

Morehead High Meets Breck In District

Two Morehead Teams To Compete On Friday Night In District Tournament

The district tournament to be held at Morehead, under the auspices of Morehead High School will probably fulfill the gloomiest outlook for the Vikings and for the attendance, since the drawing for places and opponents held here last Saturday, Morehead High School's Vikings, drew Breckbridge Training School, winners of the regional last year and a team of veterans who are considered likely to romp away with Roy E. Holbrook's sophomores team.

Coach Holbrook, who based his hopes for a fair crowd on the luck of the draw, had hopes of drawing either Haldeman or Station Hook for the first game. Then, with ordinary luck, he could have in all probability played in the finals and had expected one good crowd. However, he is now hoping against hope and that in his mind is a very slim chance. His team is confident of the underdog in the betting, with no takers.

The schedule for the tournament: Thursday, 8 p. m., Sandy Hook vs. Haldeman. Friday, 8 p. m., Morehead Vikings vs. Breck Eagles. Saturday, 8 p. m., finals. A junior high tournament will be held as a preliminary each night between the junior teams from each of the four schools.

Referee: Dick Gallagher.

Eagles Lose Two, Win One In Past Week

A bad week just passed for the Eagles and an equally bad one is in prospect, as the Birds met Western and Murray, topping off a full schedule Saturday night by closing their season at Winchester where they play their second game with Wesleyan College.

Last Wednesday night, the Eagles played a stalling game until the last three minutes held a strong Murray team close throughout the unexciting contest. The Eagles conceded defeat from the second half, until three minutes before the final whistle, when Ishmael was inserted into the game to pep it up.

From the spectator's standpoint it was one of the most uninteresting contests ever witnessed. The huge crowd which packed the gymnasium, became restless and an angry game progressed repeatedly called for the Eagles to shoot. However, the boys failed to respond.

As the second half began, the

Eagles Drop Holbrook In Close Game, 45-40

Holbrook College of Manchester, Ohio, threw a scare into the Eagles of Morehead State Teachers College. The visitors jumped into a commanding lead at the opening work game and the Eagles were apparently unable to get started. The varsity was finally jerked as a whole and the second string was sent in. The Holbrook boys led at the half.

The second half saw the Eagles turn on a little more heat and forge ahead, but the score was even at the end, the Eagles leading 45-40 as the final whistle blew.

These votes are in addition to the regular schedule and the extra club awards.

The same schedule of bonus awards will be offered following week. These awards have two big things in them: to pile up their votes.

Dr. T. A. E. Evans Is Recovering From Illness

Taken Seriously Last Week, Is Better Now

Dr. T. A. E. Evans is recovering from a very serious heart ailment, which struck him last Wednesday, while at his home in Farmers. Dr. Evans has been seriously ill since that time. He was found lying on his bed in an unconscious condition Wednesday morning. He was found by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dewann Evans, after he failed to come down stairs at his usual time.

Dr. Evans has been working strenuously for the past month or more fighting the small pox epidemic. During that period he and his assistants vaccinated several thousand citizens of the county, and it is thought that Dr. Evans overtaxed himself.

He is at present able to be out, but is not yet able to assume his full duties, as County Health doctor.

HELP A CHILD TO WALK

There are 3384 crippled children on the waiting list of the Kentucky Crippled Children Commission to whom treatment has not yet been given due to lack of funds. Although the state Legislature has appropriated $55,000 a year for the next two years, the increasing needs partly caused by the infantile paralysis epidemic of last year are such that this amount will not make it possible to carry on the program needed.

The Kentucky Society for Crippled Children, a voluntary organization open to all who contribute to the crippled children's work, has launched a campaign for $50,000. The aim of this Society, the Rotary Clubs, American Legion, Parent-Teachers Association, Women's Clubs, Kiwanis Clubs, and many other organizations in sponsoring such a campaign is to make this effort as far-reaching as possible.

