PAGE BOB REPLY: MY SERRING soon almost equals given of being late in killing "bees at one blow". The Mr. Sterling Advocate tells this for a true story: Uncle Joe Henry was trying to kill two bees in his back yard. Uncle Joe took a pot shot at the pair and when the noise had died away he discovered not only two dead bees but a little squirrel had come to the end of his road. Looking further afield Uncle Joe saw to his horror that one of Mrs. Henry's fatcats was making its way to the last move this side of the "vale of tears."

That was four. From behind a cluster of live oaks Mrs. Henry screaming that Uncle Joe had shot her—she had been peeped in the eye by the shot which had done a fine job and riddled the six with one blow!

BY THEM WERE A RADIO STATION broadcast... How do you do, ladies and gentlemen of the newspaper audience, how DO you do? This is station STAN, coming to you from the southwest corner of the Independent's editorial rooms where we have just run in a quantity of typewriters and typographers—pretty, too—to give you a legible picture of what goes on here, if anything. The weather outside is fine and the sun is on his and his wife. The sun rose at 6:20 and the last time I looked it was still rising, which is much better than your broadcaster is doing.

It is now 7:45 Helluva watch time. Have you seen the new Helluva? Curved to fit the neck, the knee, the ankle and the pocketbook. If you are out to have a time, why not go all the way—have a Helluva on at better night clubs everywhere.

CRACKERBARREL COMMENTS
By Woody Elliott

FEW OF US folks over here in town have seen a creative man who has wandered away. He is none other than "Uncle Joe" Shannahan. He is no relation of mine, but a good friend.

"Uncle Joe" was eighty-one last Tuesday, and has had his hair cropped and his hair never been cut and we talked for some time under a big tree. "Uncle Joe" is one of the blindest "biggers" I have ever seen. He told me, "For years I have been trying to walk it off but I just came up my mind it was time to see it." "Uncle Joe" will have to see "Uncle Joe" and talk to him before you will appreciate him. He can only read the Bible and that is upside down, he can only write his name backwards and upside down. He was born on the Boston Logan farm, one of eleven children, and was said with his "Maury" to Jim Arnold (the noted counterfeiter) for $1,000 and later released in Hillsboro.

"Uncle Joe" always went to school a day in his life, and once was whipped until he stood in blood for trying to read some printed matter. He has never been married, but when he was young he was a cat with the colored girl. Any time you are going to Flemington stop at the post office and buy for "Uncle Joe" and have a little chat with him. He can tell you plenty about this and that. And who says a twisted or a also. American Legion Post Plans 'Real Old Fashioned Celebration' For July Fourth

A real old fashioned Fourth of July celebration, including everything from a grassy pig race to a public wedding, is the plan of the J. F. Sparks Show, which will be in Morehead the week of July 3, under the auspices of the American Legion, Corbin Ellington Post No. 126.

Mr. L. D. Dollar, advance agent, has been in town several days, making preparations and contacting local merchants, who are sponsoring a "Most Popular Girl Contest." The public will be greatly benefitted in reduced rates on all rides, by securing free ride tickets, paid for and distributed by the local merchants of Morehead.

The day's program for the 4th opens with a parade at 10 o'clock, followed by a Cracker Eating contest at 11 a. m., a Greasy Pig race at 11:30 a. m., and a Mother Calling contest at noon. At 1 p. m. the Fiddlers contest gets under way.

Lost Leader

Max Beerbohm, satiric caricaturist and essayist, who, with Oscar Wilde, Aubrey Beardsley and other astonishing figures of the Yellow Book era, brought the last century to a brilliant, if superficial end, has fallen.

Forty years ago Beerbohm wrote a most scathing denunciation of knighthood as a cheap commodity. Now he has accepted a title from King George VI and henceforth will be known as Sir Max.

Beerbohm was one of the most unruly boys ever to gain prominence in literary circles. But his mischief always had a point-to-much point for some of the victims of his shafts. Both in prose and with pencil he drew portraits of his contemporaries that shrewdly emphasized outstanding weaknesses of physique or character.

There is an unavoidable feeling that one more rebel has capitulated in his later years. At the age of 66, Sir Max has changed and the world has changed.

Sir Max has written nothing, drawn nothing, for publication in a decade, though he is said to be at work on a mysterious book autobiographical in character.

Link With The Past

Death has come to George Ayres at the age of 86 in Deadwood City, and we imagine that as he goes to the cemetery in Bill Hickock and Calamity Jane in Mt. Moriah cemetery, some measure of relief will be afforded their bones.

Ayres was the last of the pioneers who had known Wild Bill in the flesh, and had talked with Calam. In their last tete a tete, Calam cursed him because he wouldn't give her two dollars with which to buy whiskey.

