Miss Allen Brings Class To Visit News Office

Elliottville High School Students Get First Hand Information Of Printing Press

The ninth and tenth grades of the Elliottville High School spent a pleasant afternoon in the plant of the Rowan County News last Wednesday, learning what they could about the operation of a printing plant. The class had finished their text book covering the printing industry and in order to give them a concrete idea of how the work was carried on, Miss Thelma Allen, principal of the school brought them to the News shop where they were given a demonstration.

For the second time within a week, the News has been honored by being hosts to a class from the high schools of Rowan County, this time the class from the Morehead High School, which is interested in the development of the printing industry. Miss Norma Powers, teacher, brought her class down on Wednesday morning and spent a pleasant and profitable hour, learning at first hand how the wheels of the printing industry are made to turn. They heard a lecture on the operation of the linotype machine, which sets the type used in printing the News and were shown how the pages are made up. They were taken through the plant from one end to the other and given practical demonstrations of the operation from the time the type was set until it comes out the finished news paper.

CHRISTMAS PACKAGES BEING PREPARED

The College students under the direction of Miss Smith and Miss Robinson each year prepare Christmas packages for some of the children in the News shop. This is done with the hope that some children will be happier and their hearts made glad by having a little more Christmas than they would have had if it had not been for the kindness of these students. The schools to be benefited this year are Lower Lick Fork, Moore, Bull Fork, Razor and Hook Fork. Last year McKenzie, Bratton Branch and Ford Lick received these packages. It is sure these schools will be very thankful and these packages will be the cause of much happiness and a greater belief in Santa Claus.

GROUP MEETING

During the month of December, there will be group meetings of several schools. Each section in the county has been divided off and a central school selected as the meeting place. The schools will meet as follows:

BY CHRISTMAS SEALS

Representatives of the people of two nations met the other day to do honor to an American woman who is still alive but whose services to humanity are commemorated in a bronze tablet unveiled to Wilmington, Delaware, on November 24. The inscription on the tablet tells the whole story.

This tablet commemorates the founding of the first Christmas Seal in this country by Miss Emily P. Billitt of Wilmington, Delaware, December, 1907. From small beginnings the annual Christmas Seal sale has financed the development of the organized fight against tuberculosis in every state, resulting in saving thousands of lives. Erected by the Tuberculosis Associations of the United States, December, 1937.

The idea of financing the war of tuberculosis by the sale of penny stamps was conceived by a postmaster in Denmark, the Danish Minister to the U. S. pointed out at the unveiling ceremony. Now, all over the world the plan, developed thirty years ago in Denmark and in America through the initiative and persistence of Miss Billitt, is the principal source of funds used in society's war on the great white plague. No one knows how many victims of tuberculosis have been restored to healthy, happy lives, nor how many who otherwise they would have been infected had been spared by the campaign of education made possible by the Christmas Seals. They are uncountable, but their number is certainly tremendous.

Christmas seals are on sale now everywhere in America. They cost a cent apiece. No Christmas letter or package is really complete unless it bears one or more of these evidences of the sender's contribution to this great philanthropy.

Dale Carnegie 5-Minute Biographies

Author of "How to Win Friends and Influence People." EDDIE RICKENBACKER

This is the story of a man who defied disaster and flirred with death for a quarter of a century. He has roamed down the track at hair-raising speed in more than two hundred automobile races; and in the bloody days of the war he shot down twenty-six German planes from mid-air—shot them down while explosive bullets whined and cracked within inches of his head; yet he never suffered a scratch. Yes, this is the story of Eddie Rickenbacker, commander of the famous "Hat-in-the-Ring" Squadron, and America's Ace of Aces in the World War.

Immediately after the war I was the manager of one of the most charming men I have ever known—Sir Ross Smith, the famous Australian Ace. The first thing he did was to sweep it and run errands and sharpen your tools. Salary? He didn't give two cents. He said that he wanted a chance to get started, and he got it. Enrolling in a correspondence course in engineering, he prepared himself for the opportunities that lay ahead. From that time on his rise was rapid—workman, foreman, assistant engineer, trouble man, salesman, branch manager. Then the last for speed, the craving for adventure, got into his blood. The glamor, the applause, the excitement of a racing driver captured his heart. He knew he would have to change. So he set about resolutely to conquer his fiery temper. He developed self-control. He forced himself to smile until his smile became famous. The grueling grind of racing called for nerves, iron nerves. He knew that. So he gave up smoking and drinking and went to bed every night at ten o'clock. By the time he was twenty-five Eddie Rickenbacker was one of the most famous racing drivers that ever roared around a track. And here is a funny thing. He has driven over hundreds of thousands of miles during the past thirty years, yet he has never had a horse shoe or a good luck charm on one of his good luck charms out onto the plains of Kansas.

When America entered the War, Eddie Rickenbacker was the idol of the automobile world, so he sailed for France as General Pershing's chauffeur. But driving a General Pershing was one of the most turbulent blood. He braved action, and he got it. He was given wings and a machine gun and within eighteen months he had written his name at the very top of the list of America's War heroes and was smothered with decorations from three governments. In a swiftly moving book of 370 pages, he has set down the epic story of his fights and flights. If you want to read a book that is packed with courage and action and hair-brained escapes, go to your public library and ask for "Flying Circus" by Eddie Rickenbacker. It is the most thrilling chapter in America's air history.

