THE RED CROSS AND COMMUNITY

The Rowan County Chaper of the American Red Cross presented a united front in going to the aid of the flood victims of the recent and still present Ohio Valley flood. Truck loads of clothing, blankets, food and bedding were gathered up and taken to Ashland and Mayaville from Monday until word came from those that no more was needed. The finance committee worked continuously raising funds for the benefit of the National Red Cross, money which was forwarded to Washington to go into the 81,000,000 fund being raised by the national organization for rehabilitation purposes.

Altogether, Rowan county need not be ashamed of the efforts of her citizens to go to the aid of those who were in distress.

Morehead renews her struggle with the contending teams of the KIAC on Wednesday, night, when they play a return engagement with the Georgetown Tigers here. The Eagles have already met the Tigers at Georgetown in a rough and tumble encounter, in which the Eagles came off the victors, by a comfortable margin. Georgetown is honing for revenge and have been consistently knocking their opponents for losses since that night they played Morehead. They are out for blood and expect to even the score. to even the score

The Eagles will be playing with-out the services of their star de-fense man, Red Smith who went the way of several good athletes, as well as others, when he bucked up against eligibility rules by the examination route. Homes in Morehead received seant attention last week, and tabled did not group with food, In fact, one might have believed that More head-tiself was in the flood area, Judiged by the small rations on which the city was put.

The reason for this apparent food.

The reason for this apparent food The reason for this apparent food shortage was the fact that the wo-men of the community almost un-animously deropped their home work and became Red Cross and Relief workers. They droppied everything, cooking, cleaning and all, and de-vojed practically their entire time to, gathering clothing and making ouilts.
