THEODORE DREISER Gods Mercy And Three Gin Rickses Brought A Titan To American Literature

Theodore Dreiser is one of the most astonishing novelists in America—and one of the most distinguished. For a third of a century, he has been in a literary "camp" bellowing and snorting and pawing up the earth like a short-horn bull. He has had an immense influence upon American literature. The books you are reading today would have been a trifle different if Theodore Dreiser had never lived.

In 1900, he wrote a sensational novel called Sister Carrie, which stirred up a tornado of talk. Critics denounced it as immoral and obscene. Preachers pounded their pulpits and women's clubs rose up in holy indignation and demanded that it be suppressed. The publisher became frightened, and refused to sell it. Dreiser was astonished. He didn't know there was anything immoral about his novel. He had only depicted life as he saw it. But that was back in 1900. Nobody would think of denouncing the book now. And if you want a copy of the first edition of Sister Carrie today, it will cost you $520. I once went up to see this grey, glum gruff giant. He is so frank he makes you gasp. He has written the most moving tragedies ever penned about American life. His greatest book, An American Tragedy, appeared in 1925, when the author was so hard up he could hardly pay his room rent. The book created a national sensation and four hundred thousand dollars came roaring down upon him like an avalanche. Hollywood paid him almost a fifth of a million dollars for the movie rights alone. I asked him what he did with the money—he put it in stocks, bonds and mortgages and lost $300,000.

Dreiser suddenly decided one day that he was going to be a news paper reporter, so he applied for a job on the Chicago Globe. They told him that they didn't need any help. But he took a chair and said he was going to sit there until they did. He sat there every day for over a month. That was in 1891, and when the Democratic National Convention opened in Chicago in June of that year, the paper had to have some extra reporters so they gave him a job. Then an incredible thing happened. This cub reporter, who had never written a line for a news paper in his life, was having a drink with the other reporters at the bar of the Auditorium Hotel; the other reporters were bleating the fact that no one knew who was going to be nominated. Dreiser had had a couple of cocktails and he wanted to show off, so he said, "I know who is going to be nominated. A dark horse, Senator McEnty of South Carolina." Just at that instant, Senator McEnty swung in to the room and said, "Who does me the honor of mentioning my name?"

"Dreiser confessed; and the Senator said: 'That's fine. Let's have a drink.' Then five minutes later, he invited Dreiser to have lunch and some more gin rickses; and under their mellow influence, the Senator said: 'I want you to go to Washington with me as my private secretary.'"

After lunch, McEnty said: "Listen, boy—I'm going to let you in on a dark secret. Grover Cleveland is going to be nominated for President, and you are the first news paper man to know it."

Dreiser was flabbergasted. He had only been a reporter for two days, and had gotten the biggest scoop of the year.

I asked him to tell me the secret of his success and he said, "Just the mercy of God—that's all." The shrines of that region. All members of the Morehead Branch were urged to attend both the Louisville and the Lexington meetings as well as the Saturday morning breakfast during K. E. A. at Louisville. mstibthef

Effects Of Hard Times

Slowly but positively the people of the United States are crawling out of the depression and getting back to normal again, after years of what have unquestionably been the hardest this nation has ever experienced. While it is not in my line to say what caused this condition, I cannot help thinking of the remarks of that observing soul, Will Rogers, who said in his Illiterate Digest—"The hard times in this country are due to the fact that one-third of the people of the United States promote, while the remaining two-thirds provide the means to do so."

Mental Disease Increase
The thing about this depression which has interested me is the way it has reflected on the population of the nation physically, mentally and morally. Undoubtedly the great manifestation from his cause was the striking increase in mental diseases, which reached a new high peak. In New York, for example, in 1910, 65.3 persons per 100,000 developed mental infirmities; in 1930 the rate was 76.0 and in 1933 it reached the enormous rate of 84.7—the highest in the history of the State. With the return to normality these cases show a tremendous increase. These cases show a reduction of approximately one-third of the rate of increase.

Cases of alcoholism in prohibition days were slightly in excess of 10 per cent. "The rate began to decline in 1912, falling steadily to 1921," says Dr. F. W. Parsons of the Mental Hygiene Department. "The low point of 2 per cent was reached. Then it began to mount until in 1927 it was 7 per cent."

