A consultation of the calendar will show that the Yuletide season is here again, and that Christmas is only 17 days away. "Shop early," is a worn-out phrase...

Something To Shoot For The achievement of Irene Brown, a 14-year-old Illinois school girl, in carrying off the grand championship at the International Live-stock Exposition at Chicago furnishes a dream story for every farm boy and girl in Rowan county...

Southern Economic Conditions--Section 6--Education Great numbers of Americans are continually moving from the region to another. This makes it more schooling in any region a matter of national concern.

age of the country's total, although they received an income of only about 2 percent of the Nation's total. In the nonfarm population of the Northeast, on the other hand, there were 8,500,000 children in a group that received 42 percent of the total national income--21 times as much income available to educate only twice as many children.

The South must educate one-third of the Nation's children with one-sixth of the Nation's school revenues. According to the most conservative estimates, the per capita ability of the richest state in the country to support education is six times as great as that of the poorest state.

Higher education in the South has lagged far behind the rest of the Nation. The total endowments of the colleges and universities of the South are less than the combined endowments of Yale and Harvard. As for medical schools, the South does not have the facilities to educate sufficient doctors for its own needs.

Christmas Gift A year's subscription to the Independent is the best bet for a Christmas gift to any Rowan county family or to a member of that family away from home.

Old Age Pensions In the face of increasing pressure from many sources for "liberalizing" the system of old age pensions for everybody, and the very considerable number of members of the new congress who are committed to one or another of the various pension plans advocated in different parts of the country, it is more than probable that serious efforts will be made when congress meets to amend the Social Security Act in various ways.

It is a Warning (Luke 12:13-21) "Beware of covetousness." The teaching of this passage is so directly opposite to all ideas regarding such matters as inherited property or the wealth of the world as large, that it may be a total surprise to some readers and attendants at Bible school.

prepared, for, as Ambrose says, "Thou has tarnish--the bosoms of the needy, the haggard of widows, the moans of orphans and infants." He was a fool who loved money for himself. One wonders what he had to say for himself when that very night he was called into the presence of God to give an account of his stewardship (v. 20).

III. A Way of Victory (1 Tim. 6:6-10). "Godliness with contentment." As a minister of the gospel the writer would first remind himself that this was written by Paul to the preacher Timothy. Brethren in the ministry, let us not fall into the temptation and snare that comes with the love of money.

In this dizzy age when many are so intent on making money that they have no time for home and children, church and fellowship when men neglect their responsibilities and duties as citizens to get gain; when any dirty business is all right if it produces a profit; when "the golden men betray their country, their friends, their God; and their immortal souls" (Farrar) -- yes, in this day let us remind men that "we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain that we can carry nothing out." Let us teach and exemplify in our lives the fact that the only real and worthwhile gain in life is "godliness with contentment."

DOG GAME

Uncle Ike Kidd, veteran fox hunter of Ewan county, invited Hogan and myself in to dry off last Saturday afternoon...

sooth got on one of his favorite tales about the winter he and his hounds caught seven wild cats in the woods around Clearfield.

Wildcats were easy to start but hard to stop because they would back-track and run along down trees and pull all the stunts of a smart fox.

His dog, a black hound, was on to their ways, though, and generally put the cat up a tree or ran him in a hole. A good catroument dog could easily kill a wildcat in a few minutes by smart fighting and never get scratched. All the dog had to do was to grab the catroument by the chest and start crushing. After the first bite the cat would give up and the fight was over. A cat that was allowed to stand up and spar with a dog would generally give a mighty good account of himself though.

Uncle Ike told lots of stories but ended up by saying that there wasn't anything to fox hunting or something, but I reckon Brother Kaeze likes to hunt about as well as any one. A man that lives right can have some funny experiences with game, it seems. I believe every word he tells me, have to, he's a preacher, isn't he?

Anyway, he said that he lost his dog for a few minutes the other day (of course the dog was on a point) and was hunting along alone when he saw a quail running on the ground.

