THE VILLAGE CRAFTSMAN

According to the latest report of the Development Commissioners in Britain, village workshops throughout the country are experiencing a gratifying increase of trade. It is good to know that mass production has not succeeded in causing the craftsman; for although his wares are, for the most part, no longer essential to the existence of the community, and although it may be that "repairs" are now the mainstay of his job, yet his craftsmanship sets a standard, and conforms to an ideal, that make it, at the least, a healthy influence upon the machine age.

FORESIGHTED BUILDER

When the American Institute of Architects awarded its gold medal for the most distinguished service to the profession, it selected Paul Philippe Cret for the honor. It exercised splendid judgment. Since he came to this country from his native France more than thirty-eight years ago, he has designed, and collaborated with others in designing, many of the Nation's most beautiful and useful structures.

HOLDING HELIUM

Secretary Ickes wisely safeguarding America from possible attack when he blocks sale of helium to Germany for use in her new dirigible. The State Department didn't think so when it approved the sale. The Navy Department also approved. And soon after the burning of the Hindenburg due to lack of helium, a letter written on the stationery of an American, but in German, which will prevent the use of helium by foreign countries for military purposes.

TO GENEVA—AGAIN

No matter how deftly the question of recognition of the League of Nations conquest may be handled at the fact of its arising is a morose commentary on the position of the League of Nations today. Yet perhaps more striking than this symbol of League decline are the signs of resistance to aggression and balance-of-power politics which the League machine seems automatically to master.

OLDEST OAK

America's oldest oak, the 650-year-old tree at Mingo, W. Va., is dead at last. Ancient when Columbus discovered the continent, the venerable landmark of the nation succumbed to the infirmities of age, partly due to rot and partly to the first time in more than six centuries this spring.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR MAY 22 SERVING THROUGH CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:13-17, 28-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Mark 12:31.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Sermon on a Penny. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Sermon on a Penny. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loyalty to God and Country. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Obligations of Christian Citizenship.

"For God and Country" is a rallying cry that well summarizes the spirit and duty of the Christian citizen. It is a noble and inspiring are the teachings of God's Word regarding the relationship of the Christian to his country that one marvels that national leaders who are seeking to stimulate civic loyalty do not promote a revival of the study of the Bible. Dr. Moore is right when he says, "No bad citizen is a good Christian and no good Christian is a bad citizen."

Our lesson presents our Lord on Tuesday of His passion week when He met His adversaries in their cunning efforts to entrap Him and to bring about that they might condemn Him. The 2 disciples before us have broad-er application than to ourselves alone but we should consider them in that light, for they reveal that the nation who is right with God will be with his own neighbors.

I. The Christian Citizen Loves His Country.—v. 17.

The Pharisees, who hated Rome for its domination of Palestine, and the Herodians, who supported Rome, but who were hated by the land, were enemies, but they joined forces to tempt Christ. They knew that if He said "Yes" to their question the Jews would be angry, and if He said "No" He could be condemned as a traitor to His country.—v. 17.

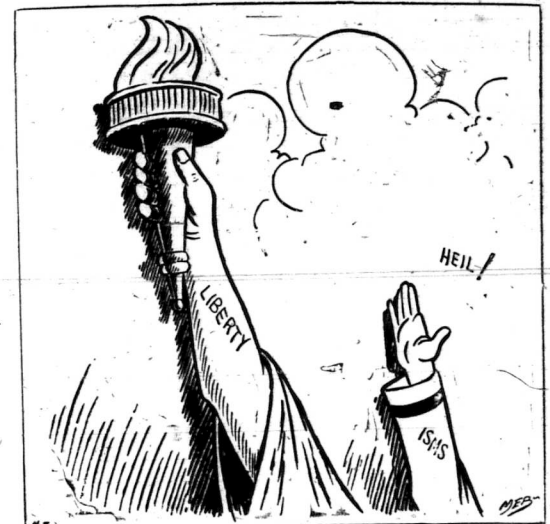

The trap was set, but it caught only the crafty hunters. Taking their own pocket money, they declared that they used Caesar's money they ought to pay taxes to Caesar. The coin stood for an amount of money, but it was the money which they enjoyed and which they ought to support.

II. The Christian Citizen Loves His Neighbor.—v. 28-34.

Although the point comes second in our lesson it comes first in experience. It is the man who renders unto God his heart, soul, mind, and all of his strength (v. 30) who is ready really to love his country as he should.

