Postal Telegraph has filed, and the Federal Communications Commission at Washington, D. C. has approved, starting reduction in the rate for overnight telegraph service throughout the United States.

According to an announcement received today by Goldie Hayes, Manager, and signed by Clarence H. Kinchey, Chairman of the Board of Postal Telegraph, the new rates will be put into effect by Postal on June 5. The new rate structure reduces drastically the cost of night letter telegrams. It establishes a base of 25 words for which charges are the same or less than the present ten word night message which the new rate structure eliminates within the United States. The present 50-word night letter is also eliminated by the 25-word night letter and the base rate for a night letter is reduced to fifty cents (.50) between the two most widely separated points in the United States. For instance, the present rate for 25-words, sent as a night message between New York and San Francisco, is $.96 and the 50 word night (Continued On Page Three)

Flannery Platform Is Published Again

Commission Of Signature To Platform Of Candidate Cause Republication

In the last issue of the Rowan County News appeared the platform of Lonnie B. Flannery as a candidate for the office of Representative from the Rowan-Bath District, District No. 96. Unfortunately, through an oversight of the News, Mr. Flannery's name was omitted from the signature to the platform. The News is very sorry this occurred and hastens to republish Mr. Flannery's platform in this issue with the proper signature.

Every reader of the Rowan County News is urged to read and study this platform carefully as in it Mr. Flannery sets forth the views and hopes with which he presents his case to the people of Rowan and Bath counties.

Greetings To The Governor

GOVERNOR A. B. CHANDLER

The News joins with the friends of Governor A. B. Chandler in extending to him, on this his first return visit since his election to the high office which he holds, their hearty felicitations and congratulations on the success of his administration.

Makes Perfect Rating During Four Years

Frances Peratt First To Make 32 A's During Four Years High School

For the first time in the history of Breckinridge Training School a student has made a perfect standing of 32 A's throughout her entire high school course. Miss Frances Peratt, who received her diploma at the commencement exercises last Monday, was the honor student during this unusual standing.

Making her entire four years in high school, Miss Peratt has never made a grade lower than A in any subject. Her record is perfect.

Other students in former years have approached this perfect standing but never quite reached it. In 1931, Miss Mabel Williams approached it with 31 A's and 1 B. In 1934 Miss Leora Hogge also made 31 A's and 1 B. Thus to Miss Peratt goes the honor of being the first to make a perfect standing for four school years.

Miss Virginia Nickell, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Clarence E. Nickell has the honor of being the youngest student ever graduated from Breckinridge. Miss Nickell was sixteen years old when she completed the course at Breck on Monday. Miss Peratt and Miss Nickell started to school together ten years ago and completed it together, although sixteen years old when she completed several years at Nicholasville where her father was principal of the high school. The family returned to Morehead last year, where Senator Nickell is Dean of Men.

County News had the pleasure of entertaining the at that a time "Happy" Chandler at dinner on the memorable occasion on which he opened his campaign for Governor. At that time, the News pledged him its hearty and unstinting endorsement.

Since that time we have had no occasion to change our mind, and we feel that events have borne out

First Visit To Morehead Since Election Attracts Crowds To Ceremony

Mr. Blair calls attention to the fact that the pool furnishes the drinking water for the city of Morehead and that swimming in it is absolutely illegal and will be punished according to the law. He says that there has been considerable complaint from citizens of the town and from authorities at the college, on the continuation of the water supply by using the pool for swimming purposes.

There have been numerous offenders, he says, most of whom should know better. He requests that those who have been thus violating the law and endangering the health of the citizens of the community (Continued On Page Two)

WORLD'S THRIFT RECORD

Probably the world's most powerful object lesson in thrift is the extraordinary ranking of America as the leading nation of life insurance ownership. This country contains only seven per cent of the world's population. But Americans own 70 per cent of all the world's life insurance.

Equally astonishing is the growth in popularity of life insurance in this country in only a few years. For instance, in 1900, only one American in every eight had made provision for his dependents and himself through life insurance. Today, every other American is numbered in the ranks of life insurance owners—64,000,000 of them. And this army of provident people have pooled their resources to the extent of creating $104,500,000,000 of life insurance.