A few years ago Hollywood made a picture around the life of Wild Bill and Calamity, and it was too bad that Old Man Ayres went to see it, because he never quite recovered from the shock. Its theme was the romance of these two roisters along the old frontier, but Ayres recalled that Wild Bill and Calamity had never met, and were not Deadwood contemporaries.

The final blow was that early Deadwood was portrayed as a roaring camp filled with pug-uglies, whereas it was the Ayres recollection that the town's pioneers were "more decent, much more gente" than its citizens of today.

His was one small voice crying in a wilderness of immoral history. Long after he is forgotten, tourists will continue to chip souvenirs from the tombstones of Bill and Calam, who rest side by side on Mt. Moriah. Certainly there is no reason to exclude Deadwood's worthies from our national gallery of good bad people so long as Hollywood is able to persuade the populace that Jesse James and Billy the Kid were a couple of Robin Hoodisms.

How Germans Helped Franco

When the Spanish revolution broke out in Spain and the charges were made that Italian and German troops were aiding General Franco the denials that came from Rome and Berlin looked sincere.

Now that the battle is over, with General Franco triumphant and Germany and Italy satisfied that he is in their orbit, the truth comes out frankly as soldiers of Italy and Germany go home. They are received and welcomed officially by their governments.

In Germany, the story goes, it is now admitted that Hitler himself made arrangements for German aviators to go into the service of General Franco, that the first aviators sailed disguised as tourists and that, in the early days of the struggle, the Germans transported by plane 15,000 Moors, with guns and ammunition from Morocco into Spain.

If Germans, living in Brazil, tomorrow start a revolution, you may not be surprised if German "tourists" are on hand to help the battle. The German government will deny that its soldiers are involved but the denial will be no more truthful than the denial at the beginning of the Spanish revolution.

Deserving A Prize

The sponsors of the New York World's Fair invited foreign nations to participate by erecting buildings and presenting exhibits. So far, we presume, this was all right.

Now, it so happens that the Soviet government has constructed a building that is, we hear, higher than any other building at the fair.

This, to some patriots, is an insult. To super-patriots it indicates that the sponsors of the fair have a tendency toward the form of Socialism practiced in Russia!

Now, for down-right asseninity in public speech this assertion is entitled to a prize. In our opinion a pathetic spectacle of the effects of prejudice upon people supposed to be leaders of some kind or another.

The gentleman who makes the absurd statement was speaking to a group on the subject, "Keeping Your Mind American." We suppose he has a companion address on "Keeping Your Mind Intelligent." It ought to be good!

He Found A Way

A man who would have delighted Samuel Smiles is Fred Hertel, of Columbus, Ohio. The Scotsman who wrote the book "Self Help" in 1859 would have found Fred Hertel a man after his own heart.

Six years ago, Mr. Hertel lost his business and his factory. So he found solace by looking around to see if he could find someone worse off than himself. That was no trouble at all. There was plenty of material to work on.

Today Mr. Hertel has so much to do that he has to have a large force of assistants. In his hunt for folk in a worse plight than his, he came across many needy but willing persons, eager to exchange labor for shelter and food and clothing.

Now that all of us have heard about the World of Tomorrow, let's contemplate the world we live in today. For however much we dislike the thought, we won't be there tomorrow!

America, 1939, is our idea of a swell palace and era, and the more we look around comparing our lot with the other fellow's the more we review the past and dream about the future, the more certain we are that Nature has been good to us.

When the day dawns that citizens of this Republic think half as much about the public interest as they do about their own interests, the success of the American government will be more than guaranteed.

If you are under the impression that intelligence today is not an improvement over what it was in 1875, look up an old newspaper of that year and read what was printed as news.

One of the remarkable revelations in life is that the number of excuses an intelligent woman can find for not doing what she doesn't want to do.

This is certainly the time of the year to ride around Morehead and feast your eyes on the specimens of natural beauty that abound.

Gag writing for the radio can't be hard. You can find out how much the comic lost on the last big race and begin from there.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who used to pay his church dues before he took a vacation trip?

TIDBITS
Of Kentucky Folklore

CIDER-MAKING is not a passing institution, though it may have changed much in recent years. I have had at least an appreciation of the art as it was practiced in the earlier years of the century; hence my serve in attacking the subject here.

There are two kinds of mills: a small mill that was fairly easy to operate and a large mill that was turned by horse power, much as the crusher of a sugar mill is worked. In the same way there were two kinds of presses: small ones for the hand mill and large ones for the power mill.

Apples are necessary, as you might imagine. Since good apples can be drawn from a "tree," it will be necessary for us to choose inferior ones. If you are fastidious, you had better not follow me to the orchard, for I may pick up apples that you would reject.