As he watched it he noticed that it quartered up wind and sniffed the air just like a dog, and that's a fact. Being rather fascinated by the strange behavior (and being unable to shoot because the quail would not stand still) he followed and watched, with a cocked gun, at once the quail began to act like a dog about to point, it would raise one leg and lower its head and stand rigid for a second or so, and that's a fact. Finally it came to a beautiful point and froze just like a prize-winning field dog—just the moment our preacher had been waiting for. He raised at once the quail took deliberate aim at the quail but something kept him from shooting.

Through curiosity he lowered his gun and walked up to the pointing bird. To his great surprise a great covey of birds came up and our sportsman friend made a nice double. Well, boys, believe it or not, he hunted that bird all afternoon and he said it had more bird-sense than any dog he ever had. I don't wonder at that either.

He got his limit before he ever thought of his dog again but on returning to the original spot he found the faithful dog had run the birds in a hole and had its paw over the opening. The dog would let one bird out at a time thinking of what nice shooting the master would have, after letting about eight out and never hearing a shot the dog covered the hole up in disgust and left the preacher who hunted me up. I got my limit out of that hole and so did Hogan. Nig is taking his turn on the hole now and standing guard over it until tomorrow. I expect to get my limit of birds out of that hole every day for a week, and that's a fact.

SUSIE AND BILL COLLEGE VERY SHY ABOUT PUBLIC OPINION, SAYS SCRIBE

By Lucille Basenback

Others then no end and they will give up a show to study and get a better one. But—

Ask Susie or Bill to express his or her opinion about such and such a matter. A strange metamorphosis occurs; there is a freezing up, so to speak, of the facial contours. The eyes dart hither and yon in quest of a means of escaping the questioner, and the lips assume a straight line appearance.

Now, this were in Naziland or Russia; these actions would not evoke comment. But here, in the United States, a land of freedom and political equanimity for all, it is irritating, no end.

Susie and Bill, your opinion is as good as the fellow's next to you. You can advance your views without being a griper and still look yourself in the eye.

If there's no stump or soap box handy at the time you feel the need of a little opinion-expressing, fetch pen and paper to your writing desk and reel off a page or two and send it to your campus newspaper. The newspaper is a reflection of you; it is your voice and interpreter.

name is Earl Campbell May. He is a foreigner, his ancestors came here from across the waters (chances are they were chased out) he came here from down in Fayette four or five years ago (and we didn't send him); he talked a poor innocent little girl into marrying him from Danville, her name is Emma Lee. Now she is okay, but I actually believe he would trade her off for six more good dogs. Any wife is worth at least twelve, if you can get the papers on them.

The wife and I used to live in the same house with them and he is the only man I have ever known that was so lazy that when the fire in the fireplace got low he would punch off a few pieces of coal around the fireplace and try to burn that. I'd tell him it would not burn but he would only say "Why they burn like a Lee-Clay". He even walks around the house in his bare feet. He has a son by the name of Jack that is a chip off the old block, and I actually know he tested on a shotgun barrel (no relation to Crackerball), double action. Well, far be it for me to talk about anyone, but, Editors, let's check these columnists a little closer. My boy, Tommy, is walking like a drunken C. C. Co. and jabbering like a Hitler-Joy and Mrs. Ethel Ellington is one of the best cooks in this town. How Doc ever hooked her I do not know. On the other hand, I think they are one of the happiest couples in town. The reason for that is they have no close neighbors to listen in on their family brags. Every time I pick up a paper I read where Dr. R. L. Hoke has a new car. I am tired of it. If I can get the information from his son, Andy, who is a personal friend of mine, I am going to give my readers the dope through this column as to how much he got for his old car and if he financed the new one and how much his payments are per month.

I like country sausage well-seasoned.

Added wisecrack: This high gas will stop all the knocking in your car, Sir.

Reply: Good, I will take home a spoonful and put it in my wife's coffee.

Quill and Quair Writer Tells 'How To Be Unpopular And Lose Friends'

From the latest issue of the "Quill and Quair" we have chosen an article which we consider most outstanding. The article is titled "How to Be Unpopular and Lose Friends." It was written by Frances Peratt.

The Quill and Quair is a publication of the English Majors Club at Morehead College and is the only publication of its kind in the state.

