THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written each week by Rev. B. R. Kase, Pastor of Baptist Church.

Subject: Mutual Helpfulness in The Family. Genesis 45:16 to 50:26. Golden Text: "Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. 4:32. I am sorry we missed last Sunday's lesson. (It was written but failed to reach the paper). Including this week's lesson we have had three of the finest portrayals of what family life should be that I have ever seen. Joseph is the model brother, and the Golden Text for this lesson expresses his character. Through sorrow and adversity God took Joseph into Egypt, and there he witnessed the terrible agonies of sin. There also, God gave him the revelation of Pharaoh's dream, and the prophecy of the years of plenty and the years of Egypt. This brought him to the position of Prime Minister of Egypt. The famine drove his brothers from Canaan down to Egypt to buy corn. They unknowingly bowed in the presence of their brother Joseph, and he decided with them in such a way as to bring their sin before them. Thus he paved the way for confession, forgiveness, and the revelation of himself as their brother when they were reunited. And thus he was prepared to save his family from starvation during the famine.

The lesson for today climaxes the book of Genesis with the pull of divine assurance and the push of famine, there was nothing for Jacob to do but to go to Egypt; so into Egypt he went. There he was met with favor and friendship because of the influence of his good son. All Jacob's people were settled as one united family in Goshen, a fertile and well-watered part of Egypt. Every one, even Joseph, recognized Jacob's headship of the family, and they enjoyed such family fellowship, mutual love, helpfulness, and prosperity that for seventeen years no family strife is recorded. Then Jacob died at the age of one hundred and forty-seven. As once the question arose: Will family harmony continue with the father gone? The answer was in Joseph's character and it furnished the climax of the Book of Genesis. Joseph was guileless. While others plotted and schemed he dealt in an honest, straightforward way. This quality won him his place in Egypt and helped him to unite his family.

Joseph was frank. His word was good. He never covered the truth for personal favor. Joseph was tactful. He never "blew" up under pressure. In the case with Potiphar's wife he never exposed her injustice to him. Result, he won back the chief captain's friendship. Always he was considerate and tactful.

Joseph was devout. At every turn in life we see him going to God: "I fear God," said he, and this was the secret of his power and usefulness. Joseph was pure. Lust, hatred, revenge and corruption had no place in his thinking. In Canaan and in Egypt he kept himself pure in an impure environment.

Here is an example of what God can do with a completely surrendered life. Here is evidence that grace can redeem man and make him worthy to bear the image of God. The book of Genesis also has the purpose of giving us a model salvation. It is clearly exhibited in the story of Joseph and Moses, both of whom were types of Christ. But that will have to remain for another lesson.

Old Age Assistance (Continued From Page One)

Menfee has 113 and Elliott has 109. The average grant in Rowan county is $8.53. The total amount coming into Rowan county each month at present as the result of the Old Age Assistance grant is $1877.41. This money all goes directly to the needy old people of the community and county and has undoubtedly aided the county in the solution of many of its problems and a great share of its expense.

The month of June has seen the department at Frankfort catch up with the work, after the delay caused by the big flood in January. They are now prepared to handle the cases as rapidly as they are referred up and sent to.

Study Made Of Road System

A study is being made of the entire road system within the Cumberland National boundary which will ultimately culminate in a network of transportation facilities which will enable fire crews to reach fires within an hour after they have been discovered and reported, was the statement made today by B. F. Hemingway, Forest Supervisor.

An inventory of the roads, good and bad, has been made in McCreary, Whitley, Pulaski and Laurel counties. Engineers are at present working sections of Rockcastle and Jackson counties. This preliminary inventory will continue until all possible routes in the Forest have been investigated. When the data consisting of distance, travel time and nature of next required construction has been compiled, a study will be made to determine logical routes that will provide facilities for our control of the forest fires. Recreational, possibilities and other Administration Use will be given consideration in the study now under way. Marked handicap now existing, due to the lack of good roads on the National Forest, are fast being overcome. At present there are more than 300 miles of good road construction, of which about 50 per cent is completed. Roads are built for all-weather travel which involves the construction above the high water mark where roads are in the valley and good bridges at stream crossings.