III. The Christian Citizen Loves His Neighbor.—v. 31-34.

True social injustice would be wiped out and a better cause for their fellow-men as they love themselves. Such a condition never prevails, however, until men love God. It is too much for the flesh to put others before self, only the grace of God is sufficient to do that. Hence the real solution of the problems of social and labor is the "have capital and labor" the "have men and women on both sides of the struggle to a true love for God through Jesus Christ. Lord. In other words, we come again to the inevitable conclusion that what our nation needs is a revival.

failure. Men must learn to know and love God supremely and thus come to love their neighbors as themselves. The crossroad Sunday School teacher, the missionary in the city slums, the preacher of the gospel, whether in the great city or on the countryside, the faithful Christian living out the love of Christ daily in kindly word and deed—these are the real forces for social as well as spiritual good. Let us do all we can to prosper their ministry!

DISCOVERY We walked out under a clean May sky. The terrier and I. He pushed at the grass-roots in his surprising eyes. His unblinking eyes as he sniffed the air. He was everywhere.

Running his fast erratic course Like a rocking horse. Up and down in the spring green. Having seen Trees bloom and seedlings sprout before. I was more decorous. I expected spring. And everything Was as I remembered. Dogs forgotten. And yet I wondered, for all my fine memory. Was the locust tree Always that sharp clear green? Was the flight Of a bird as bright In the sun? Oh, we who remember seem wise. But the terrier's eyes Were shining. I turned and followed him through the field, and I too Found that each spring is a fresh surprise. —Anita Laurie Cushing.

Streamline Their Governing System

Schenectady, N. Y. (AP)—Union College students have streamlined their undergraduate governing system. By a vote of the student body, undergraduates have adopted a new constitution that provides for functional and proportional representation, petition, referendum and recall. The new constitution provides for a Student Council form of government, in which eleven councilmen are to be elected by extracurricular organizations supported by student tax, twenty-five elected on the basis of one for each forty students, four class presidents and a student tax committee chairman. Faculty coordinator of student activities will advise but not vote in the Council.

Entered as second class matter February 27, 1934, at the postoffice at Morehead, Kentucky, under Act of March 8, 1879.

JUDGE PELFREY TRIES TO CURE DRUNKENNESS

Judge Pelfrey's decision to give habitual drunkards brought before him short shafts has resulted in comment in the Ashland Independent to the effect that "that's the kind of justice needed in the Ashland Police Court." The Masonic Home Journal, official organ of the lodge, quoted the Ashland editorials with the heading, "Sack 'Em," Judge Pelfrey.

Apparently the judge's decision was a wise one.

MINORS AND MILLIONS

At an age when other youngsters were hoarding their pennies in a penny-bank the parents of Jackie Coogan were depositing $1,000 or checks bigger from his earnings in "The Kid" and other motion pictures, presumably in part at least for his future benefit. But now young Jackie has become a tax-paying citizen, using his mother and stepfather for $4,000,000, he asserts should be his.

The common law rule that the earnings of a minor belong to his parents comes up against the need of some qualification. Encouragingly it appears that California courts already are making such qualifications. Under a 1927 statute these courts have authority to approve contracts for juveniles and it has become the practice now to require that simple portions, usually at least one-half of the income of child actors shall go into trust funds for their future.

Is there something in this that might be applied more broadly to the subject of child labor? How about requiring that the parents be made a portion of the earnings for the child's later benefit and enjoyment? If this were practical, would it not be a fair deterrent to a common evil?

CUSTOMERS MAKE BUSINESS

In view of current efforts to revive American business by making capital "cheer" and easily available, it may be well to re-read what Dr. Harold C. Moulton, president of the Brookings institute, said a while ago in his "Income and Economic Progress" about the process of formation of capital. "We found," he said, "from the study of our industrial history that the growth of capital is closely adjusted to and dependent upon (black type is the author's) an expanding demand for consumption goods." The Brookings staff further discovered that "the rate of growth of new plant and equipment in a period of industrial expansion is adjusted to the volume of savings available for investment purposes."

ROCK SLICERS

Two experts working in the laboratories of the United States Geological Survey belong to a profession whose world membership is probably less than fifty. They are rock slicers. With powerful but delicate equipment they can cut and grind a rock down to a thickness of one-thousandth of an inch. After the specimen is smoothed down it is cemented to a sheet of glass. Then the other side is ground to the required thickness. Under a microscope the specimen then discloses, amid a fairland of delicate veins and intricate patterns, its exact mineral content, doing away with former laborious means of determination. About 4,000 slides are prepared each year. The rock slicers, Frank Reed and Fran Merzer, learned their art from a naturalized Dane, who in turn learned it in Norway.