As long as there is a child in Kentucky who with treatment, surgery, hospitalization, braces, crutches or other assistance can be given a chance to walk, every effort should be exerted to extend a hand of assistance.

The sentiment of the people has been demonstrated in local clinics. Doctors have given generously of their time, but funds are required for hospitalization, equipment and transportation.

Those who will join in this campaign will be helping children to walk.

SNOWSUNS AND THE WEATHER

This winter, so far, has been the most trying for several years. In Florida, six frosts before the middle of February are, it must be conceded, unusual weather, to put it mildly. The North has alternated between torrential rains, sharp freezes with the thermometer dropping to a record low, heavy snows and gales on both coasts. Europe has been having much the same experience.

The Weather Bureau at Washington declines to blame the freakish weather on sunspots, but astronomers point out that the next few weeks have been a period of violent magnetic storms on the sun's surface. That sunspots are a cause of the aurora borealis and of electrical disturbances and manifestations of various kinds in the Earth's atmosphere, scientists have proven conclusively. It seems reasonable, therefore, to blame other freaks of the weather on them.

There is no other topic about which people talk so much and do so little as the weather. Sunspots at least give a new angle to weather conversations.

LIGHT ON INSECT PESTS

A California scientist has reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science successful tests of his discovery that insects are attracted by specific colors, so that lights of different colors can be used to lure different kinds of bugs to their deaths in electrical traps. The grape leaf hopper pays no attention to red or green lights but flies directly to a pale blue light. By putting a colored light inside a cage surrounded by electrically charged wires, one such trap proved enough to protect an acre of vineyard.

This discovery holds great economic possibilities for the farmer. It may prove the winning weapon in the endless war between man and the insect world. Insect pests cost the American farmer more than two billion dollars a year, it is estimated.

All that needs to be done, it would seem, to protect cornfields, cotton-fields, orchards, citrus groves and other crops from insect ravages is to find out just what colored lights the corn-borers, grasshoppers, chinchings, boll-weevils and the thousand other crop-devourers prefer, and light up the landscape accordingly.

Even if it does not kill the bugs, the night effect should be decorative.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written Each Week By
B. H. KAZER
Pastor of The Baptist Church

SUBJECT: COMRADESHIP IN CHRISTIAN SERVICE. Mk. 3:7-19, 31-35.

GOLDEN TEXT: "For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother." (Mk. 3:35.)
Thus far in Mark's narrative we have seen something of the first stage in the ministry of Jesus. This week we see that the second stage, up to this point his ministry has centered around Capernaum or Galilee, but now it begins to broaden to include people from all parts of Palestine. He has been teaching in the synagogues; now he turns to the seashore and the open air. This is due partly to the opposition in the synagogues and partly to the need for more room to accommodate his audiences.

The work of our Lord has continued to grow in popularity. His work of healing and the gospel for the poor has reached many a heart, and now the crowds throng after him. The open air is more favorable to his message. In the synagogue the formality of centuries of religion held him bound; in the open air, which hindered him. His fresh, new message needed freedom, and he withdrew from the synagogues to find it.

As his popularity grows, his work becomes heavier, and he needs help. Then, too, the opposition that comes from his critics because the people are accepting his gospel, bears down upon him with heaviness. He must have help. So, he goes out into the mountain and spends the night in prayer. Mark does not tell us the details, but it is important that we pray when naming those whom God has appointed to serve in his Gospel. "Pray for them, that the Lord of the harvest."

The next morning he calls to him, "whom he will" and "ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sickness, and to cast out devils." Only God-called men can preach and do the work of the ministry.

A fine thing here is that he called them "first" that they should be with him. First they were to be with him to be trained. Three years Jesus trained his preachers, but all the while he gave them active work in the ministry. The choosing of help did not end Jesus' difficulties. The crowds pressed upon him, and so did the opposition. They said he was almost insane. His mother and his brethren came to see him. It is a hard job when our own people fail to understand us, especially our mothers. But that is what happened. So Jesus said, "There is a better understanding of Christian comradeship than just our family connection. All those who do the will of God, they are my mother and my brethren. Real kinship is not physical but spiritual. One may find brother is a stranger who understands him, while his own mother and brothers of the flesh fail in their sympathy and understanding.

