest Shelf. There was for Cynthia something intimate and old about these place-names which had grown out of the very stuff of her family's life. Through the year the emotions of children and grandchildren gathering round these home spots gave meaning to the place-names.

What was spread about in the bottomland was united in the small plot within the rails on Cranes-nest Shelf where lay at rest the earliest maker of the land, Cynthia leaned forward with her chin in her left hand and her eyes on Stack Bottom, but she was looking at nothing out of herself. She made words of her own and went there to live when she wished.

For she was much alone, without being lonely. Jesse seemed 1 nearer than her two other brothers, but even he was a man. Both of her sisters were gone. Lucy, the oldest of the family, was married years ago and lived over on the Sandy farm at the Pattern Landing; and Jenny, who was next to Jasper, already had two children and seemed miles away on the Horsepen Branch farm. But to Cynthia they were no farther away now than before their marriage because they had always been of another generation from herself, the youngest of the children, save Abral, Grandfather Saul seemed as close to her as Lucy, perhaps closer. For she could recreate him and his sons to please her own fancy; could dress him in his old buckskin breeches, handed down through the generations which she would take from her peg in the wall-by the staircase landing, stretching out their long legs as fast as she could reach, swelling out before the imagination until it brought to life a man seven feet tall, a whole foot higher than her own father, great enough to wear those incredible yellow meal slid down the chute into a sack.

There was something vital about him which refused to perish. She had always thought of him as living there in a cabin instead of dead in a grave. She felt to thinking of his son, her great grandfather Barton, with the knot in his neck, hollowing out the great stone slab at the head of old Grandfather Saul's grave on the Cranes-nest Shelf, and she felt that something out of the old life had been buried with him.

Down the winding course of the path to the creek, through the peach orchard, over the Long Bottom, up Sheepfold Hollow a few paces, then along the path and she was at Cranes-nest Shelf. There was for Cynthia something intimate and old about these place-names which had grown out of the very stuff of her family's life. Through the year the emotions of children and grandchildren gathering round these home spots gave meaning to the place-names.

What was spread about in the bottomland was united in the small plot of Saul's long-fint rifle which now hung above the fireplace on the rafters of the first buck he had shot at the mouth of Wolfpen in 1796. That gun with its bullet-pouch and powder horn which he had brought from Boone in the autumn of 1788 when they met at Pound Gap, made more human for Cynthia its incorporeal Saul of the popular log. Its barrel seemed almost as long to her as a game fishing pole, and too heavy to shoulder. She tried to imagine Daniel Boone and Saul Pattern sitting around a camp-fire trading stories of their adventures in the Big Sandy country when the Indians still held it. The side of the horn which rubbed against the leather pouch was worn smooth and was colored like the ivoryed ventral of a milvov; but the outside had darkened and weathered into a deep brown lending a singular lifelike animation to the two writing rattlesnakes which coiled and twisted prominently into the initials D. B. at the big end, and the initials C. G. at the little end, the latter forked tongues at the Indians, and panthers, stars, and wahoo leaves filling the rest of the space down to the steeper in the tapering point.

Near Saul's grave but under smaller markers lay her great-grandfather Barton and her Grandfather Tivis. They could hope to survive only as Saul's son and grandson. She wondered what Barton was like behind the legend of his strength, if he had really lifted those millstones and that he would think of the new engine.

Barton's son Tivis had built in the late 1820's the central body of the Pattern house. It stood there on a gentle rise a half-mile up the Wolfpen Bottom from this Shelf on the site chosen for it by Saul Pattern under the shelter of a wrinkle in the hill.

Julia was still out in her garden below the house. It is a good house for a body to live in. And I better be getting back to it instead of just mooning about here among a lot of grave-stones. Her Mother will be going in now soon to start supper and the menfolk will be coming home hungry and after while will be dark again.

The house Cynthia looked at with the feeling that it was time to return to it, stood in 1885 as a monument to all four generations of Wolfpen.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Kaeze, Pastor of Baptist Church. Written each week by Rev. B. H.

Subject: Jesus Exalted, Luke 24: 36-53. Golden Text: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name." Phil. 2:9.