During the following six years it ranged from 5.8 per cent to 6.5 per cent. Up to the present time it is impossible to predict the trend of future statistics for the simple reason that the period has not been sufficiently long. Many physicians are inclined to believe that there will undoubtedly be considerable of an increase in this type of cases.

Better Times, Better Health
There is nothing exceptionally strange about these statistics for similar conditions have developed in Continental countries following long and depressing wars, as well as after financial and economic upturns. There is every reason to warrant the conclusion that as things get better, there will be far less infirmities of all types.

To Have Full Egg Basket Next Fall
Prepare now for a full egg basket next fall by getting good chicks early, feeding them properly and keeping down disease, suggests the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Much depends upon the quality of chicks secured. This may have no relation to the price paid for them. Cheap chicks are said often to be the most expensive chicks. Good chicks are from flocks that have been tested for pullorum disease, flocks that have been bred for egg production and egg size, and flocks that have low adult mortality.

Failures in brooding can be traced to one of the following:
Over-crowding. This often results in stunted growth, cannibalism and spread of disease.
Insufficient feeder space. Allow one inch per chick and then increase this amount as the chicks grow older.

Tracking disease into the brooder house by going directly from the range and houses used by the older birds to the brooder house. Allowing chicks to get on ground contaminated with disease germs and parasite eggs. A sun porch or clean range helps solve this problem.

Improper feeding. March 19, 1918 and died. Marob Gardner Writes On Sweetpotatoes.

John S. Gardner, who for years has written an annual series of garden articles for Kentucky newspapers, has written a circular for the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture on sweetpotatoes growing. Kentucky is a big sweet potato state, that producing fifth in value of crops produced in the state.

The most widely grown variety in Kentucky is the Naples, but according to Mr. Gardner, Golden flesh and bright skin are given made it a favorite in the markets in which Kentucky sweet potatoes move.

The circular copies of which may be had from county agents for by writing to the college for agricultural, deals with plant and soil, field preparation, irrigation, curing, storage, and disease and insect pest control.

Parade Of Counties

Lincoln County

Lincoln County was one of the first trio of counties created out of Kentucky Territory in 1780. The other two of the triplets are Jefferson and Fayette. The history of Lincoln County then traces its story from Indian Trails to bridge paths, from wagon tracks to motor highways, from ox teams to logging roads, automobiles and airplanes, from trail blazers and runners to instantaneous communication by radio. New exploration and discovery made possible for us a better acquaintance and understanding of our neighbors.

The natural landscape of Lincoln County contains both plains, knolls and plateaus. The northern three-fifths is a gently undulating limestone plain, most of which is drained by the Div Flays. It is a part of the outer Bluegrass region of the state. The southern two-fifths of the county is a part of the Kentucky Knobs and the Pennyroyal regions. The latter is a plateau whose northern boundary is Muldraugh's Hill rising 350 feet above the Bluegrass plain. The latter is a plateau whose southern boundary is Muldraugh's Hill rising 350 feet above the Bluegrass plain. The latter is a plateau whose southern boundary is Muldraugh's Hill rising 350 feet above the Bluegrass plain.

The rich soil, excellent water supply, in springs, creeks, and rivers, together with fine timber, sites and materials for the building of the pioneer settlements. The pioneer, through much labor, removed the primal forest and established class is being printed and will soon be finished. The annual will be the work of the high school boys and girls, all the work being done by the school. The pages and backs of the annual have been bought ready for the pages to be mimeographed. This promises to be an annual and one of which the students will be proud to keep as a memory of the pleasant days spent at this high school.

PACK HORSE LIBRARY

Goidia Dillon, Supervisor

The Packhorse Library keeps growing each week. They now have 1,233 books and 11,721 magazines available for distribution on this project. Sixty-nine new books and 1,554 magazines were donated last week. Lags week 310 books and 1,236 magazines were delivered by the carriers to 412 different homes. 1,806 individuals received benefits from the books and magazines.

Five girls from the Clearfield Girl's Club, Lela Kissinger, Oleta Fugate, Juanita Cramer, Maxine Early and Ray Early gathered 1,250 magazines and books from Mt. Sterling and Owensville for this Thursday. Miss Dillon gave to the theatre party as a reward or what they had done.