THE BRIDE WORE RED

BEATRICE FABER

(CONCLUSION)
THE STORY THIS FAÉ: Ann, formerly a singer in a waterfront cafe in Trieste, is in fashionable Terreste, posing as a woman of position. Her two weeks' adventure is the result of wealthy Count Armalia's drunken whim. She finds herself desperately in love with Guilio, the village postman, but wanting luxury, she sets out to win Rudt Pat from his fiancée. On the night of the wine Festa, Rudt proposes. But Guilio knows Ann's secret for he has read the telegram Armalia has sent to Maddalena's friend, the Countess. It reveals Ann's true identity. She tries to stop Guilio from delivering it on the evening she is to leave with Rudt. Guilio brings the message. Her deception is exposed and Rudt turns from her in horror.

particular. Maybe she was just crying about everything. Crying because she couldn't play any more, because she couldn't have her own way and would have to go home. Yes, Ann, cry, cry all over your spill milk.
 She stood up and though tears still shone in her eyes she was no longer weeping. "You see Maria, I'm not crying any more. There's nothing left to cry about." She paced the room. "Isn't it ridiculous, Maria, the way I'm acting? I should be hysterical now, beating my head on the floor, screaming at the top of my voice. And here I walk up and down as though I had everything I want."
 It was funny how light she felt. As if she had been carrying a heavy load for miles and suddenly she could put it down and walk without it. She whirled around to dance. She would dance with Maria. No, Maria was a terrible dancer. She danced like a debutante. She stared at her image in the mirror. Will you dance with me? You in your lovely red dress? Such a wonderful red dress, fit for a fit for!
 She turned to Maria and said hoarsely, "It's really not a beautiful dress at all, you know. It's too red and too loud and too cheap. I don't like it any more. It's yours, Maria. I hate it." Her face was all contorted as she ran into the bedroom.
 There was a very loud and imperious knocking at the door. Maria opened the door. There was Signor Nobili, apologetically red and furious.
 He hustled in and glared at Maria. "Where is she? Where is whatever her name is!"
 Maria cringed. "Inside, Signor Nobili. Signorina is changing her clothes."

CHAPTER TWELVE

Maria stroked Ann's hair as the torrent of tears poured forth. "So he delivered the telegram after all," she crooned. "He waited all day for you to do it yourself and you wouldn't. So he did it because he thinks that's most important to both of you. You wish you could hate him for it—but cry, instead."
 Gradually, Ann's tears dropped more slowly and a great, detached calm flooded her. Maybe she wasn't crying about anything in

"You're not to serve her. You're to stop this instant, do you understand? Go back to the linen room. She should be serving you."
 "Yes, Signor Nobili."
 "Well, what are you standing there for?"
 "Yes, Signor Nobili." With one last despairing look at the bedroom door, Maria died in the corridor.
 Nobili shouted, "You've had enough time to pack your things, Signorina Vivaldi. Now get out."
 The door opened slowly and Ann stood before him, dressed in a long enveloping cape. Strangely, even her face seemed cloaked in a new dignity. "Aren't you being just a little bit loud?" she asked.
 He fell back aghast. "Loud?"
 "Yes. Coming into my apartment like this and yelling like a fishmonger."
 "Nobili appeared to be in danger of strangling. "Get out!"
 "You get out first," Ann retorted calmly. "I have some things to attend to."
 He waited before her level gaze, then strode to the door. "I'll give you five minutes."
 "I may need six or seven. Also, that slight matter of the bill. I have given some of my clothes to the maid. The rest you may keep as payment."
 Nobili, opened his mouth, thought better of it, turned to the door and slammed out of the room. Left alone, Ann brought up a deep sigh from the bottom of her lungs. Her eyes began to roam the place. First the living room, then the bedroom where her gaze took its fill of beauty. She hurried to the linen closet.

 He waited before her level gaze, then strode to the door. "I'll give you five minutes."
 "I may need six or seven. Also, that slight matter of the bill. I have given some of my clothes to the maid. The rest you may keep as payment."
 Nobili, opened his mouth, thought better of it, turned to the door and slammed out of the room. Left alone, Ann brought up a deep sigh from the bottom of her lungs. Her eyes began to roam the place. First the living room, then the bedroom where her gaze took its fill of beauty. She hurried to the linen closet.

