FOR SAFER MOTORING

A bill has been introduced in both Houses of Congress providing that no more Federal-aid highway funds shall be allotted to any state which has not an adequate safety code for motorists, "particularly with respect to the licensing of drivers and the operation of vehicles."

That strikes us as a sound and sensible idea. There are thirty-one states in which no license of any kind is required for drivers. Children of any age, cripples, anybody at all, may drive. And it is in those states that the largest proportion of highway accidents and deaths occur. There are other states in which the issuing of drivers license is a mere formality, no adequate test of the applicant's ability to manage a car being required.

We are not in favor of encroachments by the Federal government upon the rights of individual states, as a general thing, but in these days when cars from every state travel so frequently into other states, there seems to be no way except by Federal interference to make the highways safe. In a sense, the proposal of the Hayden-Curtwright bill amounts to bringing before the states to do what consideration for the safety of their own people should impel them to do.

PEOPLE KEEP THEIR PROMISES

One of the most important things that the growing practice of buying goods on instalments has taught the world is that 99 people out of 100 keep their promises. That is important because, credit began to be extended to practically everybody, the markets for almost every kind of goods were limited to those who had saved up cash enough to pay for them "on the nail" or who has property assets which should be attached if they failed to keep their promises to pay.

The widespread distribution of all sorts of commodities in America, things which used to be considered luxuries only for the rich and are still so considered in other countries, is due to the recognition by business men and bankers of the essential honesty of most people. Over a period of many years it has been demonstrated that promises of average incomes will be paid, that there are laws to compel people to keep sooner or later. To be sure, there are laws to compel people to keep their promises, but in practical experience these are seldom invoked.

Our whole economic structure is based on promises, in the final analysis. A man takes a job on the employer's promise to pay him a certain sum at given intervals. He puts his wages in a bank and gets the banker's promise to return it to him when he wants it. The bank lends the money to someone else who promises to repay it at a certain time. One buys an insurance policy or a bond, the fulfillment of which is usually in the form of another promise—a piece of paper on which the Federal Reserve system or the U. S. Treasury promises to pay a certain sum on demand.

The economic system breaks down when too large a proportion of people who have made promises find themselves unable to make good. Even then, the distress is only temporary. The whole history of our system is that, in the long run, most promises are kept.

The first regular presidential boom for 1930 has been launched here with the reception and banquet to Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner to the Philippines and former Governor of Indiana and former Commander of the American Legion, Political Washington takes the McNutt boom as an omen. It is being managed by Frank McHale, Democratic National Committee man of Indiana, and is backed by Governor Towson and the regular Democratic organization of the state. A McNutt campaign fund is being raised by the "Hoosier club" which consists of two percent of the salaries of all Indiana "regular" Democratic organization office holders.

What especially interests Washington is that no sign of opposition to the McNutt boom has come from the White House or the Democratic National Committee. This is interpreted in some quarters as indicating that the President does not seek a third term for himself and is content to let others scramble for the nomination—always provided that the ones out in front are his friends.

Does Not Fight F. D. R. Gov. McNutt's supporters call him "the first New Deal governor," and declare that he will withdraw from the race if Mr. Roosevelt wins. McNutt to resign his Philippine post in August and come back to the States to start a speaking and organizing campaign.

European affairs have taken the Japanese situation out of the limelight of political interest at least for the moment. It is no secret that the shift of England's foreign policy from one of most definite ties to one of concision, thus a compromise has relieved the State Department of a considerable amount of worry. It is clear now that England is limited to results increased purchasing power is bitterly opposed by the Treasury, the Federal Housing Administration and the R. F. C.

QUININE 300 years old Malaria has been one of the most widespread scourges of the human race since the beginning of time. Not until modern times was any cure or palliative for the disease known. Only recently, it was discovered that malaria is caused by the sting of a certain type of mosquito. In thickly settled countries mosquito control by draining marshes, oblong standing water and similar measures has practically stamped out the disease, but against the present "repression" doesn't last beyond midsummer.