Destiny on Wheels. It altered his entire life. Before his fifteenth birthday, he learned to drive in a garage; he learned to drive by backing cars back and forth in a wooden building. The floor is dirty, the building stable. Building a workshop in his backyard, he made his own tools and was preparing to make his own automobile. Presently, an automobile factory started in Columbus, and Sunday after Sunday, Rickenbacker went there and begged for a job. But Sunday after Sunday he was turned away. After he had been turned down for the sixteenth time, he turned to the astonished owner of the factory and said, "Look here, you may not know it, but you have a new employee. I know how to work. Tomorrow morning I'll be here. The floor is dirty, and I'm going to sweep it and run errands and sharpen your tools." Salary? He didn't give two cents. He said that he wanted a chance to get started, and he got it. Enrolling in a correspondence course in engineering, he prepared himself for the opportunities that lay ahead. From that time on his rise was rapid—workman, foreman, assistant engineer, trouble man, salesman, branch manager. Then the last for speed, the craving for adventure, got into his blood. The glamor, the applause, the excitement of a racing driver captured his heart. He knew he would have to change. So he set about resolutely to conquer his fiery temper. He developed self-control. He has driven over hundreds of thousands of miles during the past thirty years, yet he has never had a horse shoe or a good luck charm on one of his good luck charms out onto the plains of Kansas.

Today and Tomorrow

By Frank Parker Stockbridge FAIRS In less than a year and a half (from now two great fairs will open their gates for people to come in and see the wonders of the world all assembled in one place. One fair will be on the Atlantic coast, in New York; the other on the Pacific at San Francisco. The New York World's Fair expects to have a hundred million visitors. San Francisco hopes for half as many. One thing is certain: 1939 will be the greatest year for travel the country has ever known.

The New York World's Fair will be the greatest international exhibit ever held. All the nations of the world will have their own buildings on the Fair grounds, where they will show the products of their countries in the most attractive setting they can devise. Many nations have agreed to spend more than a million dollars on their exhibits. Every state in the Union will have its own pavilion to show the best of the country what makes or grows, and the Federal Government will display its national activities in a $2,500,000 exhibit.

EDUCATION Doesn't Hurt A Great Fair is, perhaps, the greatest of educational institutions. The education is easy to take because it is mingled with entertainment. I have been going to World's Fairs all my life, and I can attribute a large part of my education to things I saw at the big shows from the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876 on. As a small boy, I got my first understanding of mechanical power by watching the great Corliss engine in Machinery Hall. The huge statue of Columbus out of butter-land in a dairy state upon my childhood's imagination. I saw Prof. Bell's first crude telephone and Dr. Brush's primitive steam train when they first came to general use a few years later.

Chicago's Columbia Exposition of 1893 certainly enlarged my knowledge of the world and other South American countries. I learned as much about China as I could have got in a year of travel there. At the San Francisco Fair of 1904, where I got acquainted with Prince Paul-Louis, nephew of the Emperor of Russia. I expect to matriculate my education at the New York and San Francisco World's Fairs of 1939.

LAND Man-made The New York World's Fair and that in San Francisco are being built on "made" land which will become public parks after they are over. That, too, is custom, as in World's Fairs. Philadelphia Centennial left Fairmont Park as an inheritance for the people. Chicago's Columbia Exposition made what is now Jackson Park, and so on.

New York World's Fair is going up on what was a combination of mosquito-breeding swamp and ash dump, between the suburbs of Corona and Flushing on Long Island, close to the geographical center of the great city which covers five counties. The city bought the land for a future park and leased it to the World's Fair management, who spent millions of dollars, and an incredible amount of labor in filling the swamp, removing the rocks and sand, and straightening the lakes and water courses. After the Fair the city will have a huge waterfront park to play in.

San Francisco Fair of 1939 will be on a brand-new island in beautiful San Francisco Bay "Treasure Island" has been built on the bottom of the bay, over a rocky shoal which used to be a danger to ships. When the Fair is over, the people of San Francisco and the cities east of the Bay in Alameda county will have left a beautiful recreation spot.

OCCASION For Fairs All the World's Fairs I know about have had an occasion or an excuse for being held at a certain place at a given time, usually to celebrate an anniversary of some important event. Philadelphia celebrated the 100th Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, and