Her arms were tight about him. She looked at him, tears in her eyes. Like wet diamonds.

ried to the window and her hand flew to her breast. The bird's nest was in tatters. Her face was sad as she turned to Maria who was cautiously opening the door.
 "The bird's nest is almost gone," she murmured.
 "They build a new one every year."
 "Oh." She moved to the door and smiled sardonically at Maria. But the maid's eyes were anxious.
 "Where will you go, Anni?"
 "I hadn't thought."
 "What will happen to you?"
 "I don't know. I think I'll go to the Pines, Maria." She would like to see them just once more. To climb up very high, to the clearing on the top.
 "The Pines?" Maria took a frightened step toward her. "Oh, Anni."
 "Only to look, Maria."
 "I'm afraid for you."
 "You needn't be. People were so wrong about that too. Taking one's own life wasn't the way out for a coward but for a great courage. Greater, by far, than hers."
 "What about Guilio?"
 Anni pretended she hadn't heard. "And then in the morning, there's the train back to Trieste. I have my ticket."
 "What about Guilio?" Maria

asked again.
 Anni looked past her, away far off to a place that had once existed but was gone now forever. "He wouldn't want me now. He couldn't—the way things happen with me. Because I want him so terribly."
 She turned and was gone and then Maria leaned against the door and cried and cried.
 As Anni stood at the head of the stairs there came an excited murmur of voices below. Her ears caught the sound of her own name. The news of her masquerade, of her true identity, had spread as quickly as that. The murmur subsided as she began to descend and a silence fell among the groups of people who dotted the lobby. It was obvious there was only one common topic of conversation—the Signorina Anni Vivaldi.
 At the main entrance the uniformed attendant who had always placed to swing the door open for her, now stood and gaped, stupidly. Anni waited. And then Alberto strode toward her. As usual, his face was impassive but Anni noticed that in the depths of his eyes there was a flicker of friendliness. He held the door wide.
 "Thank you, Alberto." She smiled and stepped out. For a long moment she stood there, absorbing the night and the emptiness of everything before her. Then she pulled her steps and started across the lawn. The darkness swallowed her up.
 She had been walking for perhaps ten minutes and was beginning to ascend the line when there came the sound of hoof beats patterning through the stillness. They sounded like the ghostly tinkling of some far off clock.

 And then, as if he had been conjured up out of the darkness, there was Guilio, perched astride his seat in the donkey cart. Looking up at him, Anni was sure then, that her heart would break in two. If only she had been spared this last encounter with the man she loved.
 "Did I ever tell you," Guilio said conversationally, "that the Archduke of Austria once rode in this cart?"
 "It can't take me where I'm going."
 "Where are you going?"
 "To the Pines, first."
 "From there we can take you to the stars."
 Anni came up close to the cart then and looked at him wonderingly. "Guilio—"
 "Yes."
 "Guilio, you've shown me how strong your love is and how proud. You can't want me now."
 For answer, he held out his arms to her. For a second she stood there, unable to grasp the glory of what was happening. Then suddenly, she threw off her cloak and dropped it in the road. The moon-rays lighted up her hair to ching bronze, brought out the luminous pallor of her skin. Yes, there was Anni, Anni who loved Guilio and she was dressed in the peasant garb she had worn the night of the Festa. There was Anni, dressed in her wedding gown.

 Pulling her up beside him Guilio clucked to the donkey and they were off. "Takes him a minute to make up his mind. But he's all right when he gets started."
 His arm was tight about her. She looked at him, tears standing in her eyes, like wet diamonds. "All that I bring you is this dress Guilio, and it isn't even paid for."
 The donkey was jogging along at a great pace. Guilio dropped a kiss on her cheek. "We won't bother about that. The dressmaker is my cousin."
 Sudden mirth bubbled between them and finally they laughed—great, joyous gusts of merriment as though at some tremendous secret they shared, apart from the rest of the world.
 And so they went on, climbing straight ahead, high up the road that led to the moon.

Applications Must Be Filed In May

James W. Martin, Commissioner of Revenue, announced today that applications for 1938-39 whiskey licenses must be filed with the Department of Revenue during May. Application blanks and copies of the law have been mailed to all retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers of whiskey today.
Martin said that new licenses were required by July 1, and that, under the terms of the recent Alcoholic Beverage Control Law, applications must be filed 30 days before the licenses were issued.
He pointed out that applicants are required to advertise their intention to apply for a license at least once during each of two weeks preceding application. The license fee, a bond, a copy of the lease of the licensed premises must accompany the application.

THE HOME DECORATOR

Color, Color, Everywhere

"Um . . . that red looks good enough to eat!" Once in a while a color strikes us as being too good to be true. Then, often as not, we forget all about color.

After we live in a house for a long time, it's likely to fade and become so slowly that we're not even conscious of the change.
Fact is, we get so we actually don't "see" ourselves as others see it.

So, once in a long while it's a good idea to take stock. If the walls are sick-looking, it's time to do something about them.
Maybe new curtains will do the trick, perhaps new and bright slip covers on that big chair by the fireplace will be enough. Maybe the only thing that will help is painting the walls a new and exciting color.

