JUDGE FRED M. VINSON

It is with a feeling of both joy and sadness that we note in the news of last week the retirement of Fred M. Vinson as Congressman from the Eighth District. Mr. Vinson has served the people of this district for the past fourteen years, with a "vacation" of two years when he lost out by following his principles. During that period his entire time and attention has been devoted to looking after the interests of his constituents. He has risen in that time to be a foremost figure in Washington, taking a prominent part in the shaping of legislation, important not only to Kentucky but to the nation as a whole.

Mr. Vinson's elevation to the bench in the District of Columbia is a well merited distinction and a recognition of real and lasting service. So far as the Rowan County News is concerned, it has always been a staunch supporter of Judge Vinson, even to the extent of going down with the ship in 1928. We are glad that his ability and loyalty have been recognized by President Roosevelt and by Congress, even though it means the loss of his services in Congress.

It is equally our hope that those services are only transferred to another man, a Democrat of deserving timber, one who has fought the battles of Democracy for years and who is fitted both by qualifications and by environment to carry on the services Judge Vinson has so fittingly and successfully inaugurated.

The News, having supported Judge Vinson in his every campaign, feels that it is justified fully, in pledging at this time its support to Hon. Joe Bates for the office of Congressman made vacant by the retirement of Judge Vinson. This applies not only to the short term, but to the election to be held in August as well.

We do this with the belief that his selection will best serve the interests of the Eighth District in general and of Rowan county in particular.

OUR MOTHER!

The following editorial taken from the "Quill," camp publication of the Rodburn CCC Camp, is well worthy of a place in the Rowan County News. We suggest that our readers study the sentiment expressed in this editorial and take it to heart.—Ed.

The second Sunday in May has been set aside generally in the United States as a day in which to honor the memory of mothers who have journeyed on this earth also the lives of mothers whose love and care still sweeten existence are brightened by the presence of love and respect. Thus is fostered in the hearts of all the purest love that earth has ever known—the love of a mother and her child.

A beautiful symbolism is observed as a part of Mother's Day exercises. It is urged that a white flower (which emblematic of purity) be worn personally on the day. The flower that purifies, its whiteness stands for purity; its form, beauty and fragrance for love; its wide field of growth, charity; its lasting qualities, faithfulness—all true mother qualities.

Origin and History
Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia was the first one to suggest the idea of Mother's Day. Asked to arrange a memorial service for her mother, the inspiring spirit of modern life, she had the loving service of mother's generally, should be commemorated. It was recognized that the feverish activity of modern life tended to weaken home ties. Why not set aside one day in the year to revive in all the memories of thoughtful days when mother kissed the petty sorrows of childhood, and to stamp indelibly on children, the memory of that love that now blesses them? This suggestion was at once adopted, first by churches and religious bodies, and then by the public generally.

It is a holiday designed to teach one of the most beautiful lessons of life.
Mother's Day Authorized
"Whereas we honor ourselves and the mothers of America when we do anything to give emphasis to the home as the fountain head of the state, and whereas the American mother is doing much for the home, for moral uplift and the hence so much for good government and humanity, therefore be it resolved that the President of the United States is hereby authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the government officials to display the United States flag on all buildings, and the people of the United States to display the flag at their homes or suitable places on the second Sunday of May, as a public expression of our love and reverence for the mothers of our country; and that the second Sunday of May shall be designated as Mother's Day, and it shall be the duty of the President to request its observance as provided for in this resolution."

(This resolution was passed by

Another effect of the pro-Administration victory of Senator Pepper has been to strengthen the opposition to giving the President any more "blank checks," in the form of lump-sum appropriations which can allot as he pleases to disburse in particular states and Congress districts. Realization of the extent of the political power which that method places in the hands of the Executive was brought home to Congress by the Florida results, and Congress is as firmly determined as ever to withhold from a coordinate branch of the Federal system and yield to the Executive only under the strongest compulsion. Therefore, the outlook is that Congress will make its own allotments, so far as that is possible, of the distribution of money under the new Relief and Recovery program. That most of the proposals in the President's new pump-priming plan will be enacted into law in the coming session, and that the effort will be made to specify the particular uses of which every dollar shall be put, instead of leaving it to the President to use the money as he pleases.

The real scramble will be among the Senators and Representatives to see how much each can grab off for his own state or district.