When the presses began to run and the odor of "pummies" gets out into the orchard and the gathering of the fruit is done, the yellow jackets, wasps, bees, and such like arrive for the duration of the season. Do not be too indignant at the insects, for they will stoutly maintain their rights to the cider you are making.

R. M. Bagby Denies Rumors

In reply to rumors that both John Y. Brown and Kabin Johnson have stated him, R. M. Bagby, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, stated, "I am glad to hear they respect my strength, and since we are on the subject of states, let me say that I wish also to be on the real state—the people's state, on August 5th—that, in my opinion, is the state of Democracy."

CATTLE NUMBERS UP

Beef cattle numbers have increased in Caldwell county, Kentucky, due to improved pastures and to good supplies of alfalfa and lucerna hay and corn, reports County Agent John F. Graham. Under average conditions, Graham believes good pasture is the largest contributing factor to profits in cattle raising.

Dependability, trustworthiness, responsiveness, and cooperation are all important. Personal appearance, as well as pose, ease in the manner of meeting people, and above all, the ability to use her education by applying theory in a practical manner.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO READ 5,000 NEWSPAPERS EACH WEEK?

"ALL I KNOW is what I read in the newspapers," Will Rogers used to say, but even his desire to keep up with the news would have finished at the desk started 25 years ago by the Central Press Clipping Service of Indianapolis, Indiana, which offices present the columns of The Morehead Independent weekly.

Of course, it has been necessary to constantly increase our force of readers in performing our business of reading newspapers for other people—but they enjoy the service. There are thousands of subjects that comprise the needs of our clients," says H. W. Drago, proprietor and manager of the service. "There are many more newspapers in the field now than when we started in business, and most of them are larger editions, but we are doing an even better job of reading today than ever before. Try to visualize reading about two tons of newspapers each month. Yes! It's some job!"

Clippings from these papers on a given subject provide a very accurate cross-section of the country to show what a fourth of the people of the United States have read on that subject because that percentage of the citizens of the entire country live in this serviceable area—and the newspaper reading done by practically everybody is limited to their home town papers.

CHOOSE THE RIGHT JOB BY FACULTY EXPERTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA

HOME ECONOMICS training prepares the girl for the greatest vocation of all, that of being a good homemaker, and no matter what vocation a woman enters she will save time or money by having a part in the home. Furthermore, positions in an almost endless number of fields are open to the young woman trained in home economics.

She may qualify as a teacher in the field in which she is prepared; there are government jobs open to her in the Bureau of Home Economics in Washington, for example, or in various departments that the individual states maintain which require workers trained in home economics.

The girl must be willing to put in a period of apprenticeship under an experienced person if she expects to receive realistic training. We today need people not only trained for their particular jobs, but with practical experience in addition to their technical training.

To make a success of her job, a home economics graduate must have the initiative to be self-sufficient to succeed in any field.

$50 Reward Offered For Arrest, Conviction Of Dynamiters.

The Franklin County Sportsmen's Club voted at a meeting here recently to offer a reward of $50 for the arrest and conviction of anyone dynamiting any streams in Franklin county.

A. G. Barrett, vice president of the club, in addressing the club scored dynamiting of creeks, many of which has been reported lately, and stated that dynamiting of one hole in a creek is tantamount of exploding a blast of dynamite in a 5,000-acre tract of land and killing every type of life in it.

"If a quail hunter were to do that in the field," Barrett said, "everyone would want to Lynch him."

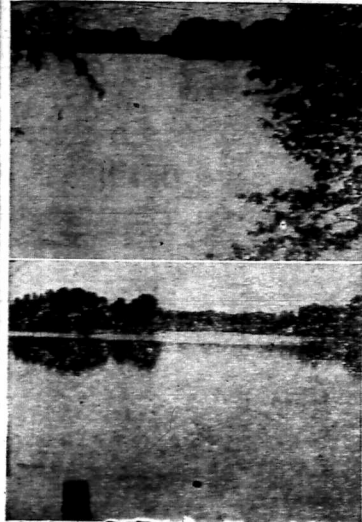

Major James Brown, director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated that the division would cooperate with the club in putting a stop to the dynamiting.

A sentence of one year in the state penitentiary awaits anyone convicted of dynamiting any public stream in the state of Kentucky.

The number of railroad cars loaded with revenue freight in the first twenty weeks of 1939 totaled 11,968,731 cars, an increase of six percent above the same period of 1938 but a decrease of twenty percent below the same period in 1937.

The railroads in the first four months of 1939 installed 6,817 new freight cars in service.

NEW LAKE OFFERS REAL SPORT FOR FISHERMEN THROUGHOUT KY.

