Gov. Chandler Gives Address At College

Diplomas And Degrees Conferred on Seniors At Commencement Program Here

Diplomas were presented and degrees conferred on the graduates of the Morehead State Teachers College at the Commencement exercises held in the auditorium last Thursday morning by President Harvey A. Babo. Previous to the presentation of the diplomas and the conferring of the degrees, Governor A. B. Chandler delivered one of the outstanding addresses ever heard on such an occasion.

The academic parade began promptly at 10:30 a. m. with the President, and commencement speaker leading the procession, followed by the candidates for degrees. Dr. G. C. Banks, of the English department of the college presided over the invocation. Music was furnished by the college mixed choir under the direction of Prof. L. H. Horton, and the college symphony orchestra directed by Keith Davis.

Governor Chandler opened his address by referring to the last time he had been in the auditorium on the occasion of the funeral of Judge Allew Y. Young. His address was short and covered the situation happily. He pointed out that he was a product not only of the grade and high schools of Kentucky but of their colleges as well. He called attention to the fact, that because of this connection he was particularly interested in the welfare of the public schools of the state and that under his administration the schools and colleges were receiving the highest respect which they have ever received. He promised continued support during his administration. He said that the schools could furnish the learning, the parents the instruction, and that with the cooperation of the school, the parents and a recognition of the necessity (Continued On Page Five)

Rains Over Week-End Keep Down Drouth Fear

Copious rains over the week-end allayed all fear of drouth for the time being and furnished the ground with ample moisture to last for several days.

Beginning on Thursday of last week, showers and hard rains marked every day over the week-end. Farmers were forced to take vacations from their fields, as they did not please them particularly, as most of them are behind with their planting. They are however, delighted with the prospects for a good crop this season as compared with the past few years, and they say that never before has there been a better prospect for a bumper crop than this season, in spite of the fact that the work has been delayed by the wet ground. One farmer reported that he planted beans on Friday and on Monday they were up.

Hollis Goes To Duke

Dr. E. V. Hollis and family arrived in Morehead on Friday of last week to spend a few days among their numerous friends and former associates, before Dr. Hollis hurried to Duke University where he will teach for the summer.

The Hollis family, whose arrival was expected were greeted by a number of friends, who had gathered at his former home on Wilson Avenue and prepared supper for them. Among those who were on hand were Professor and Mrs. H. C. Hagan and Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Black. A number of other friends also dropped in to greet and wish them during the evening.

The family planned on spending the summer in this city, while Dr. Hollis was in Duke but later decided to leave for Lawrenceburg, Ky., to be with Mrs. Hollis' sister who is employed there.

Dr. Hollis will return to New York in the fall to present his dissertation and receive his Doctorate

Final Day For Sign-Up Of Worksheets Set

Farmers Interested In Conservation For Next Year Urged To Sign Worksheets

June 12 has been set as the final date for preparing worksheets for farms to participate in the 1937 Agricultural Conservation Program. Farmers who have not prepared worksheets by June 12 for their farms and who were not in the 1936 program will not be able to take advantage of the Conservation Program this year. There are 826 farms eligible for the 1937 Program. A few more are expected to become eligible by preparing worksheets this week. A worksheet is a statement of how the farm has been operated in 1936 and during the past few years. From this data the County Committee will assign soil depleting bases and a soil conserving base to the farm. These bases are used to calculate payments for soil building practices and other improvements that lead to soil conservation.

Summer Term Opens Monday

W. W. HORTON

With an expected large enrollment, the first summer term at the Morehead State Teachers College will open on Monday of next week for a five week session, before the opening of the regular terms in the country schools which begins at the middle of July. Advance reservations indicate a heavy enrollment for the summer, and arrangements have been made to care for the students, by the addition of a number of nearby county superintendents to the summer school faculty.

NEW STORE LICENSES MUST BE PURCHASED

July 1 Set As Deadline For Purchase Of License To Operate For Next Year

The Department of Revenue announced today that store license applications for the year 1937-38 are being mailed to all persons required to produce such licenses who are known to the Department, and advised that such applications would be considered a request for payment which must be made on or before July 1, 1937.

