MANY LIVES SACRIFICED IN A POLITICAL QUARREL
BAD BLOOD RESULTING FROM THE MURDER OF A REPUBLICAN SHERRIFF—A WOMAN'S THRIFT FOR TERRORISM.

MORGANTOWN, Revolutionary, July 7.—On the day last month, laid to rest in a porcelain sarcophagus, the life of a Republican Sheriff, and the women of the county, it was a sad day for the county, and even more so for the county's Sheriff. His name was James Smith, and he was a respected member of the Republican Party. The day he was laid to rest, the women of the county, led by a strong and brave woman named Mary Brown, vowed to avenge his death.

Mary Brown was a woman of great courage and determination. She had been a member of the Republican Party for many years, and had always fought for justice and equality. Her husband, who was also a member of the Republican Party, had been murdered by a group of men who opposed the Party's policies. Mary Brown knew that she had to do something to prevent similar acts of violence in the future.

The women of the county, led by Mary Brown, vowed to avenge the death of Sheriff Smith. They formed a group called the "Women's Vigilantes," and began to plan their next move. They knew that they would have to be careful, as the men who had killed Sheriff Smith had supporters in the county. They decided to start by targeting the men who had provided the weapons to the men who had killed Sheriff Smith.

The women's vigilantes began to spy on the men who had provided the weapons. They watched them carefully, and made notes of everything they saw. They knew that they would have to be very careful, as the men who had provided the weapons were powerful and well-connected.

The women's vigilantes decided to confront the men who had provided the weapons. They gathered in a small meeting, and decided to act soon. They knew that they had to act quickly, as the men who had provided the weapons were planning to hold a meeting in the town where Sheriff Smith had been killed.

The women's vigilantes decided to attend the meeting, and to confront the men who had provided the weapons. They knew that they would have to be very careful, as the men who had provided the weapons were powerful and well-connected. They decided to wear disguises, and to carry hidden weapons.

The women's vigilantes attended the meeting, and confronted the men who had provided the weapons. They demanded that the men turn over the weapons they had provided, and promised to return them if the men stopped their violence.

The men who had provided the weapons were taken aback by the women's courage. They knew that they would have to be very careful, as the women's vigilantes were determined to prevent similar acts of violence in the future. They agreed to turn over the weapons, and promised to stop their violence.

The women's vigilantes were proud of their success. They knew that they had made a difference, and that they had helped to prevent similar acts of violence in the future. They knew that they would have to be careful, as the men who had provided the weapons were well-connected. But they were determined to continue their work, and to prevent similar acts of violence in the future.