HOW TO BE UNPOPULAR AND LOSE FRIENDS

By Frances Peratt

So you want to be unpopular and can't! It case let an authority tell you all the tricks in ten easy lessons on the installment plan. After deliberate research I have arrived at the conclusion that no matter how hard you try, no matter if you will throw all your energies into it, you can not be unpopular with everyone. Perfection is put into the juggle. Nobody loves me, everybody hates me.

I'm going down to the garden and eat worms.

Perfection is impossible. Even the world's meanest man has some praise coming to him. If you have friends. Even the best of you do.

First, you must decide whether your unpopularity is to be sought or not. If you are a member of people or to be concentrated with a certain type or group. As one with much experience in the field, I warn you that any unpopularity with a large number is likely to spread so thinly that it amounts to indifference. My advice is to select one particular group, because you really can't be unpopular with everyone.

Supposing that you have chosen to be the pet peeve of a group of intellectuals, there is a long list of little mannerisms that guarantee unpopularity with the group. When you meet one of the crowd on the street yell to him from across the street, then rush to him, slap him on the back violently, and break his hand with your other paw. Pop your gum and see how close to him you can pull it. Keep an accurate measurement of your gum to watch your development in unpopularity. If you succeed in touching him it insures your isolation forever. Ridicule each persons views on any subject. Never make fun of only one side of the argument. Both sides are liable to consider you an intellectual, too. Bring out your funnies or dullest story when the argument starts to slum and tell it at the top of your voice, then hold their sides and laugh. If you aren't left in the room by yourself, you're slipping. You can't expect it to last with every individual in the group because one or two are sure to regard your eccentricities as a sign of genius.

At the other extreme we have the "song and dance" crowd. To put your worst foot forward with them, don't do any of the things you would do with an intellectual group; instead, carry about with you five or six books about the size of a shoe. With the "band" but ones that weigh very little. When they begin to jive, yawn twice and pull out your biggest book. And when they tell jokes, stare vacantly into space and say nothing. If you feel compelled to smile, yawn. You will find that yawning is as contagious as smiling. Pursue a strictly neutral "off attitude." In the crowd, probably there will be one or two who will find you repulsive, but as I said before, there are some people who will admire you in spite of everything.

If you want to, you may use such things as the ads recommend for loss of friends, but in my long years of experience, I find that such superficial methods as B. O. do not lead to lasting enemies.

If you are going into the seriously, here are a few pointers you should know. They work in any crowd because they seem natural to her human nature. They are all obvious so I won't give my preference. (1) Brag about anything—the price of a suitable trail of broken hearts left behind for stationary, pins, keys, etc.

and—your prowess as an athlete or a cook. (2) Be a savior for secrets. Tell everything you know and know everything. Soon you won't know anything to tell. (3) Stick your nose in the air and look down at it you: "friends." Assume the "Holler" than thou" attitude—you're better than they are. (4) Know all the answers; or let them think that you do. (5) Sulk and never speak. Don't give friends. Put on a frown and snarl in a corner.

There you are, you hoodlums, and if you don't succeed, don't try again, because there is either something wrong with you or with my system. It can't be my system, so resign yourself to a life of popularity.

Players Decide To Shelve 'Aaron Slick From Punkin Crick'

New Opus Is 'Journey's End,' Most Impressive War Story Written

The next production of the College Players will be "Journey's End" instead of "Aaron Slick From Punkin Crick," according to Mr. Neville Finzel, director of the group.

The play will probably be the heaviest story ever produced by the College Players. Due to their past experience Mr. Finzel may rest upon some of the old players for the more difficult parts. However, a number of parts will be filled by newcomers. The call for try-outs for this production will be announced later together with the date of presentation. The admission will probably be advanced on this play due to the exceedingly large royalty required to produce the play.

MC Gridders Fedet At Annual Banquet Wednesday Night

Lappin Acts As Toastmaster; Ellington Invites Squad To Dinner

The members of the varsity and freshman football squads were honored at a banquet held in the College cafeteria, Wednesday night, November 30, at 6 o'clock. Warren C. Lappin, director of the training school, acted as toastmaster of the banquet, and introduced Dr. A. F. Ellington, of Morehead, who extended the third annual invitation to the members of the football squads to attend a dinner-banquet which is to be held in their behalf Tuesday, January 3, by the Business Men's Club.