Agriculture bulletins and other bulletins are coming into the library every day. We have bulletins on most any subject the farmer might be interested in. Senator Barkley has several bulletins on books on agriculture as well as a number of bulletins.

A new carrier, Lee Reed will start the better and increases the desire to visit them more often, for they are contributing much to the progress of our great commonwealth.

"C" FRAZIER DIES

(Continued From Page One) The age of sixty years he served as section foreman for the C and O. He was the father of eighteen children, eleven of whom survive him. He is also survived by 48 grandchildren. 32 great-grandchildren and one great, great grand child. His wife who has been a chronic invalid for many years survives him. He made his home with his wife and with a daughter Sarah, who also is a chronic invalid. He was 78 years old at the time of his death.

CCC camp

(Continued From Page One) one who fails to pass the intelligence tests, or who has not completed the eighth grade work is required to attend classes held in the elementary and fundamental subjects. He is taught reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling, history and geography by competent teachers. He is advanced as rapidly as possible, much more rapidly than in civilian schools, as he is given personal attention and his progress necessarily depends on his ability to learn. As they are advanced and finish the required course they are "graduated". Many of the boys came to the camp, entirely without previous knowledge and are now capable of carrying the heaviest load of work from an educational viewpoint.

This feature of camp life is probably one of the most important for this section especially. It is one of the features that is aiding in providing the giving back to the public citizens who have a high conception of the requirements of citizenship and who will rank with their brothers in civilian life.

An Adequate Library is Provided in connection with the educational department, the camp maintains a circulating library containing upward of 1,200 volumes. Both fiction and reference works are included. It is surprising the number of boys who take advantage of the opportunity to read and study. Mr. Venturini, who assists Mr. May, states that the library is well patronized and that the boys read regularly. They like Western fiction best, he says, but use the library liberally.

The library is equipped with a large comfortable furnished reading room, with easy chairs and is well lighted. Here the boys may come and rest and read.

The recreation hall is in connection and games such as pool, checkers, ping pong, and the like furnish play equipment for those so inclined.

Taken all in all the educational work of the camp is a type that meet the needs and requirements of the enrollees. It fulfills a definite purpose in the life of the camp and in development for future living.

Teachers in the fundamental work are Mrs. Minnie Gastlineau, Henri Ambury, Miss Bernice Barker and Mr. Sam Johnson.

In addition to the elementary subjects taught, advanced courses are offered in typing and journalism. Classes in first aid are conducted by Dr. Blair.

Taught To Work As Well As Play

The boys are taught to play. They are taught to learn. And then they are taught to work. This brings us to the third department of camp life. The Labor Department under the supervision of Mr. W. C. Fletcher. Mr. Fletcher is the only man in camp who has been here since organization. He is largely responsible for the work that has been done, the trails that have been built and all the construction work that has been finished since the organization of the camp in 1933.

Briefly, summarized so that one may obtain a bird's-eye view of the accomplishments of the Labor Department, here is what has been done in this section by the camp enrollees during the life of the camp.

They have built 35 miles of highway throughout the camp. They have built one fire tower at Hickory Flat 80 feet in height and two forty foot towers, one at the Triangle and one at the Knobs, forming the Morehead Triangle for fire observation.

They have completed one 25 foot span bridge and two forty foot spans. They have constructed and maintained 40 miles of telephone.

They are now constructing a 250 foot bridge across Licking River at Yale. This will consist of two 63 foot girder spans and a 120 foot trestle span.

They have surfaced 25 miles of the roads constructed. This is an accomplishment that should go far toward opening the eyes of those who have thus far failed to understand the importance and value of the work that has been done.

Aside from the educational and citizenship values of the camp, this is actually adding to the value of the land of Rowan County. Its work cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

That briefly is the work that has been done. The records show that the enrollees have since the organization of the camp worked a total of approximately 3000 man days each month, which multiplied by 83 months will give the total amount of work done since the camp was opened.

Forestry Department

The question has been asked, if and when the camp closes, who will carry on the work now being done by the CCC.

The answer is the Forestry Department. Plans are now being made to take over the work. Construction and maintenance work will be carried on by a side camp F30, and will be financed out of the CCC appropriation.