The law requires all merchants to secure a 1937-38 store license by July 1. Single store units are required to pay two dollars license tax. The tax is graduated as the number of stores under one management increases. A 20 per cent penalty is applicable to delinquent payments.

Assistant Attorney General J. W. Jones recently ruled that manufacturers were not subject to the Kentucky store license tax. In his opinion, General Jones pointed out that the courts had distinguished between manufacturers and merchants and that the Kentucky license was imposed upon merchants only. However, a manufacturer is liable for tax if he sells merchandise he himself does not manufacture.

The Board passed the following resolution in regard to teachers:

Foresters Are Active In Drive To Stop Fires

Azin Request Property Owners To Notify Camp When Startling Fires

On charges preferred by District Ranger Hilary, Joe Gregory was fined $100.00 on a charge of negligently permitting a fire which had started on his own land to escape control and to burn into government forests. The trial was held before County Judge Charles E. Jennings on Monday of this week. Mr. Gregory came to court weeping by the request of Ranger Hilary and readily admitted the charge. He explained that he had conformed to the law in every detail and that he had notified the officials of the CCC camp when he started the fire. However after starting the blaze a strong wind came up and he was unable to control the fire. It escaped and burned into the government timber.

Mr. Gregory was charged under the state law with permitting a fire to escape his control and given the lightest sentence possible. The law provides that the fine may be anywhere from $10.00 to $100.00. The Federal law is much more stringent as it provides for a prison sentence of from one to two years and a fine of $100.00. It was for that reason that Mr. Gregory was given the benefit of the state law and assessed the lowest fine possible under that law.

Mr. Hilary who was accompanied by the legal representative of the Forestry department, Mr. J. C. Howie, stated that he was not the purpose nor intention of the department of embarrassing Mr. Gregory, who showed his intention of cooperating with the law, but that it was necessary and important to prove to everyone that the government means business and that fire will not be permitted to destroy the work that has taken years to build up.

Fire regulations are that the one who builds a fire on his own land must first notify the authorities of the camp. They are building the fire. This is not so much for the purpose of protection, as it is to keep the camp from sending a squad of false alarm. They are required when they do set a fire to provide ample protection and (Continued On Page Two) for these young folks to see some of the noted places in Kentucky.

The first place of interest, was the high bridge. The stop was made at the Dix River Dam, and there should have been many things learned concerning electricity considering the many questions asked. Fort Harrod proved to be very interesting place to visitors. Since so much history is connected with the fort. The new memorial, and the old relics in the old fort made the old time mode of living very plain to those who had never seen such relics but had only read about them. The Old Kentucky Home was an inspiration and brought back memories of the study of Stephen Foster. Very gallantly the song was sung. Then on to Hogenessville where Lincoln was born. The old spring was visited and also his boyhood home. The next day was spent at Mame (Continued On Page Two)

Silent Barriers At College

For the official opening of the summer season at the College the offering is a tremendous dramatic spectacle entitled "Silent Barriers" and featuring Richard Arlen and Lili Palmer.

The story deals with the building of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. The battles fought to construct this gigantic enterprise from coast to coast, in the face of dissension and financial crises in the board room with sterner opposition from mountain and swamp at the rail head makes the show compare with the great epic features treating the conquest of the American continent. The real drama, lies in the life of the men who built the road, where the railroad settlement, filled with rough and riotous workmen, while a pioneer party seeks a pass through the Rockies provide plenty of thrills and adventure and there is deeper drama in the sight of a locomotive sinking, with its newly laid track, into a morass which bars the line of the road. Richard Arlen, in the role of a gambler, and his friend Steve, go to the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific hunting for easy money. There they become involved in a roughhouse at a saloon and are sentenced to 30 days work on the road. Arlen, falls in love with the gang-boss's daughter and finds work more stimulating than gambling. Tremendous difficulties finally threaten to cause the railroad to swing over the United States and merge with an American road, but Arlen and J. Farrell McDonald take the lead of a party who overcome the difficulties and bring the road to completion.