The above two photos are views of Carpenter's lake, located near Owensboro, Ky., Daviess county. It has a shore line of four miles and contains 80 acres of surface water. The lake was formed in 1834 by the construction of a dam to catch the water from a large watershed and was sponsored by the Daviess County Fish and Game club. It is an example of a county club's conservation work and shows just what a fish and game club can do if they set their shoulders to the wheel and work. The lake has been stocked with large mouth bass, Newlights, bream, crappie, bluegill and catfish. —Photos by Gilpin.

Tri-County Fish And Game Club Meet To Be Held June 30th

A tri-county sportsmen's meet sponsored by Shelby, Anderson and Franklin county fish and game clubs, will be held June 30 on the Frankfort Gun club grounds four miles from Frankfort on the Lexington highway.

The meeting, which will be an all-day affair will get under way at 10 a. m. with a bait and fly casting contest. The contest will be open to anyone using regular fishing tackle.

The director of the Division of Game and Fish, Major James Brown, will be the principle speaker at the meeting.

Profit derived from this meet will be used for purchase and propagation of wildlife in the above mentioned counties.

Other sections of the state have reported dynamiting activities and these violations are being investigated and those under suspicion are being watched closely by the game wardens. Conviction for dynamiting a stream carries a one-year prison sentence.

United States Is Large Consumer Of Chickens And Eggs

Per capita consumption of chickens in the United States approximated 21 pounds in 1937, while consumption in the United Kingdom of 25 dozen per capita, the Food-stuffs division of the Department of Commerce announced, in a report received by its Louisville district office.

Domestic production of both the poultry and eggs is just about equal to the normal annual requirements, thus precluding a large export movement and obtaining the need for importing a considerable quantity of such products. Exports of poultry and eggs from the United States were valued at $1,763,000 in 1938 while imports of such products were valued at $1,081,253.

Shipments to noncontiguous territories during the year were valued at $2,963,928. Exports to overseas "fairly constant" during the past five years. Imports, however, have varied with domestic production and prices and conditions prevailing in China, the chief source of imports.

The above information is contained in a study analyzing United States foreign trade in poultry and eggs. Copies of this study may be had upon application to the Foodstuffs Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Urges Better Uses Of Pasture And Hay

Pasture is Kentucky's lowest cost and most valuable feed, says the farm economics department of the State College of Agriculture. If pasture and hay crops are well managed, sheep and cattle make profitable gains with small amounts of grain. A plea is made not to overcrop, to mow small grain crops to match the land, and to rotate pastures. Fall-seeded small grain prevents leaching and erosion and provides pasture.

Next to pasture, hay is Kentucky's most important forage. It is cheaper to provide shelter for hay than it is to bale it or leave it out in stacks or ricks. Saving of shock fodder and shredded forage is emphasized. The man labor required for cutting, shocking and baling amounts to about 10 hours more per acre than for baling from the standing stalks. The value of fodder for feed and bedding, the greater ease of feeding grass and small grain, and the clearer field for the hay crop provide good returns for the 10 hours of extra labor, it is declared.

Pastures Cut Beef Cost

A study which the Kentucky Experiment Station made of raising beef calves showed that the most successful farmers kept feed cost low by more fully utilizing pastures and low-grade roughage.

In determining the cost of raising calves to weaning age, it was found that the cost of feeding the cow was 75 percent of the total cost of the calf in the Blue-grass region, and 71 percent of the gross cost in Union county.

FERTILIZERS YIELD MORE, BETTER STRIP

In sorghum production tests at the Robinson Experiment Station at Quicksand, Breathitt county, Kentucky, land treated with a ton of limestone 400 pounds of 16 percent superphosphate, 53 pounds of muriate of potash and 200 pounds of nitrate of soda, produced 2,390 pounds of strip to the acre. Land alongside, but untreated, turned off 1,280 pounds of strip to the acre. Strip from the treated plot was darker in color and of better flavor than that from untreated land.

Less than ten percent of the railroad mileage of this country was aided by federal land grants by which those roads are required to transport government traffic at reduced rates.

Fish, Game Officers Catch Seven Men

Three Are Fined $25.50; Six Boats And Equipment Confiscated

Eleven conservation officers of the Division of Game and Fish in making a search of the Ohio river below Henderson, caught 11 men violating the fish and game laws and confiscated six boats, including four high powered motor boats and nets and trout lines the last week in May. Among persons arrested during the cruise, were Codesy Lisensby, Herman Travender and Howard Bowman, all of Shawneetown, Ill., who were fined $25.50 each in Judge Earl Clements court at Morehead on charges of fishing with trout lines during the month of May. Their boat was confiscated.

At Metropolis, Ill., four men, Eugene Smith, Chester Carnes, Bob Black and William Tanner, were arrested and taken to county Judge Brady Stuart's court at Paducah, where they were assessed fines of $28.50 each.