These millions of Americans are expressing their American love for freedom—by banding together to achieve individual security—security against leaving dependent families (if they die too soon) and against their own dependents upon others (if they live too long.)

These figures give added emphasis to Life Insurance Week, being observed throughout the United States May 17 to 22. They also lend powerful emphasis to the slogan of the week—"The sooner you plan your future, the better your future will be."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written each week by Rev. B. H. Kazer, Pastor of Baptist Church.

Subject: Preparation for public service. Genesis, Chapters 37, and 39 to 41.

Golden Text: "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings." Prov. 22:29.

We begin today the study of one of the most fascinating characters in the Bible. Let us read the chapters indicated above going on with the notes on this lesson.

Joseph was the older son of Rachel, the only woman Jacob ever loved, and was born after Jacob was ninety years old; hence, he was held especially dear. He was a born leader. Wherever he was placed he went upward in his position. In Potiphar's employ he was soon in charge of his house; a prisoner, he was soon in charge of the other prisoners; and now he stood before Pharaoh.

Let us notice briefly the steps in Joseph's progress and why they came. (1) For one thing, Joseph recognized disappointment as necessary part of life's discipline. He knew that out of trial would come triumph. We all need to recognize that God does his best work on us through our trials and sorrows. (2) Joseph is faithful to all the duties assigned him. He never despised a job because it was small, but did it faithfully, even the drudgery of prison life. He was faithful over a few things, and was made ruler over many. (3) He kept his faith in God and in his early dreams. He never grew hard and cynical over disappointment, but kept his rosy, youthful dreams.

(4) Joseph does not fear to speak in the presence of exalted rulers who have failed. All the court magicians and wise men had failed to interpret the king's dream, and to serve the kingdom at a time when they were most needed. The king needed someone who was far-sighted enough to prevent a national crisis, but his wise men failed him. Joseph knew he had a divine knowledge the rest of them did not possess, and he spoke before them fearlessly. We who are in experience of Christ need to speak boldly today in a time when world "doctors" are failing miserably.

(5) Joseph did not allow himself to become fashioned, according to the practices and customs of heathen Egypt. He was in Egypt, he could not help that, but he was not of it. We who are in this world cannot help that, but if we are the children of God we should not be "of the world." The ship can be in the water with safety, but if the water gets in the ship there is danger. We can be in the world with safety, but if the world gets in us there is danger.

munity to stop at once, otherwise they will be subjected to the course of the law.

Actually he believes that the most of the offenders do it thoughtlessly, and that in most cases only a reminder is necessary. Some few of course offend deliberately, and it's those to whom this warning applies.

to beco both during the spring fire season 800 of these residents reported either to fire towers, CCC camp, or forest officers the time they intended to burn. It is felt that the number of fires has been kept relatively low as these people have cooperated so well by notifying the forest service when they would burn areas endangering timber lands.

The total number of fires up until June 1, 1937 is only about 40 per cent of the total number on the same date in 1936. An intensive program of education through exhibits motion pictures, talks, literature and through law enforcement and the fine cooperation of a large number of residents has done much to make this marked progress possible. It is the aim of the Forest Service to eliminate all man-caused fires on the National Forest, which in turn will mean the possibility of producing timber, protecting water sheds, furnishing homes and food for wild life and making the Forest more attractive to local people and tourists seeking recreation.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse York and sister Garnetta Cumingo of Anderson, Ind., visited at the T. J. Trumbo, the

CHAPTER II

Got your letter two weeks ago, said Dakota casually. I rode in here to the basin yesterday morning. I'd have come down—there for yuh, only I knew you'd want to be alone for a few hours an' get the feel of the earth under yuh once more. Well, light in, Slim; there's plenty of it.

They ate in silence. When the meal was over, Dakota tossed Slim a sack of tobacco and a book of papers. Keep it, he said. I brought plenty.

Slim rolled and lit his cigarette and leaned back against the heap of dunnage. Now tell me, he commanded, everything.

Dakota rolled a smoke himself before answering and squatted on his heels before the fire. Things ain't changed much, he drawled finally. Sarg Brockwell is still Sarg Brockwell, and Spud Dillon is still down business at the same old stand.

I suppose crime disappeared a bout the same time I did? murmured Slim, his low voice bitter.

