Murvel "Kayo" Hogge Dies As Result of Injuries In Automobile Wreck Thursday

Son Of Judge And Mrs. Arthur Hogge Laid To Rest In Lee Cemetery Wed. Eve.

Murvel Hogge died at the Kings Daughters Hospital in Ashland Monday night at 6:10 o'clock, as the result of injuries sustained in an automobile wreck on Friday morning, while returning to his home here from Ashland. The remains were brought to the home of his parents, Judge and Mrs. Arthur Hogge here Monday night. Funeral services were held at the home on Wednesday at 10 o'clock, conducted by Rev. T. F. Lyons, pastor of the Church of God, Dr. G. H. Fern, pastor of the Christian Church and Rev. B. H. Kazer, pastor of the Baptist Church in Morehead. Burial was made in Lee Cemetery. Murvel Hogge, 23 years old, was known to everyone in Morehead as the son of Judge and Mrs. Arthur Hogge. He was born in Morehead on September 10, 1917, and spent his entire life in the community, with the exception of the past year when he lived in East Chicago, Indiana where he was employed until about a month ago. When he returned to Morehead, he drew up here and lived in the home of every citizen of the town. From years back he was given the nickname of "Kayo" a name which he liked and which he was proud of. He was known to such an extent that comparatively few people knew his actual name.

Christmas Seals Now Being Sold

Health Parade Friday Morning To Start Drive For Sale Of Tuberculosis Seals Here

Climaxing the preliminary drive for the sale of Christmas Seals, the children of the Morehead Public School will stage a health parade on Friday morning of this week at 11 o'clock.

There is little need for an explanation of the purpose of the Christmas Seal Sale. Everyone uses seals to stick on their Christmas packages, and everyone who uses seals is interested in aiding in putting across the sale of these Tuberculosis Christmas Seals, realizing that the money derived from the sale is devoted entirely to cure and extermination of tuberculosis.

In the past the sale has proved to be a pronounced success in Morehead and Rowan county. It is certainly to be hoped that this year it will be even more successful and that Rowan county will present a united front against this common enemy of health and wellbeing.

Seals have been distributed to every teacher in the county and each child in every school district as aiding in the fight by selling Christmas Seals to their parents and friends.

Since the Seals are used universally, it causes no added expense, and the money used for the purpose is a most worthy cause.

But your Christmas Seals from the children of Rowan county.

Womens Clubs Unite In Decorating City

Art Departments Of Two Clubs Offer Prizes For Christmas Decorations

Under the supervision of the Art Departments of the two local Womens Clubs, the Rowan County and the Morehead Womens Club, the plan for decorating Morehead for the Christmas Season is rapidly getting under way. An effort is being made by the clubs to decorate not only the business places of the city, but the homes as well, in true Christmas style.

For several years the clubs did this work, offering prizes to produce the best decorations. The result was a town with Christmas decorations that were pleasing and inspiring. It is the purpose of the club this year to carry on this work. Prizes are being offered by the Art Department of the clubs for the best decorated home and the best decorated business place.

The committee in charge is made up of the following: Mrs. C. B. Daugherty and Mrs. L. G. Burton.

The girls' dormitories at the college have already taken action toward decorating their halls and a special effort is being made so that people passing through the city will recognize Morehead as a place possessing the true Christmas spirit.

Home Insurance Co. Pays Out Large Sum For Loss In Month

Local Firm Pays Losses Amounting To $6,200 During Month Of October

The Home Insurance Company, of which C. B. Lane is manager, has apparently borne the brunt of the fire losses in this community during the past two months, according to the insurance records of the city. In the period just past the companies represented by the Home Insurance Agency has settled losses to the amount of $6,200 in the month of October alone, as the result of the fire and wrecks during that month.

Dr. Van Antwerp Delivers Address

Discusses Value Of Air Cool Storage Houses Before Horticultural Meeting

Dr. H. Van Antwerp of Farmington has a prominent place on the program of the annual convention of the State Horticultural Society held in Lexington this week. Dr. Van appeared on the program Wednesday in a discussion of the value and working of his air-cooled storage houses. The society is doing a remarkable work in stimulating and developing the fruit growing interests of the state.

An interesting part of the program of the two day meeting was the fruit show held at the Fenwick Hotel by the undergraduate Horticulture Club of the University of Kentucky. The show, which has been a credit to any state. The girls of the Home Economics Department at the University held an apple pie contest. Miss Roberta Adkins of Pineville was crowned queen of the Apple Show and presented the trophies.

