Ballots have been provided in sufficient quantity for each voter."

Hester Roberts Goes Into Lead This Week

Mrs. Hester Roberts jumped to the front in the Rowan County News Business Building campaign displacing both Manse Stinson and Mrs. Virgie Gevedon in the lead. The race is still hot and the candidates, while they have been resting up for the final lap are all still very much in the running. The last lap is nearing and the final stretch will be at hand before you realize it. If you have been holding off on your subscription, now is the best time to get it in. We have collected hundreds that had been taking the News. There are still many that should subscribe before the final curtain. Pay up your subscription now.

Purgation Board Named For Rowan

Two New Men In County Given Authority To Take Name Of Voter From List

Carrying out the mandates of the recently passed Registration and Purgation law, law which purges the average voter is still unfamiliar, the State Election Board appointed a Purgation Board for Rowan county and for all other counties in the state last week. The purpose of the law is to purge the names of the registered voters and the elimination of illegal voters from the primaries. This ostensibly the purpose is to take off the lists the names of voters who have died or moved away, or who for any other reason are not legal voters.

Enrollment At College Drops At Mid-Semester

Mid Semester Enrollment Shows Slight Increase Over That Of Last Year

Mid semester enrollment at the Morehead State Teachers College was considerably smaller than was expected by the college authorities having reached 190 new students as the News went to press. This, according to authorities was several less than had enrolled at the same time last year, although due to the increase at the beginning of the school year, the enrollment at present is about twenty larger than for the same period in 1937.

Closes Evening School At Hilda

Series Of Classes For Farmers Conducted By Smith-Hughes Teacher, Carl Wade

An evening school has recently closed at Little Brushy voting house, near Hilda, Ky. The primary purpose of the school was to acquaint the farmers with some practices that would be of use in their business. The farmers had their choice of the subjects to be taught. They chose "Soil Management." One farmer said "Every one gets a living from the soil and farmers should know more about it."

KENTUCKY'S CRIPPLED CHILDREN

The fight for Kentucky's 15,000 crippled children begins Easter Sunday. Spurred to the grave-need for funds to replenish the treasury of the Crippled Children's Commission, civic church, club, and professional leaders are serving for a goal of $50,000 set by the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children.

"Epidemics of infantile paralysis have added hundreds of crippled children to the Commission's ranks of patients, and 3,381 cases are now on the waiting list," Miss Marian Williamson, director, reports. Spurred to greater effort by the increased needs of these children, committees appointed throughout the State have begun work, but dry to the drive. Rowan County's quota has not as yet been given, but Dr. T. A. F. Evans, chairman, is confident when the amount is given, that it will be met.

Any crippled child of indigent parents, regardless of color or religion, is offered the combined services of the Society, a volunteer organization, composed of individuals and members of civic clubs, and the Commission, which is the state body created in 1924 by act of the General Assembly. "It takes money to carry on the work of operating diagnostic clinics, of providing treatment, hospitalization, and braces and crutches," states the Commission's president, Mrs. Ben Williamson, Ashland. "Emergency needs demand emergency measures," Bart Peak, Lexington, vice chairman of the state campaign committee, said today. "The Commission has always responded cheerfully to the task confronting it, but the waiting list is still long. These children who are begging for aid cannot have it unless we Kentuckians come to the rescue. The Kentucky Society for Crippled Children has always been, not only the parent organization, but also the Commission's bulwark in time of need." It is estimated that of the numbers of crippled children in the State, one-third can be corrected to a point where they are considered cured, one-third can be educated to be self-supporting, and one-third can be helped.

THE SALVATION ARMY

No religious organization has ever won such complete and worldwide respect, even affection, as the Salvation Army has achieved in the sixty years since "General" William Booth, the son of an English Jewish tailor, first led his unformed "army" of militant Christians through the streets of London amid the jeers of the mob. It was a new manifestation and so to be suspected. It was different from any established religious movement, and so was too unimagined to be taken seriously by church people.

The Salvation Army was not trying to set up a new Church, but to reach the unfortunates whom the church could not or did not reach. That has been its mission—the whole world over since 1878. How far it has succeeded in bringing not only the light of the Gospel but the material help without which mere preaching of thousands to whom the devoted "soldiers" of the Salvation Army bring help and comfort daily and nightly.

