MOREHEAD ORGANIZES FOR FLOOD RELIEF

Flood At A Glance

The Rowan County News this week, is making no attempt to carry ordinary news to its readers, nor is it interested in putting out the ordinary newspaper. There is a very definite reason why the readers of The News are being shorted this week, and that reason may be summed up in two words, "The Flood".

Kentucky is definitely in the grip of the Ohio River. Every river city from Catlettsburg to Paducah, is ravaged, with our fellow-Kentuckians at Louisville probably in the worst condition. Maysville and Ashland are suffering from the highest water in history. Louisville is submerged in a river that has risen eleven feet higher than the flood of 1884 when the record height was reached. On Wednesday morning reports from Louisville placed the height of the water at 47.6 feet. The former record high in 1884 was 47.6 feet.

Ever since Friday of last week, hearts of the nation have been torn with the never ceasing bulletins from Louisville. At this time the flood became a real menace and the city became girded for strenuous action. Since that time, the bulletins and the flood have gone on. The water has steadily risen until nine-tenths of the entire city of 365,000 inhabitants has been flooded, and made homeless. The city is under martial law and every city, village and hamlet in this and neighboring states has been united to render aid, not only to Louisville, but to neighboring cities and all towns along the raging Ohio.

It is not the purpose of The News to bring its readers at this time a picture of the devastation, except incidentally. We, in common with all Kentuckians who are at this time in dire need of that assistance.

Catlettsburg is entirely under water, with the exception of a few high points and they are cut off. Business in that city is not only at a stand still, it is as if it had ever existed. In Ashland the waters of the river are up higher than they have ever been. They are lapping at Winchester, Ashland's main street, and about twenty-five per cent of the homes of that city are buried in the Ohio River. These are of course the homes of the poorer people of that city. Refugees are being taken care of in various halls, schools and churches about the city.

Greenup is entirely submerged, with the people from that little city being cared for in Russell, which, while partly under water is able to help its neighbors. Fullerton opposite Portsmouth is suffering badly, while its neighbor across the river is being evacuated.

Maysville, with water to a depth of twelve feet on its business street, is also numbered among the cities devastated. Morehead, close to that city is helping as much as possible. Augusta in Bracken county is under, Covington and Newport opposite Cincinnati, where the river rose to eighty feet, has suffered greatly.

Carrollton, at the mouth of the Kentucky River was completely under water, and although no deaths were reported at that city, the entire city was evacuated and people taken care of by neighboring cities.

The capital city of Frankfort did not escape. The raging Kentucky River, cutting Frankfort in half, buried four fifths of the city in flood waters. The state penitentiary was under ten feet of water, with the lower cell blocks flooded. The convicts were moved to Lexington and surrounding towns, following serious riots. A number of inquiries have been received from local people who had relatives or friends in the reformatory at Frankfort as to the well-being of those relatives. To those we wish to say that no reports have been received from Frankfort with regard to any one locally, but it is our opinion that a check-up would show who had been lost and that no news in that case could be regarded by relatives as good news. In other words, we believe that if any had been lost or injured they would be announced to relatives and if you have not heard it is in all probability that your relatives are all right.

Work has been entirely suspended in the Welfare Old Age Assistance division as the welfare department is entirely under water in Frankfort. It will undoubtedly be several weeks before they are able to straighten out the records and resume work in the department. In the meantime, as soon as the immediately necessity for doing relief work is past, Old Age Assistance workers will resume their task of investigating records locally. For the time being they are doing what they can to aid their fellow Kentuckians in flood disaster work.

MASS MEETING OF CITIZENS

A mass meeting of the citizens of Morehead and the college will be held at the college auditorium tonight at 6:30 p. m. Every citizen is urged to attend this meeting.

Red Cross At Work

Perhaps the most remarkable demonstration of united effort ever heard has been going on over the radios for the past week. Every city in the United States has united in raising funds for the relief of the flood sufferers. Money, supplies, everything that might be of use to anyone or someone has been offered, freely. America is giving "until it hurts" to relief of those who have lost their everything in the Ohio flood. In one city in Georgia nightly auctions of hand work donated by the women of the city are being held, the money being donated to the flood funds. Nebraska, Iowa, Washington, California, every state in the Union is doing its part and more.