Leather Gun
by Harry W. Westbrook

Sarg Brockwell and his son had swung up to the bar near the door and Spud Dillon was just moving down toward them when Slim entered. But at sight of Slim, Dillon seemed to forget all about the Brockwells. His fat, red face broke into a wide, delighted grin and one pudgy hand shot across the bar.

Slim's face lit up delightedly. Slim Loyale, yuh dangled young whip, how are yuh, Spud? Puh herther? Gosh, I'm glad to see yuh.

Slim knew Spud Dillon well, and he knew that Spud meant every word of his greeting. So he wrung Dillon's hand heartily and smiled. An' I'm shore glad to see yuh, Spud yuh fat ole duffer. I do believe yuh've been losin' weight.

Spud guffawed. Oh, shore I am. I've only taken on twenty more pounds since I saw yuh last, Slim. Have a drink. I'm buyin.

As Dillon turned for bottle and glasses, a silver dollar was rung on the bar. Then a cold, sneering voice sounded. When yuh get through makin' over yuh jailbird friend, Dillon, we'd like some service.

Slim caught his breath in a little hiss and whirled. His face was white, and his lip a tight, straight line. He made a queer rasping sound in his throat and he stepped away from the bar, crouching.

Brockwell, he granted thickly,

Shut up Slim! It was Dakota Blue who spoke. His hand locked on Slim's shoulder and he pulled the young fellow back, stepping between him and Brockwells. Remember yore parole, kid, he muttered 'I'll handle this.

Dakota walked toward the Brockwells. Sarg Brockwell was a big man, dark of hair and swarthy of with a little wrywonder on his skin. Sarg Brockwell's face was broad with high cheek bones and little, glinting black eyes. His lips were thick, and in repose were a continual, confident grin, disclosing two rows of teeth, starting in their size and whiteness. As Spud Dillon had said one time, I never look at them teeth of Sarg Brockwell but what I think of a graveyard.

Leo Brockwell was smaller than his father, with the same swarthy coloring and black eyes. But Leo's mouth was thin, sarcastic and sneering, twisting up at one corner. He was built on the lithe, feline lines of a panther, and he moved with the same slinking walk.

His hands on his hips, Dakota Blue stopped a yard from the Brockwells. Which one of yuh made that crack? he demanded coldly.

Yes, by jimminy, yelled Spud Dillon, his round face scarlet with anger, lemme tell yuh something Sarg Brockwell I don't like yuh or yore no-good son or nothin about yuh, savvy? I choose my own friends an' to hell with yuh! yuh've had yore last drink over this bar. Yore money ain't worth a damn here, from now on. Chaw on that!

Neither of the Brockwells paid any attention to Dillon. They were watching Dakota Blue. Well, I'm waitin, drawled Dakota. Which one of yuh made that crack?

Leo's lips twisted. I did, he drawled. What's it to yuh.

Dakota's fist moved with startling speed. It landed with a spit on young Brockwell's mouth and he went over backward, clawing at his gun. Al Dakota's movement, Sarg Brockwell had jumped back, his right hand flashing to his hip. Thrown a little off balance by his blow, Dakota lagged on his draw, and he looked as if Sarg Brockwell had him dead to rights.

Here Joe Rooney stepped into the game. At the first hint of hostilities, Joe had slipped away from the pool table, a cue gripped in his hands, his faded old eyes glinting purposefully. And now, as Sarg Brockwell threw down on Dakota, Joe jammed the cue between Sarg Brockwell's ankles and gave it a violent twist.

Brockwell, his feet cut from under him, cursed raucously as he fell forward, and his gun rammed flame and smoke into the floor. Dakota's return shot, loosed as Brockwell was falling, cut through his shoulder of Brockwell's shirt, just nicking the heavy muscles.

