The StanByer

Stanley K Iversen

JACK LEWIS' SUGGESTION

for the betterment of Morehead is that the residents start a long-range reforestation program, beginning by planting trees along the sidewalks so that during the summer months the city's litter carriers will always walk in the shade.

MISS LUCILLE BASKINBACK

author of the column "Palaver" in the Trail Blazer, wrote last week: "To Mr. Iversen who's current nom de plume is The StanByer: There's a headache and headache remedy called Stanback."

Dear Lucy: If you are not over your headache from reading this column last week, please accept my apologies. But I do wish to compliment you on your most appropriate title choice for a woman's column.

P. S. The definition of "Palaver" according to my dictionary is "idle talk; to flatter or humbug."

FEARLESS

Who bread salesman brings a young lady a bag of peanuts every morning... Dick Clay's brother, a doctor at Lexington, told Dick after his car accident that he couldn't be x-rayed he's too deep for a little ray... Farnell Martindale, applicant for the P. O. postmaster ship, who was all the way to the examination Saturday, arrived on time but decided he had better not take it—he had lost his entrance card.

HANDWRITINGS ARE INTERESTING to me. For instance, J. W. Hogge writes in a flowing fashion and runs his words together to make a continuous line... L. B. Boseman writes with a clear, large hand like the venerable John Hancock... Alby Harbin's words start out very well but they fade into a line... J. John Keplet, of Haldeman has a neat script... Lee Crum of Haldeman must be a good penman and a good writer... Rufus Dean at Edston writes all over the place... Luther Clark writes clear and smooth... P. S. Hogge's writings are good, but they are going upstairs... Mrs. Adda Porter of Vale, must have been well trained in the Palmer method or something like that, for her regular round and very readable script... Herbert Elam joins his letters up close but they are easily read... W. F. Jones is the most satisfactory like the number 3 turned around.

CRACKERBARREL COMMENTS

Welcome to Morehead Robert Woods Vaughan. We wish you every happiness and success. Congratulations to you Earl McBrayer on your recent purchase of The Virginia Furniture Store. We predict that you and Frank Havens will meet on the corner in the near future. Why not collaborate with H. H. THE SUPER COLLOSSAL MAMMOTH STORE.

Met Miss Walters last week. She is one of the West Virginia women and has had a liberal education at the College. A very charming young lady and we wish her happiness and success here.

H. H. Johnson, of Ordinary, is the most conservative business man I have ever met. Uncle Bunk Evans got me out of bed Sunday morning to borrow my Maytag sausage grinder. I am going over to spend the day with him and eat my head off.

I like to drink water out of a cup, but my ambition is to have a gold hanging to each cold water spicket in the house. Jesse T. Mays outmarried himself. I wonder if the man who robbed me $50 last week knows that I know who he was.

I am dying to meet Bill Hudgins' bride; bring her around Bill, I guess you will stop at my house hard time's now. Take it from a veteran, boy, it is the man who pays and pays and pays.

Schaefer, who is owner of the New Trail Theatre has a sport coat you can hear coming down the street. Well, he has to have something to offset that mug of his.

Some day one is going to walk up and knock me across the street, but honest, "Bill" Sample

Hunting Season In Kentucky On Quail, Rabbits Is Opened

One Hundred And Fifty More Licenses Sold This Year

The "Big Moment" is here for Kentucky hunters. Between four and five hundred hunters in Rowan county are expected to be combing the fields today like pilgrims of old, not for turkey, however, but for rabbits and quail. The season on these two open to hunt and closes in forty-five days.

County Clerk Vernon Alfrey reported Tuesday that he has sold 418 hunting licenses since January 1, about 150 more than this time last year.

Local hunters report that quail and rabbits in this county are plentiful.

Most publicly owned lands and waters are posted with signs which tell the hunters he may or may not hunt.

There are numerous areas which are posted as game refuges in which hunting, trapping or pursuing wildlife is prohibited. The purpose of the refuge system in Kentucky is to spread out the game on a national contest and the final winner will receive a motion picture contract. Miss Downing is organizing the contest here.

Cash night will be suspended November 30 and the money held over a week.

We have come a long way since the Thanksgiving of the Seventeenth century. We live in a new world of comforts and devices which would be far beyond the ken of a Pilgrim's dream.

Bang! Bang! Another Bird Bites The Dust

The hunting season is here in earnest. There'll be many a dead bird brought in today for a hungry waiting family.

Mt. Sterling Ready For The Holidays

Mt. Sterling merchants are alive to the possibility of increasing holiday business. Apparently they realize that they are not getting all they should.