TODAY and TOMORROW
FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

One of the signs of approaching Summer in the country is the increase in the number of anthills. Little heaps of sand are appearing overnight all over the place. I never cease to wonder at the persistence of this little underground workers, who dig their caves and tunnels and bring the excavated earth to the surface. A New York woman has built up a profitable business in "ant colonies" enclosed in glass and so arranged that one can see them at will.

There is nothing much more fascinating than the study of living creatures of any kind, especially those who live underground. Beneath the surface of my Pennsylvania village home dwell moles, who have almost developed their own language, earthworms, of which both the robins and I wish there were more; and, unhappily, the larvae of the Japanese beetle, which are coming to the surface before long to chew up the shrubbery. I suppose that they also have their caterpillar-like stage during the latter part of the year.

Another needed railroad reform is to have the names of stations displayed big enough and far enough back from the tracks so the traveler can tell what town he is passing through.

TOOLS
Not long ago I had a good deal of remodeling work done on my house. I was interested in the new tools with the modern design. The carpenter had a portable electric buzz saw and an electric motor brace for his boring work. I had a new electrically driven sprayer instead of a brush, and so on down the line. The price paid to pay them by the hour was higher than old-fashioned wages, but they got twice as much work done in a day as men with only tools could do in a week.

The nation's greatest contribution to the world's progress is, I believe the invention and general use of time-saving tools. It is only because the modern tools make it possible for a worker to turn out more work with less labor that wage scales in this country are higher than in any other country.

The American pioneers had to develop labor-saving devices in order to get the country settled. The curved saw-helve is the earliest

Another effect of the pro-Administration victory of Senator Pepper has been to strengthen the opposition to giving the President any more "blank checks," in the form of lump-sum appropriations which can allot as he pleases to disburse in particular states and Congress districts. Realization of the extent of the political power which that method places in the hands of the Executive was brought home to Congress by the Florida results, and Congress is as firmly determined as ever to withhold from a coordinate branch of the Federal system and yield to the Executive only under the strongest compulsion. Therefore, the outlook is that Congress will make its own allotments, so far as that is possible, of the distribution of money under the new Relief and Recovery program.

The belief is now general on the House side that it is likely to pass the bill, but that it is likely to run into a snag in the Senate. Senators as well as Representatives would like to see the bill pass by June, and an organized filibuster against the hours-and-wages bill would delay their return home.

enabled the pioneers to clear the land with less physical effort than the old straight helve, which almost of Europe still uses.

MANNERS—Improving I have seen many changes in the American standards of manners in my life, and on the whole I believe the standards are higher than when I was young. Certainly they are not so artificial. I can remember when a boy or a young man whose manners were habitually good was ridiculed as a "sissy" or a "dud" by many of those with whom he came in contact. Nowadays politeness is not looked upon as evidence of timidity or assumed superiority.

In an old book on etiquette, published a hundred years ago, the author criticized the "imported" prohibition of eating with one's knife, and said that frigate-born Americans should do as they pleased about it. (Lately Emily Post, the best authority on manners in the day, said that Americans ought to feel bound by imported rules, such as putting one's elbows on the table at meals. She also ridiculed the American idea that it is bad form to lift your food to your mouth with your left hand.)

Good manners seem to multiply as behaving in a way which does not offend anyone else. That is the long and short of it.

How revolutionary the change in the dress of men and women has been in the past 70 odd years I did not quite realize until I looked over the day at some old photographs of my father and mother; the pictures they exchanged when they became engaged. My mother's picture as a girl of 16 in 1865 shows her wearing a hoopskirt dress which must have been ten yards around the skirt. My father's dress was black broadcloth, with the coat buttoned up to the neck, the trousers uncreased and obviously pulled over a pair of knee-high boots.

I can remember when my men of old fashion had their trousers pressed in a crease, and when the style of wearing "cuffs" on the ends of the trousers was in vogue. Boys on the street would cry "it's raining in London" to any man daring enough to appear in public with the bottom of his trousers turned up.

Page Four THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Written Each Week By B. H. KAZEE Pastor of The Baptist Church

SUBJECT: SERVING THROUGH CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP. Mark 12:13-17, 28-34.

GOLDEN TEXT: "There is no other commandment greater than these." Mark 12:31. The lesson before us this week is a study of what is right to our fellow men and what is right to God. The critics of Jesus are no hand here again to trap him of questions of government and religion. They ask him "Should a Christian pay poll tax to Caesar?"

The question is an old one, and is still before the peoples of the world; government and religion—separation of church and state. Shall the government have control over religion or shall religion have control over government, or shall there be entire separation. The Roman Catholics believe in religion controlling government; some protestant bodies believe in government controlling religion (for example, countries which have state churches); still others believe in entire separation of the two.