Coaches Ellis Johnson and Bob Laughlin introduced the members of both squads who will receive letter sweaters and numeral sweaters in recognition of their splendid work on the gridiron. Co-Captains Buck Horton and Lot Marzetti gave brief speeches of appreciation. Frank Robertson and Roy Bailey were elected co-captains of the football team for the coming year.

Entertainment was furnished by a quartet composed of Messrs. Steiner, Tallent, Edwards and Higginbotham, and a trio of Charles Higginbotham, Edmund Weicherz and Elmer McCord, accompanied by Miss Mary Turley on the piano.

The members of the athletic committee who were present at the banquet are as follows: Dr. and Mrs. R. D. Judd, chairman of the committee, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lappin, Dean and Mrs. W. B. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rice, Coach and Mrs. Ellis Johnson, and President and Mrs. H. A. Babh.

Six senior graders from the Eagle football squad left for Louisville Tuesday to prepare for the Tank-All-Star College game Saturday. The Eagles who left for Louisville are Hammond, Marzetti, Reynolds, Fair, Lowman, and Adams. Horton is unable to participate because playing in the game would make him ineligible for basketball.

Billie Black's BEARNEY

You know, it's too bad that it is further from Russell to Breckinridge than it is from Russell to Morehead. Billie Black called off a game here with Breckinridge saying that the trip was long and might tire the boys out. Included on their schedule is a game with Morehead. Here, good trip must be shorter and less liable to cause the boys' fatigue. We praise the wise decision of the coach who always has the energy and health of his boys foremost in his mind, rather than the winning of ball games.

A much improved Grayson team surprised Breckinridge last Thursday by giving them a tough battle before succumbing 22-17. This is Billy Babh's first year as coach at Pritchard Hill and he seems to be doing very well. He has a center named Norris who can follow off the backboard like nobody's business. One time when he jumped up to get the ball it seemed that his feet were as high as some of the boy's shoulders.

Frenchburg, whom the Eagles play Wednesday night, is reported to have a pretty good ball club. They have one All-State named Wells who is reported to be "ready."

The Eagles opened the college basketball schedule with a bang Monday night, trouncing Holbrook 43-24. Big John Wiggers was high point man of the encounter, looping the ball in for ten points. That's serving it piping hot, Eagles! Give us second servings.

GERTRUDE GELBID

RESUME

Marie Antoinette, young, vivacious, beautiful, is sacrificed to the Austrian-French Alliance when her mother, Marie Theresa, Empress of Austria, arranges for her marriage to Louis August, the Dauphin of France. To her horror and dismay, Marie discovers on her bridal night that her husband refuses to make her his wife in anything but name. For two years that fact that she is childless makes her the object of court ridicule lead by Du Barry, the King's favorite. Du Barry, the King's emy, the Duke D'Orleans, decides to play Marie against the Favorite, and Marie falls ready victim to his intrigue against Du Barry. She becomes the most-talked about woman in Paris. As a gambling house she meets and is spurned by Count Alex de Fersen, a young Swedish nobleman.

CHAPTER FOUR
ROVAL PAWN

The cut to her vanity and pride dealt by Count Fersen was deep . . . but the need in the face of Court intrigue, to sustain her supremacy as the most glamorous woman in France was deeper. Marie Antoinette answered both by new, unheard of extravagance and escapade. Eventually her conduct threatened the French-Austrian Alliance. At the instigation of her mother, Countess Mercy, the Austrian Ambassador, took her to task. He warned her that lack of children made her position far from secure.

Marie Antoinette lapsed into a deep grim silence. Her lack of children! She had been married four years . . . but her husband still refused to make her his wife in reality. She felt the sting of humiliation caused by Du Barry's open ridicule of her childlessness.

Her seeming inattention drove Mercy to his final effort. He Du Barry all but sprung at her. The King averted the bareheaded explosion by a short command that brooked no denial: "Madame Du Barry, you prefer to leave . . . as do I . . . delivered the King's ultimatum engendered by Du Barry's constant complaint against the Dauphine. The French Alliance could be maintained only if Marie publicly acknowledged Du Barry.