The end of the filibuster against the anti-typhoid bill and the pigeonholing of that measure by the Senate has cleared the way for constructive legislation. One of the important measures on which expectable delay is anticipated is the waxes-and-holes bill, which good prophets are predicting will be passed in a form which will be capable to stand the test of the country. The general principle of a 40-hour week and basic wage of 90 cents an hour is expected to be maintained. Various industries for certain classes of industries and sections of the country. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written Each Week By B. H. KAZEE Pastor of The Baptist Church

SUBJECT: PROVIDING FOR THE NEEDS OF ALL. MARK 9:30-41

GOLDEN TEXT: "Give ye them to eat." Mark 9:37.

THE APOSTLES whom Jesus sent forth in our previous lesson had gathered once more around Jesus to tell him the wonderful things that had happened in their brief ministry. Jesus knew they were tired, and he himself was tired from having taught the people long hours, so he called them to rest apart for a little while to rest and talk together.

The people were held by the wonderful things Jesus taught. They saw where the boat was probably heading for, and they came out to meet him. Jesus went to the place. To the surprise of the Apostles and Jesus there was the same great hungry crowd awaiting them, hungry for the word of God. Jesus was impressed with the condition.

They were as sheep having no shepherd. Jewish religion had neglected, desiring something for heart hunger which afflicted them, and they were so eager to get away from him that they thought Jesus even though they languished in hunger physically. Had not Jesus said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you?" This was the time to make them realize that they were seeking in vain and hunger. So will it be with all who seek him earnestly. This does not mean that if we give our time to the Lord that He will provide for us without our working for it. But it does mean that when His work is more important than providing for our own needs, He will see to it that we have what we need. It is more important sometimes that we learn how to live as God knows how. He is not in our way without the knowledge of God.

Jesus shows his sympathy. He calls for something to feed the multitude. The Apostles respond: "We have nothing." Without Jesus they were right. But with Him they were wrong. A boy is found with a little lunch. That little lunch placed in the hands of a great Christ makes enough for any multitude. So they are seated and fed and strengthened physically as well as spiritually.

God is interested in the physical welfare of all people. There is no thing we might remember: If this nation, or even a community, or the world as a whole, would give attention to that thing of God first, there would be no depressions, no lack of this world's need, no poor, no rich, no class hatred, no working conditions, no strikes, no oppressive capitalists. We would all have a brotherly concern for each other, and God would been put into experimental use. Inside the sets is a roll of paper on which news bulletins are written as they are sent out from a central office. It runs all night and all day, and at any time you can tear off a strip from the roll and read all the important news. The system proves practical, one effect may be cut down the circulation of at least morning newspapers. But that day seems far distant.

C. C. C.'s Start On Another Bridge

Construction of the third major bridge on the Cumberland National Forest has been started, was the announcement received today from the Forest Supervisor's Office at Winchester. The bridge will span the Red River in Wolfe County and replace a temporary wooden structure now in use.

The new bridge will be built on masonry, abutments are the past forty years ago. It will consist of two 65-foot spans and one 120-foot span. The steel has been delivered to the site, that is near the mouth of Swift Camp Creek and "Sky Bridge." Work of building the bridge will be done by the veterans from CCC camp located at Bowling Green.

Bridges of similar size and construction, located in Jackson and Rowan Counties are now nearing completion. With the completion of the new Red River Bridge, one of the most beautiful scenic loops in Eastern Kentucky will have been finished. This route from Pine Ridge on Route Kentucky 15 to Frenchburg on Route Kentucky 40 passes "Sky Bridge," a remarkable natural stone arch, and travels through the beautiful Red River Gorge. Many hundreds of motorists are already traveling the route annually.

Thoroughbreds Don't Cry, Is Cozy Feature

When the cameraman poses Sophie Tucker with a frying pan in one hand, there's no make-believe about those pictures. "Cook!" says Sophie. "You bet I can cook. I used to be one."

While Sophie did not earn her sobriquet of the "Red Hot Mama" because of the fact that she worked over a red hot stove, it is a fact that she first earned her keep working in her father's Boston restaurant.