This last seems to be the teaching of Jesus. He drew a line around that which belonged to Caesar, and said: "Give Caesar what belongs to Him, and give God what belongs to Him." But suppose there came a time when that which is God's conflicted with that which is Caesar's? The Apostles gave the answer: "We must obey God rather than men." Thus the true principle of separation of church and state is: If the government is right, it will not conflict with God. Any government that does is entirely out of its realm. But where this principle is in power, any man can be a good citizen to his government, and a good servant of God at the same time.

When the critics tried to trap Jesus on the question of which is the chief commandment, it was the same principle in this, and Jesus gave them a silencing answer: First, love God with your whole heart, soul, mind and strength. This is the first. And the second is close to it: Love thy neighbor as thyself. Thus a man can be a good citizen of the Kingdom of Heaven, giving his life in devotion to God first, and at the same time can be a good citizen of his world just as he would his own.

Governments on earth have to do with our conduct toward each other. They are for the control of us all. If that is our aim we are fitting into the very scheme of God. So, there is no conflict between the two. The tragedy is that we all fall short on both points. We do not love our neighbor as ourselves. Without the love of God in our hearts, we cannot love our neighbor. To love God supremely, one must be born of God's spirit. And unless one can love God supremely, he cannot love his neighbor as he does himself. This is the source of all our trouble and strife in this world. The ideal life is impossible without the living presence and power of God in the lives of all the people.

Ritz Brothers At Cozy Theatre

The three Ritz Brothers, taking a hilarious, tongue-in-cheek poke at the radio broadcasting studio's penchant for talent casts, are scheduled to open Wednesday May 25, at the Cozy Theatre in their latest starring comedy, "Kentucky Moonshine."

In this 20th Century Fox Film, with Darryl F. Zanuck in charge of production, the now established madmen of the movies have added many extra film frenzies to provide merriment. Interpolated through the plot of "Kentucky Moonshine" is a romance between Tony Martin, the popular radio star (and more recently a screen crooner, and the delightful Marjorie Weaver, who has come a long way toward stardom since her "break" in "Second Honey-moon."

The romance in turn is accompanied by three hit-parade-destined songs by the prolific songwriting team of Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell, who provided three of the tunes for "In Old Chicago" among nearly two dozen other hits during the past year.

The story of "Kentucky Moonshine" is that of a group of unemployed entertainers. Marjorie Weaver, waiting her turn for an audition at a radio station, overhears a conference at which it is decided to send Tony Martin to the hillbilly talent. But you come and see the story for yourself. visitors urats ysgnda otgni vdkdwm

The committee for decorations are Ruth Jean Grider, Clara Bruce and Virginia Caudill. Finance Committee: Frank Laughlin.

PACKHORSE LIBRARY
 The Packhorse Library is doing some of the most useful and appreciated work ever done in Rowan County. This Library reaches the homes that are the most difficult to reach. The carriers travel mostly by horse and foot. Some days they finish their days completely exhausted, but with a glad heart because they have made some mother or child happy by their visit. They often read to the ones which cannot read. They try to serve their readers in every way possible. New centers are being formed as the carriers find it necessary.

The library is getting short on fiction books and any donation will help carry on this work. It takes a lot of books to loan six hundred or more each week.

The library especially wishes to thank the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago for its cooperation. They have donated several hundred books and will give the library as many more copies as is needed. These are religious story books, and the readers like them very much.

The Gospel Trumpet Company has also been nice. They sent the Library fifty copies of their magazines each week.

The Library has been having many visitors and welcome everyone! It is open every day except Sunday from 7:30 a. m. till 3:30 p. m. The Library wants to serve everyone.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
 Bids are now being accepted to furnish the Post Office Building with 50 tons of run of mine coal. The bids will be publicly opened on May 31, 1938 at 2:00 o'clock P. M.

KENTUCKY is Calling, Too

Newspapers and magazines, these days, are full of advertisements for other States and other sections. But Kentucky is calling, too—the State that offers you everything! . . . The Cumberland Gap—with the pinnacle towering above and Pine Mountain nearby. And Natural Bridge State Park on Highway 15. And Herrington Lake, and Dawson Springs, and lovely scenery everywhere! . . . See them all and more, even if you must frequently omit Louisville and the Bluegrass. We'll miss you, of course. But when you do come back to the Brown, you'll think more of your State—and we'll thank you for reminding you of it!