"Do I understand you correctly, Count Mercy?" she cried. "You want me to meet . . . to speak to . . . to greet that wretch? I will not. I can not. She is my enemy."

But in the end, Count Mercy's argument prevailed. To save the Alliance the Dauphine agreed to invite Du Barry to a ball. The night of the ball found a thousand candle shedding their light on the magnificence of the French Court. Every noble and lady, resplendent in brocades and jewels, awaited the spectacle of the Dauphine's greeting to Du Barry. The tenseness at the King's entrance rode to concert pitch when the Major Dome announced: "Madame La Comtesse Du Barry."

The Favorite posed for her entrance, a gorgeous figure in velvets and jewels. Marie Antoinette smiled faintly. She had taken undue trouble to dress simply for this occasion. The contrast between her quiet elegance and the elaborate splendor of Du Barry set them worlds apart. "I am late, Madame," Du Barry said haughtily, "but with His Majesty's permission. A slight headache."

"I am sorry, Madame," Marie answered graciously. "It was a pleasure delayed."

"For me, too, Madame. I might say a triumph."

"You are too kind," Marie said softly. The King waited nervously for Du Barry to retire, the Dauphine had done her duty and he feared the results if the meeting were prolonged. But Du Barry had not yet tasted her triumph in the full.

"I presume I shall not have the honor of meeting His Royal Highness the Dauphine!" she questioned meaningly. "My husband does not care for parties, Madame," Marie replied stiffly.

Du Barry smiled. "Quite the family man, isn't he? The fire-side . . . the nursery . . . and all that!"

A slow, deliberate smile lit the face of Marie Antoinette. "My husband has better sense than I," she said lightly. "He knows where to draw the line."

Du Barry's haughty veneer cracked in sudden rage. "Is that it?" she screamed. "I'm dirt . . . eh? . . . not good enough for your Hip and Mighlines."

"But, no, Madame," Marie interrupted smoothly. "Royalty loves an occasional roll in the gutter." She smiled at the King with utmost sweetness. "Don't get Grandpappa?"

The King turned purple with rage. "Madame!" he warned. "Marie give her full attention to Du Barry. "Do you know," she continued with the greatest charm. "I've never walked the streets of Paris, Madame. I'm sure that you could tell me something about that."

Du Barry all but sprung at her. The King averted the bareheaded explosion by a short command that brooked no denial: "Madame Du Barry, you prefer to leave . . . as do I . . . She stood with head high as he hurried from her.

Meanwhile in the King's apartments, Du Barry celebrated the victory that hers was the final victory. A visitor entered, unbidden. The King looked up into the tense, frightened, but heroic determined face of the Dauphine.

"What is the meaning of this?" His Majesty demanded. "Why are you here?"

The Dauphin stared at him. "I don't want her sent back," he said doggedly. He clenched his fist in an agony of effort. "I should have told you, he faltered. "It isn't her fault. Don't you understand? It's my fault that she has no children."

Du Barry pushed him aside. "His Majesty is not well," she shouted. "Get out!"

"Get out!" he shrieked, but the Dauphin in a sudden rage. He turned to the King and fell on his knees, a pitiful, ridiculous figure. "Grandfather, it will be different now."

"Get up you fool!" sneered the King. "Your argument is as unimpressive as your appearance. Your wife goes back to Austria and your marriage will be annulled. And I will hear no more of it. Now . . . get out!"

Louis blinked from his grandfather to Du Barry in helpless anguish. "A blind, hysterical rage suddenly overpowered him. "I'll get out," he shrieked, "but I'll come back when you're dead . . . I'll be King then."

"Silence!" roared the King and rose from his chair his face white with passion. The Dauphin sent him spinning back to his seat with a single blow. "I'm going to have my wife back to have children!" He pointed to Du Barry. "And you . . . do you know what will happen to you when I'm King? There's a place for women like you . . . in the Bastille!"

"Stop him!" cried Du Barry. "Stop him!" The Dauphin turned on him in fury. "You're old! You're not going to live long! I'll be sitting there and you'll be dead."

With a groan, the King toppled over in collapse. The Dauphin's rage melted in a moment of fear and anxiety. "Sire!" he cried. "Sire . . ." But the King lay staring with eyes that saw nothing. (To be continued.)