The first law to be enacted as a part of the Administration's new recovery program, the Housing Act, was passed over the opposition of the American Federation of Labor. That is regarded here as signifying that the split between William Green's A. F. of L. and John Lewis's Committee on Industrial Organization has resulted in breaking the power of the "Labor Lobby" has for so long exercised over Congress. This is such a revolutionary condition that its full significance has not yet dawned upon Senators and Representatives who have long been accustomed to jumping whenever Organized Labor cracks the whip.

Labor Lobby Split

"Labor" used to mean the A. F. of L. nothing else. Therefore, when Senator Lodge of Massachusetts introduced an amendment providing that all workers on buildings constructed under the new Housing Act must be paid at the "prevailing rate of wages," and President William Green of the Federation demanded that that provision be put into the bill, it seemed a foregone conclusion that the Lodge amendment would stick. And so it would have except for the fact that Mr. Lewis of the C. I. O. declined to give it his benediction.

There was no open statement in opposition by Mr. Lewis, but the world was quietly passed around that his feelings would not be hurt if the Lodge amendment were overlooked. For the first time in years, the ranks of Organized Labor are split. Instead of one Labor Lobby there are two. And the net result, so far as Congress is concerned, is to weaken the power of Labor to influence legislation.

High Wages Would Stop Boom

The introduction of the Lodge amendment, which called for payment of "prevailing rate wages," on housing construction eligible for the mortgage guarantee provisions of the Act, lies in the fact that "prevailing rate of wages" has been interpreted by many courts to mean "highest union scale." Since the high A. F. of L. wages scales in the building trades are regarded as one of the chief obstacles to revival of the building industry, the belief in Congress amounted to a conviction that insisting upon them in the new law would make it impossible for the purpose of the law to be achieved. That purpose is to build new homes, put more craftsmen to work in the building industries.

But while the Labor Lobby met defeat for the first time in an important engagement, the most powerful of all the Congressional Lobbies—Labor having ranked as second—won its first skirmish in its newest attack upon the Treasury. This is the Veterans' Lobby. The combination of war veterans has been more than a match for several presidents. If defeated Mr. Roosevelt on the bonus when he was at the height of his political power and personal prestige, the Veterans' Lobby is behind a drive to provide pensions for widows and orphans of World War veterans, whether they saw service in the field or not, Washington observers of pension history are unanimous in the belief that the Veterans' Lobby will win this campaign, as it and its predecessors have won every previous pension drive.

Pension Parade Marches On

At the beginning of the World War, the statesmen in Washington having in mind the scandals of the old pension system under the lobbying tactics of the Grand Army of the Republic, which had grown to such strength that it was nearly half a century the most powerful political force in the nation, established the War Risk Insurance System, the purpose of which was to provide adequately for disabled service men and the dependents of those dying in the war.

RADIO is a farside visitor. A short time ago the Federal Communication Commission warned one of the big broadcasting companies that unless they agreed that they were likely to lose their licenses if they ever put another program on the air like one which will brought an avalanche of protests from indignant listeners, because it overstepped the bounds of public decency and good taste.

It popped thousands to protest that such censorship of the radio was an infringement of the rights of free speech. Of course, it is nothing of the sort. No one has a right to come into your home and use language which offends you or your family or tell stories which you do not want your children to hear.

Radio is different from the theater, the movies or the press. It can be seen in newspapers, magazines and books out of the home. We can keep our children away from offensive plays, although it is difficult—choose what movies they can see. But the voice of the radio comes right into the living room.

Every possible control should be used that it does not defile our homes and offend our sense of decency by speaking the language of the gutter where our children can hear it.