"No man may say of another that he cannot be saved," wrote a wise philosopher of the Salvation Army's work. "Lead, Kindly Light, is the Army's song of faith. No corner of the earth is too dark for the light borne by the Salvationists to penetrate; no drifting, hopeless soul too lost to receive shelter; and help and hope and a kindly hand to lift it from the depths.

The Salvation Army is now starting its annual drive for the money it needs to carry out its work among those who need its service. There is no more fitting way in which anyone can demonstrate his or her loving-kindness toward his brothers or sisters who have fallen by the wayside than to give to the Salvation Army.

The Japanese cherry blossoms bloomed early this year around the Tidal Basin, coming into full flower just as Congress voted to appropriate more than a billion dollars to build the largest Navy in the world, with a couple of battleships of 15,000 tons thousands of times larger than the top limit agreed on by England, Japan and the United States a few years ago. Japan broke its treaty agreement first, by laying the keels of two giant warships. England followed suit and now the United States falls into line. Congress also added $30,000,000 to the Army appropriations.

Conservative Coalition in 1947

More and more talk is heard in the anterooms of both houses of Congress of Cordell Hull as a possible coalition candidate for the Presidency in 1940. The belief grows among experienced political observers that the 1940 contest must be along a new line-up, not Republicanism against Democrats but between Conservatives and the New Deal, with the anti-New Deal candidate as likely to be an old-line Democrat as to be a Republican. Those who are opposed to the whole philosophy of the New Deal include a great and growing number of Democratic leaders, especially in the South. Mr. Hull is the only member of the New Deal coalition who those who believe that a real coalition of the anti-New Deal elements is politically feasible are al Treasury, under the Salt Control Act and the new Crop Control law, will go to the South.

"The total amount to be distributed to farmers under the new law may be half as much again as the five hundred millions now available. The bills which have been introduced for new processing taxes are calculated to raise $212,000,000. The purpose of these new processing taxes, to provide additional subsidies for farmers, is not stated in the bills as introduced. That is supposed to make the tax Constitutional, by keeping it a legislative secret that it is levied upon the whole people for the benefit of a single class. That was the ground upon which the Supreme Court decided the old A. A. A. Act unconstitutional.

No Balanced Budget

It is generally recognized here that there is no chance of balancing the budget for the next fiscal year, no matter how much the new tax bill may yield. Nor is it likely that the government will ever take in as much as it spends so long as expenditures for relief, farm aid and other purposes outside of the actual operating expenses of the government continue to run at high figures. Increased expenditures for the Army and Navy and the need for building up an auxiliary Merchant Marine by subsidies also tend to shove farther into the future the prospect of making ends meet unless some new source of tax revenue can be found.

There is a most serious talk both in Administration circles and on Capitol Hill of broadening the tax base. The method most seriously considered is the La Follette plan of taxing the net income above $500 and reducing the tax exemption for married men to $1,500, with reduced exemptions for minor dependents. Also sentiment for national sales tax seems to be growing.

The row in the T. V. A. and the man Arthur Morgan may develop into a serious political issue before a Congressional committee charged with the investigation of public investigation. Not only the right of the President to dismiss Mr. Morgan is hotly disputed, but eventually to be decided by the Supreme Court, but the demand for the airing of the whole policy under which the T. V. A. was conceived and the "inside" story of its operations is too insistent to be disregarded.

Bridges Takes Limelight

Senator Bridges, the Republican former Governor of New Hampshire, was first to leap into the trenches with a demand for an investigation, and so focused attention upon himself as an aggressive Republican with leadership possibilities.

TODAY and TOMORROW

FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

CHESS Mental Stimulus

My favorite game, I can get anybody to play it with me. Chess. To the onlooker who is a chess enthusiast there is nothing quite so boring as watching two chess players staring at a chessboard for something like an hour and more without making a move. To the chess devotee there is nothing more stimulating to the mind than figuring out the tenth and calculating with his opponent well.

Nobody knows how old the game of chess is, but that it originated in Asia thousands of years ago is probable. An exploring party in Iraq recently unearthed a set of terracotta chessmen in a stratum of ancient relics at least 6,000 years old. And there is evidence that the Arabs did. It is probably the oldest game invented by men that is still played today through the ages in anything like its original form.