Four million dollars has been asked by Red Cross to carry on flood relief work. The sum has been raised to ten million and the nations will undoubtedly raise more than that sum.

This work has only been begun. Kentucky in general and Rowan county in particular will not be behind in their donations. This is a Kentucky problem as well as a national problem. It is a Rowan county problem, for Rowan county must not forget that the Red Cross, the State and the Nation helped them in 1927 and again in 1934 when they suffered little floods. Now Rowan county has the opportunity to show the world, the state and the nation that they do not forget, that they are not only willing but anxious to return that favor in any way possible.

It is for that reason that The News is not interested in publishing anything this week but the paper you have in your hand. It is for that reason that we are devoting all our energies and all our resources to aiding the Red Cross and other relief agencies in carrying on their work in the assistance of those who are much worse off than we ever thought of being. It is for that reason that we urge every citizen of Morehead, and every citizen of Rowan county to forget themselves for a while, to think of the other fellow, the fellow, who when he could, helped you, and do everything possible, make every sacrifice, to help those Kentuckians who are now undergoing in a major way, what we have undergone in a small way on two occasions.

Morehead and Rowan county must give and give, until it hurts, and they will then not have paid their debt to the state and the nations.

In Letters Of Gold

One of the outstanding contributions made up to the present was that given by the students of the Morehead Public School, not so much in amount as in the spirit. These children, little and big, brought in donations of food and clothing and money to aid their brothers in Ashland, Catlettsburg, Maysville and other places. Some of them went without lunch to contribute their bit. Little sacks of cookies and cakes, a grape fruit, these contributions that meant going without something themselves to help the other fellow who needed it worse, these are the contributions that are written high in letters of gold when credit is given. And they are the contributions that point the way for their elders.

All Proceeds To Be Donated

TO FLOOD RELIEF

Sufferers Need Food

One of the crying needs of the flood victims in Ashland and surrounding cities is for food. Ashland particularly requests donations of food. Morehead, organized to do its full part in caring for our fellow Kentuckians, should make every effort to bring or send to the city hall, any available surplus foods. Any food stuff of any variety can be used. If you have any kind, send it. If you can not bring it call the city hall giving your name and a truck or car will call for it.

One of the important needs of the flood victims in surrounding towns is for underwear. Particularly is this true of the men who are working day and night to assist the sufferers. These men are out twenty four hours a day doing rescue work and are wet when they come in. They need underwear as much as any other clothing. If you have old underwear of any sort, send it to the City Hall where collections are being made. If you can't send it, call and a truck will pick it up.

In each business place in Morehead, the American Legion is placing boxes in which every citizen of this community is requested to drop his small change. This money will be used for Red Cross work to aid the needy who have suffered from the effects of the flood.

Every citizen should make use of these boxes, whether you have already contributed or not. Every penny dropped in will be that much added to the flood fund of which millions will be needed by the National Red Cross.

When you make a purchase drop in what change you can spare. And spare most of your change. You may think you need it badly. But don't forget that there are hundreds of thousands who need it far worse than you ever have, or than we hope you ever will. Give until it hurts and then give some more.

This is for Kentucky, your home and your friends. GIVE, GIVE, GIVE.

Raises Money

We take this opportunity to thank you for contributions made through the Rowan County Red Cross Chapter for flood sufferers. Many have given generously, many have given very small donations. Every donation can be used and is appreciated, but we have not done our best. Let us not forget that while we are blessed with water, food, and clothes, heat and light, our neighbors are sitting in darkness, hungry, thirsty and freezing. Let me urge you not to wait for us to see you again but send or bring a larger contribution at once and let it not be said that we have failed to respond to this the greatest catastrophe our people have ever faced. As I write this the radio announcer is saying that five hundred women and children have been without food since Monday. Try to imagine you and your family sitting in total darkness with muddy water rolling around your home with no food or drinking water for days. Your donation will help in a measure to relieve this horrible condition.

I give you below the amount of money we have raised for relief work and distribution of same:

Monday morning wired to National Red Cross	172.00
Tuesday bought blankets for Ashland refugees	84.69
Tuesday wired to Red Cross for Louisville refugees (from Lee-Clay Products employees)	135.00
Have on hand for distribution today	136.63
TOTAL	528.32

The Struck Construction Company employees are donating $69.25 $32.00 paid and balance to be paid this week.