No, said Dakota softly. It ain't disappeared, Slim. In the past month the Vasco stage has been held up twice, an' the Dot H Dot has lost about a hundred head more cattle. Some folks in Pinnacle have been wonderin' a heap if they didn't make a bad mistake when they sent yuh up.

Slim Loyale laughed curly. They shoulda done their wonderin' a year and a half ago. How's things at the old Circle L, Dakota?

Hout as usual. Since your daddy died, the spread is kinda empty-like. But yore cows—they're yores now, havin' calves. You're pretty well fixed with this world's goods Slim. Yeah, but a pauper with reputation. Did—did Dad figger that I was guilty, Dakota.

Dakota Blue, smothered. Hell, no. Why, not a week before he died, that sanctimonious lar-shark George Arthur, came to see him an' made some crack about it bein' too bad that yuh shoulda felt loyal of the law.

And I thought ole Bart Loyale was gonna crawl right outa bed, sick as he was, an' scarp that lawyer right there. "Damn-yore law" yelled Bart. "That boy is innocent an' yuh know it, Arthur, yuh crooked, lying bastard! Get outa here, 'fore yore pecked out on a board." Don't worry, Slim; yore daddy stood be hind yuh to his last breath.

A long silence fell. Slim's chin was on his chest. Presently he stirred. Yuh seen Mona Hall lately?

Dakota nodded. Saw her day before yesterday. She asked about yuh, Slim. I told her yuh were gettin' out today.

What—what did she say?

Nothin'—with her lips. But she kinda twisted them slim little brown hands of hers an' looked out past me—like she was lookin' at a sunrise an' findin' it good.

Silence again fell, unbroken except for the steady munching of the horses. A sap pocket in a piece of glowing wood snapped sharply, scattering a little cloud of ashes from the fire. The crimson of the sunset sky faded and dusk thickened. A hoar owl boomed hollowly from a neighboring sycamore. Thin and far away a coyote yammered at the first stars.

Slim Loyale got to his feet and dragged a blanket roll from the dunnage heap. He set about spreading them in the very center of the little meadow.

It'll be a heavy dew tonight, Slim, counseled Dakota Blue. Yuh better spread 'em back under the willows where mine are."

Slim laughed softly. I wanna taste that dew once more, Dakota. I wanna feel it on my face, an' I wanna look at the stars a heap. I ain't seen much of 'em for—for a long time."

Shortly before midday, Slim Loyale and Dakota Blue rode into the cow town of Pinnacle. The single street was dusty and wide, and flanked with warped splintery board sidewalks. The buildings were nearly all of frame construction, their high gables throwing blocks of shadow.

The street ran north and south, and at the north end stood a lively stable was Sheriff Jigger Starbuck's office and behind the office stood the jail. The latter was a small, square chubby, which differed in construction from the majority of the buildings inasmuch as it was made of stout fir logs, hauled down from the slopes of the jagged Mineral Mountains to the north.

At the hitching-rail before the sheriff's office, Slim and Dakota dismounted. "Yuh go ahead with yore business, Slim, said Dakota. When yore done, come on over to Spud Dillon's place. I'll be waitin' for yuh there."

Slim nodded, twisted the reins of his mount around the rail, then walked up to the door of the office and knocked. He entered at the summons of a deep, resonant voice. Sheriff Starbuck sat behind a battered, paper-littered desk. He was a tall man of middle age, thin and leathery-brown. His clean-shaven face was hard from the habitual grim set of his jutting jaw. His eyes were a light blue, cold and searching. He showed no evidence of surprise at sight of Slim. Instead, he rose to his feet and thrust forth his hand.

Hell, Slim, he said. Glad to see yuh back.

Slim shook hands. Glad to be back, Jigger. Yuh knew I was comin'?

it was pointed out by the Regional Office. Similarly, a school teacher who becomes a counselor or an athletic director in a privately owned, profit-making summer camp or one who works in any type of commerce or industry included in the provisions of the Social Security Act must have deductions made from his or her wages.

Even in such cases as athletes who may plan professional baseball during his or her wages.

Even in such cases as athletes who may plan professional baseball during the summer, it is necessary for those who are employed to contribute towards their future old-age benefits, according to a statement issued by Benedict Crowwell, Regional Director at Cleveland.