Chess is fascinating because it is a battle of wits. The player who can't outthink the other wins. I know of nothing so effective to keep one's mental processes polished up and working.

JEFFERSON

Nobody has any new admiration for Thomas Jefferson than I have. But I can't see him as a statesman of Washington's calibre, and particularly I can't see him as the patron saint of the political movement which is popularly called the "New Deal."

The President has proclaimed Jefferson's birthday as a date call for national commemoration. The Bureau of the Mint is bringing out a new five-cent coin bearing Jefferson's head instead of the buffalo on the current nickel. The Post Office Department is putting Jefferson's face on the new three-cent stamp instead of Washington. A great memorial is planned close to those of Washington and Lincoln, near the White House.

I have no objections to honoring

Jefferson, but I wonder if those who are trying to make him a popular national hero realize that he was a slaveholder. He considered the staid for the exact opposite of what is going on now. His Republican principles were opposed to those of the Federalists. He feared above all things the centralization of power in the Federal government and the restraint of individual rights and liberties.

WHISKERS

In Congress I have been a more or less frequent visitor in the galleries of both houses of Congress for more than fifty years. When I was young most Senators and Representatives were either full beards or luxuriant mustaches. Only Southern members were clean shaven, and most of them wore plain black "string" bow neckties. The Southern members generally still adhere to that particular badge of the statesman, but full beards are also conspicuous in their absence among members from the North and West.

The outstanding set of whiskers in the House is the facial ornament of Representative Tinkham of Massachusetts, who looks as if he were not patternized a barber. Of the same species, but neatly trimmed and curled, harmonize with the wearer's rather dandified clothing is the full beard of Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois. One slightly pinkish.

"Jim Ham" is the only man who has lost his beard from two different states. A native of Virginia, he was elected to Congress from the State of Washington and resigned to go to Illinois in the Illinois War. Then he went to Illinois as he had been elected Senator from that state three times. Whiskers are his trademark.

BEAUTY

Sitting in the press gallery of the House of Representatives the other day I mentally awarded first prize for Congressional beauty to Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers. Representatives from the Fifth Massachusetts district that goes for Mrs. Rogers' ankles as well as her blonde hair, with its aureole of brilliant hair. They (the ankles) are visible from the galleries, since Mrs. Rogers' seat is in the front row.

The Blue Ribbon for masculine politeness I awarded to George H. Cozy of advertising man turned politician. "He's too good-looking to get far in politics," remarked an envious colleague. "That's what they said about Warren Harding," was the retort, "and Barton's got ten times as much on the back of his head."

State is saying the same about Paul McNutt, whose backers for the 1940 Presidential candidacy are said to be hanging and so focused attention upon himself as an aggressive Republican with leadership possibilities.

SENATORS

Looking down on the bald heads in the Senate I saw some old friends. There was a President's son-in-law, a former Cabinet officer, a former director-general of railroad, and former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. They were all one man—Senator William G. McAdoo of California.

And I saw the former Cabinet officer also sits in the Senate. I believe it's oldest member, Carter Glass of Virginia, who succeeded McAdoo as Secretary of the Treasury under President Wilson. Ever since I've known him, which is close to 40 years, Carter Glass has been complaining from insomnia and indigestion, but he celebrated his 80th birthday a few weeks ago and seemed to have all more without making a move. To the chess devotee there is nothing more stimulating to the mind than figuring out the tenth and calculating with his opponent well.

The DOCTOR

Dr. W. E. Austin, M.D.

Because primitive man could not understand the phenomena of death, he attributed great power to various parts of human remains, and often employed them in his mystic rites and in catering to his peculiar home-dwelling desires.

For that reason the use of dead men's bones, played an important part in ceremonies, for the simple reason that the dead could not be harmed. In early days at the present time, it is the custom among various European peasants, when the young men go courting, to scatter dirt from their grave on the home of his sweetheart, so that when he visits her, her parents may sleep like dead. Bones or particles are broken over the house supposedly accomplished the same results.