We understand that many have given food and clothing to help Maysville and Ashland people. This is splendid work and we commend you for your generosity.

The Red Cross chapter has opened up headquarters in the City Hall building and Mrs. N. L. Wells, local active Chairman will keep some 'one on duty there to receive clothing and other supplies.

Your money donations should be sent to either Curraleen C. Smith of Fields Hall or Exer Robinson of Alle Young Hall.

The money counted in the office of Dean Vaughan and a record is kept there also together with names of subscribers.

Signed — Exer Robinson, Chairman.

College Takes Action

The Morehead State Teachers College is cooperating with the local Chapter of the American Red Cross, which has opened headquarters in the City Hall. Announcements were made over WLAP, Lexington, WHAS, Louisville, WCMJ, Ashland and WLW in Cincinnati to the effect that the Morehead State Teachers College would take care of 300 or more refugees from the flooded area around Morehead. Ashland immediately accepted the offer and asked for a coordinator from the college to open an office at the Henry Clay Hotel in Ashland to take care of the situation. A truck and car committee has been appointed to organize a fleet to bring the refugees to Morehead, where they will be quartered in the college dormitories during the emergency.

College authorities have given the entire proceeds of the college picture show on Friday night to the Red Cross fund now being raised in this county.

Various college committees have been appointed to work in conjunction with the down town committees in carrying out the plans to care for the flood victims.

President Babb stated to a representative of The Rowan County News, that, during the period of emergency the entire facilities of the college will be devoted to the care of those families which have lost their homes and belongings in the flood.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written each week by Rev. B. H. Kaeze, Pastor of Baptist Church.

Subject: The Cast of Alcoholic Beverages.

Golden Text: "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfies not?" Isaiah 55:2.

Once each quarter this year we are to have a lesson on temperance. For the first quarter we study the economic approach; next quarter, the scientific approach; third quarter, the social approach, and fourth quarter, the moral issue of the drink problem.

In Proverbs 21:17 we have the doom of the pleasure lover. "He that loveth pleasure shall be a poor man: he that loveth wine and oil (perfume, luxury) shall not be rich."

In Proverbs 23:20,21, we have the description of the gluttonous wine bibber. "Be not among winebibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh: For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty; and drowsiness (drunken sleep) shall clothe a man with rags."

In Matthew 24:45-51 we have the story of the steward. One is faithful, and it is said that he shall be made ruler over all the master's goods. "But if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him in sunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Read also John 6:26, 27, 35, for what God says of those who labor for meat that perishes, and about what it takes to satisfy his real hunger and thirst of a man's soul.

There is not here space enough to discuss the great liquor problem. I will say this, however, there has never yet been an argument produced that would convince a right thinking man that liquor is not an evil. The powerful commerce of the liquor business is built on the weakness of prevented appetite in men who are exploited for gain. Such a thing cannot be right. I know not what solution of the problem can be brought to bear.

Madison Lee Wilson, popular young attorney of this city and son of Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Wilson died suddenly of heart failure at his home here.

Morehead and Rowan County were snowed under last Saturday with two inches of snow.

Barbara Ann Hogge was hostess at a party given at her home Saturday.

Rudyard Kipling, 70, British author died Saturday after an illness which followed an operation for stomach ulcer.

Miss Gertrude died Monday night after a sudden four day illness. He was 70 years old.

But I believe it depends on the Gospel of Jesus Christ applied to the individual heart, of which men are rescued from themselves and from those who would prey upon their weaknesses for personal gain. Liquor is not like most other evils, in that when it is imbibed it renders a man insane. In most other sins a man still has his presence of mind, he can listen to reason. But liquor this is impossible. Its cost is subtle and great. It cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. We must go deeper than this into the heartaches of mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, and little children. There we will find the great cost in poverty, disease, deformity, mental weakness, blasted hopes, torn homes, ravished society, and a thousand other ills. But it is customary for men to set protection from these for money. And so, drink reigns in his terror.

Registrar Tells of School Growth

Marv Page Milton Relates Early History

GROWTH IS EVIDENT

Old School First Called "State Normal"

On September 24, 1923 the Morehead Normal School opened its doors for the first time as a state institution. For that year the enrollment, was less duplicated—21 college students and 217 high school students. The staff-faculty and administration consisted of ten persons.