Peter, speaking to the Israelites on the day of Pentecost, said: "This Jesus God has raised to life—a fact to which all of us testify." God had prepared witnesses to see and testify to the risen Lord. Their testimony is without challenge. Jesus appeared many times to the disciples, an definite time to the Apostles in a body. He ate with them to prove that He was not a spirit, but flesh and blood.

The humiliation of Jesus for a lost world was from the throne of God as the reigning Lord and Creator to the tomb of a condemned (substitute) sinner. His exaltation was from this tomb and all the suffering it had signified, back to the throne of God to reign forever more and to put all enemies under His feet. We have here a mere glimpse of Him on His passage from the tomb to the throne of God.

"The resurrection and ascension of Jesus mark the greatest exaltation possible in the moral universe. The exaltation from the tomb was more than the emergence of a physical body from Joseph's sepulcher. It was a triumph over Satan and the powers of darkness. It was a victory of a death which is the last enemy to be destroyed. It was a complete conquest over everything that men suffer and dread. The exaltation to the throne was more than the disappearance of a spiritual body skyward from Mount of Olives. It was an accession to the seat of infinite power in the government of God. Jesus is even now at the right hand of God on High and there He will remain and reign until His enemies are conquered and the redeemed are saved fully and forevermore."

We should accept the exalted Christ. To be on His side guarantees victory to anyone, no matter what his circumstances in the earth may be. This is the vision of hope to the downcast and weary; to the disappointed; to the powerless; to the hopeless. Jesus is now exalted over all that causes men to suffer and despair; those who trust in Him have likewise conquered in Him all our enemies.

He was lifted through the air from the Mount of Olives into a cloud right before the eyes of those witnesses. He left them looking upward. The disciples of Jesus, those who understood this great truth, have never taken their eyes from that upward look. And they never will until that same Jesus, as they saw Him leave, comes back to establish peace upon the earth, as the prophets and as Jesus Himself have told us. But when He comes again He will not come as the suffering, humiliated Jesus. That is all over. He will come as the reigning Lord of the universe, to receive unto Himself those whom He has redeemed.

Because of His victory He calls upon us to accept His authority and to stand in allegiance to Him until He tarries in a Jerusalem awaiting the times. From the day the disciples promised power from on high, there have been those who accept an exaltation by in firm allegiance to the exaltation of Christ. We are already victorious. No power can destroy our works, and in the final contest it will be proven. So, then let us be like the disciples who saw Him go and turned to worship Him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy, an awe continually in the temple, blessing God."

them for neighboring towns passing through the local office. Each package whether intended for a local vet man or not, was handled by the local office and re-routed to its destination. As the bonds were received it was necessary to go over them, enter them on the book, re-route those that went to other post offices, and finally to be ready to deliver the packages to the veterans themselves.

It will be readily seen just how much extra work was made for the local post office force by the bonus bonds. They not only worked all night getting ready to deliver them, but the entire Tuesday morning to make and early Tuesday morning to make deliveries. The veterans when they are enjoying the benefits of their bonds, should not forget that they owe gratitude at least to the post office department in general and to the local office force in particular for the prompt and efficient manner in which the deliveries were made.

Willis Bailey was the first to apply from the local office for the cash on his bonds.

Many of the veterans who received bonds have already made plans on how they intend to use the money received. It is safe to say that the majority learned valuable lessons from the first payment and that the great majority of the present payees will be put to much better use than was that received previously. A brief attempt was made by the News to learn just what the veterans were planning to do with their money.

Some bonds will be held and put in the bank for safe-keeping. Much of the cash will be used to pay debts. Others plan on putting the cash into homes. Some few will use it in their businesses. Contrary to the last payment, very few are planning at present to buy cars or to spend it on luxuries. By far the greater percent will be put to good use, according to the veterans themselves.

WEST MOREHEAD

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Steele and little daughter of Cincinnati spent the week-end with his father who is very ill.

Misses Reva Johnson and Frances McGuire were guests of friends and relative in Mt. Sterling last week.

Quite a crowd from Clearfield and West Morehead attended church at Christ Sunday.

Mr. Walter Caudill who is working in Paintsville spent the week-end with home folks, Mr. Lonnie Porter and family and Mrs. Caudill and daughter Alene accompanied him back to Paintsville Sunday and spent the day.