Actually, decoration, in most cases, is color. . . color attractively and usefully used. For one thing, the amount of light different rooms get, makes a whole of a difference in picking colors for those rooms. Rooms with northern exposure, not much sun,
almost no warm colors.
With discretion, anything will go here from palest pink or yellow or white, to the warm exciting colors so often used in Spain and Mexico.

East and West rooms which get a great deal of sunlight, but which are also cool for part of the day, can wear almost any color.
It's a good idea to avoid painting
the walls in brilliant reds, yellows, greens and so on. Stick to paler colors which do not "vibrate" so strongly. But those bright colors will look grand on smaller pieces—vases, lamps,

flowers and pictures.
Now, for the south rooms. . .
the sunny rooms. . . cool blue colors are nice. Greens and blues with white or gray. A room with delicate powder blue painted walls, sitting white woodwork and soft blue-green rug sounds lovely and is cool as a cucumber. Of course you may have small accents of warm color, but there is no color "heat" here.
And so, outside of a few hard and fast rules, one person's ideas on color are as good as the next.
Within reason use what your heart desires. But try to associate your choice in paint colors, with the amount of light the rooms get.

U. S. Supreme Court
On Football Question

Washington, D. C. (ACP)—The nation's highest tribunal, the U. S.
Supreme Court, will soon tell the nation whether or not football is an educational activity that comes under the heading of an essential governmental function.

The state of Georgia and its two state institutions, the University of State and Georgia School of Technology, together with 14 other state universities, are asking the court to rule against the federal admissions tax for athletic contests sponsored by state institutions.
The U. S. attorney general's offices holds that, "We hazard the statement that the members of the Constitutional Convention would doubt that twenty-two men playing a game with a ball constitute an essential government function."
The defendants hold that public education is a government function, and that holding athletic contests is an integral part of the public education program.

College Program To Right Nation's Ills

Ithaca, N. Y. (ACP)—A college program for righting many of the ills of the nation was formulated by Cornell, Dartmouth and University of Pennsylvania students in conference here to discuss ways and means of "Making Democracy Work."
After a lengthy discussion,
the delegates favored:
Governmental endorsement of labor's right to organize and banquet collectively and endorsed the National Labor Relations Act principles;
Economic sanctions against aggressors of democratic nations;
For local government, the elimination of unnecessary offices, consolidation of duties and consolidation of unnecessarily small governmental units;
Control of competition for some industries, and removal of monopolies for others, and governmental regulation of utilities.
The delegates voted down extension of government control of the press.

A New Experiment In Government Research

New York City (ACP)—A new experiment in municipal government research has been instituted here by Mayor Fiorello H. La-Guardia and this city's municipal educational institutions.
Under a new plan announced last week, students in the city's colleges will be trained for civil service careers by doing undergraduate research in the various policy-forming departments of the city government.

"These studies and surveys will be of a research, rather than an investigative nature," the sponsors of the plan announced. "Students of marked ability and interest will be appointed as research assistants on the staff of the department of investigation to serve during the duration of their projects as volunteer assistants without compensation, but with full credit for their work by college authorities."
The purpose of such studies will be the framing of constructive recommendations to the various municipal department heads."

The President's tea, which is the formal reception of President and Mrs. Harvey A. Babo to the alumni, will be given as usual at four o'clock in the afternoon of Alumni Day at the President's home on the campus.

Dr. Miller bustling into the classroom with his arms heaped up with folders and papers.
"Class, didn't I promise you a test for today?"
"No," the class braying vehemently.
"No!"
Dr. Miller: "When did you practice that chorus?"

Noted Geologist Gives Lecture At Friday Convocation

Mr. W. C. Epl, graduate of the University of Kentucky and a geologist of twenty years experience, spoke to the student body Friday, May 12, on the subject, "Hills Are Shadows," which was taken from Tennyson's poem, "In Memoriam." He showed the close connection between the Bible's conception of the beginning of the world and evolution and the history of the world as found in the rocks. He pointed out that the hills are not eternal as we have always thought, but the hills are continually being worn away by natural agents.

COLLEGIATE WORLD . . .