For Friday, June 18th, one of the greatest stories of all time will be the theme of the picture at the College when "The Prince and the Pauper" will be the feature.

Mrs. Jack Bond and granddaughter Phillis Jean of Ashland are spending this week with her sister Mrs. C. O. Leach and family. Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Falls and daughter Cherry and her mother Mrs. Cherry of Bowling Green left Wednesday for a visit in Nashville Tenn.

This motion was passed in accordance with Rule 64 in the Health laws of Kentucky and sections 2049, 2047 A-1 Kentucky Statutes. There was also a motion passed that children found to have contagious or infectious diseases be excluded from school until they could present a health certificate signed by the Health Officer of Rowan County or a reputable physician.

The census report of the school year of 1937-38 compiled by the Attendance Officer was presented to the Board. This report showed an increase of 600 pupils over the census of last year. The report was accepted and confirmed by the Board.

Forest Fire
 sufficient men to take care of it and prevent its spread to other property. A charge has been preferred also against a citizen of Lewis county who started a fire on his own land in that county, but permitted it to escape his control and burn over into the government reserve in Rowan county. His trial will be held in this county.

The Forestry department has established a wonderful record in fighting the number and size of fires in this section. When the camp was established at Rodburn four years ago, fires were the rule not the exception. Today they are the exception, not the rule. The citizens have learned cooperation, as well as the importance to their own land of keeping the fires down to a minimum.

The forestry department appreciates the spirit of cooperation evinced by every citizen in keeping down these fires which in the past years have destroyed millions of dollars worth of valuable timber, not only on government property but on private tracks as well. They wish to urge the citizens to continue to cooperate with them in building up the local forest as well as private tracks by keeping these fires down and eventually to eliminating them altogether.

Mr. Gregory deserves endorsement for the manual manner in which he cooperated with the forestry department, first in notifying the camp authorities that he was setting the fire, and later in coming before the court willingly and paying his fine promptly. It will be recognized that there was no other course for the forestry agents to pursue than to enforce the law and Mr. Gregory recognized that fact.

Trip To Cave
 moth Cave. The three hour route was chosen, and with matches and lanterns Curley Barker didn't let a crack or crevice escape that he didn't examine and wondered how it got that way. Friday night was spent in a hotel at Cave City where a show was enjoyed. At Lexington Mr. Caskey drove to the Calumet Farm, which is supposed to be one of the finest farms in the U. S., out to the Veterans Hospital and to the Narcotic Farm.

This trip will be long remembered as the last trip this group will take together as seniors. Cards were shuffled and names called to see if all were present, all the known songs were sung, the radio played continuously and every minute was enjoyed.

The money was made for the trip by giving the senior play which brought $90.00, which paid most of the expenses. The money could not have been used to better advantage for the seniors, as it not only was an improvement in their education, but gave them a good time as well. They may have many more sight seeing trips together, as they go through the next four years at the college.

The Play That "Wasn't Worth Bothering About" Became The Greatest Drama Since Hamlet

SOMERSET MAUGHAM

What would you say in the greatest stage play ever written? When leading critics of New York voted by secret ballot, on the ten greatest plays in all time, the first honors went to Hamlet, written more than three hundred years ago. And they decided that the second greatest play ever written was not Macbeth nor King Lear nor the Merchant of Venice, but Rain. Yes, Rain, that tempestuous drama of sex and religious fighting tooth and claw in the South seas—the play based on a short story by Somerset Maugh-

ham. Maugham has made $200,000 out of rain. Yet he didn't spend even five minutes writing the play. This is how it happened: He wrote a short story called Sadie Thompson. He didn't think much of the story—but one night, John Colton was staying at his house, and Colton wanted something to read till he fell asleep. Maugham handed him the proofs of Sadie Thompson. Colton was fascinated with the story. It thrilled him. He got out of bed and paced the floor, and in his imagination that night he saw it as a play—a drama that was destined to become immortal. The next morning he rushed to Somerset Maugham. "There's a great play in that story," he told him. "I've been thinking about it all night. Put me to sleep, eh? I didn't sleep a wink!"