We have received hundreds of letters asking whether temporary workers of the types mentioned are covered by the Social Security Act, Mr. Crowell said.

"The answer is yes; that is, one per cent of the wages of all such workers must be deducted from their pay and matched by an equal contribution on the part of the employer. Both contributions are to be sent to the nearest office of the U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue.

"Even though the earnings of workers in these temporary fields may be relatively small, they are covered by the Federal old-age benefits title of the Social Security Act, and in some instances by unemployment compensation laws in the States of Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky, Mr. Crowell added.

"We shall be glad to advise any person who is in temporary employment as to his status under this portion of the Social Security Act, and believe that all employers should take immediate steps to make sure that they, as well as their employees, are fully informed as to their duties during the period when they have temporary workers. Great difficulty may be encountered if in exact understanding of the status of both employees and employers is delayed and for that reason it is especially desirable that both groups obtain all the facts as speedily as possible," General Crowell concluded.

The more impressive feature of the new overnight rates, however, Miss Hayes, Manager, says, "can be simply stated as follows: The more words written the lower the cost per word. Take the new rate for a 300-word night letter between the East and West Coasts. It will be slightly more than one cent per word or $3.40. Compare that with the present rate for 300 words which is $7.20. That is a reduction of about 53 per cent. On the new basis we carry 300 words from here to Chicago for 1.18 cents, also to New York, Buffalo, Atlanta and San Francisco for 1.80 cents and $3.40 cents, respectively, and the cost is even lower for longer messages."

Harlow And Taylor At Cozy Theatre

"Personal Property" will be at the Cozy Theatre, June 9-10.

Analysis of MGM's latest, "Personal Property," reveals two primary angles that lend themselves to exploitation; the personalities of the stars, Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor, with references to Taylor's array of past roles opposite such stars as Garbo, Barbara Stanwick, Joan Crawford, Janet Gaynor and Eleanor Powell; and the title of the picture.

The fact that Taylor is unquestionably established as the Number One romantic lead of the screen today makes his appearance in this picture with the gorgeous Jean Harlow a most important event that you will find highly profitable.

The fever is on, Robert Taylor, Garbo's lover in "Camille," tries a new technique with gorgeous Jean Harlow.

See the picture and get the word down on the year's newest romance.

The report says:

"We're using two thousand cuts of film daily to keep the screen glowing with the love scenes between those new lovers—Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor."

It is being done frankly to place the telegraph facilities at the disposal of American business and social needs for overnight communications of lesser length. We believe that the new rates will make it practical for business men to telegraph urgent reports, instructions, specifications and other communications in all business branches of the country. The widespread extension of the Postal Telegraph service in terms of cost to the public, I believe, is going to revolutionize the industry."

Miss Hayes states that the complete rate schedule and all information were available at all Postal Telegraph offices May 25 (above world) show business that this new telegraph rate structure can do for them.

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD

He knew the telephone numbers of more beautiful girls than any man in history.

Florenz Ziegfeld knew the telephone numbers of more beautiful girls than any other man living. In his blue Book of Beauty were listed the names, addresses and telephone numbers of thousands of glamorous girls. Fifty or sixty aspiring young Venuses paraded before his critical glance every day.

He was proud of the fact that he was called the Gloria of the American Girl. It was a title richly deserved. He often took some drab little girl no one had ever looked at twice and transformed her on the stage into a dazzling creature of mystery and seduction. From anti-grace—these alone—were the coveted passport to the Ziegfeld stage. The glamor was supplied by Ziegfeld himself.

Ziegfeld was as regal in his extravagance as an Oriental potentate. He squandered millions of dollars on costumes, combing the markets of Europe and India and Asia for the most beautiful fabrics money could buy. Even the lining of his dresses had to be of the finest silk, for he claimed no woman could feel really beautiful unless she just had beautiful cloth against her skin.

He did everything on a lavish scale. Although he sometimes had with hundreds of people he never trouble to dictate a letter. Telegrams and cables fluttered in his wake like autumn leaves in a gale of wind. Wherever he went he carried with him a telegraph blank. He used to get on a train at Grand Central Terminal and use a whole pad of telegraph blanks before he reached 125th street.