Hands—Candles—Coins

In the centers in Europe, the dried and pickled hands of men who were hung, were sold by hangers at fabulous prices to the ignorant and the educated as well. The same is true of every body. Candles made from the fat of an executed criminal possessed rare virtues and gave long life to their owners. Nothing but fresh milk was supposed to extinguish them. Women about to become mothers were murdered by thousands to obtain grease from

HAROLD LLOYD

A Fire, An Astrologer, And Some Horned-Rimmed Glasses Made Him The Richest Actor In The World

My first sight of Harold Lloyd was a distinct shock. I should never have known him off the screen, but he says, for that matter, no one does. For example, on one occasion, he was at a party with a friend who wears glasses. (Lloyd himself never wears them off the screen.) This friend didn't resemble him at all; but everybody thought that the chap in the horn-rimmed glasses must be Harold Lloyd.

One day as he was drifting home from school in Omaha, Nebraska, he came across an astrologer standing on a street corner surrounded by colored charts. This astrologer claimed he could read your fortune by the stars. Little Harold listened, pop-eyed with excitement. Suddenly a fire engine dashed by and the other boys ran after it. But he didn't. He kept listening to the astrologer. That was a strange thing for a boy to do and one of the men in the crowd noticed it.

The fellow that noticed it was John Lane Connor, the leading man in the Burwood Stock Company of Omaha. He walked over to Lloyd and got acquainted with him and asked him if he knew of some nice place where an actor could get board and room. Did he? Harold leaped at the chance!

Harold's mother was a dress-maker, and his father sold sewing machines. One day his father got smashed up in an automobile accident and hurt his back, and the insurance company paid him $1,500. That was a fortune, so he decided to pack up and leave the middle west and try his luck elsewhere.

Finally Harold's father said: "Let's flip a coin. If it's heads, we'll go to California. If it's tails, we'll go to New York."

But heads came up, so the family moved to San Diego, and Harold did odd jobs about the theatre there. Day after day, he called the casting offices; and day after day, he was turned away. He was desperate. He must get by that door man. He noticed that at noon all the actors came out of the Univers-sal lot and went across the road to a lunch counter, and he also noticed the doorman didn't pay any attention to them when they came back with their grease paint on. So the next day, Harold Lloyd hid behind a billboard at noon, put on some makeup himself and slipped by the doorman in the crowd.

There was an actor by the name of Hal Roach who was playing small bits on the lot. He told Lloyd one day that his aunt had died and left him a little money so he was going to make pictures himself, comedies, and wanted Harold to join him.

One day he picked up an idea that was worth a fortune to him—picked it up quite by accident. He was tired, so he drifted into a theatre and saw an actor with a straw hat, a pair of horn rimmed glasses playing the part of a preacher. This actor wasn't trying to be funny; but he was really screaming. Lloyd decided then and there to make horn-rimmed glasses his trademark and to play the part that has since made him famous.

The funniest thing I know about Harold Lloyd is that he himself didn't know he was funny until he was twenty years old. Before that he used to go around reciting Shakespeare. And when he first started making pictures the directors told him he wasn't a comedian and never could be a comedian and they advised him to get out of pictures and make his living at something else. But he kept right on—and now he is the richest actor in all the world. In fact, he is the richest actor who ever lived.

4th CLUB MEMBERS STUDY STATE TREES

"Trees—Our Heritage" is the name of a program which is engaging the interest and activities of 40,000 Kentucky farm boys and girls under the direction of the 4-H club department of the State College of Agriculture. Each boy and girl will plant a tree at home during the year, and each club will plant a tree on public grounds with proper ceremony.

Already thousands of trees have been planted including 1,000 in Jefferson county. Many of them will be planted next fall. Other activities of club members include learning to identify at least 12 trees, and the making of articles from wood or wood products. Each club will make a herbarium which will include the trees studied and identified. Wood exhibits at Junior Week at the University of Kentucky, at local fairs and at other special events will be made.

A special tree program is provided for the clubs each month. In April the boys and girls will discuss the control of forest fires, and will study the oak, yellow poplar and sweet gum. Club members that month will be on the lookout for fires and will put out fires or report them to the nearest fire tower fire warden, forest ranger or CCC camp.

BROODER CROWDING MEANS CHICK LOSS

Two hundred and fifty chicks are enough for a 10 by 10 brooder house, 300 for a 10 by 12 house, says the Kentucky College of Agriculture in a statement which blames overcrowding for many losses of chicks in artificial brooding.