Fire prevention will be handled by Fire Wardens and crews consisting of local residents, hired by the forest service.

Fire detection is now and will continue to be effected by the existing lookout and telephone and radio system, manned by Forest Service employees.

All fire activities will be under the direction of the District Ranger.

And In Conclusion In this article it has been impossible to mention more than a few of the highlights of the camp and its meaning to this community. Nothing has been said about the payroll and the amount of business it brings to this community, business from which every citizen profits.

That is the minor accomplishment of the camp, although important to local business men. A $6,000 payroll per month, with several families means considerable to any community and Morehead is no exception.

The purpose of this article will be accomplished if we have given the citizens of this community a broader view of what this camp has meant to this community in the past four years. There is a possibility, if we work together and fight together to continue this camp, we may be able to keep it intact until the work is done. If you are interested, and you should be interested, write NOW to Senator Alben W. Barkley, Senator M. Logan and Congressman Fred M. Vinson, asking that they use their influence to maintain this camp for at least another year. Do not delay. Do it now.

The News is indebted to their courtesy in giving us the information contained in the above article; information that we believe will be of value to every citizen.

By Baulah Earle

Natalie thrilled at the sight. Her wild notion had brought success. The missing flyers were beneath them, apparently unharmed. Mont Wallace tested the ground curiously and then put the ship into a steep dive.

Withered sandwiches and tepid pop disappeared like magic before onslaught of the two lost pilots. Her chocolate and candy bars helped restore their morale and their sense of humor.

They chatted of their adventure, told of the closed road that had caused them to try a landing and of the treacherous air current that had whipped the plane into the ground and crippled it beyond immediate repair.

Natalie drank in the details. Mont Wallace studied his maps and marked upon them the nearest coast town that might have a telephone line.

Arrangements were made for the two youths to remain where they were until help could be sent. Then Mont and Natalie took off for the coast in high triumph.

At the small Mexican town, Mont wiped the lost flyers' home airport and Natalie began writing sheet after sheet of their story. Getting the news out was their first task.

For the small, black-haired, black-eyed operator had little understanding of English and was forced to send the words almost letter by letter.

Before the task had been completed, radio had sent two planes to land beside Mont's ship on the beach before the town. Mont led the rescue flight and then came back for the girl.

As they winged their way north along the coast line of California, Natalie was happier than she had ever been before and Mont's mood matched hers in gaily.

To their chagrin they found they had nothing to eat or drink aboard but they were determined to make it at the earliest possible moment and decided to forget the inconvenience of going without lunch.

"Well, have the boys get me something like you see on the Pacific coast," Mont declared and they planned for the evening together.

At the airport they were received like heroes with Mack Hanlon himself, minus his eye-shade and with his suspenders hidden under a black searucker coat, all but hugging the girl in his enthusiasm.

Jimmy Hale alone greeted her scornfully. "After all I've tried to tell you," he reprimanded her, "going off without even a kodak. Won't you ever learn?"

But she knew that he was more pleased than he dared admit. "I forgot everything but getting started," she told him, "it never occurred to me to try for pictures."

"Well," the boy chuckled, "I'm going to see that you never go any where again without a camera. I'm thinking along that will bring back a picture."

"I'm sorry," she sobbed, "but I don't know what I'm doing. Even though I don't know why I have to try to hurt you I can't help being angry about you."

Natalie comforted the girl as best she could. "And do you think I'm not jealous of you? I'd give my eyes sometimes of you went so good-looking."

"Oh, Nat, I never thought of that you hang onto yourself so. I didn't think you were ever ally. It's because you're such a swell person that I can't imagine anybody not loving you."

"Well, now that we've got all that out of our systems, I suppose we ought to go down to dinner. I wish I could send home for something I haven't slept in." She considered her rumpled costume ruefully.

"I'll probably die if you look well in it, but won't you wear something of mine?" Sunny offered and presently Natalie surveyed herself in a long glass wearing one of Sunny's stunning gowns.

"Now I oughtn't to have done that, Sunny laughed. "Now I'll never get Mont to look at me again. It's just too bad about you."

And together the two went down the broad stairway in search of the man they loved.