At that time, certificates were issued on four high school units. Students earning this certificate up on the completion of one year in high school, could renew it with two high school units. The holder, in other words, could teach two years, go to two summer terms, earning two units, thus renewing the certificate, and so on until high school graduation was attained. The certificate agencies were that of state teachers colleges and the department of education, university of Kentucky. Thus, students, who normally enroll in their local high school, made a struggle for a certificate, which meant that they attend one of these institutions.

In 1926, the requirements were raised, and the eight unit certificate was the lowest certificate granted—but still issued by these certifying agencies. People who were just before getting the four unit certificate, rushed back to school to work off the four units, before the new certificate law came in. The high school enrollment rose to its peak, this year—this being 1926, with 621 students. In 1930, the certificate based on high school units was abolished, and our normal school students, enrolled in the county and city high schools, in their own communities—a most natural thing. The enrollment in the high school dropped from 621 in 1926 to 406 in 1930 and 428 in 1935. For a place the size of Morehead, with two high schools, this is a normal enrollment. The students of course are in most cases resident students.

Now lets see what has been happening in the College. At the time the four unit certificate was being issued in the normal department, the 16 hour certificate was the lowest one issued on college credit. A student could, upon completion of high school, go to college for one semester, and by taking certain required subjects, earn the College Elementary certificate, valid for two years. The holder of the certificate could teach two years go to summer terms, and renew the certificate until he was ready for the sixty-four hour certificate. The college enrollment swelled from 21 in 1926 to 440 in 1930, and to 755 in 1932. The latter increase is explained by the fact that the sixteen hour certificate was put aside, and the 32 hour certificate took its place. In the next three years the enrollment jumped to 1290. Another change had come in the certification law—the most important one of all. The 1935 revision made it necessary for an applicant of the certificate issued on college graduation to prepare either to teach in the elementary school or in the high school. Up to that time the holder of the college certificate was prepared to teach anywhere he or she might get a job.

Dr. Falls To Begin Extension Classes

Groups To Be Opened For College Credit

Dr. J. D. Falls, Director of Personnel and Head of the Extension Department of the Morehead State Teachers College, will be at the Henry Clay Hotel Tuesday evening January 26, at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing extension classes for the second semester.

Dr. Falls states that probably the following courses will be organized: Philosophy of Education, Educational Psychology, Tests and Measurements, and some United States History. The wishes of the group present will largely determine what courses will be offered.

All individuals who are interested in any of these courses should be present in each corner of the laundry, and also in the corridors and boyers. Only the steam-room and washroom could not be used.

Band Rooms Built For All Student Teachers

Rooms To Be Installed To Prevent Noise

The new practice rooms of the music department are rapidly nearing completion. They are located in the basement of Field's Hall, and employ the entire east portion of the laundry. The suite consists of three practice rooms and two store rooms.

The music department has expressed its deepest appreciation to the administration and all concerned for the construction of the rooms.

For the last year, student-teachers have been giving lessons in every available nook and corner of the Field's Hall basement. Several of the girls were teaching in their rooms upstairs.

Four lessons would be held simultaneously in each corner of the laundry, and also in the corridors and boyers. Only the steam-room and washroom could not be used.

"THE expression 'nobody home' is undoubtedly slang when used to denote stupidity. It is, however, slang with the backing of Alexander Pope, one of the best emulators of the eighteenth century poets. One of Pope's famous couplets reads: 'Fancy will come, and fancy will come; knock as you please, there's nobody at home.'"

"An eminent man may be a prominent man, but a prominent man is not necessarily eminent. 'Eminent' is properly used in speaking of a man who takes his part in the profession of the elite which he holds. A prominent man is merely one who stands out from the crowd."

The new suite of rooms has done much to alleviate this condition. The walls and partitions of the rooms are made of acoustical board and are fairly sound proof. The walls are painted yellow and trimmed with wood.

The FUTURE soon becomes the Present

"To the young," said thrifty Benjamin Franklin, "twenty years and twenty shillings seem to last forever." As we grow older we realize more keenly the value of time and of money. The future so soon becomes the present. Money saved, slowly and tediously at first, securely mounts up into safety, security and independence—or else time flies by and we have lost the opportunity of saving. In youth every man can so direct his activity that he will have attained a substantial position during his prime of life. The sole requirement is that he shall not waste energy—nor throw away the results. Save part of your earnings now so that when the future becomes the present you will possess the means to achieve your goal in life. The Citizens bank will protect your savings and help them to grow.

