Historical Information: Morehead State University introduced intermural sports for women's basketball team beginning in the spring of 1929. An official Morehead State women's intercollegiate basketball team was established in 1970 to 1971 and the team was given the name Lady Eagles. Morehead State was the first college in Kentucky to grant full scholarships to women before the appearance of Title IX. The team currently plays in the Ohio Valley Conference (OVH).

Scope and Content: Collection consists of basketball games involving the Morehead State University Lady Eagles (women's) basketball team in their games against other collegiate school's women's basketball teams. The collection also consists of basketball games featuring the Lady Eagles in exhibition games against private and public institutions. Collection also includes recordings of the Lady Eagle's practice games and tournaments.