Incredible as it seems, he actually sat in the orchestra during rehearsals and sent telegrams to people across the footlights. He sent telegrams to people who were within range of his voice. He once leaned out of his window and yelled at a man in the window opposite. "Say I sent you a telegram. Why haven't you answered it?"

It was almost impossible for him to walk past a telephone booth without stopping to call up a dozen people, and he got out of bed almost every morning at six o'clock in order to telephone his staff.

He could scheme for hours to save seventeen or eighteen dollars, and the next day, he'd drop a hundred thousand dollar bill at Wall Street without batting an eye. He once borrowed five thousand dollars from Ed Wynn and spent that five thousand, borrowed money to hire a private train to carry him across the continent.

He made women feel beautiful by the sheer power of his character and consideration. On opening night every girl in his chorus received a box of flowers from him. Even old and half-demented women who applied to him for jobs were treated with the same consideration he showed the rest.

He paid most of his famous star's an average of $5,000 a week, often, at the end of the season they had more money in the bank than he himself had.

When he started in the show business, chorus girls were getting $30 a week; but under his profligate reign, feminine pulchritude reached a market price of $125 a week.

Ziegfeld's first venture into show business was made at the precocious age of fourteen. Run away from home he became a trick rider and fancy showman in Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

At the age of twenty-five he was cleaning up a fortune as manager of Sadoway the husky strong man of the naughty Nineties.

Two years later, he was in London—broke—without a shilling in his name. He'd staked his luck at Monte Carlo and with a turn of the wheel he had lost his shirt.

Being penniless never worried this great entrepreneur. By the sheer witchery of his manner, he got together another show and sailed back in triumph to America with the most sensational star in Europe—the vivacious, scintillating, populating Anna Held.—the Mae West of her day.

The most canny producers in America had been cabling and pleading with Anna Held to come to New York. They had tempted her with extravagant offers. Yet it was Florenz Ziegfeld, only twenty-seven years old, practically unknown, who walked into her dressing room charmed her to get her name off a contract and started skyrocketing to fame.

Anna Held was an immediate sensation. She took America by storm. Corsets, face powder, hats, perfumes, horses, cocktails, puppies and cigars were named in her honor.

"She was toasted in champagne from coast to coast. And within a year, Florenz Ziegfeld married her. Many years later, after he had divorced Anna Held, he fell statically in love with Billie Burke. The very day he met her, he bought out an entire flower shop and sent the complete stock to her home—sent her everything from sweet peas and orchids and carnations to the orange trees in the window. And when Billie Burke told him that she had tried to thank him by telephone but had not been able to because his line was busy, he had a golden phone installed with a special ring for her private use.

Ziegfeld loved indecision. He hated to make up his mind. He used to keep a box of licorice drops on his desk, and when a friend asked him if he really liked licorice he said, "I'll tell you why I eat them. They're all black, so I don't have to make up my mind which color I like best."

He hired most of the famous comedians in the world for his Follies, but he himself never laughed at their antics. Neither Ed Wynn, nor Eddie Cantor nor Will Rogers could make him crack a smile. He was so cool that his actors gave the nickname of "Ice Water."

Ziegfeld died in 1932 in California, and as he slipped into the delirium of death, he imagined he was directing a revue. He staged it in

The program for Commencement was published in the last issue of the News.

The Baccalaureate service was held at the college auditorium on Sunday morning of this week. Wednesday was alumni day with the usual number of alumni meeting, renewing old acquaintances, and spending the day in activities that reminded them of their college days. The college kept open house throughout the day with an athletic program in the afternoon, a dinner at the cafeteria at six and the annual Alumni Dance in the gymnasium at night. It was a full day of activities and one enjoyed by the alumni.

Exams at the college were held Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

If a man wants immediately to step into success, let him enter that phase of it which has always invited the better minds, the nobler natures. Let him at once become successful by contribution. Just what "does that mean?" It means that he shall successfully do what he is doing. The success of a bakery is its bread; the success of a factory is its product; the success of a job is its completeness and utility. Where are you? Answer that and you will know whether you ever have of your own accord and actually, with conscious intent and understanding mind, contributed to the success of the thing you are

Less Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated. CARDUI, praised by thousands of women, is a "WICK" brand medicine. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.