While day-old chicks do not require much space, they increase in size quickly, and before the owner realizes what is happening they may be dying from lack of air. Many poultry raisers now use sun porches, built on to the brooder house and floored with half-inch sash hardware cloth or planks, which gives the chicks more room and keeps them off the ground.

ADVISES PRUNING AND CULTIVATING SHRUBS

Shrubs need pruning and cultivating. Like any other plant, they respond to good treatment, says Prof. N. R. Elliott, landscape expert at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Grass and weeds or sod should be removed from about shrubs, as they take up food and moisture needed by the plant. Loosen the soil two or three inches deep and keep it in good condition throughout the season.

Pruning should be done for two reasons, says Prof. Elliott, it encourages new wood growth and better foliage, flowers and fruit; and it improves the appearance of the shrubs. The ideal time to prune is for the most part just after blooming is finished. Usually all plants cannot be pruned at one time, but by pruning as each finishes blooming it may be done easily and adequately with good results.

Old shrubs that have been pruned for years need rejuvenation by removing old canes or stems, cutting them back to the ground. Sprays, for instance, with 10 or 12 old canes should have four or five removed this spring and the rest next spring. This tends to rejuvenate the plant, decreases the size and improves the shape, without the loss of a season's bloom. Some persons are disposed to discard old plants that might be rejuvenated in this way and made into satisfactory shrubs.

It Is Dangerous

It is dangerous to substitute for 666 just to make three or four cents more. Customers are your best assets; lose them and you lose your business. 666 is worth three or four times as much as a substitute.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written Each Week By B. H. KALZIE, Pastor of The Baptist Church

SUBJECT: FINDING OURSELVES IN SERVICE. MARK 8:27, 38.

GOLDEN TEXT: "For what shall I profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Mark 8:36.

The lesson this week is highly important, as it introduces a new phase in the earth-life of our Lord, for in it he began to prepare his disciples in a more emphatic way for the events which were on the calendar for him and them. (Read also Matt. 16:13-28)

Our Lord is now standing on the Gentile ground in Caesarea Philippi. And while he had told his disciples not to go into the city of the Gentiles, he has now rejected his messages and signs. Jesus now turns from his announcement of himself as Messiah to the Jews, to the emphasis upon himself as the Lord God, the Son, from heaven. He brings out this truth by asking a question: Whom do men say that I am? The answer from the disciples varies. But when he asks, "Whom do ye say I am?" Peter responds by a revealed answer. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus immediately recognizes this answer as having been revealed from heaven. This divine revelation, an experience by which we can know that Jesus is the Son of God, is the greatest experience this side of death. It is necessary for every man to have this divine revelation in his heart before he is eligible for membership in any church. It was on this understanding of Christ—or, on Christ as God knew him to be—the Son of God known in the heart of man as a real experience, that Jesus said would build his church and to which body who has not had this experience has any business in a church of any kind.

But this is a bit beside the point. What is important here is that to fit ourselves for work in the Lord's vineyard, we must start with the divine understanding that Jesus is the Son of God, the Saviour of the world.

Having given this basic premise on which to found a life, Jesus laid down the rule by which we must live. If we are going to try to save our lives, we will lose them. If we lose them for His sake, we will find them.

Man's way is to live just for the end of living. God's way is to live for another purpose. Life is to be given up from self to God, and only as we die in our selfish purposes and live for His man and holy purpose are we saving our lives.

This is God's way of seeing it, and I doubt not that He is right. The wise always know that if we disagree with God, no matter how logical our side looks, we are wrong. To be of service which is permanent in its joy and rewards, we must begin with the divine recognition of Christ the Saviour and end with the glorified vision of Christ the King.

Some employers have informed us that many of their temporary employees do not have account numbers. Employees should require account numbers, to fill out form S.S.A. Application for Social Security Account Number, at the time of employment.

Under the Social Security Act employees are required at stated intervals to submit reports to the United States Collector of Internal Revenue. Mr. Vaughn said, "These reports must show the names of the persons from whose wages deductions are made for social security. They must also show the amount of these wage deductions and the social security account of each worker. If the employer does not know his employee's social security number he must submit an application for the person who is employed.