SPEECH is a careful master the surest road to access is to master the surest road to do not mean the ability to make speeches, but to speak the English language the way people of education and refinement speak it. The very man young woman who naturally uses words which express the speaker's meaning plainly, concisely and to the point, is the one who correctly has an invaluable asset; for when he talks to people whose decisions may make out

From the crowd who use slipshod English, incorrectly pronounced. The use of bad English is not so much from ignorance as from carelessness. Employers do not want help with either of those faults. Incorrect pronunciation is a mark of inattention or of poor breeding. Too many unfortunate children never heard good English spoken even by schoolteachers.

Nothing galls me so much as to hear attractive and intelligent persons pronounce common words incorrectly. It is a sign that they either do not know or do not care what impression they make. My pet peeve is to hear someone who ought to know better pronounce "address" with the accent on the first syllable.

LIQUOR in moderation Now that the sale of liquor is again legal in almost every state, a great deal more attention is being given to the study of the effects of alcohol on the human body. A great deal of what used to be taught by the "embrace" lectures and schoolbooks in my youth is being reworked in the light of modern scientific inquiry to be largely by bank.

We used to be shown horrible pictures of the drinker's inhuman, plotting how alcohol caused many terrible diseases and surely hurried its victims to an early grave. Some of us wondered in childhood, how it was that Uncle Ezra Peters and the hard-drinking Rollins family, all grandparents, happened to be spryer and live longer than many good deacons who never touched a drop. It is not fair to children to teach them lies, even in a worthy cause.

Now the state text-book board of Virginia has approved new school books, which will teach Virginia children the truth which every modern doctor knows—that the use of liquor in moderation is not harmful to people in good health. It is up to the parents and schools of today to teach moderation it seems to me.

INSURANCE at a low cost in Massachusetts, the mutual or non-profit savings banks have been issuing life insurance policies for more than thirty years. Their experience has shown that it is up to large numbers of people that the governors of New York and Rhode Island are now urging the adoption of similar systems for their state.

What the Massachusetts plan amounts to is the largest insurance protection at the lowest cost to the insured, and the most convenient way of taking out insurance and making the regular payments. Policies are limited to $1,000 and monthly premiums are paid at the savings bank or deducted from the insured's saving account.

There is no need for a man or woman to provide for old age or for the support of those left behind as is life insurance. For those who cannot afford to buy large policies, I know of no better way than the Massachusetts plan.

CHURCH re-uniting When I was young good people were concerned with the precise steps on the road to salvation. My first wife, who went, I am sure, to Heaven in her youth, was reared a Baptist, and could not get a letter to my church, the Presbyterian, so we compromised by both joining the Methodists in a new confession of faith.

As I get older, I see that we are all traveling to the same destination, and that nothing can be more silly and un-Christian than for church folk to quarrel among themselves over forms, rituals, vestments and dogmas. The aim of all the churches is to lead people to better lives. What difference does it make which path they choose as long as they have the same mountain to climb. No church promises an easy way to glory.

Hungry, Cold And Despondent, She Tried To Commit Suicide And Lived To Become One Of The Greatest Singers

MADAME SCHUMANN HEIK

The story of how Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heik sang herself up to the golden aura of fame, in spite of hunger and heartbreak and despair is one of the most extraordinary tales in the whole lurid history of Grand Opera.

Her struggle for success was bitter and hard. She became so discouraged, so despondent, that she tried to commit suicide. Her marriage had proved to be a tragedy. Her husband had gone his way, leaving her saddled with his debts, and according to the German law in those days, a wife was responsible for her husband's debts. So the sheriff took away all her furniture.

except a chair and a bed. When she got a job singing now and then, the sheriff took away most of her pay. Six hours before her third child was born she was singing. She was in agony at the time; but she had to sing, because she had to feed her babies. When winter came, her children cried with hunger and shivered from cold, for she couldn't buy fuel to keep the bare room warm.