An exile from Russia, he opened that Boston restaurant, serving twenty-five cent meals and peddling money at it. "City slicker" talked him into trading it for a New York establishment, however, but he arrived in the metropolis to discover that he had acquired a little shack in a neighborhood with no trade. The family started back to Boston Court, and there managed to begin business over again.

Sophie was seven years old at the time, but she worked like an adult just the same.

"Today I employ a cook," she said, "but my cook always knows that I know the kitchen. And now we kept rooming house in Hartford, too, and during my school years I was compelled to get up at four o'clock the morning, build fire, make beds and clean the house. And then, before I went to school, I started the breakfast going."

The day she graduated from grammar school, Sophie decided that she would be a sleazy no longer. That was when she started singing in the restaurant and found that the patrons liked it. So she ran away to New York, became a café singer, eventually turned home a Broadway star. But she still could cook.

A stellar screen personality as a result of her work in "Broadway Melody of 1936," Miss Tucker now receives her first opportunity in a straight dramatic role in "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry," curiously enough, it's that of the proprietress of a boarding house for jockeys.

"Could I play it? Did I like it?" Sophie said. "Say, all I had to do was think back to the days in Hartford and just be myself."

See "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry," at the City Theatre starting Sunday through Monday.

Strawberry plants should be set as early in spring as the soil can be worked. It is seldom possible to get a good start when planting is done in this spring. Most growers make rows four feet apart, and set plants 24 inches apart in the row.

Spring hats for women flash with color, and come with daring color combinations. Certain tones of red, purple, blue, yellow and green, lots of blue, and blue-violet, natural, burn tones and greens are smart. Some of the lothes are called candy or ice cream colors.

KATHERINE HEPBURN Ten Thousand Dollars For One Day Work — Yet She Crosses In The Steerage

One night not so many years ago, a scrawny, red headed little girl in Connecticut strolled confidently onto her school platform to recite The Battle of Blenheim. Her freckled face was scrubbed clean. In the audience sat her mother and father, her five brothers and sisters, all beaming with anticipation. It was to be a big occasion. As little Katie opened her mouth to say the opening lines, she was struck dumb with stage fright. She choked and gasped; tears welled up in her eyes; and finally in utter disgrace she turned and fled from the platform.

Katherine Hepburn was only thirteen years old then. At just twice that age, she was winning medals for her outstanding performances in moving pictures—in 1933 for her work in Morning Glory; in 1934, for Little Women.

She was next given an important role in Death Takes a Holiday. But she never even got to Broadway with that play. She was fired in Philadelphia, fired while she was training helped her to make good in leaving Amazon in The Warriors Husband. And what a lively Amazon she made.

Her performance was so striking that Hollywood heard about her, gave a screen test, and sent her a telegram asking how much salary she wanted. Hollywood thought she would ask two hundred or possibly two hundred and fifty a week. So when her agent wired the Holly wood executives that Miss Hepburn would be willing to come for fifteen hundred a week, they thought it was a typographical error. They wired to the agent and asked if the telegraph company hadn't added an extra cipher by mistake.

Back came the answer, stinging but "No, I am the one that made the mistake. Fifteen hundred a week is too little."

She has made seven trips to Europe in the steerage; and she made one trip in the steerage even after Hollywood had paid her fifteen hundred a week. She doesn't like to waste good money on a first-class passage when she is positive beforehand that she's going to be so sick that she doesn't know whether she is traveling in a ship or on a Sheelandy.

She's a sharp girl when it comes to a bargain. After she had finished the picture, Spittire, and fulfilled her part of the contract, it was discovered that another scene had to be made. She was called back; and it is said on good authority that for one day's additional work, she received the tidy little sum of ten thousand dollars. She is probably the only girl in history who ever did that. And as one Scotchman to another, Katie—congratulations!