Accepts Call To Mayslick Pastoriate In Near Future; Built Up Local Membership

An announcement that will cause considerable regret among his numerous friends in this community, is to the effect that Rev. B. H. Kazer, pastor of the local Baptist Church, has accepted a call to the Baptist Church at Mayslick, Ky., and will resign his present charge in this city within the next few days.

The announcement came as a complete surprise to his many friends in this community, where he has served for the past seven and one-half years and where he and his family have lived with large circle of friends, who will sincerely regret his leaving.

When Mr. Kazer came to this city seven and one-half years ago, he found a church with a membership of 37 and with debts piled up on the community. At that time what Baptists call "on the Board" which meant that the State Board assisted to the extent of $1,000 per year in defraying (Continued On Page Six)

Coach Downing Loses Bill Fold Containing Large Sum Of Cash

Pick Pockets At Kentucky Tennessee Game Relieve Local Man Of $70. In Cash

G. D. Downing seems to be particularly unfortunate when it comes to losing money, his most recent loss being last Thursday while attending the football game between Kentucky and Tennessee. The loss of the game by Kentucky was bad enough, but Coach Downing, after all that he reached to his hip pocket and discovered that in the excitement and crowding he had lost, presumably by the pick-pocket, his bill fold, containing $70.00 in cash and two checks one of them his salary check.

Coach had cashed a check for $200.00 and had received a payment of $50.00 on a note owed him. He went to the bank to deposit the (Continued On Page Six)

Simmie Johnson Killed By Car Monday Night

Walter Goodan Released Under Bond For Appearance Before Grand Jury In March

Simmie Johnson, son of Asper Johnson, was almost instantly killed on Monday night of this week when he was struck by an automobile driven by Walter Goodan, son of Norman Goodan. The accident occurred as Goodan, who was returning to his home in Ohio, attempted to pass a truck. Johnson stepped out from in front of the truck, according to reports. Goodan is said to have stated that the driver of the truck blinded him at the time. Witnesses stated that in attempting to avoid striking Mr. Johnson, Goodan ran his car off the side of the road.

The accident occurred near Hillda, Kentucky where Mr. Johnson lived, about four miles from Morehead.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at Hillda in charge of the Hillda Baptist Church. Burial was made in the Pleasant Hill cemetery.

Mr. Johnson was the son of Asper Johnson, who survived by his father and by four children, Shelby Johnson, Mrs. Thelma Lewis Hilda, and Lowell Johnson and Harold Johnson, of Wright, Ky. He is also survived by three sisters, Mrs. Alta Reynolds of Averdeon, Ohio, Mrs. Payne of Hillsboro, Ky., and Mrs. Allie Martin of Morehead.

Monday afternoon a warrant was issued for the arrest of Goodan, on a charge of involuntary manslaughter. (Continued On Page Six)

Eagles To Open Season With Alfred Holbrook December 8

The Eagle basketball team will get their first taste of the 1937-38 season on Wednesday night of next week when they meet Alfred Holbrook of Manchester, Ohio on December 8. It will be the first of the "Guns in the heat" of their new season. They will be the first to give of wings for an idea of what to expect during the season.

Following the banquet, the program will be featured by an address by Sam Henderson, coach of Marshall College, who produced one of the outstanding football teams this season.

Actually with but one man lost from the championship squad of last year, the Eagles, with an additional year's experience under their belts, should be a better organization than last year. Arntzen was the only regular lost to the squad, and while Arntzen was certainly a star in his own right, there is every reason to believe that the squad, in the main is much better

Congressman Fred M. Vinson Is Given Appointment To Federal Circuit Bench By The President

Appointment, Bringing Salary Of $12,500 Yearly To Congressman, No Surprise To Friends Here; To Resign And Accept In January

Confirming rumors that have been made for the past several months, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt announced last Friday that he had submitted the name of Congressman Fred M. Vinson for the appointment to be Associate Justice of the United States Circuit Court for the District of Columbia. The appointment of Mr. Vinson was no surprise, as he has been rumored on numerous occasions that he would be tendered the office. The fact that the decision of the President was made public at this time, is considered conclusive proof that Mr. Vinson will accept the position which carries with it a lifetime tenure of a salary of $12,500 yearly.