Charged with dynamiting fish in Salt River, Elmer Downs, of Mt. Washington, was arrested by a deputy sheriff at Mt. Washington on a warrant sworn to by Cliff Sipe, conservation officer for the Division of Game and Fish.

Following an explosion, Downs and another man were spotted by Sipe about 5 o'clock on Sunday morning, June 4, fleeing the scene of the dynamiting six miles from Mt. Washington, Bullitt county. They abandoned a sack containing one fish, two sticks of dynamite and an automobile, the license tag on which led to Downs' identification and arrest. Sipe reported to Major James Brown of the Division of Game and Fish.

GIVE VEGETABLES A BREAK! FOR BETTER PLANNED MEALS

By KATHERINE FISHER
Of Good Housekeeping Institute

I WONDER why it is that vegetables get such a poor break. We seem to fuss apishly over the rest of the meal. Yet when it comes to the vegetables, too often they look and taste as if we had left them to shift for themselves. Therefore, fuss, seriously in need of seasoning.

It's a pity, too. For all that crisp, colorful vegetables are of as good a nature as any other food, they are cooked tender in the shortest possible time, in a small amount of water, and then to be seasoned with little care. In return they promise to come to our tables so appetizing in both color and flavor that the family drops to the table, and will ask for a second serving.

Now, we've been cooking vegetables in our institute kitchens for years and years. And one of the easiest ways to cook them — at least as we find it — is in covered saucepans. I recommend it to you. Choose one of your saucepans that will hold the vegetables comfortably, then cover the bottom of it with about an inch of water.

Now, we've been cooking vegetables in our institute kitchens for years and years. And one of the easiest ways to cook them — at least as we find it — is in covered saucepans. I recommend it to you. Choose one of your saucepans that will hold the vegetables comfortably, then cover the bottom of it with about an inch of water.

No, we don't believe in any vegetables except those there is too much danger of overcooking or burning. Bring out water to a merry boil; then add the salt—one-half teaspoonful for every cup of water used—and, add the vegetables. Put the cover back on, quickly bringing the water to boiling again; then, turning the cooking time. Cook the vegetables until they are just tender but no more. For cooking time, see the table below.

Head this list up well; won't you, for when we do our vegetables summer after summer, we may seem just a short time after they are done, they are likely to be ruined. So be right at hand when the clock tells you that the vegetable should be done. Test it with a fork, and if it does turn off the heat. The little water left in the vegetable can be boiled off with the saucepan cover off, or you can use it as part of the liquid for a sauce to be poured over the vegetable if you want one, or for gravy, if it suits.

And now we come to the last-minute touch—use I hope you will never fail to give. No vegetable, no matter how carefully you may have cooked it, is ready for its serving dish until you have carefully tasted and seasoned it to your family's likes as to seasoning well in your mind. So do on your last serving spoon, home-made salt. For, unless I miss my guess, you will find that your vegetables have just a separate note of salt or pepper, and perhaps also a touch of margarine before you can proclaim it the perfectly seasoned dish.

The volunteer sitting crew of the Green County Fish and Game Association served three ponds recently and 1,500 bass and 5,000 bluegills removed from these ponds were released at Brush Creek, Pittman Creek and Green River.

Green county homemakers are being given extra attention to growing strawberries and young trees, with special efforts in cultivating, fertilizing and weeding. Undesirable growth was removed in the spring clean-up work.

A number of Green county farmers have sought government fire and life insurance policies. One railroad in its effort to raise 1939 had a net deficit of $185,737,900 in the same period last year.

WHY KEEP ADVERTISING

Did you ever notice that it takes time and experience to accomplish anything worthwhile? You can't advertise today and expect to find your store crowded tomorrow unless you have through constant advertising educated the public to read your ads.

The majority of people are slow to act. You have to tell them the same thing over and over again before they will heed your message.

Advertise now for the business you hope to do next month or next year. It is the cumulative effect that brings results.

Fish Game Director Asks Cooperation Of Kentucky Farmers

"Wildlife management to be practical must be economical. The use of tobacco plant beds as wildlife food patches offers an opportunity for the farmer to use these small scattered areas on his land for this purpose," Major James Brown, director of the Division of Game and Fish, said today in a statement for release to the press.

Usually located in or near good cover, these beds, after the plants have been removed, can easily be sown in foods valuable in attracting wildlife. Since a heavy application of fertilizer has been used on most tobacco beds, an excellent plant followed by many landowners is to benefit game birds and other wild animals by seeding these beds in case, corn, peas, or soybeans. Otherwise, the unused fertilizer is wasted," Brown pointed out.