The Pleiades And The Hyades

Almost all people are acquainted with the Pleiades or Seven Sisters, or simply the Seven Stars. Step out at night as soon as it is dark enough to see the stars well, before the moon rises. You can see the just west of the meridian, almost in the zenith. Most eyes can see only six of them, but the telescope reveals about two hundred and fifty of them. Alcyone is the name of the brightest one in the group. Astronomers tell us they are about three hundred and twenty-five light years from us.

The Hyades are a little southeast of the Pleiades, and they are marked by the large red star Aldebaran. They are in the form of a V with the apex pointing southwest. Aldebaran is in the northeast end of one side of the V. It is said to be fifty-five light years from us. Astronomers tell us that the other stars of the Hyades are one hundred and thirty light years away from us. These two star groups, the Pleiades and the Hyades, together compose the constellation Taurus, the bull. If you will watch the moon when it gets into this constellation, you can know the signs are in the neck, without consulting your almanac. Try watching this moon and see. Next we shall try to find Orion, the most conspicuous constellation in the heavens. Orion was the warrior and is represented as having his belt around his body with his sword hanging to him. Look a little south-east, or nearly east; and you will see a group of four large stars, forming a parallelogram. In the center of that you will see three smaller stars all of the same size and in a straight line running angular across the parallelogram. This is Orion's belt. Then three smaller stars extending due south from that are his sword. It might be well to remember that the celestial equator passes through his belt. The most conspicuous star in this constellation is Rigel. It is in the south-west corner of the parallelogram. The next largest one is Betelgeuse. In the north-east corner of the parallelogram.

These two stars are of the first magnitude. Betelgeuse is said to be about one hundred and ninety light years away. All the other stars of Orion are from five to six hundred light years away from the earth. Betelgeuse and Rigel both outline our sun many, many times, and they are much larger.

To locate Orion, stand facing the south, hold your hand up at arm length, fingers pointing to the South, then shut one eye and your hand will just about fall between the four stars of the parallelogram. The belt and the sword which are in the center of the parallelogram will be completely hidden by the hand.

and shortly the population of Mulvane was increased by the fine boy. From that time on, his life was hot or cold, night or day. Dr. Shell ministered to the sick.

Wet or Dry, Dirty or Clean

"What was your most interesting experience, doctor?" I asked.

"Well," he answered, "one dark night when it was raining cats and dogs, I went into the country to usher another little one into this world of trouble. When we came to Cowskin Creek the ford was high with water, and my horse and I were both swamped. Turning over and over and finally landed a mile down stream, I was dead than alive. But I got to the home in time and attended my patient for my wet clothes. There was no time to waste." And the people in Mulvane say he has never lost another child.

Proper cutting of set potatoes should leave a thick, fleshy piece about the size of a pig's egg. It should have at least one good eye, though more do not matter. This is true even of the "bottom-end" piece. Do not cut away "stra eyes."

Started With $2.40

In talking with the good Doctor he told me he arrived in town on a pony that he bought for $15.00 and opened an office with only $2.40 in real money in his pocket. He was 23 years of age then and faced the future with a heart full of confidence and good will toward men. While he was hanging up his sign a man hastened to him and asked "Are you the doctor?" Replaying in the affirmative, the man grabbed him by the arm and said: "Come with me immediately." With his brand new medical kit in his hand he hurried to a house

HALDEMAN

The Fourth Grade, taught by Margaret Stewart have been studying the life of the Holland people. This unit has been spread over many weeks of study. Practically every phase of Holland life has been studied. There has been much free hand drawing, a moving picture show, and a play which depicts the life of Holland was worked out. On Wednesday night the play and an exhibit of the work was given before the P. T. A. This was the climax of their study of his unit.

The new school building at Haldeman is nearing completion. The plastering is now in progress. Those who have never seen the building should see this wonderful school building which is modern in every respect. Mr. Laughlin will be glad to show you the building.