Donald, little son of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Hollans who has been very sick is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde who has been visiting relatives in Mayville returned home and reports a nice visit.

contents strewn about and a steel box containing $450 and some valuable papers was taken from the trunk belonging to Coach Downing. Further examination disclosed that the bank belonging to Dewey, Jr., had been cracked and its contents also taken. A revolver belonging to Coach and an oxy-acetylene belonging to Mrs. Downing also were missing.

Investigation pointed to the men whom Lester Caskey had taken to Ironton, Ohio shortly after the Downing robbery had been discovered. The men had acted suspiciously before they left, displaying a roll of bills, and throwing money about with complete abandon. One is said to have tried to change twenty dollar bills and offered to take ten dollars in change. He generously offered one man a twenty dollar bill free.

When Mr. Caskey returned he went at once to the Downing home. He had left before the robbery was discovered, but his statement as to the action of the men whom he had taken to Ironton, confirmed the suspicions of the local police. The man had bought whiskey on several occasions and had offered twenties in payment. He had flashed a big roll and admitted that he had "five hundred dollars." When they arrived at Ashland he asked Caskey to avoid the city saying he might be picked up. By that time he was drunk and went on to Portsmouth where he carried him into a rooming house and left him, Caskey returning to Morehead where he learned of the robbery.

Officers from Morehead, accompanied Coach Downing to Portsmouth, where they picked Alfred up in the rooming house, finding $269 of the stolen money on his person. The balance he had either spent or given away, presumably to his brother.

It was at first thought that someone must have given the men information. However there was nobody whom the Downings can recall who had any knowledge of the fact that the money was hidden in the trunk. The present theory is that the robber watched while the Downings left home and simply entered in the hope that they would find something of value.

The men are being held here awaiting action by the grand jury which is in session this week.

SOLDIER AND THE BONUS Dr. G. H. Fern announces a very striking sermon subject for next Sunday morning at the Christian Church. It is "The Soldier (Veteran) and the Bonus". Some timely and interesting things are apropos to subject, Bible School and the morning church. Last Sunday was a big day. The services are the largest this summer in years. There are no night services during the summer. It is expected that another large crowd will be present on next Sunday morning. The church service on Sunday Morning the 28th will give place to the Masonic service, but the Bible School will meet as usual.

pen Patterns. The sixteen-by-twenty foot loom room which had been Saul's first home, was now the kitchen. Barton had fashioned the stone chimney with the wide log fireplace, and had wrought out on his own saw the crane which still held the boiling pots. Tivis built on the dining-room, the sitting room, the hallway and the up-stairs sleeping-rooms. Three years he labored to build this house, and except for the glass windows, and the wrought-iron nails brought across the hills from Mount Sterling to Wolfpen on the backs of mules, all the materials came out of the place and were fashioned by hand. The popular logs and the pine were felled in the hollow above the orchard.

Her own father had carried on the tradition of his fathers. When in 1858, he married the beautiful, Julia Stratford from Scioto, he made her a wedding-present of the weather-boarded being, the weaving-room overlooking the garden which Cynthia had left that afternoon, and the two-story porch with ornamental banisters across to front of the house, all done by hand on the Wolfpen property. When it was finished there was no better house in the Big Sandy Valley, outside of Pikeville or Prestonsburg, and it established for the remainder of the century the architecture for that district.

CHAPTER II

The half distracted mood of foreboding began to leave Cynthia as she went with easy movement down the steep path and up the hollow to the house. It was almost the same as it had always been in early spring, everything alert with the feeling that the new year was coming again to these bottoms. A new mill that sprayed suds and smoke at the mouth of the creek would make no difference in the plowing and the planting that would soon join this spring to all the others that had passed over Wolfpen.

Cynthia crossed the wood-lot into the yard, Julia was still in her garden behind the picket fence, moving the earth with her hoe, not working but enjoying to smell of the soil, planning her beds, feeling the approach of spring and reluctant to go back into the house. Cynthia waved to her. Then seeing the empty water pail on the bench by the kitchen door, she carried it to the well by the pear tree underneath the portico of the cellar house. She leaned over the well box to watch the bucket rise with the end of the pole and to hear the jostled overflow splashing against the stones and echoing with a thin rime as it fell back into the well.