But, Maugham wasn't impressed. "A play?" he said in his crisp British voice. "Oh yes, possibly—a morbid sort of play. Might run six weeks. But it isn't really worth bothering about. Not really." And the play that he didn't think worth bothering about made him a fifth of a million dollars.

When the play was finished, several producers turned it down. They were positive it would fail. Then Sam Harris accepted it. He wanted it for a young actress named Jeanne Eagles. But the agent for the play objected. He wanted someone who was better known.

Finally Jeanne Eagles got the part and played Sadie Thompson with a passion and power that made her the sensation of Broadway. She played to packed houses for four hundred and fifteen rip-roaring performances.

Somerset Maugham has written many distinguished books such as Of Human Bondage, The Moon and Sixpence, and The Painted Veil; and he has written a score of successful dramas. But he didn't write his own most celebrated play. Some people call him a genius now; but he was a financial failure for eleven years after he started writing. Think of it! This man who was destined to make a million dollars as an author earned only five hundred dollars a year for the first eleven years that he turned out stories and novels. Sometimes he went hungry. He tried to get a job writing editorials on a salary basis; but he couldn't. "I had to keep on writing," Maugham told me, "because I just literally couldn't hold down a job."

His friends told him he was a fool to keep on trying to write. He had already been graduated from medical college, so they urged him to forget fiction and practice medicine. But nothing could swerve him from his determination to write his name large across the pages of English literature.

Bob Ripley of Believe It Or Not fame, once said to me: "A man will work and slave in obscurity for ten years and then become famous in ten minutes. That is about what happened to both Ripley and Maugham.

Here is how Somerset Maugham got his first break. Somebody's play had failed in London, and the manager of the theatre was looking around for something to replace it. He wasn't looking for a hit—just any old thing would do to fill in until he could get a real play into rehearsal. So he fished around in his desk, and pulled out a play by Somerset Maugham. Lady Frederick, it was called. He had had it in his desk for a year; he had read it; it wasn't much of a play—he knew that. But it might do for a few weeks. He put it on—and the miracle happened. Lady Frederick was a smash hit. It set all London talking. It tickled England as nothing had since the sparkling dialogue of Oscar Wilde.

Immediately every theatre manager in London begged for a play by Somerset Maugham. He dug old manuscripts out of his desk; and within a few weeks, three of his plays were playing to capacity houses.

Royalties came pouring in in a golden flood. Publishers fell over each other bargaining for the work of this new-genius. Society showered him with invitations; and after eleven years of oblivion, Somerset Maugham found himself the toast of Mayfair drawing rooms.

Maugham told me that he never written after one o'clock. He says his brain goes dead in the afternoon. He writes in a penthouse on top of his Moorish villa on the French Riviera. He always smokes his pipe and reads philosophy for an hour before he starts to write.

He told me that he isn't superstitious—nevertheless he has the sign of the Evil Eye stamped on the bindings of his books. He has the same curious design in his family plate. He has it in his stationery and on his playing cards. He has it carved on the mantel above the fireplace, and he even has it carved above the entrance to his villa. "But, when I asked him if he really believed in it, he merely smiled."

CHAPTER THREE

Starbuck nodded and poked a leg sticking envelope lying on the desk. "Got word yesterday. What you aim to do, Slim?"

"Go out to the Circle L. an' get to work."

"Glad to hear that. Was afraid you'd come back with the idea of startin' trouble. An' that'd be bad with yuh on parole."

"Yuh lips tightened. 'I ain't want to turn the other cheek. Jigger.'" he said softly. "Remember, the human certain folks in this neck of the woods gonna me a dirty deal. I ain't exactly gonna kiss 'em yuh. I run into 'em, but I know what parole means."