An editorial from the Mt. Sterling Advocate follows: Mt. Sterling is making early preparations for Christmas this year and already has had attractive strings of Christmas lights in striking colors strung across the principal business streets of the city.

Merchants have made liberal purchases in preparation for a big holiday trade and beginning next week will have elaborate displays of all that's new in Christmas merchandise ready for the early shoppers.

It is realized by local merchants that much Christmas business has been lost in the past to neighboring towns for the reason that they were late in displaying their offerings and advising the people of this great trading area of their superb values.

Every citizen in this wide trading area is cordially invited to visit Mt. Sterling's shopping centers and watch for their offerings in local papers from now until Christmas.

Hydro-Electric "Folly" Cripples Coal Industry

The other day Mr. A. M. Beebe, of the Rockwell Gas and Electric Corporation, made a speech in which he called the government's policy of water power development on a vast scale "suicidal folly."

He pointed out specifically what every student of the subject for a long while has regarded as obvious, that the development of hydro-electric power in regions where coal is available in quantities in wholly uneconomic.

In this country especially, where unemployment is the most difficult and dangerous problem, the development of water power where coal is available is rank folly.

But at the same time such installations greatly reduce employment not only in the loss of work to more than a million men for 50 weeks of the year, or a total loss of 338,000,000 days' work.

Experts estimate that a ton of water has to fall one mile, in order to produce as much energy as a single pound of coal properly utilized. Water-power provides but very few jobs, not at all for miners, for truckers, or for railroad men and handlers at terminals.

If every creek in the United States were harnessed, Mr. Beebe pointed out, the energy developed would equal but 27 percent of the nation's demands. In the prosperous years 1928-29, for example, 60 per cent of the country's electric current came from coal.

Today only 45 percent is derived from this source, while oil furnished 30 percent. Every time a ton of coal is displaced by water power or petroleum, it means the loss of a day's work for one man.

All supplies will become exhausted in a comparatively short space of time, while coal resources will last for thousands of years. The tendency of both oil and gas to crowd coal out, is bound to reverse itself.

If, in the meantime, the development of water-power under the federal program is a shocking instance of waste. The Norris Dam, for example, has been built at a cost of $38,000,000 within six or eight miles of coal Crewe, one of the mines of the center, and in 30 years will have silted up and become useless, as it is now useless for purposes of flood control.

We Point With Pride

College street will soon be paved. Two houses are going to be built on Lyons avenue. One is nearly finished on the Flemingsburg road. Other houses are being built in other sections of the city.

The building of this nature indicates a natural and healthy growth. We aren't standing still. The change seems to take place slowly because we have to watch each board put into place, each brick dropped, instead of seeing it vacated lot and an unfinished product as do those who come and go.

AAUW Exhibit Was Well Presented

The AAUW exhibit in the College library Saturday was an interesting and unusual display of the ingenuity of Morehead's women. The expressions of surprise and pleasure by many of the visitors proved that the exhibit had accomplished its purposes of presenting various fundamental educational theories which may be applied to every day life.

Unfortunately, at some persons had the impression that since the exhibit was being put on at the College or supported by a woman's organization to which everyone cannot belong, they were not wanted or invited. This impression is entirely erroneous. The exhibit was for anyone who cared to come and see it, who they were. Be sure and see it next week.

Southern Economic Conditions--Private And Public Income SECTION 5

The wealth of natural resources in the Southern forests, minerals and fertile soil benefit the South only when they can be turned into goods and services which its people need. So far the South has enjoyed relatively little of these benefits, simply because it has not had the money or credit to develop and use them.

Ever since the War between the States the South has been the poorest section of the Nation. The richest state in the South ranks lower in per capita income than the poorest state outside the region. In 1937 the average income of the South was $314; in the rest of the country it was $604, or nearly twice as much.

Even in "prosperous" 1929 southern farm people received an average gross income of only $136 a year as compared with $228 for farmers elsewhere. Out of this $136 southern farmers had to pay all their operating expenses--tools, fertilizer, seed, taxes, and interest on debt--so that only a fraction of that sum was left for the purchase of food, clothes, and the necessities of life.

For more than half of the South's farm families--the 53 percent who are tenants without land of their own--income are far lower. Many thousands of them are living in poverty comparable to that of the poorest peasants in Europe. A recent study of southern cotton plantations indicated that the average tenant family received $74 per person for a year's work. Earnings of share croppers range from $38 to $87 per person, and an income of $38 annually means only a little more than 10 cents a day.