Mr. Vinson has served this district for the past fourteen years, with the exception of one term when he was defeated as a result of the Hoover landslide. Since the election of President Roosevelt he has taken a prominent part as a member of the powerful ways and means committee in the house in shaping and putting through National legislation. He is recognized as one of the administrations staunchest supporters and as such, it was not surprising that the President was made public at this time, is considered conclusive proof that Mr. Vinson will accept the position which carries with it a lifetime tenure of a salary of $12,500 yearly.

THE PENTHOUSE MURDER

By Caleb Johnson

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

Synopsis: A card game is in session in Elmer Henderson's penthouse atop a New York skyscraper. The players are Henderson, Police Inspector Flaherty, Martin Frazier, Archie Doane, Max Michaelis, and his friend Williams, a stockbroker. They are waiting for Stephen Fitzgerald. When he fails to appear a telephone call brings the information that he is out with a girl. Fitzgerald and Henderson are both romantically interested in Lydia Lane, the famous actress—but Archie Doane reveals that she is engaged to marry him.

Doane leaves the party early when Fitzgerald fails to appear. A short time later he telephones Inspector Flaherty with the frantic news that he has found Fitzgerald and Miss Lane dead in Lydia Lane's penthouse apartment.

THE STORY

Stephen Fitzgerald's dark, stern face was drawn and distorted as none of those present who knew him had ever seen it in life. He was dressed in conventional evening clothes. The shirt bosom had been unfastened at the studs, where the Medical Examiner had opened it to examine the body more closely but a round hole in its smooth whiteness charred and blackened at the edges, told to the experienced eye on Dan Flaherty the story of a bullet fired at close range—so close that the weapon might have been pressed against the victim's body when the trigger was pulled.

"Where's Doane?" Inspector Flaherty asked.

"In the front room," replied Detective Martinelli. "He's pretty sick. He ought to be in the closet in the hall."

Archie Doane greeted his friends

"Did he have the sun on him?"

"No, and I've not found it," replied Martinelli.

"How long since they were shot?" asked the inspector as the Medical Examiner joined them.

"Not long. Not over an hour, warm when I got here. The girl is still alive, but unconscious. Doesn't react to pin pricks by any of the ordinary restorative that I had with me. She's lost blood until she's drained white. The ambulance from Roosevelt will be here any minute, and they are making arrangements at the hospital for blood transfusion."

"Nothing to be done for the man He's dead. Bullet through the heart. That's as far as I've got."

"Stay around while I wait," the inspector requested. "I've reasons for going pretty deeply into this case, and I may want to ask you some questions. Meantime, let's talk to Doane, if he's in shape to talk."

"I've got this, you know," said Max Michaelis, drawing the bottle of Henderson's Scotch from his overcoat pocket.

"Just what he needs," said the Medical Examiner. "He's close to collapse."

"Where are Fitzgerald's overcoat and hat?" asked Max Michaelis as he turned to follow Inspector Flaherty into the study.

"Over there," replied Martinelli, indicating a chair in the corner of the bedroom upon which a fur-lined overcoat and a silk opera hat had apparently been carelessly tossed.

"Doane had his on when I got here. I hung them up in the closet in the hall."

Archie Doane greeted his friends with a 3-dependent gesture, his face haggard and pale. But he managed the rather pitiful attempt at sycophancy as the others came in.

"Hello, Dan," he said. "I suppose I should say 'Good evening, Inspector Flaherty.' I never expected to meet you professionally. Same to you, Frazier."

"Max, I'm glad you could come. I haven't anything to say to you that I won't say to Dan and Martin in their presence. I don't care much, anyway, what happens now."

"Cheer up, Archie," said Max Michaelis. "I've brought something along that may do you good. That's this."

He poured a generous slug of Scotch into a glass which Detective Martinelli had borrowed from the Apothecary and Doane swallowed it eagerly. The color began to come back to his face, but his eyes were still haggard and his manner dejected as he set down the glass just as the loud clanging of a gong in the street below signalled the approach of the ambulance.

"That will be the boys from Roosevelt," said the Medical Examiner. "I'll give them a hand. Inspector, do you want to make any further inspection before they move?"

"No, the photographs will show all that's necessary," replied Flaherty, but send word to the hospital to let me know the minute she recovers consciousness."

"Consciousness?" Hospital" echoed Archie Doane, half-rising from his chair. "She's not dead? Lydia's alive?"