"Besides producing valuable wildlife foods which mature late and remain available throughout the winter, this practice also helps to keep the beds in such a condition that they are easily replanted and the following year. As is frequently the case, such sites are abandoned for tobacco plant beds and may be sown to legumes and other crops which will furnish wildlife food patches," Major Brown stated.

Richard Bros. Circus Coming To Morehead Friday, June 30th

The hire of bands and the booking of the colosse bring back memories of when we were kids which will be the fact of a lifetime when the circus came to town. So let's turn time back 30, when the circus arrived, and go down and watch the unloading and erection of their tented city in one hour. The circus is a city within itself. The agents of the circus were in the city today making the final arrangements for the show. The circus will open at seven p. m., the performance beginning at the hour. Richard Bros. Circus needs no introduction to the citizens of Morehead as they are one of the very few larger circuses remaining on the stage in their fifteenth successful year. They promise some of the world's outstanding features. The performance is presented in three rings and a steel arena with comfortable seats for thousands is housed under three acres of rainbow colored canvas. The cooling system when the temperature so demands. New electrical and scenic effects have been added to the presentation of the opening pageant, "Sunny Monterey," which is a glitteringly gorgeous professional fiesta of native Spanish dancing and music of the land of romance, which is presented as a prelude to the circus proper, with Semora Delauro Gipsy, Mexico's most celebrated prima donna, assisted by the entire personnel of the circus. The Fair of High Jinks, gaited, dancing horses are presented by Col. Frank Stout and a downy lady rider. Champion acrobat from acrobatic gymnastics the aerial and gymnastic feats, a legion of funny clowns to drive away the blues. The manager is looking less than a revolution, university of natural history, and you will see animals from every corner of the globe, all presented in the wondrous exhibits which dates back to the days of the Romans—the circus.

Depredations Of Lice And Mites Cut Egg Production In State

THIS IS THE season when lice and mites reduce egg production unless control measures are applied.

The first thing to do, says C. E. Harris of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, is to thoroughly clean the laying house, removing all litter from the nest and all nesting materials from the nests. The nests should be scalded and new nesting material put into them after they have dried. The dropping board or pit is then cleaned and sprayed with wood engine crankcase oil and kerosene mixed half and half.

By mixing kerosene with the oil it will go through a sprayer and the mixture penetrates cracks and crevices where mites harbor. Mites are blood-sucking insects which get on the birds at night and bite in dark cracks and crevices in the house during the day. This makes it necessary that a complete job of cleaning and treating the house be done, otherwise the few mites that are left will soon reinfest the premises.

Lice, unlike mites, are biting insects and spend their entire time on the birds. They lay eggs or nits which hatch on the feathers. During warm weather these nits hatch in 7 to 10 days. Nits are controlled at this season by a cessation of the laying house as a source of a new crop. Death of lice occurs as a result of heavy infestations of lice.

Several methods of control may be used, any one of which is satisfactory. The dust bath which is made of common road dust or sifted sand will in most cases keep the flock free of lice. If, however, there is a heavy infestation, it will be necessary to treat the bird by dusting or spraying with sodium fluoride, applying an ointment to the birds or using nicotine sulfate on the most poles. Dusting may be done by applying as dry powder sodium fluoride which can be secured at drug stores, to the regions at the base of the neck under each wing under the vent and among the fluff feathers.

The Inex Deposit bank, Martin county, furnished powdered seed corn to 6-H club members, requiring that corn be entered in the county show.

Cooper Outlines Program He Will Follow If Elected

"I believe that in the present political thought and platform, too much emphasis is being given to details of special groups of people. That too many promises of appropriations are being made without any explanation of the cost and means of revenue. I believe "Kentucky needs a long term program that will take into consideration all groups and sections, one that can be carried out."

He would, first, the claims of special groups be emergency problems and believes that immediate needs must be met with the present level of revenue, by reduction of administrative expenses and by employees and by extending the present rate schedule over a period of years.

"Kentucky is among the low-income producing states and a long term program should be initiated to promote the increase of wealth and employment," Cooper asserted.

Fair Tax Program

He suggested as points in the program a fair and equitable tax program that would attract industry, strengthen the agricultural extension and governmental work to promote better farming and the use of land, the strengthening of the Division of Geology to discover and map this state's mineral resources and to ascertain the best use of its natural and scenic resources to attract tourists, revenue with construction of the department of roads, parks, and city and county and attention to the debt problems of the various counties, taking care not to increase the tax rate that the condition of some counties discourages the location of industries.

Cooper said, "That the charitable institutions shall be taken out of public by removing the apportionment and tenure of employees from the Fiscal Division. He will also propose a plan which will remove the highway department from political activity."

Finally, the point that he would not make a promise that it was not reasonably possible to carry out.

"Such promises create distrust and delude those to whom they are made," he said.