Before Brockwell could straighten himself, Dakota stepped forward and kicked the gun from his hand.

Leo Brockwell, dazed and bleeding, was mumbling curses and fumbling at his gun. As he raised it, Joe Rooney slammed him across the wrist with his cue. The gun tumbled to the floor, where Dakota Blue snapped it up.

Dakota stepped back. "A'right, Joe, he drawled. Let em up. I got their stingers. An' much obliged, Joe. That was quick, heady work."

Sarg Brockwell lurched to his feet and dragged Leo up beside him. A little smear of blood showed on Sarg's shoulder. And before anyone could speak further, Jigger Starbuck came lunging through the swinging doors, a drawn gun in his hand.

What's goin on in here? he snapped. Loyale are yuh in trouble. Hardly, answered Dakota, smiling thinly. Not quite so fast, Starbuck. Damned if yuh don't act like yore just waitin a chance to try an' hang somethin' on Slim.

For a moment a wary film seemed to shadow Starbuck's eyes. Then he gripped himself. "Well, what's wrong then?" he demanded. "Who did that shootin'?"

"I did—part of it," answered Dakota. "I just nicked Sarg, darra the luck. He blew a hole in Spud's blood."

"Yetah, I can see that," snapped Starbuck testily. "But how'd they trouble start? Who's responsible for this?"

"He is," bawled Spud Dillon, still bubbling with wrath and pointing at Leo. "He made a dirty crack at Slim. He did it just on purpose I'm bettin, I try to get Slim to make a gun play, knowin' that if the kid did his parole would be busted sky-high. But Dakota stepped in an' wallpiped him one. Then Sarg pulled his gun first. He'd 'a' got Dakota too, if Joe Rooney hadn't tripped him up with a cue. Joe, I'm raisin yore wages for that."

"Listens good," growled Starbuck, stepping over to Slim. "Lemme see yore guns, Loyale."

"Let him have 'em Slim," cautioned Dakota. "Shore, I'm beginnin' to see through lots of things."

"Meanin' just what, Blue?" Starbuck thrust forward Slim's guns, "What's it mean to you? returned Dakota easily. "Don't get too touchy, Starbuck, or folks will begin thinkin' things."

Starbuck licked his lips, then turned to Slim. One after the other he twitched over Slim's guns, punched out the shells and squinted through the barrels. As he returned them, he frowned at Sarg Brockwell. "Go easy on startin' things Brockwell, he ordered. "An' tell that cub of yore to button his lip. I won't stand for noable around here—none whatever."

Dakota, watching Sarg and Starbuck carefully, thought he caught just a glint of understanding pass in the quick glances they exchanged. Brockwell nodded. "Call it our fault this time, he growled. "But we ain't forgettin' at no time. An' that goes for yuh an' yuh," he snapped, indicating both Spud Dillon and Joe Rooney.

Flagg Paints Forest Cartoon

To aid the Forest Service in its campaign to halt the vast economic and recreational losses that follow in the wake of forest fires that sweep over 40 million acres each year, James Montgomery Flagg, noted painter, has presented to the United States Government an original painting as his personal contribution to the cause of fire prevention, the U. S. Department of Agriculture announced today.

The painting depicts Uncle Sam in the uniform of a Forest Ranger pointing a finger toward a burning forest, over the title "Your Forests, Your Fault, Your Loss." It was Mr. Flagg's "I want You," called by the contemporary press "the greatest war cartoon of all time," that established the familiar Flagg "Uncle Sam." More than four million copies of this work were distributed by the government and publications with a circulation of more than ten times that number reproduced it many in full page size. The original painting now hangs in the Smithsonian Museum in Washington.

Following the acceptance of the painting by President Roosevelt at the White House on June 10, "Your Forests, Your Fault, Your Loss" begins a nation-wide tour. Through the aid of cooperation agencies poster copies of the painting are to be distributed throughout the country.