Doane's whole demeanor changed. "Thank God," he said. "I've got something to live for now. Max, a Henderson's laboratory was at Elmer Henderson—Saturday afternoon, wasn't it? It is now Sunday morning. Very sorry to get me dead. I realize Dan's position. He can't turn me loose unless he can prove positively that somebody else did it, and there isn't any way under Heaven that I can see of proving that."

"But before I tell you what happened, will one of you see to it that the best doctors in New York are called in for Lydia without delay? I don't care what it costs. I'll pay it."

"I'll get Alexis Carrel himself," said Frazier. "He's the best authority on blood transfusion. I know him, and he'll do what I ask. I'll telephone him now."

As the Assistant District Attorney went to the phone, Dan Flaherty went to Doane.

"Archie, as your friend I don't think you do this. But as an official I've got to believe you did, unless someone can show me you didn't. It looks bad for you—officially—and I've got to warn you that anything you may say will be used against you. By rights I ought to take you down to Center Street and have a stenographer take down whatever you say, but I'll waive that point. I'm as anxious as Max to hear your story."

"The Bertillon man is a stenographer," suggested Detective Martinelli.

"That's right; I'd forgotten that, Tony. Send him in," said the inspector.

"Let me have another drink, Max, before I start," Doane requested.

"It isn't a long story anyway."

"He downed the drink and addressed the stenographer impersonally.

"I'd better begin at the beginning and account for my movements before I came here tonight, he said. It will not take long."

"I know, and so do you, gentlemen," said Miss Lane, who at Elmer Henderson's laboratory was at Henderson—Saturday afternoon, wasn't it? It is now Sunday morning. Very sorry to get me dead. I realize Dan's position. He can't turn me loose unless he can prove positively went to Tiffany's to purchase an engagement ring which I hoped to give Miss Lane this evening. "I spent the entire afternoon, from about two o'clock, at the Lamb's Club, where I am a member. I had a tentative appointment to play cards at Henderson's place in the evening, as Miss Lane had half expected an aunt who lives in New Jersey to call for her and take her to the country over Sunday. She was to have let me know definitely whether she was going to Jersey or not. I was surprised that I had no word from her. I telephoned Miss Lane's apartment about seven o'clock, but the telephone did not answer. So I assumed that her aunt had called for her as scheduled. If so, I had intended to cancel my card party consisting of Inspector Flaherty, Mr. Frazier of the District Attorney's office, Mr. Henderson and myself, to which Mr. Michaelis and a gentleman named Williams were later added.

"I was with friends every minute of the day up to the time I left the Highgate Building. I even went to the Lamb's Club to the corner of 56th Street, but I didn't go with a friend, who had a taxi and was waiting for me."

"When I left the card party, a beer half past ten. I went directly to my room in West 45th Street. I thought I might find some message there from Miss Lane. I will not try to conceal from you the fact that I was greatly disturbed at not having heard from her, a disturbance which was intensified by the fact that Stephen Fitzgerald, who was madly in love with her, had cancelled his appointment to play cards with our party to-night after some woman had called him on the telephone. Knowing Fitz's fondness for poker, I could think of only one woman to have done this. She was in my company. While Fitz and I had never quarrelled over Miss Lane, not even mentioned her to each other except as a necessary work might bring her name into the conversation, it was no secret from either of us that we were rivals."

"There were others who aspired in the same direction, but Fitz was the only one I feared. Even after Lydia—Miss Lane had promised to marry me, which she did on Friday evening. I felt none too secure against the almost irresistible fascination which she exercised over women. I wanted to announce our engagement at once, but Miss Lane begged me to wait until she had been her aunt, her only living relative."

I was disturbed therefore, first and second, by Fitzgerald's mysterious absence from our party. I did not know the aunt's name or address, as I could not telephone her. I hesitated about telephoning Miss Lane's apartment again. I had called the number twice, at seven and eight from the club and while I was with you gentlemen at Mr. Henderson's, receiving the 'won't answer' signal each time. Miss Lane's custom, as I know, was to let her maid have a Saturday night out.

I had about argued myself into believing that Miss Lane had tried to telephone me at the Lamb's and that the operator there had failed to locate me or to take the message. I was about to call the club when the telephone bell rang. Someone with a decided German accent wanted to talk with Mrs. Soemmerling or other—some impossible foreign name.