Jottings from your correspondent's colleagues aff: Little Billy Hollenbeck tried to buy the old building of the University of Omaha for five dollars the other day. The deal was left hanging because Billy is a minor—six years old . . . He wanted the building to have fun in before it was torn down—sort of giving it a party after its long pedagogical years. . . . University of Minnesota student politicians are fighting over who should be "where in the junior prom link of march. What's needed is a good blue book to catalogue the blue-bloods on the campus. . . . University of Louisville's main buildings formerly housed a juvenile reform school. . . . Which will prompt many side-of-the-mouth wisecracks. . . . It costs the government $14,000 to train, at Annapolis, an officer of the U. S. Navy. . . . The Harvard University library contains 3,800,000 books and pamphlets. . . . The largest R. O. T. C. unit in the U. S. is at Ohio State University. It forms a company front over a half mile long. . . .

concludes our factual colleagues for this week. . . . This article is about swing, that brand of music that is driving collegians to the Big Apple and addicts to bad language and drink. Our first item in this swing about swing comes from the University of Kansas' W. Otto Messer, who poses this neat question which contains much illumination about how the collegians feel about swing vs. classic discussion: "Why do less than 2 per cent of college students interest themselves in any kind of music save about swing vs. classic discussion?" He blames the whole thing upon "too much complacent stomach rubbing" on the part of those who train youngsters in music and music appreciation. Item No. 2 comes from Rochester, N. Y., where collegians who like to attend jam sessions on Sunday afternoons have run into the long arm of the city council. The council has ordained that jam sessions may not be held on Sundays. So sponsors of the swing get-togethers have changed its name to "Swing Symphony." Item No. 3 in this swing review concerns Dick Wright, Santa Ana Junior College student who has collected a dictionary of swing slang. Here are a few that you may not have heard of: The "cats" are players in a good swing band and when they hold a "jam session" it isn't a raid on the ice box, but a get-together of swing men who play for the fun of it. "Mugging heavy" isn't a new love term-ground college, but it is a musical term meaning playing soft swing music with a heavy beat. When the lads have a "setting in" they are just playing in a band of which they are not a member. Fifteen years ago it would have been known as straight jazz; today the same mu-hair, symphony player; "gobblesic is called "corny." saxophone; "doghouse," piano; "muth box," piano; these men are "skinbeater" drum; "iron horn," cornet; "grunt horn," mace; "sultcase," drums; "longtuba; and "agony pipe," clarinet.

KENTUCKY is Calling, Too!

Newspapers and magazines, these days, are full of advertisements for other States and other sections. But Kentucky is calling, too—the State that offers you everything! . . . There's Cumberland Gap—the pinnacle towering above. And Pine Mountain nearby. And Natural Bridge State Park on Highway 15. And Herrington Lake, and Dawson Springs, and lovely scenery everywhere! . . . See them all and more, even if you must frequently omit Louisville and the Brown. We'll miss you, of course. But when you do come back to the Brown, you'll think more of your State—and maybe thank us for reminding you of it!

Behind The Scenes In Business . . .

By John Craddock

BUSINESS: Reflecting a new spirit of cooperation between government and private utilities, the stock market last week gave a display of strength not seen for several months. Wheat prices held steady despite government crop report predicting the second largest winter wheat harvest in U. S. history. Current business activity is none too good, but businessmen on the firing line say the foundation is being laid for a new recovery. They point to the easing of tension between government and business. Inventories are being built up. The latest government spending program will begin to take hold within three months. The auto industry is expected to make heavy purchases of steel and new machine tools this summer for radically changed 1939 models.

WASHINGTON: The real reason that the House voted the wages and hours bill out of committee is that congressmen want to be on the popular side of this issue when they face fall elections. The Senate, however, is almost certain to shelve the measure or at least amend it to apply only to hours.

Southern senators are afraid the measure will destroy industry in their states. The President is being urged to take the sting out of defense of New Deal policies this summer. It is believed he will visit a few of the most critical states, such as Kentucky, Ohio and California, but it is doubtful if he can be persuaded to make a sweeping tour of the country.

REAL ESTATE: While most investments have depreciated during the last year, real estate values have held up remarkably well. 84 per cent of American cities property and rental values are reported as high today as they were a year ago. Real estate men continue to call attention to the pressing need for from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 new one-family dwellings in the low-price brackets. In fact the outlook appears so promising to Frank Taylor, noted British builder visiting here, that he intimated last week he might enter the building business this country. He defended the 10 per cent down payment now available, stating that down payments as small as five per cent have worked out satisfactorily in England.

DO YOU KNOW THAT . . . One out of every six farm automobiles in this country is ten years old or older. . . . Approximately 12,000,000 catalogues a year are distributed by Sears Roebuck; each catalogue costs about $1.00 to print and mail. . . . 14 to 18 pounds of sulphur will enter into each bale of this year's cotton crop, according to Freeport Sulphur Company; sulphur is a major ingredient in making fertilizer. The nation's fire losses in 1937 totaled $285,000,000, a drop of $8,000,000 from 1936; largest disaster was the Hindenburg at Lakehurst last May when property damage was $4,600,000. . . . For the 13th year the Bible in 1937 was the world's best selling book with a circulation of 7,300,000 copies, printed in 197 languages and dialects. . . .