Julia was hanging her eye hoe between two pailings by the gate, and looking quietly over the bare ground that was merely ready for Sparrel's spade. Cynthia went on into the kitchen. A center of fire still smoldered among the gray wood ashes in the open fireplace. She put a shovelful of red flakes into the stove and laid on some dry wood. As the stove grew warm against the cool damp of the April evening, a sense of well-being spread over the kitchen which held in its walls the family intimacies of the years. Cynthia liked this big room in the evenings and its feet of having been long lived in. The center of interest was Barton's fireplace with the old clock on the shelf above it and the smooth worn Hickory chairs gathered around it where the family sat in the evenings. On the left of the mantel and behind the stove by the window was Sparrel's own corner: a desk and chair, a shelf of books, and the last of a box of tools with which he cobled shoes for the family. On the right of the mantel was Julia's rocking chair and work-basket.

"I wonder what it is about a kitchen that makes folks like to sit there instead of in a regular sitting room?" She pushed the chairs from her path to the cupboard, "I reckon it's because it smells so good where the bread bakes and there is always a warmth on a cool evening." She took down the wooden mixing bowl from the shelf above the table.

"I'll make the bread," Julia said. "You get the things out of the cellar."

Cynthia brought the sour mill from the cellar and went to the back with her hands full, she saw smoke-house for the meat, coming Sparrel entering the yard gate. You're early, she called, supper's just started.

"You're late. I've got a part of it right here, he said, holding up a white meal sack with blue stripes on it. "I can guess what it is."

BIG TOP CRIME BAF-LES CHAN IN THRILL FILM

One murderous attempt after another terrorizes an entire circus troupe, and even Charlie Chan himself is momentarily baffled by the criminal master minds who plot his death in the Fox Mystery thriller, "Charlie Chan at the Circus." Coming to the Coxy Theatre Friday and Saturday, June 19-20.

Even the poisonous fangs of deadly cobras and the raging savagery of giant gorillas, let loose by the desperate murderers, fail to stop Warner Oland as he wily Oriental detective solves one of the most fascinating crimes of his career.

With the circus as the scene of the crime, Chan sets out to solve the murder of the owner found dead during the performance. Since the circus chief was not on friendly terms with any of his performers, each and every one of them is left open to suspicion, including the giant gorilla who was found missing from his cage at the time of the crime.

The clues that Chan picks up give him an inkling that the crime was committed by one of the troupe. His suspicions are confirmed when he narrowly escapes death from the deadly fangs of a cobra that was planted in his room. Warding off other attempts upon his life, Chan cleverly lures the suspected person into returning to the scene of the crime and traps the murderer just as he is about to silence another member of the troupe.

Prominent in the supporting cast are Koro Loko, Francis Ford, George Belmer and John McGuire. The new film, which was directed by Harry Lachman and produced by Associate producer John Stone, also features in the cast George and Olive Branno.

Grace Moore Stars In College Feature

Once again the golden voice of Grace Moore rings out from the screen, in Columbia's new musical which is scheduled to be shown Friday morning "The King Steps Out," day, June 19 at the College Theatre.

It is the diva's third picture, since her return to the screen in the sensational successful "Over Night of Love" in 1934, the other film being "Love Me Forever," which was also well received.

On this occasion Miss Moore has for her leading man Franchot Tone, who has grown in a short time into one of the most popular stars on the screen. Miss Moore is seen in the role of Emperor Francis Josef, who weds one daughter, Walter Connolly—and finally marries another. The other, one might say of Duke Maximilian—played by safely presume would be the lovely Miss Moore.

Also seen in leading roles are Raymond Walburn, engaging character actor who will be fondly remembered for his drunken politician in "Thanks a Million," his valet in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," and other characterizations; and Victor Jory, the Oberon in "Midsummer Night's Dream" and leading man in many other pictures. As for Walter Connolly, ly, he has recently been seen prominently in "The Coward's Tale II," and "The Music Goes Round." "The music in "The King Steps Out" was written by Frits Kreisler, who is accepted to be the world's outstanding exponent of the violin and a composer of classical calibre.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THE story I heard today was told to me by an Ex-Governor of Kansas.