The South's industrial wages, like its farm income, are the lowest in the United States. In 1937 common labor in 20 important industries got 1 cent a hour less than the same kind of work. Moreover, less than 10 percent of the textile workers are paid more than 52.5 cents an hour, while in the rest of the Nation 25 percent rise above this level. A recent survey of the Nation's 25 percent rise disclosed that the average annual wage in industry was only $865 while in the remaining states it averaged $1,219.

In income from dividends and interest the South is at a stiffer disadvantage. In 1937 the per capita income in the South from dividends and interest was only $17.55 as compared with $68.97 for the rest of the country.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson For November 27 HONESTY IN ALL THINGS

LESSON TEXT--Exodus 20:15 Matthew 19:1-9, 45, 46 GOLDEN TEXT--Thou shalt not steal--Exodus 20:15

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

Honest in all things would seem to be what one should have a right to expect without question. As a matter of fact, dishonesty has become so common wherever man is found that people look on the person who is really honest as a peculiar individual. Try reporting an undercharge (everybody complains about an overcharge) and you will see why unexpected such circumstances the Christian needs to be vigilant lest he also accommodate his own ideas of honesty and begin to justify little evasions rather than being absolutely upright.

Honesty Respects Property Rights--Exod. 20:15

The very commandment against stealing implies that men have a right to that which they have made, earned or saved. If no one had property rights there could be no stealing. Some of our modern sins reason along that line, but their reasoning is clearly not biblical or Christian. "Thou shalt not steal" forbids every kind of theft. It includes robbery, burglary, safe-cracking, housebreaking, but covers far more than those obvious wrongs. It refers to such things as loafing on one's job, "borrowing" money from the cash drawer, taking goods from the stock with which one is working, stealing another man's sermon and preaching it as one's own, "lifting" material out of another man's book without credit, contracting debts which one can never pay, using false weights and measures, adulterating milk for sale, selling worthless stock, dodging taxes or lying to the tax assessor, using a drug instead of a mallet in the telephone to escape proper payment.

It really means something to be honest, and it is a great testimony to the man who is honest.

Honesty Restores Stolen (Luke 19:1-10)

The story of the conversion of the despised Jew, Zacchaeus, has many interesting features, but for our lesson we stress but one, namely, that the reality of his conversion was demonstrated by his honest restoration that which he had obtained unjustly, and that in four-fold measure. Insofar as it is possible to do so, the constant effort should be made to be right with men. We are to be right with men. The testimony of honest Christians could be presented to show that they have only entered upon real peace and usefulness as they have restored to the man from whom every wrong, to pay every debt. Often such actions open opportunities for Christian testimony and point others to the reality of the man which makes a man live right as well as talk right.

berted publican, was the stubborn disobedience and dishonesty of the United Lutheran Church of the priests in the temple. Jesus had already cleansed the temple of the traffic in money-changing and the sale of animals for sacrifice practiced there (see John 2:13-17). On that occasion he reminded them because they made His Father's house a house of merchandise. Had they known the change of heart of the converted Zacchaeus they would have heeded his admonition. But they did not believe in Christ and went on with their ungodly desecration in the temple area until it became a "den of thieves" (v. 46). The Lesson Commentary of the United Lutheran Church makes an unusually apt application of the truth to "goings on in our own churches" in the following paragraph: Read it, ponder it, pray about it, then act, if it describes your church. "Is a church honest when it does not meet, and is then forced to use all sorts of questionable means to raise money for the benefit of the church? Is a church honest when it turns a building consecrated to the worship of God into a restaurant or a theater?"

regardless of whether it is done to make money for the church or to attract people who are more interested in eating and drinking or playing than in the preaching of the Word and the worship of turns its pulpit into a lecture platform for the discussion of current events or the review of popular books or plays while the world is destroying itself because it does not know the time of its visitation? The answer... is that the church is dishonest because it turns God's house and glory due to Him, and it robs people of their chance of salvation by giving them stones when they need the bread of life."

We The Following Friends Wish To Offer Our Congratulations To All Of The Employees, The Supervisory Staff And Executives Who Go To Make Up The Human Forces Behind The Kentucky Fire Brick Company

AN EDITORIAL

The purpose of business, be it large or small, is to provide a higher standard of living for all American people. There is no individual farmer, business or professional man in Rowan County who is not in some way benefitted by the operations of The Kentucky Fire Brick Company. These same people so benefitted should with the Company and its employees collectively cooperate in straight constructive thinking, looking ultimately to placing Rowan County on the map of Kentucky and the nation as the most peaceful, happy and desirable place to both work and live.