Some months before her death, she invited me to come and have dinner with her in Chicago, and promised to cook the dinner herself. Then she added, "If you tell me I am a great singer, I will like that, but if you have dinner with me then say, 'Schumann-Heik, that is the best soup I ever ate then you will be a friend of mine forever.'"

She said that one of the secrets of her success as a singer was the fact that she loved people—and religion taught her to love. She read the Bible every day and used to get down on her knees and pray every night and morning.

Schumann-Heik's father was an Austrian officer. His pay was small, his family was large, so that even as a child, Ernestine knew the pangs of hunger. She was thankful if she could get all the black bread she wanted to eat. Butter was a luxury unheard of. Her mother skimmed the fat off the soup—when there was any fat to skim—and that was used in place of butter. When she went away to school her lunch consisted of dry black bread and coffee; and at night she had dry black bread and soup—nothing else.

In order to get enough food to eat, she used to run away from school and go to a little menagerie on the edge of town and clean the monkey cages in return for a few sandwiches.

After years of study she was finally given an opportunity to sing for the director of the famous Imperial Opera Company in Vienna.

After listening to her sing songs that were destined to make her famous, he told her that she would never be singer, that she had no looks, no personality, and he advised her to go back home and buy a sewing machine and make dresses. "But an opera singer?" he cried. "Ach, nein! Never, never, never!"

Years later, after she had become world-famous, she sang in the Imperial Opera House in Vienna; and this same director congratulated her on her magnificent performance and said, "Your face looks familiar. Where have I seen you?"

"Hah!" says Schumann-Heik, "I told him I said, 'Ja, where you saw me? Right here's where you saw me? Right here's where you saw me? Right here's where you saw me?'" And then I tell him about that sewing-machine "Ja!"

Stopping the Drip

For instance, with all the running of hot water during the double day week-ends and cooking, perhaps a faucet is beginning to develop an annoying drip. If you're pressed for time or are looking forward to a more complete plumbing overhaul in the spring, have the man about the house take out the rubber stopper and merely reverse it. It will last for several months. If the faucet happens to need a fuller ball, remove it from the threaded shank, wrap a few turns of string around the shank and replace. The fuller ball will then seat properly.

Sometimes grease spots appear on the back and arms of upholstered chairs in spite of antimacassars and what not precautions. So hard wear over the holidays have soiled these places that come in contact with head and hands use a medium stiff hard brush dipped in cleaning fluid. Carbon tetrachloride is recommended because it is not inflammable. However, there are innumerable cleaning mixtures on the market that are not inflammable and remove dirt and grease effectively. Begin in the center of the spot and work out, using a circular motion. This prevents all dangers of a ring forming around the cleaned place.

"In addition to collecting delinquent contributions to the fund," the announcement stated, "the commission's representatives will conduct a survey with a view to determining whether all employers subject to pay contributions to the fund are doing so and whether such employers have filed initial status reports with the commission.

"The survey in Rowan and neighboring counties is but one of a series of a drive to list every subject employer in the liable fields of the commission. It is the intention of the commission to protect those employers who have complied with the law. Those who have failed to do so either through neglect or for other reasons will be subject to increasing penalties," the announcement concluded.

Employers desiring information on any phase of the unemployment compensation program were urged by the announcement to get in touch with the commission agents by calling the office of Mr. Mayo.

The force will be in Ashland area several weeks completing the survey.

THE RAPID HEART

What a lot of people are worried by the attack of "palpitations!" The commonest, least serious heart disturbance is that in which the heart suddenly begins to beat both rapidly and violently.

The patient hardly dares to move. He thinks that very likely he is going to die, and that makes his heart beat, if possible, faster still.

The attack ends as suddenly as it begins. But often the patient is so alarmed by this experience that he makes an invalid of himself and may injure his bank account as well as his health by taking remedial measures prescribed by his neighbors or himself.

A doctor should always be consulted. Though the palpitations are not dangerous themselves, they do occasionally lead the doctor to discover some more serious disease.