In cases where the employee has left the service of an employer, this is often difficult," Mr. Vaughn added.

MOREHEAD LIBRARY RECEIVES SPLENDID GIFT

The Morehead Library was the recipient of a splendid gift from Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Duley. The gift was a large number of the National Geographic Magazines. These have been added to the shelves of the library as reference magazines. The National Geographic is one of the finest Educational Magazines published and the school appreciated the gift from Mr. and Mrs. Duley very much.

DRAMATIC CLUB UNDER DIRECTION OF NELL CASSETY

The Dramatic Club under the direction of Miss Nell T. Cassety, gave a play last Wednesday entitled "Safety Pins First." The cast, Allie Rose, Miriam Binley, Rose Caudill and Pearl Hatley, gave a good performance.

HAS NEW EQUIPMENT

The playground now has four swings, four see saws, and a trapeze bar. The children are enjoying these extra play facilities very much.

PACKHORSE LIBRARY

The Packhorse Library, located 1/2 mile north and 1/2 mile west of their collection the past week. The library has been growing every day. Hundreds of people from Rowan County are now enjoying for the first time the benefits of reading. The books, magazines, agricultural papers, religious readings, and health pamphlets are being carried to the most remote parts of the county. Some of the carriers travel twenty or thirty days making regular visiting times. They walk or go by any method available.

At the semi-monthly meeting the board reported that everyone was showing great interest in reading. So far we have been able to furnish books and magazines to nearly two hundred people. We have requests from people all over the county for reading materials. They seem to be very well pleased and ask that the carriers be sure and visit them each trip.

We now have 30 centers established. Twelve of these are to be large centers equally divided over the county and the others smaller. We hope to form several more centers in the near future.

There are now over 1,500 books and almost 17,000 magazines available for this project. There are being distributed as quickly as possible.

Some employers have informed us that many of their temporary employees do not have account numbers. Employees should require account numbers, to fill out form S.S.A. Application for Social Security Account Number, at the time of employment.

Cozy To Show Wells Fargo

Two generations of an American family, laid against the most colorful period in American history, are traced in Paramount's tribute to the men who connected California to the East in early pioneer days. "Wells Fargo" which opens Sunday at the Cozy Theatre.

The family is that of Joel McCrea, man of vision, who goes to the West for the purpose of growing with it and of establishing a "line of empire" between the East and the sprawling settlements on the Pacific Coast, and his wife, played by Miss Dana, who loves him but fails to grasp the greatness of his dream.

The film traces their fortunes, in the time of their marriage, over a chance meeting, a coin coming, a rift brought on by the West between the States and when aging they are brought together by their children.

The background of this romance is supplied by the inspiring story of the Wells Fargo express business, predecessors of the Railway Express Agency. This enterprise, which was started in the East, was among the first business ventures in San Francisco after the discovery of gold and its destinies are closely linked with the history of the entire West. The Wells Fargo pony express rides, and later its stagecoaches and messengers, were the first to carry mail into the remote mining camps and to come back laden with gold for shipment to the East.

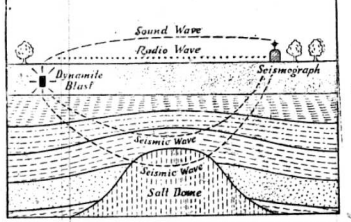

Later as the West spread Eastward, Wells Fargo moved with the growing empire, finally establishing the now famous and historic Wells Fargo Trail from St. Louis to Princeton, over which the immigrant trains from the East, as well as generations of adventures, soldiers, pioneers and other frontier characters passed on horseback and in stage until the coming of the railroad, well after the War Between the States.

The supporting cast is headed by Bob Burns in the role of an Indian Scout. It is his first "straight" role. Others in the brilliant cast are Lloyd Nolan, Henry O'Neill, Porter Hall, Robert Cummings, Ralph Morgan, Mary Nash, John Mack Brown and Barlowe Borland. The film was directed by Frank Lloyd from a story by Stuart N. Lake.