Let our motto be: "Thinking, acting and working forward." Let us bury in good will and fellowship the dispute of 1935 and consign it to the place of things past and forgotten.

Let us not even place a tombstone, as a reminder, on the grave of that which we now bury, but instead raise our hands and heads to the heavens in Thanksgiving.

Dr. Hoke Tells His Reasons Underlying Car Purchase

Dr. Rex Hoke, college psychology professor, psychologized last week by the Trail Blazer's associate editor, Lucille Basenback, for his psychological reasons for buying a new car, declared that the finger of scorn of the younger generation caused him to discard his ten-year-old model.

"The chief reason," said Dr. Hoke, "was that younger people pointed their fingers at me and my car when I passed. Older people did not do this, probably because they considered my keeping the old one a mark of prudence and thrift."

"Secondly," he continued, "it was an original theory of mine that an old car would get me promoted professionally. Since it didn't work, I decided to buy a new car."

"Influence of the Jones'" he added, "my neighbor on one side of the street bought two new cars, then Andy, my son, asked me, 'Daddy, why don't you buy a new car?' You see, Andy considered me well behind the times."

"Faithfully," he concluded, "I bought it to keep up appearances. You see, appearances matter a great deal these days and times. The orientals have just the opposite viewpoint that occidentals have. Instead of representing themselves as much more than they are, they represent themselves as being much less than they really are."

(Continued from Page 1) began chanting their hymns to call in the people. There was no organ or other musical instrument in the church—many of these churches think that way. Instead, hymns were "lined" by one who has a book; that is, he reads a line quickly and only loud enough to be heard, then the others sing the line, and so on to the end of the song. The singing is quite unlike the melodic harmony of other churches. It is a deep, slow, resonant chant in which it is sometimes difficult to catch the words, so much are they trusted to the singing of the chant. This singing is said to be the Gregorian chant—unmodified and unadorned.

In 28 predictions we have picked 33 winners and lost for a percentage of 85. Three of the games were ties.

We're sort of cleaning house today in preparation for the basketball season. Our pick for the Rose Bowl team from the East is Texas Christian. The Horned Frogs have replaced Tennessee as the first place in our estimation.

Michigan definitely re-established herself as a major football power Saturday by trouncing Ohio State 18-0. The Buckeyes crossed Michigan's fifty only 3 times and never penetrated before the 20.

This win climaxed one of the most successful seasons for Michigan since the days of Yost and his "point-a-minute" team. The Wolverines have lost only one game this season and that to Minnesota 7-6.

Western turned our prediction around and instead of losing to Murray 20-7, beat them 21-7. Bibrich sparked the Hilltoppers outfit to victory, personally accounting for two touchdowns.

Having nothing else to do we'll stick our neck out and pick an End, Yeager, Eastern.

By EARL MAY

Well, hunt hunters, you have had a day in the field and have found that birds are still hard to hit and that your heels aren't, as tough as they used to be. Probably your dog caused you some worry, too, maybe he did not have the endurance and speed he should have had and he might have flushed birds too when it seemed there was no reason.

Remember though that your dog was not in shape and that he was nervous and excited just as you were on the first covey. With time and training he will be the dog you won't forget, so treat him right. Don't beat the life out of him because he doesn't understand at first.

Your dog thinks you are a supreme being and he is trying to please you most of the time. If you get nervous and start hollering and whipping him he will become nervous and make mistakes that otherwise he would not have made. However, with all the misses on sure shots and all the trouble your dog caused it was a fine day and you will never forget it. When the soreness wears off you will be raring to go, again and so will I.

DUCK HUNTERS OUT

The duck hunters were out again this weekend. The day seemed fine, just enough fog on the river to let a few drift up to a flock and enough current to carry one along without effort. It seemed that surely the next bend would be full of ducks but luck wasn't with us. Fred Cassidy, Nig and I covered thirteen miles of river without a shot. Nig is a great retriever and although there was ice on the boat and in the air he was always anxious to jump in. Fred raised his gun to shoot at a Crow and in Nig jumped (Fred missed and Nig was disappointed).

I shot at a Coopers Hawk, the kind that makes life hard for the quail, and I missed so Nig had another odd swim for nothing.

To cap the trip the fellow that was to come down the river and bring his back in the car forgot where to come so we had to hoof it back. Walking back Nig found a nice covey of quail and made a point on them but we had to pass them up until season. No ducks, no luck, a wet setter and a puny set, but in all we had a fine day. It doesn't take a big bag to make a hunt a success, most fellows enjoy just being out.