Often they are the sign as well as the source of anxiety, and a simple explanation of their unimportance will remove the dread, if it does not entirely prevent future attacks.

Sometimes a deep breath will slow the quivering heart, and there are some other tricks the doctor can show you. The man thing is to be sure that nothing serious is wrong. This assurance leads rapidly to better health.

Those who want to win will not let rumors discourage them, but will go out and fight that much harder.

The race is not yet won, and will not be won until the final votes are counted when the campaign closes in April. No ambitious candidate can afford to concede victory to some one else, but should battle for votes until the last one is turned in.

No worker can lose and the harrier a candidate loses the better he chances of capturing the biggest award.

Those who have promised their subscription should give it, this particular week if they want to receive proper vote credit.

Market Report

LOUISVILLE MARKET Cattle—Journal, Feb 15. There was a moderate to light run of live stock on sale at the Bourbon Yards Tuesday.

There was a better feeling in the cattle trade with all classes selling fully steady to strong, spots on heifers 25c higher.

Any weakness which developed in the steer trade Monday was overcome in the Tuesday session.

Nothing grading good or better was included, the bulk steers and heifers of a plain to medium grade selling from $2.25 @ 6.75, a few off-color offerings down to $6 and less.

The above range included one lot of 700 pound heifers at $6.50, and a post-load shorted 855-pound steers at $6.50, a light sort at $6.25.

Tuesday, Feb. 15. Indications that drought in domestic drought areas Southwest and West had been broken by widespread rains smashed Chicago wheat prices down 3 3/8 cents a bushel today.

Brisk trading in wheat accompanied the fall of values, with execution of many stop-loss selling orders accelerating the market collapse.

Adding impetus to the price tumble was a forecast of more rain or snow throughout virtually the entire United States winter wheat area.

First Installment

Humming out of the east, the little black plane sped straight for the landing field. Natalie Wade watched it idly. She had nothing else to do.

The plane had held her gaze mostly because of the directness of its flight. Other bees from the busy hive of San Carlos Airport circled or looped or dived as though in sheer abandon at having found their wings, but this black ship dived straight for the concrete towers and the sagging windsock as though all life must perish if it did not reach the field within the instant.

Then suddenly someone yelled in the field office. Geese monkeys came heads up at the cry. Then racing feet pounded on the concrete where the girl stood and shirt-sleeved men rushed past her to the open field.

Crossing the light breeze, the ship skimmed low, its motor roaring more and more loudly as it neared. Then, at the last possible moment, it seemed, the road died. The ship sat down on the far tarmac but taxied straight on as though it would crash the high barrier before the hangars.

Moved by the rushing feet about her, the girl slipped through the barrier gate. A burst of hoarse cheering drew her on. Field men were mobbing the filer nor as he flipped out of the open cockpit and clambered to the ground.

"Atta boy, Monty," someone yelled behind her.

"Yeah," came an answering shout. "An hour and a half off the East-West record. What do you know about that?"

Then the girl's voices added their shrill note to the clamor. A bevy of gay creatures from the motor park beyond bore down upon the knot of men about the record-breaking Monty—whichever he might be—and carried Natalie along with it.

He stood there grinning, grimy but happy, beside the small plane. He had jerked off the helmet, his forehead beneath a mop of tousled brown hair.

Natalie recognized him now, though she had never seen him before. This was Mont Wallace whose cross-country flights were already famous. She had seen his picture in a score of papers.

She knew now what the excitement was all about. Mont Wallace had finished another of his great flights. He had broken the coast-to-coast record flying from east to west. An hour and a half the excited shouter and declared.

And now he was reaping the reward of glory, the girl thought, and she laughed, for the bevy of sweet young things had hung well upon him, had caught at his hands and arms and now they were taking turns kissing him.

Natalie chuckled as she stood there watching just like fool women to spoil a good-looking boy like this by too much attention.

But the crowd was moving to ward her. Girls and men both moved down upon her and those he blushed her retreat so that they suddenly stood face to face.