A root crop, it should go without saying that the seed bed should be well-prepared and deep. Fertility should be balanced, especially, there should not be too much nitrogen as in nature, but the other plants should be lacking. In general, complete fertilizer, 5-5-5, 4-8-8 or 8-8-8 worked into the row at the rate of one pound of fertilizer to 30 feet, will be right.

The crop is remarkably free from insect damage, though occasionally the lesser "general feeder" insects attack the foliage, but they are easily controlled with arsenicals. The only other care needed is to keep down the weeds. In the fall, when frost is expected the roots are lifted, topped to one inch, and put under forcing conditions. A good saline will serve for satisfactory temperature is between 40 to 60 degrees. If the floor is earth, all that is needed is an enclosure for the roots, stood on end and packed lightly with soil to make complete contact with them all the way down. JUAREZ

By HARRY LEE

The story of "Juarez," which is really three stories in one, has been made into a motion picture by Warner Bros., starring Paul Muni and Bette Davis. This picture will be shown at the Trail Theatre in the near future.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Benito Juarez, an educated Indian, fights his way to the heights, in his native Mexico, and in 1861 is elected president. His decree stopping payments on foreign debts for two years, embroils Mexico in war with France. When Juarez takes the land from the rich to give it to the poor, landowners send an envoy to Napoleon III to tell their grievances. Napoleon determined to conquer Juarez adds to the power of the French in Mexico—chooses as Emperor and Empress—Maximilian and Carlota, and sends the envoy from the rich landowners to accept their agreement as they sail for Mexico the war is bitterly carried on Juarez. The armies of Juarez, defeated at Puebla, move into the interior. Maximilian and Carlota, entering Mexico, are welcomed by the French but boycotted by the common people. Juarez directs a letter to them telling them that their hopes of winning Mexico are of no avail, and warning them to leave at once.

CHAPTER IV

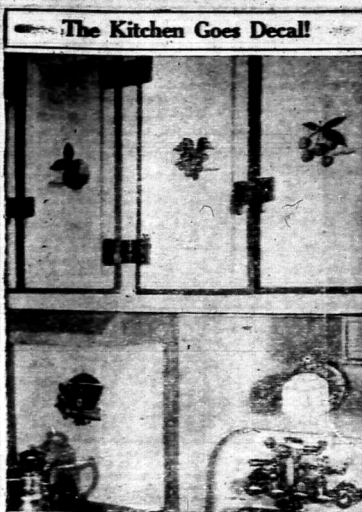

Juarez and a number of his followers, crouched in a dimly lighted room listening to a report of one of his spies. The man is dressed as a coachman. Indeed he is none other than the one who drove for Maximilian and Car-lota, and planted the warning letter. "After Tomalito we came to the Pueblo of San Vicente, the column halted and Maximilian alighted. There were many ponies, but the soldiers stood between. Maximilian walked alone among the ponies to a well. General Lopez warned him not to drink for fear of illness, but His Majesty lifted the gourd and drank to the last drop. "Is his uniform very splendid?" interrupted Porfirio Diaz, scornfully.

"He doesn't wear a uniform. Senior . . . he wears a long black coat . . . but he is a magnificent all the same! Tall—taller by a head than any of us—and fair with blue eyes and a golden beard! The Indians thought, many of them . . . that he was the old god—Quetzacoatl!—The fair god who promised to return someday when he sailed away into sunrise.

"They'll not think so well of Quetzacoatl when he takes back from them the lands Don Benito gave them," sneered Diaz. "Francis always make their appearance in the guise of gods," said Juarez slowly, "and so our task is to fight . . . always to fight . . . fight . . . fight . . . to keep Democracy alive . . . so that when the hour of his unmaking comes, the people will turn to us."

"There are thickets about the royal palace where a man with a knife could wait, Don Benito," started Carbajal, making a gesture as if throwing one. "No, Carbajal . . . we are not assassins! It must be the Mexi-

To You As a Consumer

When Walter Chrysler bought his first car about 34 years ago for $5,000, there were approximately 60,000 people employed in building, selling and servicing automobiles. Today there are 12 or more times that number employed in building; selling and servicing automobiles.

Advertisin greated the increased demand. Demand was responsible for increased employment. Advertising created jobs for American workmen, and raised the standard of living in the nation.

These same results apply to radio, refrigeration, air conditioning and to thousands of smaller items which today are in common use in America.

What is true of manufacturing is equally true of distribution. In advertising the merchant finds an inexpensive method of increasing his sales and so lowering his percentage of sales overhead and increasing his ability to buy in larger quantities at lower prices. That means lower prices for the consumer.