SEND IN EXPERIENCES

Any of you fellows that have a good story about your days afield just send it to the Editor of Fish and Game in care of the Morehead Independent and we will be glad to publish it. Remember to come to the Fish and Game club meetings, too.

Hunting Season Opens Today

There were no "hunting" signs or farm fences, placed there by the landholder. When one sees such signs it usually means that some careless hunter has shot the farmer's cow or horse, or left gates open or perhaps broken down the fence by climbing over it. For it might mean that some hunters have "sneaked" in and killed off all the game, even the seed stock, and the farmer or his boy have no game on their land to shoot or enjoy.

Mr. Elisha Lewis, Raymond Conn and Shester Adkins left here for the Bluegrass Monday morning.

Mr. Beecher Jones was visiting Mr. George Crockett Sunday morning.

Mr. Frank Cornette was visiting Maston Conn Saturday evening.

Bronchial Coughs Need Creomulsion

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsion of Cream that is naturally rich in soothing and healing fat-soluble vitamins by allowing irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling germ-laden phlegm. The Medical Profession has for generations recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a good dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and may be taken frequently by both adults and children. Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very seat of the trouble and helps loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles due to common colds hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund your money. Creomulsion is one of the best for its plainness and its name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

RESUME

Marie Antoinette, young, vivacious, beautiful, is married for reasons of state to Louis August, dauphin of France. Her mother, Empress Maria Theresa of Austria, arranges the marriage as the crowning achievement of her diplomatic career. On her bridal night, Marie Antoinette discovers that not only is her husband a dull, distasteful lot in appearance, he is also unfit to be a husband.

CHAPTER TWO

MADAME LA DAUPHINE In Du Barry's opinion, the favorite reclined on a chaise longue surrounded by the gaudy members of the court. Seated beside her before a small table, the King languidly partook of his breakfast. Through the windows of the Palace bells rang clearly and joyously.

"The bells!" she smiled. "Do you know why they're ringing? It's a wedding anniversary!" "Oh, not mine," she cried. "The Austrian!"

PRICE Is Not Even a Factor!

All over Kentucky, people hear about the delicious food at the Brown—and assume that it's therefore expensive. Yet meal for meal, our food costs less than in local "dairy lundches". That's typical of other things, too. . . . We can't, and don't even try, to charge extra for keeping our hotel spotlessly clean—for employing eager, respectful, helpful people to serve you—for maintaining as nearly as possible the same standards as you demand in your own home. . . . Those things are largely matters of attitude, rather than money. And the result is that, more and more each year, the Brown is becoming recognized as one of America's really fine hotels.

The BROWN HOTEL Louisville Harold E. Harter, Manager

As he marched down the stairway his deep, studied frown gave way to a crafty smile. With light step he made his way direct to the Dauphin's apartment. Marie Antoinette and her only friend, the Princesse de Lambelle, were listlessly playing a game of croqueters, the Dauphin, caught in a prettily avoiding the other's gaze.

"You're crying Toimette," whispered the Princesse. The Dauphin dabbed at her eyes furiously. "It's just a just temper! I'm so bored I could scream. Cooped up here day after day . . . going to prayers . . . reading dull books, dressing up for people who don't care because they're afraid of Du Barry . . ."

"So your husband afraid," retorted the Princesse. "He might have come to you on your anniversary. You spent hours dressing. Why do you always remind me that my husband neglects me, crumbe Antoinette. A knock at the door stopped her short. The Duke of Orleans was standing there. The Dauphin turned to his friend in thrilled delight. "Oh . . . Therese! A visitor! Coming to see me! How do I look?" "Beautiful!" whispered the Princesse.

In another moment the door opened and the Duke hurried in. The three sat smilingly together, making polite conversation, the Duke eventually managing to mention sadly that Madame La Dauphine attended no court functions. "It's true I don't care a great deal for balls and banquets," she smiled.

"He eyed her sharply and she dropped her head. "You know perfectly well how things are," she accused. "No one comes to see me but my husband. . . . of course." She sighed. "No other guests. Why does Du Barry hate a quick smile lighted his face. The Dauphin herself had brought the Duke to the point of his visit. "Because," he answered easily, "in motion you are grace itself me so?"