Natalie smiled up into his laughing eyes in their mask of oil and grease. She tried to step aside, but his hand, still holding the helmet, reached out to stop her.

"Come on," he laughed, don't be bashful. A few more kisses and my face will be clean.

Without ado, he bent to kiss her squarely on the lips and then swept her along beside him to the apparent charge of the shrieking admirers.

At the hangar office, Natalie would have drawn away but the hero thrust her through the screened door. Screams and shrieks rose from the other girls when they were stopped at the entrance with the mechanics and a queue of listening boys.

Inside Monty lifted the girl quickly to one of the desks.

"Now stay put, then, he laughed down at her. "I'll give you that interview in a few minutes. Got to clean up first and sign the papers."

Natalie stayed put. There wasn't anything else to do and, after all, what did it matter.

The brown-haired Monty had disappeared into the wash room. Presently she could hear him sloshing water over himself with much puffing and splashing. A gray-haired manager was velling questions at him and writing in a big book. Monty belovely back the details of his flight.

His wrist watch was handed out to be compared with the office clock and the watches of the other men. When, presently he came back into the office, his face was clean and the tousler brown hair had been ruthlessly plastered back from his forehead. Natalie saw now that his chin was left in somewhat a fascinating way.

"You're with the paper, you said he offered with a chuckle and a little wink. "We'll go down to the office and you can do your story there."

Natalie made no response but his grin was so infectious that she smiled. This man worked fast, she thought. He was just as swift with adoring femininity as he was in breaking records.

He was at the telephone now ordering a taxi cab. Offers of other cars he spurned lightly.

There would be a fast ride into town, the girl knew, and she thought she would guess what came afterward. She must match wits with him and a daring plan came to her as he swung her heels from the desk where she sat.

Her father had been a newspaper man. She knew the machinery of news-getting. She would make him shy out his hand.

And when the cab arrived, she named the office of one of the local papers, bade the man to drive swiftly.

"Now is that nice?" Monty grinned. "I wanted to take you to dinner."

"I thought so," Natalie grinned impulsively.

"You aren't really one of those writing women?"

"I wasn't," the girl laughed. "I was out of a job. I didn't know where dinner was coming from. But with a story like this in my pocket, I have an idea that I've got a job as well."

"What if I run out on you?"

"Oh, I'm sure you wouldn't do that. You're a hero, you know. And heroes never act like that when in real life."

And so it was that, even the taxi cab pulled up at the newspaper office. Natalie Wade led her youthful captive straight to the editorial room, pounced upon an unused typewriter and began pounding out the story of the flight as she thought her father would have done.

"Boy," she called presently. The listening office-boy moved reluctantly toward her.

When he stood at Natalie's side, she spoke to him quickly.

"I'm new here," she said. "Tell the city editor I want a job and that I'm writing Monty Wallace's exclusive story of a new record flight."

The boy looked at her with a fishy eye and then ambled off to the desks where two or three men worked apparently at getting out the extra.

One of these with green suspenders and with his green eyes shaded drawn down so that it formed an almost perfect mask, looked up in startled fashion. He reached for a piece of paper, stared at it, and then came over to the girl's side.

"What new is all this about?" he demanded.

"I'm looking for a job," she jerked out between bursts of typewriter pounding. "This is Monty Wallace who just broke the East-West flight record. I'm writing the story and he's going to sign it if I do a good job. Does that rate a try-out from you?"

The small man peered up at Natalie. Then he thrust out his hand.

"I'll give you a fish on the yarn from the airport," he said. "My men were late at the spot and they told me someone else grabbed you. If you'll give me the young lady your story, she goes on the payroll right away. I can't promise how long she'll stay, there but she'll get a trial."

Wallace grinned.

"About how long," he questioned.

But the girl spoke up quickly.