Radio, Photocells and 'Quakes Aid Unceasing Search for Oil

By J. F. Witkowski, Principal, School of Radio, International Correspondence Schools

To maintain our present reserve of crude petroleum oil producers are faced with the necessity of discovering each year new deposits of oil capable of producing a billion barrels of crude. To meet this demand upon them, producers are engaged in constant exploratory work throughout ever-widening areas within our borders. After a promising formation has been discovered it must be tested by drilling before its potentialities can be known, but such drilling is extremely costly. It is essential therefore, that before any drilling is undertaken all possible information about the sub-surface strata be obtained in securing this information, the photostatic cell, and miniature artificial earth quakes caused by the explosion of dynamite all play a part. Dynamite is buried 20 to 50 feet underground at strategic points about the area being studied. At the same time that the dynamite is exploded a radio signal is transmitted, providing an exact record of the time of the explosion. From the data recorded by a seismograph—essentially the same instrument as that used to record nature's earthquakes—it is possible to determine the speed at which the man-made earthquake or seismic waves travel through the various underground strata. From this in turn it is possible to learn a great deal about the character of the sub-surface formations and whether they are of a type likely to produce oil. The photostatic cell enters in through the development of a new instrument known as a seismograph which differs from the seismograph in several respects. Earth vibrations caused by the explosions are transmitted into electric waves and are picked out and transmitted on a strip of motion picture film by a photostatic analyzer. This method is possible to identify and use certain areas that would otherwise be unrecognizable. The seismograph method of oil exploration has been carried on in the United States since 1925. The buried dynamite is less helpful to reveal it is less the thousands of millions of dollars. As a result in the past a few of the promise it offers in the future gives it a unique position in the history of petroleum exploration.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

English As She Should Be Spoken

By IRVIN S. COBB

ALTHOUGH most of the short story writers and some of the novelists do not seem to have found it out, Fligh English has a very witty disposition from the Pacific Coast. Nowadays, classic English is not a sign. A good many years ago he was standing one day on a well known street in San Francisco watching the approach of a tram car. The weather was foggy and Montague was unable to make out what flag the steamer was flying. Beside him stood a Chinaman in native costume and a sign.

"John" Montague said, "you catches what piece flag the steamer is flying?" "I can't exactly make out from here," the Oriental replied. "But I rather imagine it must be the house flag of that particular line. Certainly it doesn't appear to be any national flag with which I am acquainted."

Employees Must Have Numbers

All employees, even those engaged in casual or temporary employment, should have social security numbers. This advice was given today by Mr. M. E. Vaughn, manager of the Lexington, Ky., Social Security Board office. Mr. Vaughn said it had been brought to his attention that a number of employers, particularly garages, hotels, and retail stores of all kinds, do not consider casual employees as being covered by the Social Security Act.

"CAWS" AND EFFECT

Up in the clouds by Benlah Earle

Two more days and Mont would be tearing over the ocean on the most impossible flight in history. Something gripped at her heart. Something told her she would never see him again.

She stood up and moved to the window of the room. Children were playing at the curb. The world was going on without a thought of impending tragedy.

She tied her hair up and renewed the light make-up she wore. But panic was upon her. She had to see Mont again quickly. His room, she knew, was at the end of the short hall. She slipped along the worn carpet and tapped gently at the door.

There was no response. Someone was coming up the twisted stairs. She turned the knob of the door and slipped inside.

Mont was asleep. He had thrown off coat and shoes and tie. For a long time she stood there listening to his heavy breathing. Then very quickly she moved forward and sank to the floor against the sleeve of his shirt.

She would stay there a little while guarding him with her love. And now her fear fell from her, and it was as though his nearness and her adoration for him had driven it out.

Her throbbing heart grew calm. She knew content again. And so she fell asleep beside him and did not wake till early afternoon.

"Is this nice?" he asked, seeing that she was awake.

She sprang up quickly but he caught her hand and drew her down beside him.

"I'm in a hell of a fix," he said her hand to his lips.

She could not speak.

"I'm supposed," he chuckled, "to be a devil with the women. I've been that way deliberately so that I wouldn't ever want to marry anybody. Now I've got myself in a spot where you come in here and I wake up and you are just as safe as though I didn't love you. What's the answer?"

"Maybe you really do love me," she said faintly. "You've only wanted me before."

"Well, it's a new one on me... and I love you all right. But there isn't going to be any marrying in our business."