MOREHEAD DOES HER DUTY

In response to the needs of the flood sufferers in various neighboring cities,
Mayor Harlan Blair Of Morehead

has asked that flood efforts of Morehead Citizens be coordinated under the direction of the Rowan County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The city will be immediately organized into a unit for the collection of money, blankets, bedding, clothing and food, which will be gathered at the City Hall and divided to be sent to our neighbors at Maysville, Ashland, and Catlettsburg during their hour of need.

Every citizen of Morehead is urged to hunt out every article of clothing, bedding and blankets which they can get along without and have it ready. Do not call. It will be sent for. Food is also acceptable.

Let every Citizen of Morehead do everything he can for our suffering neighbors. They helped us.

LET US HELP THEM.

Patterns of Wolfpen

By Marian Hatcher

Copyright by the Bobbs-Merrill Co. WVT

Desolate feeling so little and faint before the assertion of such invisible strength, she turned from the bed to the window and looked up to the Pinnacle gleaming in the sun. She was surprised that the world continued as though nothing had happened, that the Pinnacle could take the sun and look over a bright land when her own heart was dark with grief and her world black with desolation. It was painful to the heart to hear the chickens clucking in the yard.

To observe the common activities of life, seething about the house quite uninterrupted by the heaviness of death in its midst. There was Julia's garden, not to be thought of without Julia. The holly hedges had had their proud days of color and now they were dry and brown! but they were bursting with seed. The larkspur had faded, the cosmos were falling to seed because there was no one to pinch them back. The tomato vines were turning brown and sprawling on the ground unable to bear the heavy red load. The beans were growing yellow and dry, the cabbage was bursting. It seemed to Cynthia, looking into the familiar plot through eyes heavy with grief that the garden and the still rooms of the house knew that Julia was dead.

The news went up to the hollows, over the hills and down the creeks with mysterious speed. The people came to Wolfpen: the old families on Gannon, the folk from the Big Sandy. The Castle boys made and polished the casket for her at Sparrel's shop, using the knotted beads Sparrel had saved from a fragrant cedar.

Amos Barnes came to conduct the funeral. There were so many people that the service was held under and around the tan barked tree. There were very few flowers. She looked very beautiful in the brown cloth dress she had worn with her own hands. They carried her slowly through the yard and up the path to Cranest Shelf, the people following. They laid her beside Grandmother Adair, Tiva's wife, just as the great shadow of the Pinnacle reached the stone by Saul's grave. They left her there in the silence and the peace. The people went away. The dark came again, the autumn dew dripping like rain in the orchard leaves, the fog settled in and shifted early about, erasing the stars.

Cynthia, in collapse on her bed, ought to feel. But I can't any more, I am not here. The weight pushes me down, I don't know how to think about it, and it hurts to feel.

In the weeks that followed, the spiritual disruption in this house seemed complete. No one spoke of Julia in words each one suffered in privacy his own particular degree and quality of grief. They fell to the accustomed work, easing their sorrow in excess of toil. The plans Cynthia and Julia had made for the institute now seemed as remote as though they belonged with other people. She could construct no vision of herself riding over the hills into town with the things she and Julia had packed in the telescope strapped to a mule. This was her place, where Julia had always been, directing the house for Sparrel.

Gradually the deadness grew customary as the days lengthened into a new routine. The work of the fall harvest filled up and spilled over days into both ends of the night. Cynthia did all the woman's part with some help from the boys. She and Jesse gathered the late beans from the garden. She picked them in the brown earthen jars in the cellar, giving painstaking care to preserve the flavor which Julia developed in them. The sweet potatoes were carefully dug, put into open slatted crates and stacked in the cellar where they gave off a good earthen smell. The Irish potatoes were buried in the hole by the smoke-house. Sparrel and the boys made the sorghum—thick and brown and full flavored. The stone jars were filled with apple and pumpkin butter and tomato preserves, the great goose-necked and green-striped squash and crumpled copper-colored pumpkins were buried in the haymow. Jesse brought the dark honey from the hives and filled the jars on the fruit shelf. Between times Cynthia labored to finish the shirts which Julia had already cut out for the stitching. It was as if each one had put forth exceptional effort to make this autumn like the others but more intense. For the fall days.