F. A. Silcox, chief of the forest service, commenting upon the forest fire prevention painting, said: "Famous for his war posters, 'I Want You, 'Armies,' 'Tell it to the Marines,' 'Don't Read History, Make It,' and 42 others which he gave to the Government during the World War, Mr. Flagg has dedicated his latest war poster to the war against forest fires."

Mr. Flagg has gone straight to the essential point in the problem of fire control, the human element. His title tells the whole story in rapid-fire style. America's forests are literally "Your forests. Forests, no matter whether they are under private, state or federal ownership influence the daily lives of millions of people directly dependent for a livelihood on forest products, and upon additional millions who use the forests for hunting, fishing, camping, and other forms of recreation. Green forests protect watersheds; exert a powerful control on the secure of floods.

The second part of Mr. Flagg's title, "Your Fault," means just what 90 percent of all forest fires in the nation are man-caused. Because they are caused by man, they are preventable.

"It may reasonably be said that when a forest burns, everybody loses. Mr. Flagg has made a valuable contribution in the fight against forest fires which burn annually over an area as large as the entire state of Washington.

CLARENCE DARROW

A Small-Town Insult Made Him The Greatest Criminal Lawyer of His Time

Nearly three-quarters of a century ago, a school teacher boxed the ears of a little boy because he was restless and frigid and squirming in his seat. He boxed his ears so that he cried all the way home. He was only five years old at the time, but he felt that he had been treated with cruelty and injustice. He learned to hate cruelty and injustice with a hatred that has kept him fighting all his life.

That boy's name was Clarence Darrow, today probably the best known criminal lawyer in America, and certainly the greatest lawyer of his time. His name has flashed across every newspaper in the land, and again in bold headlines across every newspaper in the land. He is a crusader, a rebel, a fighter, and a champion of the underdog.

The first case he ever handled is still talked about by the old timers in Ashabula, Ohio. The burning issue involving nothing more vital than the ownership of a second hand set of harness worth five dollars. But to Clarence Darrow there was a principal at stake. In justice had raised its snarling head and the foug as he would have fought a Bengal tiger. He was paid only five dollars to fight the case, but he fought it at his own expense through seven courts for seven years—and won it.

Darrow says he has never been ambitious for money or prestige. He says he has always been a lazy cuss. He started out in life teaching in a country school. One day an incident happened which changed his whole career. There was a blacksmith in town who studied law when he wasn't busy shoeing horses. Clarence Darrow heard this blacksmith argue a law case in the tinsmith shop. He was fascinated with the wit and eloquence of these country spellbinders. He loved a scrap himself, so he borrowed the blacksmith's law books and began to study law. On Monday he would take his pupils were studying geography or pages of his Blackstone.

He admits he might have remained a country lawyer all his days if something hadn't happened to goad him into action.

He and his wife decided to buy a small house in Ashabula, Ohio, from a dentist. The price was thirty five hundred dollars. Darrow drew and that, by the way, was all he had in the world) and agreed to pay the rest in yearly installments. The deal was almost finished when the dentist's wife refused point blank to sign the papers.

"See here, young man," she said scornfully, "I don't believe you'll ever earn thirty five hundred dollars in all your life."

Darrow was furious. He refused to live in such a town. So he struck the dust of Ashabula off his feet and headed for Chicago.

His first year in Chicago, he made only three hundred dollars—not even enough to pay his own rent. But the next year he made ten times as much—three thousand dollars—as a special attorney for the city.