The consumer who patronizes the advertising merchant profits because of advertising.

can people who kill the man that calls himself their Emperor! I was elected by a majority of the downtrodden . . . and my duty to them is to prove, if I can, that their trust was well placed—in one like themselves! But revolts were continually breaking out . . . engagements in which the French were usually worsted. Maximilian, greatly troubled, discussed the matter with General Bazaine. "How great is Juarez's military strength, Marshal . . . how many men has he in the field?" "Well, about twenty-five thousand in the north! In the south, probably twelve thousand."

"My understanding was that the completely pacified! I am not a militarist, Marshal . . . One might as well try to come to terms with a wild animal of the jungle! The whip, the bullet, and the bayonet are the only language his kind understands! There is no limit to his falsehoods . . . his audacity! I myself sent a messenger after messenger to Benito Juarez—till I discovered they were being shot, one after the other, as fast as they arrived!"

"Incredible!" "Your Majesty need not trouble his mind about Benito Juarez any longer! The Emperor Napoleon has reinforced my armies to fifty thousand men with complete munitions for a final offensive which I am now ready to launch on, all fronts! Within thirty days the Indian will be dead, captured, or driven out of the country, Your Majesty. I guarantee it!" But General Bazaine's "final offensive" was met by resistance so stubborn and ruthless that, even after town fell into the hands of Juarez. Bazaine urged Maximilian to sign a decree ordering execution of all revolutionists. Maximilian refused. All but disillusioned, he talked with Carlota.

"I am now convinced that I was brought to Mexico to destroy the very ideals which were my own fondest hope for this nation! God knows they need a savior, if for no other reason than to protect them against the greed and the brutality of the Napoleons, And I believe there's a way out! General Porfirio Diaz—now in prison—shall go free! He is it who will bear my message to Juarez!"

This joy-killer, also known as the red bug or harvest mite—the bug which has made many a picnic a sorrowful memory—may be effectively controlled. Office Of Education Issues Bulletin On German Education

Keeps Abreast With Educational Practices In Other Countries

The taking over of education in Germany by the National Socialist German Workers' Party to educate the German youth for the National Community and for full pledge to "Leader and Nation" is described in "Education in Germany," recently published as Bulletin 1938, No. 15, by the Office of Education in the Department of the Interior.

Because of the importance of knowing what is being done in education in other countries and the necessity for placing correctly in American college and universities the German students that are coming here, a careful study was made of the situation in Germany and the bulletin is the result of that study. Similar studies have been made of education in other countries in accordance with the continuing practice of the Office of Education in keeping abreast of educational practices in other countries.

Control of education throughout all Germany, the Bulletin states, was brought into the central government by the establishment, in May, 1934, of a Reich Ministry of Education. Previously the German States had been fairly free in building and managing their own school systems. For some time after that action, except for the universities which were brought almost immediately under centralized control, no great alterations were made in the school system itself. But looking toward greater unification of the nation changes were made in the social background. When considerable progress had been made in that direction, the Reich Ministry of Education began its main changes, especially in the secondary schools, in the spirit and emphasis of instruction and the types of schools to be maintained. Heredity, racial science, and family and population policies were introduced in the curriculum in 1935 so that the boys and girls should not leave school without being brought to "full appreciation of the necessity and spirit of blood purity." Special interest was attached to prehistory and folklore.

A drastic decrease of secondary school types is illustrated in the bulletin by graphs showing that the eight kinds of secondary schools for boys were reduced to three, that the gymnasium formerly the most favored school in Germany is to be of less importance than the German upper school, while suburban schools, based on six years of elementary schooling will be maintained in country districts to give capable rural children secondary training so they may enter the universities.

The provision of secondary education for girls, says the bulletin, was much more drastically simplified, changed, and redirected than was the provision for boys. Here, ten different types of schools were reduced to two, and girls are almost denied admission to the universities because Latin is so nearly eliminated from the curricula of the girls' schools.

Nearly all these former German secondary schools of general education offered a nine-year program of studies. That has been reduced to eight years and would reduce the time of preparation for university studies by one year if it were not that 2 years of military service are now required for men in Germany. This, with 6 months of compulsory work service (Arbeitsdienst) more than counteracts the 1 year gained in the schools. In general the new curricula shows a turning toward subjects commonly termed practical, such as modern languages, mathematics, and the sciences, and definitely less study of the classics. Fewer, not more, students are to be made ready for and admitted to the universities.

Besides making many fundamental changes in the established school system, the National Socialist Party has set up several new institutions such as the compulsory work service, the National political education institutes to train leaders for the party, and the Adolf Hitler schools. The regulations governing the education of Jewish children together with the decrees barring Jewish folk from practicing the profes-

Here the requirements for admission to the various faculties, the programs of study in them, the numerous kinds of examinations that may or must be taken, and the diplomas or degrees granted are described in considerable detail.