GIVES 10 WAYS TO MAKE POULTRY PAY

Ten ways to make money from chickens are suggested by Dr. J. Holmes Martin of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, in advocating the following of the national poultry improvement plan. The sub suggests that farmers check on the following points:

1. Start with production-bred, healthy chicks; Start chicks in time to have fall and winter eggs.
2. Keep clean, sanitary surroundings.
3. Feed a balanced ration the whole growing period.
4. House only the strong, vigorous, large pullets.
5. Don't allow parasites, either inside or on the chick.
6. Keep the ration balanced, even for full-grown birds.
7. Keep an ample supply of fresh clean water.
8. Provide a laying house that is comfortable and clean.
9. Cull often, and sell unprofitable birds.
10. There are many protective features in the interest of buyers who patronize hatcheries following the national plan, the poultry expert advises. This includes regular inspection of the plants, honest advertising, all chicks hatched from eggs weighing 23 ounces or more to the dozen, and assurance of careful selection of breeding stock.

Kentucky has combined two phases of the work, carrying on at the same time the breed-improvement work and the pullet control classes. Farmers already are obtaining lower costs and greater profits, though the national plan was started in this state only in 1935.

begin in May, 1938, and lasted until March, 1937, when it was terminated by an agreement which the company has flagrantly disregarded.

Triumph for Labor

"I regard the decision as of great importance to labor," said President William Green of the A. F. of L. "The court's ruling can only be interpreted as a complete vindication of the action of the A. F. of L. and the workers involved in the strike for the exercise of the right of collective bargaining."

"We hail the decision of the court as a triumph for labor. It will be the purpose of the American Federation of Labor to continue the fight until the principles laid down by the court are applied throughout Remington-Rand factories."

The Circuit Court's decision, violation of which is now punishable as contempt, requires the Rand management to:

Cost's Findings Summarized

1. Recognize and bargain collectively with the District Council of Office Equipment Workers (a central body composed of local unions of the Machinists, the Molders, the Metal Polishers and directly affiliated A. F. of L. legal organizations representing miscellaneous workers) as the exclusive representative of all factory employees at the company's eight plants in Connecticut, New York and Ohio.
2. Cease discouraging in any manner, membership in any of those organizations.
3. Withdraw all recognition from the Rand "company union", and cease giving it any support, financial or otherwise.

Must Re-Employ Strikers

1. Re-Employ with back wages, 28 workers whose discharge from union activities was one of the factors contributing to the strike.
2. Reinstatement of former strikers to jobs they previously held. It is estimated that this will affect more than 1,500 persons.

No Change Made In Old-Age Insurance

There is no change in the 1938 rate of contribution for Old-Age Insurance, it was announced today by M. E. Vaughan, manager of the Lexington field office of the Social Security Board.

"This year and next the employee and employer continue to contribute one percent each for old-age insurance," Mr. Vaughan added.

"One percent is deducted from the wages of all persons who are employed in occupations covered by the Social Security Act. A like amount is added by the employer, the combined contributions being sent to the United States Collector of Internal Revenue each quarter, instead of monthly as heretofore."

"Contributions for the first three months of 1938 are due not later than April 30 under this arrangement," Mr. Vaughan said.

He said the Social Security Act provides for an increase in employer-employee contributions to 1.52 percent starting January 1, 1940.

Contribution rates under the various unemployment compensation laws reach their maximum this year.

In Region V, which is the social security unit under which the Lexington office is operated, are three states, Ohio, Michigan, and Kentucky. The unemployment compensation laws of these states provide the following state contribution rates for 1938: Michigan, employ-

LABOR BOARD'S UPHELD

Charges of "wholesale violation" of the Wagner Connally law, made against Remington-Rand, Inc., by the Machinists' Union and two other A. F. of L. affiliates and upheld in a unanimous decision of the National Labor Relations Board last March, were sustained this week in a unanimous decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at New York.

The court's decision is regarded as a complete vindication of the justice of the strike of Rand's 6,000 factory employees—a walkout which

5. You will enjoy economy—the cost is only a few cents a day, price of a few trifling knickknacks.

More than 2,000,000 households, mostly in moderate circumstances, now use electric cooking. Let us give you a free demonstration without obligation, and explain our easy purchase terms.