He spoke a little angrily, she thought, as though he fought against something.

He whipped a glance at the watch on his arm. "We'd better be getting back to the field. They'll be looking for us."

She went back to her own room then, but her heart was singing as though in triumph. It seemed queer about that when he had just told her they were not to be married. She wondered about it a little but there was no explanation—unless it was that her heart knew better than her mind that he loved her as she had to be loved.

He came for her in a few minutes and they rushed away to the field.

sick at heart. At the field, she waited and watched for Mont, but it was mid-morning before he appeared.

He was haggard and pale. Natalie hurried to him with quick alarm, fearing that he might not be ready the next day for the long ride of the flight.

But he was latent on his own and it was not till Sunny Marion arrived, her make-up heavy and her smile oddly triumphant that Natalie knew the truth of that night.

She took him away from the Marion girl then. Directly and deliberately she made him go with her, and she drew with him straight to the small hotel.

She got him into the place and commended him to sleep.

"Don't you realize," she cried, "that your life may depend upon it? You're in no shape to fly. You're all broken up about something. You've got to forget everything but the flight."

"All right," he told her. "But get out of here. I'll be all right."

She knew then that something more than a night out was behind those tense white lips of his. It was something, she thought, that made him braver with her. But she couldn't make out what it might be.

She saw to it that he was not disturbed that afternoon and night. When he appeared the morning of the flight, there was still a line of impasse about his mouth but his eyes were clear and he could grin.

On the way to the field after breakfast, he was silent. She thought he might be worrying about the flight and tried now to bolster his confidence. But he turned to her impatiently.

"Nai," he said grimly, "I'm not coming back from this thing and if I don't, I want you to know something. I swore I wouldn't ever love a girl enough to want to marry her. Marriage is not for fools like me that have to be taking crazy risks. I made marriage virtually impossible for me and then you came along. If I could have got you, it would have been all right. But I couldn't. The put was about you. I went out last night trying to forget you and now it's worse than ever. I'm going to make this flight or die trying and I'm going to be wanting you every inch of the way. But I don't want you to be where I can see you on the take-off."

"All right, Monty. I'll keep out of sight," Triumph sang in her heart as she said the words. "Every time I think of you, I'll be thinking of you love me. Even if we never marry, my thing will have the most important thing. Now stop worrying, especially about that."

She drove with him to the plane and then she slipped away into the small early crowd. It was little more than dawn but these people had come out to see the start.

As she passed toward the flight office, she saw a man in shirt sleeves pushing his way toward the plane.

Inside, she asked the first question everybody had been asking. "What is the weather report?"

"It's bad," the answer came. "They're going to hold everything till tomorrow."

Natalie strolled back toward the plane. She wondered what it was best to do. Had she better see him again, be with him that day? Or would it be better to keep away from him?

When she came near, she saw that Sunny Marion was talking with him. She seemed to be her best to do. Had she better see him again, be with him that day? Or would it be better to keep away from him?

the blond girl and sprang into the cabin of the plane. He revived up the motor, found that it had been waimed, that it answered to the throttle.

Then, suddenly, the ship was roaring across the field. Grass monkeys scattered. Someone rushed out of the field office crying, "Stop him! Stop him!" But the plane was rising now... it was up and speeding for the sea.

Natalie drew back alone. A soft moan broke from her lips. The weather was wrong. He had not waited.

And this was the man she loved, rushing into unknown terror and death on a mad flight around the world.

She looked around for someone and knew at once that it was Jimmy she sought in that small crowd. But Jimmy was not there. He was nowhere. Through tear-wet lashes she could not see him at any rate.

And when she did see, she stood stock still.

For Jimmy Hale was leading beautiful blond Sunny from the field. And Jabe Marion came behind with the field office.

Natalie fled then. She raced for a taxicab and hurried herself into it. "Quick!" she cried and gave the address of her hotel.

For the newspaper woman in her had come to her rescue. The flash would go out from the field office. She must have her story ready for the wire in half an hour. And as she rode through the morning streets she was planning the lead of that story.

"Defying the elements," she found her lips saying, "tossing aside contemptuously the adverse weather reports that would have held out the flight from Mineola field today for Mineola field—around the world—non-stop."

She hardly knew when she reached the hotel.