Apples Polishing-- Intelligent Variety

At least one college professor believes—in fact, encourages—apple polishing, if it is of the "intelligent" variety.

—And here are the exact words of Oregon State College's dean of men, Dr. U. G. Dubach, taken from a recent speech on the subject. "Apple polishing is an important part in a college man's education and it must be followed with diligence in class work if it is to be useful and effective."

"Anyone who isn't wise enough to do intelligent apple polishing is not intelligent at all. Apple polishing, properly defined, is making one's self known to their professors in a favorable light. More and more we are recognizing that education, aside from giving technical knowledge, must teach one how to properly sell himself. How can one sell himself to his professors unless he makes himself and his work known to them in an intelligent and agreeable manner?"

Christmas In The Schools

Now is the greatest time of the year for all children. The holiday spirit is present in the schools from the first day of December to the last. December is the one month when our school rooms can be made beautiful with the yuletide decorations. Children are on time and present every day possible during this month. There are programs which must be prepared. Christmas gifts to be made, and so many things to be done.

FARMERS

The Farmers P.-T. A. met last Friday, November 25. A motion was carried for a turkey to be raffled off. A Christmas program was planned and is now being studied by the pupils under the direction of the teachers. Costumes are being made by the P.-T. A. members.

The pupils, teachers, P.-T. A. and entire Farmers community think getting into the new school building is going to be our Christmas present from the superintendent and the county board of education.

Grades 1 and 2

We visited the Little Zoo Wednesday afternoon, and we were very interested in the small animals. The African green monkey was our favorite and we enjoyed watching the other animals too. We were allowed to touch the horned lizards and the guinea pigs. We appreciated seeing the animals, and later we talked about them.

Haldeman Inaugurates Attendance Contests

The Haldeman school is holding very high attendance this year. Thirty-one have been enrolled in the first grade, Mrs. Evans' room. The children in this room are sorry to lose their little playmate, Riley Webb, who died last week with pneumonia. Riley has been sick for some time, having typhoid in August, pneumonia in October, followed by diphtheria.

Miss Cline, who is teaching part of the first grade and the second has enrolled thirty children. There has been an attendance race between the boys and girls and prizes given to the winners for holding the highest attendance.

There have been thirty-one children enrolled by Miss Stinson's room which is the sixth grade. These boys and girls pride themselves on their good attendance. They have organized a booster club. The children bring a penny a week and this money is saved until the end of the year. They will then take a trip to the Zoo. For each child who comes the entire week without being absent or tardy, Miss Stinson matches their penny with a penny which helps to pile up enough pennies for the trip.

Many of the boys in this room are carpenters. So far this year they have made a table for the water and cups, a library table, bulletin board and shelves for the lunch boxes. The girls did the painting.

Miss Bogess has enrolled forty children in the fourth grade. A very unique arrangement has been made in attendance in this room. Each week the boys and girls race in attendance and the winning side gets out early on Friday afternoon. They like to do this, and it adds zest to the game.

Visitors in this room within the last few days have been Mrs. Nina Bockook, Lucy Bockook and Mrs. Bess Johnson.

Tuesday, the fourth grade gave a chapel program in the gym. The program consisted of a play, dance, songs and the rhythm band.

Miss Harris has enrolled forty-two so far this year. With the exception of two children, their percentage so far has been nearly perfect. This room also has organized the penny a week club and together with Miss Stinson's room will make a trip to the zoo at the end of the year. We might add that this trip is supposed to include those having perfect attendance.

Thirty-seven have been enrolled by Miss Virginia Caultill. This room does not have any attendance problems, providing they can get Earl Walsh to attend regularly. Visitors during the week were Mrs. Opal Stinson, Mrs. Lon Bower, and Mrs. Lucy Bockook. Next week this grade will give a chapel program.

Miss Stewart has enrolled thirty-six in this third grade. A contest is also in progress in this room. Those who are present every day during the week get one minute early on Friday and ten minutes early at the end of the month. Miss Stewart said that perfect paper marks are one of the things the children who are not at school have helped her attendance very much. Parents visiting the room are Mrs. Lee Day, Mrs. Leeper, Mrs. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nickell.