"I hung up the receiver and waited for a moment, intending to call the club as soon as my wire was clear, when it rang again. "I answered, and a woman's voice cried, 'Come quickly! Hurry! Something terrible has happened!'"

"Then there was a piercing scream, then silence."

"I did not need to ask who was speaking. The voice was unmistakably that of Lydia Lane."

"I cried: 'Where are you? What has happened?' and called her name several times, but 'nothing more came over the wire. I dialled her apartment number and got no response. I dialled the operator and asked for the number, but the girl reported that the telephone was out of order."

"Frenzied, I slipped on my overcoat and rushed to the street. I was lucky to catch a taxi almost at once, and came up here as fast as the driver could push his car over the button."

"I pressed the button at the mailbox in the front vestibule down stairs, but heard no answer click of the electric door latch; then I tried the door and found that it was unlatched. I met nobody as I came into the building. I came up in the elevator and pushed the bell button of Miss Lane's apartment—this apartment. There was no response. I then knocked louder several times. Still there was no response. I turned the knob and tried to open the door, but it was locked from within."

"I was about to go down and find the janitor to see if he had a pass key which would open the door, when I remembered the other way to the roof. That door is never locked, the one leading out on the roof from the elevator landing. I believe the fire laws require that it be fastened only with a hook or bolt on the inside."

Author of "How to Win Friends and Influence People"

WOODROW WILSON

He was faced with One of The Greatest Opportunities in History; Yet He Failed Because He Couldn't Handle People

What kind of a man was the real Woodrow Wilson? He has been called an supreme genius; he has also been called a magnificent failure. When Woodrow Wilson sailed for Europe in 1919 he was called the savior of the ages. Bleeding Europe hailed him as a god. Starving peasants burned candles before his picture and offered up prayers to him as though he were a saint. The whole world lay at his feet. Yet when he returned to this country three months later, a sick and broken man, he had alienated many friends and made a hundred million enemies.

History presents Woodrow Wilson as an idealistic school teacher, cold, dignified, and lacking in human warmth. Yet the truth is almost exactly the opposite. Wilson was intensely human—hungry for human relationship—and it was the sorrow of his life that his own shyness kept him aloof and apart.

Woodrow Wilson was probably the most scholarly man who ever sat in the White House, yet he couldn't read or write until he was eleven years old. His favorite resort for relaxation was detective stories. Yet his only extravagance was buying beautiful books.

Most of his life he had been poor. His salary as a teacher was so small that his wife painted pictures and sold them to help support the family as a young professor. Woodrow Wilson couldn't afford to buy good clothes and later in life, like Lincoln, he cared little about his personal appearance.

And like Lincoln, Wilson was indifferent to food. He ate whatever was set before him and often seemed to be unconscious of what he was eating. He smoked only one cigar in his life—or rather, he didn't smoke all of even one, for he got sick before he finished it.

Under his frozen exterior, Woodrow Wilson was a man of quick and fierce emotion. Those who knew him said he had a hotter temper than Theodore Roosevelt. His devotion to his wife was intense and pathetic. One of his acts after he became President, was to buy his wife a set of sable furs. When she died a year later he would not permit her body to be removed from the White House for seventy-two hours. He had it laid on a sofa, and for three days and three nights he would not leave her side.

Probably the greatest flaw in Wilson's character was his lack of tact. The last years of his life were a tragic series of broken friendships. He quarreled with the leaders of the Senate. He broke off with his closest friends such as Colonel House. Finally, he alienated many of the people of his own country by asking them to elect only Democrats to office.

When the Senate refused to accept the League of Nations, Wilson opposed their advice. During the last year of the Presidency, this intellectual genius whose words had once shaken the world was now so broken and weak that he couldn't sign his own name without some one guiding his hand.

After his retirement, people came from all over the world to his home on S Street in Washington to come to it as though it were a shrine. And when he lay dying, pilgrims knelt on the pavement before his house and prayed for the passing of his soul.

Mrs. Givria Parker spent Thanksgiving with her parents Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Caskey at Farmers.

POULTRY RAISERS

With fewer hens on farms, and with lower feed prices, times will be better for poultry raisers, during the first half of 1938, says the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Egg prices probably will be higher than they have been this year. Supplies of poultry also will be lower during the first few months of next year, because of hatch last spring. However, relatively low feed prices may be expected to stimulate a heavier hatch next spring, which would bring larger receipts of both eggs and poultry in the fall and winter of 1938.