Cynthia tried to cook meals like to offer as for her folks, and her mother asked for as little change as possible. She looked after two Shellenberger and spread his letter sheets as a matter of course liking for him because of the way he spoke and left unspoken his shock and his sorrow at the death of Julia.

"She was a fine woman. I am very sorry." And so September gave way to October, and the poignant grief was, by repetition, a little older. There was even a melancholy beauty in the days. Cynthia watched the squirrels spring over the moss-stained rocks and up the tree-trunks their tails waving quickly and with an ultimate grace in rhythm as though they might be either propping the nervous bodies forward and upward or merely making a trim and flowing gesture of wild joy in perfectly timed physical movement. The hills turned fitfully from the long summer green into all the flamboyance of autumn, arranging in exotic patterns around the hillsides the flame- and golden-hued maple leaves, the soft yellow of the poplars, the dull rich scarlet of the white oaks, the deep brown of the black oaks, with a few vivid gum trees screaming among the dark green pines. Nothing was left untouched.

Cynthia found herself in moments of complete abandon to the display around her, her heart gone out of her into the prodigal splashing of color. Then she would have that sudden vague awareness of tears in the heart from which she had escaped for an instant and to which she must return. They came with the first sight of dark clouds gathering over the Pinnacle, presaging the coming of the cold rains and the violation and the annihilation of all the glowing beauty which supported the hours.

Gearharts Return Here From Flooded City

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Gearhart of Morehead were among those from this city who for the past eight days have been undergoing the experience of being in the flooded city of Louisville. Mr. and Mrs. Gearhart were in Louisville attending the funeral of a relative when they were caught in the floodwaters. They were in the Highlands, practically the only part of the city not under water. They were without water and light and left the city as soon as possible, getting out just before the federal soldiers arrived. Mr. and Mrs. Gearhart while not in the flooded district experienced all the thrills and terrors that occur at such a time. They picture the condition in the city as completely indescribable.

Training for careers in paper chemistry is offered by the Institute of Paper Chemistry affiliated with Lawrence College at Appleton Wisconsin.

The institute is a graduate school admitting outstanding graduates of liberal arts colleges and technical schools with training in chemistry, mathematics and physics.

The academic course of four years leading to a Doctor of Philosophy degree is supplemented by summer employment for the students in mills where they have actual experience and become familiar with the methods and personnel of the industry.

The institute is financed by more than 100 pulp and paper mills and has a large number of fellowships available so that the cost to the student is very little.

The graduate is assured of a position since the number of opportunities far exceed the number of those qualified for the positions.

A flunking fine for failing students at the University of Oklahoma was described by President W. B. Bizzell today as an experiment to lift student grades—not to enrich the school treasury.

The $3 fine each semester-hour failed goes into effect this second semester to students who enroll January 29 and 30. The estimated total was placed by Registrar George Wadsack at more than $12,000.

"There is no interest in the money at all, as far as the university is concerned," Dr. Bizzell explained. "The hope is that it will stimulate students to pass their courses."

"It is not permanent, but I think we will have to consider how it works over two or three semesters since the first semester it is an effect is not a fair test."

The money taken in will be used, Wadsack said, as part of the university revolving fund to "pay for the overhead work for instructors."

Wadsack described "overload" as the work of the university of putting the same student through the same course twice.

Dr. Bizzell explained by bringing about more passing grades "the State doesn't have to pay twice because the student fails."

Dr. T. H. Whitehead, assistant professor of chemistry at the University of Alabama. Students ride and women use cosmetics to enhance their natural attractiveness only because they have failed to find "the spring of eternal youth."

Students at Mount Holyoke College eat more than 1,200 loaves of bread and 5,200 rolls in one week, says Raymond Smith, college baker.

The bicycle-riding fad has struck the students fangy at the Universities to and from classes, downtown and almost everywhere college people go.

After recording voices at the University of Texas the students were surprised that they couldn't recognize their own voices.

Cardinals Clip Wings Of Eagles

Louisville Proves Western Upset No Fluke

University of Louisville's marksmen pruned the wings of the high-flying Morehead Eagle to send the Blue and Gold to defeat for the first time this season. The game was played in Louisville before an appreciative throng.