But when they reached the library door, they found that he and Jabe Marion were too deep in conversation to pay any attention to feminine company.

When dinner was announced a few minutes later, both sprang to the table. The two girls waited for them.

The four moved into the spacious dining room without pairing and Jabe and Marie sat in "his place to propose a toast."

"Let us drink," he said, "to the success of the greatest flight ever voyaged. To the plane Sunny Marion, to her non-stop refueling flight around the world and to her pilot, Mont Wallace."

Natalie raised Sunny squealed with delight. Mont lifted his glass. "Success to the flight and to the man who conceived the plan," he murmured.

"Success cried Natalie, and the glasses drained. "Breaks, kid," exclaimed Jimmy Hale. "You sure get 'em. And may you never miss."

Natalie's story of the proposed flight was rolling on the great press of the Enquirer. The first fifty copies lay before the two as they stood in Jimmy's cluttered office.

Coming on the heels of her rescue story out of Lower California, it was world news, and Mont Wallace would see romances there. There had done but for what he was about to attempt.

In a dozen world capitals, betting odds were to be posted that same night on the chances of success. The plan was simplicity itself, with Mont Wallace's flying accuracy as the key.

Ten refueling stations were to be established. Ten pilots were to stand ready, linked by short wave radio with the control station. There was at least a chance that Mont had suggested the naming of the ship though Natalie held to the hope that her father had been responsible for the suggestion.

He knew at last that she was jealous of the flight as well as of Sunny Marion and when Jimmy found her hiding in his dark room one evening in tears he guessed what the trouble was.

"You're just naturally bound to love that guy, aren't you?" he chided. "Well, don't break your heart and we'll see what can be done."

The girl poured out her troubles into his willing ear. He took her into his arms as though she were his sister instead of the girl he adored and promised her that he would do "his best damndest" to fix things up for her.

He took her home and made her promise to get into bed and forget all about it.

Sleep came to her rescue then but she woke in the middle of the night, apparently awakened by some noise at the door.

For an instant she was terrified but she knew that help was within call and so she went to the door and opened it. A man lay there, sprawled on the built carpet and when she bent above him she found it was Jimmy Hale, unconscious and clearly very drunk.

Her heart went out to him as it had never done before. She bent to lift him up and got him into the room. With the door swiftly closed so that he was safe from arrest for his condition and his midnight visit she helped him to her own bed, stilling his mutterings and watched over him the rest of the night.

She felt asleep in the big chair where she sat and the sun was high when she waked the next morning to find the boy still slumbering heavily.

In the very small cabinet kitchen where she prepared her breakfast, she brewed for him some very strong coffee and broke out a can of tomatoes, remembering that he had spoken often of their efficiency after much drinking.

When women need Cardui. If you seem to have lost some of your strength you had for your favorite activities, or for your housework, and care less about your meals, and suffer severe discomfort at certain times, try Cardui.

Thousands and thousands of women say it has helped them. By increasing the appetite, improving digestion, Cardui helps you to receive nourishment. As strength returns, unnecessary functional aches, pains, and nervousness just seem to go away.

Everything depending on the plane and on Wallace's ability to keep to the course. Proven methods of refueling in the world would be used and the plane would be altered at once to make refueling easy for the lone flier.

Natalie was already assigned to cover preparations at the home port. Plans were under way for the christening of the ship by Sunny Marion and Jimmy had sold pictures of the girl a half a dozen national picture agencies.

Sunny's glee was not hard to fathom, for the christening of the plane would link her name with that of Mont Wallace. The world would see romances there. There was at least a chance that Mont had suggested the naming of the ship though Natalie held to the hope that her father had been responsible for the suggestion.

Inspired by the magnitude of the project, Natalie was nevertheless not without her misgivings. She knew that a thousand dangers marked along the path of the plane and that Mont would owe his luck for the last chance of success.

More than this, she found that Mont had suddenly become almost a stranger to her. So engrossed was he in the preparations for the flight that he would not leave the flight except for sleep and, though her assignment threw her apart with him constantly, there were few moments when they regained any of the easy intimacy they had known.

Natalie's only consolation was that Sunny suffered the same neglect and yet there were occasional conferences at the Marion home when Sunny must be present while Natalie was busy with her copy or otherwise left out.
