

Falling River Shows Famous Indian Rocks

Officer Joe Stokely says the Indian rock opposite Chillicothe street, which is now exposed to view on account of the low water, has greatly frounded since he last saw it twenty years ago. Joe found the rock still contains the name of David L. Ford which he first saw when a boy.

Ford was an old skiff builder and his workshop was located on the present site of the water works stable. In days gone by the river was very shallow in the vicinity of Indian rock but the building off the government dyke and ice piers caused a pool to be formed near it and it takes much longer for the rock to come to view than years ago.