When Mr. Luck seemed to change rapidly to come my way." Before long he was general attorney for the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company and well on his way to a moneymaker career. A strike of Hatred Rites! Bloodshed! Darrow's sympathies were on the side of the strikers. When Eugene Debs, head of the railroad union was called to trial, Darrow threw up his job and instead of defending the railroads, he defended the strikers. That was the first of Darrow's fiery sensational trials—every one of them a milestone in court room history. Take for example the famous case of Leopold and Loeb, confessed murderers of little Bobby Frank. Public opinion was so shocked, so horrified, at the brutality of the crime that the defense of the row undertook when Clarence Darrow was revealed and the persecuted and called worse than a criminal for daring to defend the "what I could against the wave of hatred and malice. No client of mine has ever been put to death and if that should ever happen I feel it would almost kill me. I have never been able to read the story of an execution. I always left it possible on the day of a hanging. I am strongly against killing."

Society makes criminals, he says, and any man might be guilty of any crime.

Darrow himself has known what it is to be on trial. He was once accused of bribing a jury, and had to "listen" to his own powerful eloquence in his own defense. The most touching expression of gratitude he ever experienced was during his own trial. A former client of his met him and the pallows what he was in trouble and now you are in trouble and I'd like to help you out, I'll be glad to kill the chief witness against you and it won't cost you a cent."

A few years ago, Darrow published a book, the story of his life and I remember I stayed awake far into the night reading the chapters in which he outlined his philosophy of life.

"I am not sure of how much or how little I have really accomplished," he said. "I have blundered on my way and I have snatched as much enjoyment as possible from the stringy tates. Each day must be sufficient unto itself, keeping in view only the direction and the journey's end. I cannot realize that I am old. Where can the long day have gone? It has been only a short time since I started on the road with all the world before me and immeasurable time ahead for the journey I was to take; now the pilgrimage is almost over and the day is nearly done. How endless the unexplored road appears to be and how short the foot-worn trail seems now."

Mr and Mrs. Murvel (K. O.) Hodge of Chicago visited Mr. Hodge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hodge and friends here over the weekend.

Bump Men No Punch-Pullers

They play rough, those thick-muscled aerobic thespians who come under the motion-picture category of "bump men." Fifty of them put some hectic excitement into the big prison break which is a feature of "Nancy Steele is Missing," the Twentieth Century-Fox drama starring Victor McLaglen, Walter Connolly and Peter Lorre, and featuring June Lang and Robert Kent, which opens Friday and Saturday June 18-19 at the Coby Theatre.

A bump man, be it explained, is one step above an extra and one step below a stunt man. The bump men take the falls, fight the fights, and generally undertake any and all sorts of violent physical activity which does not quite come within the bone-breaking domain of the stunt man.

Half of the bump men in "Nancy Steele is Missing" appears as prisoners, and half of them as guards. All told, there are 500 men in front of the camera in the riot scenes, but it is the bump men who do the fighting, the rest of the "prisoners" taking advantage of the confusion to rush for exits.

Gene Fowler and Hal Long wrote the screen play of "Nancy Steele is Missing," based on a story by Charles Francis Coe. Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, chose Nunnally Johnson as associate producer.

Mrs. James Cooper Dies — At Home On Son

Mrs. Thomas Cooper passed away on June 10. Her death was not unexpected. She has been sick for over six years and for the past two years has been constantly confined to her chair. For the past six weeks she has been in a serious condition. Mrs. Cooper was born August Thomas Cooper July 17, 1870. Eleven children were born to this union. Lewis preceded her in death. The living children are Leslie with whom she made her home, Vinton, Wilbert, Warner, Ben, Everett, Mrs. Cora Johnson and Ella Hyatt of Rowan County, Taylor, of Portsmouth, Ohio, Samuel of Russell, Lewis and Vinton were both in the service during the World War at which time Lewis died. Mrs. Cooper was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hamm of this county. She has four brothers, Ben, Basil, Chris and Robert Hamm and two sisters, Lizzie Morrison and Maggie Hyatt. She left 44 grandchildren, forty-one of whom attended the funeral. Funeral services were held at the Pervis cemetery with Rev. Chas. Tyree in charge. She has been a member of the church of God for 40 years.