ALFALFA FOR CHICKENS

Many farmers like to include least meal or ground alfalfa hay in mash for chickens and laying hens. It has been found at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station that feed meals of kovanopodina, alfalfa and corn gluten feed when equal quantities of protein are included. These best meals with dried skim milk or most scrap cannot replace wheat feed. However, on a basis of equal quantities of protein. Experiments with alfalfa described in Circular No. 88, obtainable by writing to the Experiment Station at Lexington.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written Each Week By REV. B. H. KAZEE, Pastor of The Methodist Church

Subject: Christian Rest, Matt. 11: 28-30; Heb. 4:1-11.

Golden Text: "Come unto me all ye that labor, and I will give you rest." Matt. 11: 28.

Rest, heart rest, is what the world needs. It has so many other things, but it lacks rest. Our Lord was men as "laboring and heavy laden." He knew that the things at which they were laboring were for the most part unfruitful. Most men are toiling all night and catching nothing. There is a sense of futility, of insufficiency, of proper relationships.

The text implies that our Lord knows our lack of rest is due to two things. One is because we are apart from Him. The other is because of our unbelief. "Rightful ownership is happiness and peace." Rest is not just doing nothing. It is a sense of power, of sufficiency, of proper relationships.

The dog who has lost his master can lie down anywhere, but he will find his master again and he will rest. Just so it is with man. His proper master is Christ, and as long as man is away from Christ in the strained relationship of sin, he will never be at rest. There is no rest for a man out of proper relationship with God.

The wicket is as the troubled sea. Ever rolling, ever restless, because there is none to restrain it. The Master of the sea of Galilee is the only one who can calm the fears and doubts of our souls, and bring us into peace.

The yoke is a good thing here. It indicates that to be yoked together with Christ in the work of Christ, and in the fellowship of his sufferings and triumphs, is to go along with Him in such a harmonious relationship, that even though we toil and suffer, as with Him, and therefore brings us rest.

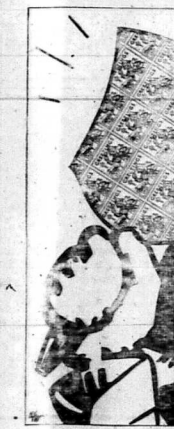

The other, to have faith in God, submits all our doubts and fears, and gives us rest. By faith we rest from our own sins, we know that Christ has suffered for them, and that God will prosper Christ's offerings as full payment for all our sins. If we have accepted Him also, then the transaction is complete and the matter settled. Thus faith in God brings peace. We need not worry about our personal lives, for faith puts all the concern as into the hands of God. This brings rest, for "I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him." The matter of our future is secure, for Christ has gone to prepare a place for us, and will come again to receive us unto himself.

Sp. being yoked together with Christ brings us into the right relationship with God, and having faith in Christ is the guarantee against all uncertainty of life here or hereafter. This brings peace. So Christ invites us earnestly, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Will you come to Him now?

By MAC ARTHUR

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938 IS COZY FEATURE

The world's largest and finest curtain appears in the grand finale number of "Broadway Melody of 1938" which co-stars Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell at the Cozy Theatre Sunday and Monday. The curtain, composed of solid glass, weighs more than nine tons and is 100 feet wide and 120 feet high. By means of a complicated series of hinges, controlled by hydraulic pressure, the curtain was lowered backwards to the floor of the stage to become a series of steps on which Miss Powell, George Murphy and 100 dancers performed a waltz routine. Designed by Cedric Gibbons, head art director at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and his associate, Merrill Pye, the curtain stairs required more than two months to construct. It was specially processed so that it was possible for the players to execute their dances without danger. When the curtain falls backward to become dancing stairs, the spectacular Broadway set is revealed. Twelve modernistic buildings were raised from one to eight stories in height by means of 10,000 pounds pressure. Hundreds of trucks, cars and cats make their way around the set, operated by a man sitting at an electrical "traffic" switch-board. Neon signs flicker, revealing the names of former Broadway favorites, including Montgomery & Stone, Al Johnson, Lillian Fields, Charlie Chaplin, Sophie Tucker, George M. Cohan, Zigfield, Eddie Leonard, Gay Dellys and Melvyn Frank and Healy.

Designed in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 1 1/2 yards of 35 inch material plus 4 yards of 120-inch bias binding.