"The first sign of trouble? You ain't no hell. Well, I aim to do the best I can. But if some folks start trompin' on my toes, I'll see that they get off. Yuh can't blame me for that."

"But blamin' yuh for nothin' Slim. But my personal feelin's ain't runnin' one little bit in this. It's the law yuh're beholdin' to. So yuh want to work yore step."

"Yuh laughed a little harshly. 'Yuh still got ice water for blood, ain't yuh? You're a funny guy. Jigger. Sometimes I think yore white an' sometimes I ain't so shore.'"

Starbuck shrugged without of fense. "I took my oath to uphold an' enforce the law. It ain't me to question how it works. I aim to do the best I can."

"Yuh would," returned Slim tersely. "even if it broke yore own heart an' ruined yore best friend. Well, I didn't come in here to get into a argument. I was told to report here to yuh every two weeks, and I'll do it—for the next eighteen months."

"After that, I'm my own boss again. An' after eighteen months certain folks in these parts are gonna find that a wolly wolf has come back to live with 'em. Nobody can steal a year an' a half of my life, blast my reputation, and get away with it. Now I'll thank you for yur guns, Jigger. I suppose yuh still got 'em?"

"I've got 'em" nodded Starbuck. "But I'd rather yuh wouldn't wear 'em. Slim. They'll be a temptation—a bad temptation, as long as we're hangin' on yore hip. If yuh go to throwin' 'em, it's hard tellin' just how yuh'll end up."

"That's my pie," said Slim grimly. "I want 'em."

Starbuck shrugged again, crossed to a little clothes closet and lifted down a pair of cartridge belts, carrying two heavy, holstered Colts. He handed them to Slim, who buckled them about his waist, as he stepped to the door. "Much obliged, Jigger, he said over his shoulder. "See yuh two weeks from now."

Loyale left the sheriff's office and started to cross the street. A buckboard was whirling up from the south end of the street, drawn by a fast-stepping pair of bang-tail mustangs. A girl was driving it alone, but on either side jogged two mounted men. Slim recognized the trio immediately. The girl was Mona Hall. The two men were J. Sarg Brockwell and his son, Leo. Slim stiffened and he went a little white about the lips. For a moment his impulse was to pull his hat low over his eyes, lower his head and hurry across the street. But a surge of burning defiance forestalled this truant weakness. So he watched them quietly, rolling and lighting a cigarette with a steady hand.

They were almost opposite him before the girl saw him. For a moment she stared. Then with one little twist of her slender shoulders, she set the brake, leaped the reins about it and jumped to the ground. She ran to him, lightfooted in khaki blouse and divided skirt.

Her hair, where it escaped in tuft tendrils from beneath her dusty Stetson, was crispy brown. Her eyes were blue and heavily lashed, her nose short and straight, her lips generous and soft. And the blood flushed rich in cheeks and throat of a smooth, velvety tan.

"Slim," she explained. "Slim Loyale—oh, it's good to see you! Slim, a little shaky, took both her outstretched, gauntled hands in his. "Yuh really mean that, Mona?" he muttered huskily.

"Mean it?" she cried. "Ineed I do mean it! If you need further convincing—there."

Before Slim could think, she had stepped close to him, risen on her tiptoes and kissed him. "Satisfied?" Her smile was a little tremulous.

For a moment Slim could not answer. "It's worth goin' through hell—to come back to heaven," he muttered finally. "Mona, yore a little thoroughbred, same as always. But yuh'll be ruinin' yore reputation, kissin' an ex-convict."

Mona stamped one little, boot-foot. "Bosh! Don't mention that word to me again. You are just an innocent man who has gotten a mighty shady deal. And if I can't kiss my old pal hello, I want to know why."

"I—I'm glad you feel that way about the innocent part, Mona. Some folks don't agree with yuh."