College To Show Historical Scene

For Friday, June 8, the College brings one of the greatest productions in screen history in the immortal story by Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) entitled "The Prince and The Pauper." Featuring Errol Flynn, Claude Rains and Henry Stephenson this great story of a poor boy who exchanged places with a prince is a fascinating plot for old and young. The experience of a poor boy confused by the pomp and richness of the court life and of the prince who wanders helplessly through the poverty and rough life of the common people, thus giving the rich a taste of want and the poor a taste of riches, never fails to interest any type of audience. Scenes of humor, pathos and varied forms of excitement unfold in rapid succession as this great story moves across the screen. Students of history, English and sociology, as well as the person simply interested in a great show with a great background cannot afford to miss this picture. The college is glad to announce that certain arrangements have now been made to secure Janet Gaynor and Frederic Marsh in "A Star is Born." In this picture Gaynor and Marsh are supported by Adolph Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine and Lionel Stander. This picture will appear July 2.

Woodrow Hall, charged with child desertion, third day. Russell Combs, charged with breaking into dwelling house, third day. Must Hatton, charged with breaking into store house, third day. Perhaps of most interest to citizens of Morehead is the hearing on the injunction brought by the Evans, Heiner and Honey Crust bakeries against the city of Morehead, restraining the city from the collection of the recently assessed tax of out-of-town concerns doing business by truck in the city. The bakeries obtained a temporary injunction against the city, restraining them from the collection, and the hearing will be held early in the term. The bakeries maintain that the tax is unjust and discriminatory and seek to have the temporary injunction made permanent.

The mistemeanor docket follows: Bill Conley charged with assault with a deadly weapon, first day. Frank Keeton, charged with breach of the peace, first day. Ade Maddox charged with assault with a deadly weapon, first day. William Stevens, charged with breach of the peace, first day. Mrs. Jake Collins and Mrs. William Stegall, charged with breach of the peace. City of Morehead, charged with maintaining a common nuisance. Sheridan Caudill charged with assault and battery. Winfred Caudill charged with breach of peace. John Hamm charged with carrying concealed a deadly weapon.

Announcement

TO THE VOTERS OF ROWAN COUNTY.

For sometime I have been debating the advisability of entering the race for the Democratic nomination for county judge. Until today, I had decided not to make this race, but a large number of my friends from all sections of the county have urged me to become a candidate for this office, and I take this means in announcing to the voters of Rowan County that I am now a candidate for County Judge on the Democratic ticket.

I believe that the majority of voters in Rowan County are personally acquainted with me and can judge for themselves whether I am competent, qualified and honest. I was born and raised in Rowan County and have spent practically my entire life here. For 20 years I have been Cashier and President of the Peoples Bank of Morehead, in which capacity I have had the opportunity to do business with most of the people of this county.

I ask that you give my candidacy your consideration. Between now and the August 7 primary, I hope that I will see each of you personally.

My only platform is clear and simple. Attending the meeting from Morehead were Mrs. Edna Johnson and Jack Wilson, Field Workers for county treasurer and in the Rowan County in the Old Age Assistance Division of the Department of Public Welfare.

Social Security

The afternoon program was divided into two sections, one devoted to a round table discussion of Old Age Assistance, attended by the Field Workers and District Supervisors and in charge of Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, the other devoted to the Old Age Benefits division.

A distinction was made between Old Age Benefits and Old Age Assistance. Old Age Assistance is the branch of the Social Security which takes care of the needy of the present who are over 65 years of age.

It is taken care of by direct taxation by the federal and state governments and is different from Old Age Benefits, which will come later to those now employed who are putting aside a share of their own earnings for their own old age. The money will be received only by those who are earning present and who put aside a share of their earnings to build into a fund which will be distributed to them when they reach the age of 65 years.

Attending the meeting from Morehead were Mrs. Edna Johnson and Jack Wilson, Field Workers for county treasurer and in the Rowan County in the Old Age Assistance Division of the Department of Public Welfare.