NEWS IN RETAILING: Variety store sales, reflecting the effect of the shifting date of Easter, were up 6.5 per cent last month over April, 1937. Department store sales showed a small drop, however, of three per cent. Retailers report an increased interest in Jersey dresses for late spring wear. Lower-priced silver fox pelts were easily disposed of at the auctions in New York last week, and furriers believe that August fur sales may exceed last year's volume.

FIRST PASTURE

They crowd the trampled yard and in the light look back to comfort from the barn's wide door. They toss their heads together half in fright. This is the yard, but this is something more. The bars are down along the farther side. The lars are down, and all the world is strange. Which, in a sleep, to something deep and wide changes its shape without the need of change.

They nose the yard's known boundaries and blow. They circle at the gate. They will not go. The brown earth glistens in the April sun. Beneath the stamping feet. Then one is through. She tries the hard earth stiffly. It will do. With doubting feet they follow one by one.

—Charles Malain.

Transylvanians Will Convene In Ashland

The Transylvanians for Eastern Kentucky are gathering at the Ventura Hotel in Ashland, Tuesday, May 24, for an informal banquet and evening of fun and fellowship.

The chief speaker for the occasion will be John Shaw of Marysville. Mr. Shaw is a graduate of the class of 1914. He did some graduate work at Oxford University, Oxford, England, in 1919 and received his M. A. with a certificate in School Administration from Columbia University in 1923. Since 1929 he has been the superintendent of the public schools in Marysville, where he has given splendid service. He has been an outstanding leader in the Christian Church of that city, serving as an elder and Bible teacher for many years.

He has also served as president of the Maryville Rotary Club and has recently become Governor nominee of district 162 of Rotary International. He will have a worth while message for the group on this occasion.

Reservations may be sent to Joe Faulconer, at the First Christian Church, Ashland, Kentucky, not later than Saturday, May 21.

CAPITOL COMMENTS...

We give you another act in that great melodrama, "Politics" or who will be Senator, on the stage, Kentucky—The boy hero, A. B. Chandler, the sage politician, Alben W. Barkley are the heroes and the heroine is the coy Kentucky voter.

The prologue—Albert B. Chandler, the boy hero, made great gains last week. He spoke in the center of the stage courting coy Miss Voter at commencement exercises, ball games, and from the platform. His stage personality was winning and his smile, charming. He said, "America's coat tail rider No. 1," and after slumming the president's policy in his early appearance in the play, with a strategic bit of acting, he referred to himself as a friend of the president.

Senator Barkley, our other hero, and ardent courter of coy Miss Voter was busy in Washington with affairs of the Senate—with the promise of presidential support.

port he is either sure of election, too busy in the senate to campaign or procrastinating. In any event Alben lost some ground last week. It was strengthened, however, by his appointment of Judge Thomas from Bowling Green, as his finance chairman. Actor Barkley it seems does not realize that the plot of the play is the eternal triangle — and that although he may have the heroine's favor now that Albert is trying to cut him out of the damsel's favor—and that ardent wooing it necessary to win and hold a lady.

A special election will be called June 4th by Governor Chandler, to elect a Congressman in the eighth district to replace Federal Circuit Court Justice, Fred M. Vinson, of Ashland, Kentucky, who before his appointment, represented that district. Vinson, who resigned from Congress last week to accept the judgeship, was a nationally recognized tax authority, and was largely responsible for the tax revision bill, which has been approved. He was a member of the powerful Ways and Means committee and was lauded for an hour and a half by his colleagues in congress before his resignation. Joseph Bates, of Greenup, has an inside track to succeed to Vinson's seat and will probably win in the special election set for June 4th.

This is not to play on your emotions, but to appeal to your reason, and your sense of justice we are putting it here because you have some voice in the matter and your opposition may prevent destructive forces from sowing pestilence and death.

A powerful lobby is now at work in Washington, lobbying for the sale of Helium gas to Germany.

People and Spots in the Late News

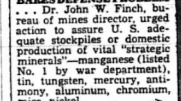

SPRINGIN' IN THE RAIN... Already soaked by steady downpour, athletes in classic Penn. Relays didn't relish splash after each hurdle of 3,000-meter steeplechase, won by Deardark of Indiana.

QUEEN OF MAY... Accorded that honor for May 21 festival of Frances Shimer college at Mount Carroll, Ill. blonde Betty Johnson, honor student from Logansport, Ind., could be queen of most any month.