Love Letters by Baslan Eagle

Mont was predatory, there was no denying that. If he loved at all it was with a man's love that I had only for instances, for episodes of the sort he had sought the night before. Even now, Natalie had no doubt, he was weighing first his chances of success with one girl and then with the other.

And honestly as she could she tried to stymie those chances for herself. For her own part, she knew she was playing with fire. She was fighting the aged-woman's fight without the advantages, she knew, when something within would trick her. Always there would be some part of her that would hold out arms of surrender to Mont Wallace.

But at last, she was sure of her own victory. Reason and breeding were strong anchors and in them she had full confidence so long as she did not try them too far. As for Sunny Marion, Natalie was not sure. There was force in the girl but in a measure, for it was the spirit of spoiled, against the yearnings of her own heart, she felt, Sunny would not be strong.

There was a mad drive along the mountain roads, with Mont at the wheel of Sunny's car. But they arrived at the hotel, slightly shaken by the perils of the trip. They were persuaded to steady their nerves with cocktails.

There was another shriek and the flash of a white dress across the balcony. A ghostly figure rose at the parrot and then Mont Wallace stepped to the balcony floor. Sunny was hysterical with fear when they dragged her back from that wall. Mont reached her just in time.

Apparently she had gone farther than she had intended. She had meant to give them a scare and then had found herself away up steadily over the lip of the abyss. Her screams echoed across the canyon as Mont caught her and drew her back to the balcony floor. Natalie clung to her and tried to quiet her.

But she laughed at him and fended him easily. "I ought to drag you out of here, he declared furiously. "I ought to take you the way men used to take their women. Why should I play the game of the same sport? You would love me in a minute if I took you and made you like it."

They had driven to a famous mountain resort for the occasion and Sunny, as was often the case, had taken one or two stiff drinks before setting out. Mont had been seized by a business conference where highballs tended to speed negotiations and, for the first time, Natalie saw that he was not quite himself.

They had missed their reservations and were forced to wait until the shaker was cleared so that the huge shaker was filled and emptied more than once before they took their places. Jimmy held his drink early, becoming even more talkative than usual but steady of hand and clear of eye. Mont Wallace, on the other hand, grew drowsy and inattentive.

With dinner and the liquors following, Jimmy grew sentimental and Mont a little quarrelsome, so that there was an edge to his banter, which was directed mostly at Sunny. At each sally the girl screamed with laughter, apparently delighted at his abuse.

He caught Natalie by the hand and drew her onto the dance floor. The girl realized at once that there was something in the air between them. He held her a little more tightly than usual and with the exception of the dancing she presently found herself treading so that she could hardly follow the music.

"I'm sorry," she whispered when she missed a change in his step. "Never mind," he replied her brusquely. "What do we care how we dance? I'm still made about you. I wish you could really care about me."

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE OLD CRACKER BARREL

Jim Perkins ran a grocery store many years ago on Main Street. Jim was well liked by his customers because he exchanged the news of the day and settled the affairs of the nation.

Over in one corner of the store, stood a big barrel of crackers. Minnie the cat used to sleep on the crackers when the customers were not helping themselves to a little lunch.

All of this has changed today due to national advertising. Improvements in manufacturing and modern packaging has made it possible to put better crackers in an airtight package, wrapped in wax paper, this insuring cleanliness and freshness from oven to you.

National advertising in newspapers, built a volume of business for Jim so that these crackers sell for five cents and the quality is consistent with the manufacturers name which appears on each box. There is a reasonable profit for the local grocer in the sale as well as for the manufacturer.

Nationally advertised crackers or any other nationally advertised products are the best you dollar will buy and are more consistent in quality because of national brand advertising in this newspaper and others throughout the country. You, the consumer, have purchased these national brands of gasoline, foods, household goods, automobiles, drugs and beverages advertised in this newspaper and thus made possible lower prices to you due to the tremendous volume.

Buy nationally advertised brands from your local dealer featured in this newspaper.