In repose a statue of beauty. You should become alive, little cousin. How quickly you would depose the milliner!" "I am content to ignore her," she answered, smiling ruefully, and with sudden wittiness, frankness exclaimed: "No. That's not true. I'm afraid of her. She has the King." "And you have the birth and place," he countered. "You have charm and beauty. Have courage to rebuff her decisively. . . . victoriously!" She shook her head. "Du Barry has every advantage. She can make men or degrade them. Who would dare to offend her and be my friend?" Her eyes sought his. "Would you?"

"Will you permit me to give a ball in honor of the Dauphin of France?" he asked softly. "If her Royal Highness will honor me, I venture to predict all Paris will find courage to be there. Paris is waiting for you," he argued eagerly. "Conquer Paris and you conquer Du Barry . . ." He realized suddenly that she wasn't listening. Her face lighted with a happy smile and she rose from her chair, her attention riveted behind him. He turned and saw the Dauphin stumble into the room, a large spinning wheel in his arms. "Louis!" she cried in delight. The Duke and the Princesse bowed their way out. Marie Antoinette flew to her husband. "How kind of you to come!" "Our wedding anniversary," he mumbled and set the spinning wheel down in the corner. Her face grew radiant. "Oh, did you make it yourself?" He nodded sheepishly, but before he could speak further a knock at the door announced the visit of the Prince de Rohan. Marie and her husband looked at each other in surprise. The Prince bowed into the room and placed a charming box before the Dauphine. "Monsieurgenie . . . Madame," he said softly. "I have the honor to deliver this charming box . . . a gift for your anniversary."

Ramey P-T A To Have Inside Of Schoolhouse Painted

Ira T. Caudill

The parents of the Ramey school held their regular P-T. A. meeting Friday, October 28. It was the most enjoyable meeting of the fall, because a Halloween program was given by the children for the entertainment of the parents. The program consisted of songs, plays and recitations.

It was planned to apply the remaining pie-supper money that is on hand to the painting of the inside of the school house.

Parents present at the October meeting were Mesdames Allie Prater, May Poston, Lillian Kissick, Elsie Maddox, Maggie Choat, June Moore and Verna Kissick.

The Ramey school has a splendid record in spelling. Individual spelling graphs were made, with ten points on them. In the upper grades all spelling is written. Each child's paper is kept on file for a week, and the child endeavors to correct all errors. If a pupil corrects his words, so he has not missed one word for a week, his score is ten, and the mark on his graph is at the top. For eleven consecutive weeks the graph of every pupil in the fifth and seventh grades was at the top. When a pupil misses a lesson, he always comes back and makes it up voluntarily. One girl missed seven days on account of an accident but made up every word missed in spelling; when she returned to school.

WAR TIME BARRACKS USED AS DORMITORIES

Trailers, tents, log cabins, and abandoned shacks have all been secured by American college students in search of inexpensive living quarters, but undergraduates of the University of New Hampshire have gone one better. Some 250 men—from freshmen to seniors—utilize war-time barracks, built in the summer of 1918 to house members of the national army training corps.

These barracks, although far from ideal, have opened the way to higher education for well over 2,000 students since their construction, according to administrative estimates.

Lamar Dogg, head of the University of Georgia art department, has opened a one-man show at Atlanta's High museum.

Elliottville

Miss Carter's room boasts the best attendance at Elliottville. The children are proud of their new room and new building and try to come every day to school. They do not believe in being absent. Forty-four have been enrolled in this room.

The lower grades, taught by Grace Lewis, has an enrollment of 44. The color scheme is carried out in this room in light green. The curtains are green checked. The bookcase, chart holder and other pieces of furniture made by the children are light green. The room has been furnished with new tables and chairs for the children. A new thermometer and pencil sharpener have been purchased.

Mrs. Hogge, teacher of the third and fourth grades has enrolled 44 children. These children are not only from Elliottville but also from the Open Fork and Sand Gap districts. However, this is not hurting the attendance very much as they like to ride the bus to school.

Cow Given Credit For Photography Success

Providence, R. I. (ACP)—Gave the patient, hardworking, contented cow credit for making modern photography a success!

The secret of how the bovine contributes through her hoofs to the art of picture-making was revealed recently by Dr. Lawrence S. Foster of the chemistry department at Brown University.

Dr. Foster declared the genius of the cow does not lie so much in its milk-manufacturing capacities as in its hoofs. The hoofs are lubricated with a certain kind of mustard oil which contains silver sulfide.

Silver sulfide is a tremendous aid in developing a latent image, which Dr. Foster explained, is the secret of modern photography.

Credit unions have been organized in Missouri's five state teachers' colleges.