"Other folks be hangin'!" she retorted spitefully. "I know you, Slim Loyale, better than anybody else. I

Good Wisecrack Mae West Has

Humorous writers and comedians so the story goes, are usually pretty morose people because it's a tough life being funny. But Mae West, who rates as one of America's greatest method all her own in creating humor—and you may be assured it doesn't make her morose.

Miss West relies almost entirely upon situations which arise during the filming of her picture to furnish cues for humor and that's one of the reasons they fit so snugly into the action, are timed so perfectly and are "pulled" for what they are worth and not a second longer.

This fact is noticeable almost immediately in "Go West Young Man," her latest comedy, in which she appears with Warren William, Randolph Scott, Lyle Talbot and others at the Cozy Theatre Sunday and Monday, June 13-14. "Go West Young Man" is full of wisecracks and funny situations which never appear in the scrip, and they go into Mae's mouth mainly because the curvaceous star thought them up of the spur of the moment. And it has been noticeable in her pictures too.

For instance, the line "Peel me a ginger," which became one of America's favorite wisecracks, after Mae introduced it in "She Done Him Wrong," came about in this way.

"I ought to be wrew up together. Let's talk of other things. Yuh'll be going out to the Circle L. I suppose?"

Slim nodded. "Soon as I can rustle up Dakota Blue, He's over in the Wild Horse Saloon."

"Then I want you to come over home and see me this afternoon. Slim. There's a lot to talk about. You'll come won't you?"

"Try an' keep me away," grinned Slim. "I reckon I ain't forgot the trail."

"That's better," she said softly. "I was afraid you would be changed in some terrible manner. I want to see my old pal, Slim Loyale, not some hard-boiled stranger. Now I'll be getting along. Don't forget—seven o'clock."

Again her slim, strong little fingers tightened. Then she went back to the buckboard, climbed in and asked off the brake. She waved to him as the broncos broke into a run. Slim watched her until she had lifted the rig in front of Ace Langley's general store and disappeared from sight through the shadowy doorway. Then he sighed deeply and relit his cigarette, which had gone cold during her greeting.

Suddenly he remembered the men who had been riding with Mona. When he looked for them he saw that they had disappeared in front of the Wild Horse Saloon and were just entering it. Slim's lips tightened and his eyes grew black, but he crossed the street and entered the place unannounced.

There were just five men in the Wild Horse when Slim entered. Dakota Blue was there, talking across the bar with Spud Dillon, the short, fat and jolly jockey proprietor. Then there was old Joe Roemer, a bronx-brown old mule-skinner who did the sampling for Dillon. Joe was sanding down the cues behind the pool table.

Miss West thought this amusing and in a spot where the script called for her to look bored and nothing else, she injected the line—and it stuck.

In a sequence of "Go West Young Man," Warren, William, her press agent, is trying to get her mind off Randy Scott. He hands her an old-fashioned stere-opticon. It so happened that there was a picture of sitting Bull in the apparatus.

"H-m," said Mae, "not bad for a guy who has been sitting all his life."

That line, too, stayed in the picture.

The result is a much funnier and more alive picture than called for in the original script.

I see where West Liberty is going to have a new county jail. Won't that be an awful waste of money? Just think of spending $25,000 for a jail in a dry county! Why don't they spend that money for a jail in Rowan county, or some other county where they sell whiskey? (legally).

PROVIDE THE EXTRA MARGIN OF SAFETY ON THE SPEEDWAY OR THE HIGHWAY

THOUSANDS said that tires could not stand the rigors of the track. They said cars had been built with greater speed, turns in the track had been repaved with granite-like surface, yet Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires setting a new record of 113.58 miles per hour on one of the hottest days in the history of the Indianapolis track.

Think of the terrific impact on these tires as the cars roared into the treacherous turns and out again. Tons of force straining, pulling, and twisting inside the tire, yet not one cord loosened, not one tread separated from the cord body—all because Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process, successfully counteracted the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life.

You will never drive your car at these record-breaking speeds, but for the safety of yourself and family you need the safest, strongest and most dependable tires. Come in today. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires that money can buy.