Well, he not only told me a story, but to make it better he told me one on himself that happened during his Campaign in Kansas. He was up making a speech, promising a hundred bushels of wheat to the acre, every cow having two calves and cornstalks raising twins during his administration. He said, "Elect me and I will make my voice heard from Nebraska on the North to the wilds of Oklahoma on the south. Yes and even from the Atlantic to the Pacific they will hear from me." Then came a plaintive little voice from the back of the hall, "Speak up, Governor, we can't hear you back here."

Wild Life In The Kentucky Forests

The Cumberland National Forest offers the following thoughts on wild life in the Kentucky forests.

Nearly every farmer delights in the lusty whistle of bobwhites from a nearby post, the simple song of the meadow lark from the hay field, the soft mellow call of the whippoorwill just after twilight, and the song of many other birds, which he deems his friends and who, are in reality true friends to the farmer. They are allied with him against a million of insects that daily annoy him and destroy his crops.

Personally no one lives any closer to nature than the people having homes in or adjacent to woodlands and who becomes acquainted with the wild inhabitants adjacent to his home. Every one recognizes the bark of the squirrel, the hoot of the owl, the cry of the hawk, and the whistle of the bobwhite. These woodlands inhabitants not only fill the woods resounding with their cries and calls, but furnish during the fall hunting season ample sport, and in many cases, necessary food for the table.

If we wish to listen to these songs or provide our table with food in the fall, it is necessary to provide ample protection for the nests and young during the spring and summer months.

It is true, of course, that every farmer has some brush burning that must be done during the spring months, but it is not true helplessness on his part when he allows his fire to run wild and destroy his woodland friends. Is there a sadder sight than to find in a burnt-over area a mother bobwhite nestling roared on her nest of eggs? That fire has not only taken the mother's life, but has stolen her eggs as well. Anyone seeing a weasel or a rat stealing eggs from a bobwhite's nest would immediately endeavor to cease all further activities of this nature on the part of the weasel or rat.

The large percent of our forest fires are not intentional, but nevertheless, happen. Help us stamp out these fires as readily as you would help the bobwhite from attacks by rodents. Just think this over and then decide to help the Cumberland National Forest help you.

Trip To France Offered In Miss Liberty Contest

America's biggest birthday party, the celebration marking the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the Statue of Liberty, will be attended this October by some lucky school boy or girl who will leave immediately after the ceremonies on Bedloe's Island in New York Bay, for a free trip to France.

This is the romantic story: The Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars is sponsoring a nationwide essay contest, open to every high school student between the ages of 14 and 18. From each state, and the territories of Alaska, Hawaii and Canal Zone, one national winner will be chosen. He or this contest. If you are among the millions who have never seen the Miss Liberty—so much the better. Describe her from the standpoint of an idealist.

"The physical aspects of the Statue of Liberty are not as important as the spiritual values," Mrs. Toussaint explained. "France made their gift to the United States commemorating the celebration of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. We are eager to determine in just what esteem the Statue is held today, after fifty years, by the American Citizen-circles, and it is promised that the winner will have the glorious adven-

The winner who best expresses "What the Statue of Liberty Means to the American People" will also be guided to the National Shrine of France. Without a penny's cost to himself the winner will be the recipient of luxuries and honor that otherwise would be unattainable to any but a distinguished ambassador.

Details of this contest may be obtained from your local school superintendent. They involve, in brief, the writing of an original essay between 500 and 1,000 words in length, the essays to be in the hands of the sponsoring committee by midnight, June 30, 1936. In addition to the national prize of a free trip to New York City and France, there will be a cash prize for the second place winner, gold, silver and bronze medals for state winners.

Don't be afraid to enter this contest just because you aren't a prize student of English. According to Mrs. Winifred D. Toussaint, National president of the Ladies Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, more attention will be paid to the contest of the essay than to the manner in which it is worded.

If you or some member of your family is eligible to enter the Statue of Liberty National-Wide Essay Contest get in touch with your local school official. Remember that the contest closes June 30.