THIRD PARTY BORN... A productive job for every willing worker was aim ascribed to National Progressive Party by Gov. Philip F. LaFollette of Wisconsin, who announced formation at convention in Madison.

BARES DEFENSE PROBLEM... Dr. John W. Finch, bureau of mines director, urged action to assure U. S. adequate stockpiles of domestic production of vital "strategic minerals"—manganese (listed No. 1 by war department), tin, tungsten, mercury, antimony, aluminum, chromium, mica, nickel.

JUNE BRIDES PLEASE NOTE... Fashion critics purred over medieval wedding gown of ivory white duchess satin worn by Mrs. Walter E. Chrysler, Jr., former Miss Marguerite Sykes of New York.

BETWEEN JAP BOMBS... Civilian Chinese wait in improvised air-raid dugout for next attack by invaders from Japan. Note mother holding her baby.

Helium is a non-inflammable, buoyant gas used for inflating Zeppelins. The United States owns and controls the only supply of Helium. The Von Hindenberg, a German-owned ship, that made regular trips, with much freight and many passengers, was destroyed by fire, because it used hydrogen gas.

The United States and other countries have endeavored to build large Zeppelins, but all have crashed, and in every case, the crash was caused by Sabotage! The German government has taken Austria and is threatening the Czechoslovakian government and has built up a huge and pugacious war machine.

A zeppelin in time of war can carry a hundred times as many bombs as the largest airplane. Wars of the future will be fought with propaganda and bombs, to break the morale of the people—when the Japanese bombed Chinese cities, killing civilians and non-combatants—not to whip the Chinese cities, but to create opposition of civilian Chinese to the armed resistance of the Japs. A Zeppelin could carry and scatter enough disease germs to spread pestilence in a whole country. It could carry enough bombs to destroy every bridge across the Ohio River from its source to its mouth. Such a zeppelin could be destroyed by airplanes in time of war, if it was inflated with hydrogen gas, but with helium gas it could be almost impossible to destroy it.

You shouldn't knowingly furnish an insane killer with a machine gun, or a child with a rattlesnake. Oppose the sale of helium gas to Germany. Write Senator Barkley or Senator Logan in care of the Senate Building, Washington, D. C., and voice your opposition to this sale. This effort of yours may be the means of saving human life.

RANDOM SHOTS: The Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation sent Senator Barkley a telegram expressing their gratitude for his effort in securing an additional $235,000 for Federal Tobacco grading for the 1938-39 marketing season. The telegram stated that this grading service would lay a foundation, upon which burley growers could build a permanent and improved marketing system.

They are trying to get the United Mine Workers to celebrate a "Chandler Day" on May 30. We haven't heard of Roosevelt inviting Hoover to dinner, however.

Many Thrilling And Spectacular Acts With Circus Coming May 20

The Mighty Haag Show, which is celebrating its Golden Jubilee year, is presenting one of the biggest and best performances that has ever been witnessed in Morehead.

This year the Mighty Haag Show, which will give two performances in Morehead on Friday, May 20 at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m., opens the performance with a grand pageant entitled, "A Night in Spain" in which over 300 people and animals in gold and silver costumes with bright-colored costumes and trappings, take part. "A Night in Spain" is truly a thrilling spectacle from the girls who lead the way deftly spraying garlands down, through the wild ending up with "Montere", the famous butterfly dancer who was brought to this country by the Mighty Haag Show from Spain for the Golden Jubilee tour.

The Mighty Haag Show is presenting for the first time in America, "The Great Norman", who hangs from a high trapeze by one foot while he holds a long bar by the other foot on which four girls do aerial acts from trapeze hanging on the bar.

SPECIAL
Brand new, full 88 note Spinette piano, $199.50. Easy Terms. Wurliizer, Ashland, Ky.

Following is "Tarzan," the Human Ape that does everything but talk. He dresses, eats, drinks, rides bicycles, and, in fact, does everything that a human being does except talk.
The Valentines present one of the most sensational bicycle acts ever seen with any show.

Other thrilling acts with the Mighty Haag Show are Senorita Bonhomme, who slides from the top of the tent on a thin wire; Watkins' trained dogs and ponies; "Golden Butterflies" featuring Mile. Pauline in a sensational aerial act; "Judy" the only baby elephant seen with any show and the greatest, sensational elephant act in the world featuring Miss Helen Haag who places her body in the mouth of Alice the world's largest performing elephant, and allows herself to be carried from one end of the big tent to the other.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Bellomy visited in West Liberty Sunday.