The occasion for the New York World's Fair of 1939 is the 150th anniversary of the beginning of our American republic. On April 30, 1789, George Washington stood on the balcony of Federal Hall, at Wall and Broad streets in New York City, and took the oath of office as the first President of the United States of America under the new Constitution of the United States. That is what New York will celebrate with its World's Fair in 1939. It is something to celebrate it was the common experience of government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Everybody then, and it couldn't be any last. Well, it has outlasted every form of government that existed in 1789. The United States is now the oldest nation in the world, as well as the happiest and most successful to me it seems like a successful experiment.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON Written Each Week By SHEPHERD W. KEEFER, Pastor of The Methodist Church Subject: Christian Fellowship; I John 1:7; Revelation 21:7. Golden Text: "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ." John, the Apostle, gives us two intimate glimpses of Christian fellowship. One is in the walk of the life together, and the other is the prospective fellowship which awaits all of God's children in the New Jerusalem. Fellowship is one of the few essentials of life. Just imagine what it would be like if you were the only person in the world. You would soon die, because there would be no fellowship. Man, to live, must become a part of some one else, and must have some one into whom he may tell himself of him. We must have a share of others, and share ourselves with each other. To live in such a relationship with others is to have fellowship one with another. In the Christian life, where brethren walk together in fellowship, the fellowship depends on a common understanding. It is not that two walk together unless they be agreed," says the Scriptures. To there, must be agreement to be fellowship that is helpful and satisfying.

This is afforded in Jesus Christ. John says: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of Life that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ." Here then the secret of fellowship. Each of those who have shared in the experience of life in Christ Jesus, have become alike in desire and in principle, have been made to want the same thing to be more like Christ and to serve Him with the common experience of a commonness which produces fellowship. These who are Christ's then, can walk together in a common understanding, which is the fellowship of Christ and the Father here on earth.

This fellowship of earth among Christians (for no other but God's children can know it) is an earthly portion of the rich and complete fellowship which shall be among God's children in the new Heaven and new earth. Thus, in Revelation John gives us a picture of unhindered, complete fellowship with each other in the presence of God and the Son. "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and he shall be with them, and they shall be his people. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." This is the fellowship of which our earthly walk is but a slight portion. It is enough to make us want to be included in this great group of God's people. If we will enter into the fellowship of Christ here, we shall come into the full fellowship there. Jesus is the way in. Those who trust him may enter.

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE Strength is most important for you get through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nutriment to build up the system. The chances that are being taken, are being taken. It is helpful to many women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete formation of food into living tissue. "Thin Ice" To Be Feature At Cozy

A slow musical accompaniment for a ballet is always in order, provided the dancers aren't equipped with ice-skates.

Sidney Lanfield, who directed Soap Hensie and Tyrone Power in the Twentieth Century-Fox and magnificent musical, "Thin Ice," which opens Friday and Saturday night at the Cozy Theatre, had that assertion proved to him during the filming of one of the skating numbers.

Miss Hensie attempted to convince him that the music was too slow for the ice ballet, that it should be as fast as the large symphony orchestra was playing for it.

Director Lanfield agreed to try it both ways, and at his signal the entire group of skaters galvanized into action. At the first note of music they began an intricate time step and as the music beat faster, the troupe, including Miss Hensie, started a rap routine. Suddenly they broke into pairs, with the boys whirling the girls and changing into the modernist dances.

The "take" was successful, but Lanfield held to his promise and ordered the musicians to play fast. Immediately the difference was apparent. With the tempo quickened, the skaters dazzled the studio observers with their rapidity of movement.

Of course, the difference was only apparent, and in its place was a frenzied movement of beautiful patterns on ice. When a burst of applause greeted the finale, Director Lanfield crossed the ice to the breathless Miss Hensie.

"You're a modernist," she said, "you're the boss when it comes to skating scenes."

RATS
We spend a great deal of money in maintaining a population of rats equal to the human population of the United States. It costs $100,000,000 a year to feed them, and they destroy much of our stored property, besides serving as hosts for several dangerous varieties of germs. The human that suffers this depredation make sporadic raids upon their enemy, which change the situation from the final. Directly after their mother rats have from six to nine babies in each litter and five littered every year. It does not take them long to replace the losses in their tribe.

The big human hope is to build a civilization in which there is no room for rats to live. The modernist way to do this is to use a rat poison which will wipe out a rat for another kind, but a sanitary inspector will begin by making a survey. He will know that hope of rubbish in the yard or of old furniture in the attic make breeding homes for rats, he will look for space between walls or under floors. He will detect the presence of rats from marks of their gnawing and from the excreta, and he will know whether these are recent or old. These and other things he will know if he is a properly trained sanitarian. But of course, if he is not that is appointed in order to remove them by political service, or because he is related to them.

Health Office Warns

Subject to boiling water or live steam or a chemical solution for from 30 minutes," he asserted. The Health Department requires that one of the three methods of washing and disinfecting must be employed unless disposable paper service cups are provided.

Dr. Evans urged the public, for its own protection to demand sanitary eating and drinking utensils and to avoid bare taverns, cafes and soda fountains that ignore Sanitary rules.

Expenses Step Up At Christmas Time

The shadow of cost can easily darken what should be a merry care-free time.

Those who enjoy a Christmas free from monetary cares are those who begin to prepare for it, and save for it a year in advance. In other words they joined a Christmas Club, and built it up through the year, by small hard-pressed payments, to the sum they wished to have at Christmas time, for Christmas purchases.

If you have done that, you know how easy it makes Christmas-time—the outlays required are on hand. If you have not done that, try it now; join a Christmas Club and have a care-free Christmas.