A last six minute rally by Stan Arzzen fell short by a field goal and the Cards eked out a 46 to 44 victory to stop Morehead's string of wins at eight.

The Cards jumped into the lead at the outset of the hard-fought fracas and were never headed; they were never in danger until the desperate rally put on by the Johnsons, threatened to submerge them by its very viciousness.

Stanley Arzzen, the prize forward from Newport, bagged twenty-one points, ten of them in the last four minutes, to closely press Morehead's Louisville Ace who garnered twenty-two, for honors in the point-getting department.

Carter, greatly off form, did not make a field goal during the entire time he was in the heatedly contested fray. Had he been up to par Morehead might have rung up its ninth straight win.

The only retrieving factor in the otherwise disappointing game, was the Eagles' ability to connect from

Boys Get Farming In National Forest

In the Annual Review of work accomplished by the United States Forest Service, it was announced by Forest Supervisor Hemingway, that the training of more than one thousand CCC enrollees in seven Junior Camps in the Cumberland National Forest has been and is becoming increasingly effective.

Besides the regular educational training offered enrollees along academic lines, under supervision of the Army, a system of job or vocational training is being used by the United States Forest Service. Job training is the training of workers in the correct procedure of doing their particular job and giving them a background of general and specific knowledge regarding their work, tools, materials used, safety measures and other information bearing on their work. It is done in discussion groups in the camp and by instructions during the work hours on the job by the foreman and leaders in charge of the work.

The job training program already proven itself effective in the increased efficiency of the workers on the job and at the same time teaching the worker a trade and giving him a great deal of information that he cannot get by simply doing the job.

Some of the more important jobs taught to the CCC enrollees are: road construction, machine and equipment repair, stone masonry, timber surveying, carpentering and telephone line construction. From the large numbers of boys entering the camps without any previous training or experience have been developed a number of highly skilled workmen and many who are well above the average in their particular line of work.

The effectiveness of the program is readily seen by the numbers who have received promotion with the Forest Service and the much greater number who have been able to find profitable employment upon leaving the CCC camps.

GOLDEN GLOVES LEAVE SOON FOR TOURNAMENT

Joe Jackson and his pugilistic representatives of Morehead State Teachers College journey to Huntington this coming week to engage in the Golden Glove Tourney being staged by the "Advertiser."

The winners of the tournament at Huntington will be sent to Chicago with expenses paid. Should they win out in the eliminations there, they will be sent to New York as members of the Chicago Tribune team.

The boys have been hard at work for the past six weeks in an effort to whip wind and muscles into condition for the five day grind. It is expected that Jackson, Ball, Fitch, Rynon and the others will bring, if not the trophy, at least due credit to the name of Morehead.

MOVIES

Of The Week

"The charge of the Light Brigade," Warner Bros., stupendous production suggested by the immortal poem of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, comes to the College Theatre Sunday with an all-star cast headed by Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland — and over fifteen thousand extra people.

The absorbing story of which the charge of the Light Brigade makes the sensational climax begins in India, where two brothers, both army officers, are rivals for the hand of a beautiful Scottish girl. The girl is betrothed to the elder, but during his absence, fighting on the frontier, she falls in love with the younger.

She struggles against this love, believing herself obligated to her fiancée, but when she finds that both of her lovers have been ordered to the front against the Russians in the Crimea, she confesses her love for her brother to her betrothed, at the same time expressing her fear that the man she loves will be killed in battle.

The elder brother and superior officer promises to keep the younger from danger, and carries out this pledge when he sends his brother back to headquarters with a note to the Commandant telling him that he has deliberately changed an order for retreat into an attack, he himself riding to his death on the battle field.

For Friday, January 29, the College brings to the screen a realistic picture of the Irish struggle for independence. A picture with sharply breaking and spectacular action. It is titled "The Plough and The Stars" and tells a human interest love story. It impresses upon the audience that when men fight a great cause and struggle and die, it is really the women who make the greatest sacrifices and suffer the most. In the story Nora Clithere is deeply in love with her husband Jack. He is in love with the cause of Irish freedom. Since he is a leader, he is constantly in danger of capture or death or she lives in fear of his future.

As Jack carries on and his companions one by one drop by his side, the picture, in direct and force