"It doesn't matter about that," she said. "If I can't hit the ball I'll know I'm quick enough and so will they. My name's Natalie Wade. Put it on the payroll and let me draw enough when the story is done. I'll take the big boy here out to dinner."

"I'm Mack Hanlon," the city editor said, glancing wisely at the files. "The dinner goes on office expense account if you keep on the way you're going. Slap her up now. We go down in twenty minutes."

Sitting across from Mont Wallace over the very excellent dinner that was to be charged to the San Carlos Express, Natalie laughed merrily.

"This, she explained, "is what I call getting the breaks. No job, no money, no place to go. I wandered out to the airport because it is a long walk and I like to watch the planes. Then you buzz in, kiss me sweetly, and carry me off. I use you to muscle into a job and a good dinner with the hero of the hour. Isn't life a joke?"

"All perfectly sensible," Monty assured her. "You are young. You are beautiful. And you have a head on your shoulders. That's all any girl needs in this world."

"The evening will soon be complete," countered Natalie. "You don't by any chance happen to have fallen in love with me? That's about all that could possibly occur to add to the occasion."

"Well, the youth laughed, "you can add that up, too, I guess. Some thing happened to me when I saw you standing there in the field. That's why I kissed you. And if it isn't love, it's sure a perfect counterfeit. You might as well give it the benefit of the doubt."

"That," she chuckled, "is what I consider the response of a gentleman. I wouldn't call it an impassioned declaration but it certainly fills the bill. I am very greatly obliged to you."

"Never did an aviator, Natalie Wade," Monty laughed. "Give me a few drinks and I'll make it just as impassioned as you like. What say we go somewhere to dance after dinner?"

"Never did an aviator, Natalie Wade accepted. "But please omit the drinks. I am quite satisfied and I don't know you well enough yet to try humping up our acquaintance with cocktails."

"All right," he agreed with evident reluctance. "Just as you say. But you have no idea how a few drinks ripen the affections."

When dinner was over he became host. He insisted on hiring a car and they drove first to the beach road. At length they found an attractive spot where an abandoned lighthouse had been turned into a sort of roadside inn and there they sat for a long time looking out toward the Pacific.

It was not till the girl found that they were sitting side by side without speech that she realized something unusual had happened to her. This was no ordinary evening, no commonplace flirtation. There was something about their sudden acquaintance that turned night stories and that made the first strains of the small straggled orchestra send them into each other's arms without realizing it.

They had risen when the music sounded and stood upon the tiled terrace. It was only a step from the shadow that clothed them to the moonlight outdoor dance floor. But for long moments they did not take that step.

Other couples began moving from the tables within, but the two were not aware of it. When he bent his head, her lips met his without shy-ness or confusion. It was as though the moment were ordained.

"Aren't we supposed to be dancing?" she asked quickly.

He kissed her again quickly.

"Perhaps we are," he chuckled as he swept her out onto the floor with swift, rhythmic strides. "But it seems like a waste of time and of very excellent time that might be much better employed."

Salute to George Washington

FATHER OF AMERICAN TRANSPORTATION

A CONTINENT controlled by one people in the interest of their common destiny... in those terms the prophetic mind of George Washington foresaw the future America. But the odds against that future were tremendous. Indeed, had it not been for him, we might today have two or more nations within our present boundaries! Political union, he knew, was impossible without commercial union. Rising swiftly in the west was a new empire with no life-line to the Atlantic. How could that great new land be welded to the eastern confederation which was itself "a rope of sand"? George Washington knew the only answer. Transportation and a system of better canals and better turnpikes east and west—serving and unifying America. Through his vision and determination was realized the beginning of this route to the west. The James River Company, founded by him in 1755... The Chesapeake and Ohio Lines of today are proud to be direct descendants of that James River Company of which George Washington was the first president. We wish he could have lived to see the coming of that paper which forged his "rope of sand" into chains of steel—the railroad! As part of the Transportation he dreamed of for America, Chesapeake and Ohio pledges to carry on in the spirit of service exemplified for all by George Washington.