Other contests are a neatness campaign which includes morning inspection, another who reads the most books from the library gets prizes at the end of the month. The best drawings are framed also. All this work creates interest.

Mrs. Lona Fraley has enrolled 27 pupils this year. A contest is also going on in this room. The winners are planning a picnic at the end of the month. This room also has many good carpenters and painters in it. A large cabinet has been built to keep material in, a frame has been made around the

CHRISTMAS SEALS IN THE SCHOOLS

The rural schools are lending a hand in selling Christmas Seals this year. Each year more and more people are realizing the meaning of Christmas Seals. This year each teacher is given enough seals for each child in the school to sell five. If all the children sell five each, then this school is called a 100 percent school and will be visited by some of the members of the Morehead Woman's Club the day before Christmas and be presented with balloons. This will be in appreciation of the effort spent in making the school a 100 percent school.

Mrs. Wilfred Waltz, sextant explains that almost every child in the schools will be able to deny himself some little pleasure to buy five cents worth of seals. The following schools have already obtained the seals and are hoping to be able to make a big sale:

Craney, Razor, Ramey, Bluestone, Alfrey, Pond Lick, Cranston, Clearfork, Rockfork, Clark, Holly, Moore, Carey and Rosedale.

BIG BRUSHY

Meri McFarland

The pupils of this school who have had perfect attendance for the fifth month are as follows: Gladys Kiser, Alep Cooper, Wilda McFarland, Nona McFarland, Helen Reeves, Ilean Fryman, Meri McFarland, Mary E. Kiser, Harold McGlothlin, Lowell Murray, Allie Reeves, Kenneth McGlothlin, Billie Haney, and Harold Cooper.

The pupils who have come to school for five months without being absent a day are: Meri McFarland, Wilda McFarland, Nona McFarland, Lucy Reeves, Lowell Murray, Ilean Fryman, Harold Cooper, Kenneth McGlothlin, Harold McGlothlin and Gladys Kiser.

We are back in school after our Thanksgiving vacation and we think we can bring up our attendance this month. We are glad to have our schoolmates back in school. Clayton Richardson and Myrcella Kiser. Clayton has been ill for about a week and has not been well enough to attend. Myrcella has been ill for two days but has been well enough to attend school. They are back in school and they are as jolly as ever.

We have made several plans for our Christmas program which will be held the 22 day of this month. We have elected Meri McFarland and Ilean Fryman to sponsor our Christmas program. Pupils who have received presents for coming to school the first 4 months were Harold Cooper, Roxie McRoberts, Clayton Richardson, Kenneth McGlothlin, Harold McGlothlin, Lowell Murray, Nona McFarland, Ilean Fryman, Gladys Kiser, Lucy Reeves, Alice Fryman, Hattie McRoberts and Meri McFarland.

Visitors at the school this month were Lona Kiser, Ruby Haney, James Boyd, Eula Fryman, Charles Kenneth Lloyd, Maude Richardson, Christine Cooper, Pearl Dehart and Mr. Kestley.

We have a Christmas card box. We are making attractive and beautiful cards for each of our friends in school. We are glad to know the mud is drying up so we may get to school much easier. We have been looking for our superintendent out to visit our school, but guess the snow has kept him from coming.

100 PERCENT ATTENDANCE AT PEKINS LAST WEEK

The Perkins school, taught by Mrs. Muri Gregory, was perfect in attendance last week. This is a small school and they do not permit many absences. A few children only have been absent this year and the had good reasons for being absent. A perfect week in attendance means much credit for a school and its teacher.

All Gold-Diggers Aren't Blondes

If you think that all the gold-diggers are blondes and live on Broadway you are wrong, for Captain Tom Emerich will tell you that they are cadets and they live at Wentworth Military Academy, Lexington, Missouri.

Captain Emerich's curiosity was aroused by the increasing number of cadets who have come into his office to consult his Dun and Bradstreet rating book. In interrogating one cadet who came in with a long list of names of business men in several states whose credit rating he wished to ascertain, the captain asked him what he was doing.

"Well, captain, I have dated seventeen girls this past summer," the cadet replied, "and I want to find out which one is the girl's fathers has the most money. It's his daughter that I expect to marry."