Plan to See:—Ballard County—Acacia, Ballard City at Wellfild. Boone County—Cumberland Gap, thru which Boone and early settlers came over the Wilderness Trail. Boone County—Big Bone Lick, where bones of mammoths were found. First white woman in Kentucky was brought here by captives. Boyle County—Centre College at Danville. Perryville, scene of Civil War battle where losses were heavier than at any other engagement in the State. Carter County—Sangletown where gunpowder was made in 1812. Christian County—Pilot Knob, 200 feet high, located about twelve miles southeast of Hopkinsville.

Clark County—Indian Mound, Indian Old Field, near Wildcat. Edmonson County—Mammoth, the new entrance to Mammoth Cave and other caves. Fayette County—Ladysburg, the seat of stock raising and mutton-pulling. Blount, Ashland, Henry, Wayne, Transylvania, the first vest of the Alleghenies. Home of famous Man O' War, Kentucky University. Franklin County—At Frankfort, the State Capital, are located the new Capitol Building, collection of Historical Society, grave of Daniel Boone and other men who's made history in Kentucky.

PATTERN 8157
 Wear this charming trim little frock for round the house and at your marketing. The skirt is straight and slim and the bodice with shoulder yoke uses soft shirking to give blouse fullness at back. Choose a cheery, new print in bright color. You will find it one of the most practical dresses in your home wardrobe this summer.

Pattern 8157 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 34 requires 3 7/8 yards of 39 inch material and 1 1/2 yards of bias fold to trim as pictured.

PATTERN 8176
 This is the kind of dress you'll simply live in. Pattern 8176 gives you the softly flared skirt, the lifted waistline, the youthful V-neck that fashion approves for spring. The simple sash belt, tied in the front is an added touch of charm.

Any of the new printed silks will make up beautifully in this design, either the small-figured ones, or those with large splashy motifs.

Pattern 8176 is designed for sizes: 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4 3/8 yards of 39 inch material. The belt calls for 2 1/2 yards of ribbon.

Counties On Parade

WAYNE COUNTY

Perhaps no county in the state has a more romantic history and geography than does Wayne, the forty-third of the Kentucky counties to be created. This state legislature in 1800 created only one new county, which was named for General "Mad Anthony Wayne", a distinguished Revolutionary soldier and Indian fighter. This great Pennsylvanian ranked in success and prominence as a military leader and commander next to General George Washington and Nathaniel Greene. His military campaigns on behalf of the thirteen colonies extended all along the Atlantic seaboard, from the stormy heights of Quebec to the Piney Woods of Georgia, and his Indian battles were climaxed in the Battle of Fallen Timbers, where he defeated the British and Indians. This genius of Stony Point, Germantown, and Yorktown succeeded in driving the British and St. Clair in command of the Colonial armies; he died in 1796, four years before Wayne County in Kentucky was created. This great pentagonally shaped commonwealth waits the rise of a historian and archeologist to interpret its prehistoric past and write its historic lore. Here lived and hunted the great tribes of Indians who supplied their needs from the game of forest and stream. Here early hunters, trappers, pioneers, and settlers lived and partook of the wealth of its landscape and resources. Their records are yet to be written. What a thrilling story would it be to have related the experiences of the great caravans of pioneers who crossed the confines of Wayne County on their way to middle Tennessee, the great groups of people who touched the banks of the Cumberland in Wayne county as they floated to the unknown and undeveloped southwest. The untold stories of courage and daring events about Old Mill Springs, Steubenville, and Windy would make a thrilling chapter in Kentucky history. The history of the historic associations connected with the name of the county seat, Monticello. This county capital was named for the home of Thomas Jefferson.

This little commonwealth is located in the southeastern part of the state and borders the two counties of Penitess and Scott on the Tennessee line. It was carved out of Puckett and Cumberland Counties. It is 112 miles long and 44 miles wide to form the baby county of Kentucky. McCrory. At present this little empire has an area of 1,000 square miles, one of the largest of Rhode Island, and about seven times the size of the District of Columbia. This region amounts at almost 100,000 Anglo-Saxon population of 17,000 more than three fourths of the county's area has been made into farms; one fourth thus remains unimproved. For every three acres of crop land there are three acres of pasture and six acres of woodland.

The topography may be divided, like all Gaul, into three parts, for it is at this county that the three regions of the Kentucky Mountains, the Knobs, and the Pennyroyal meet. The southeastern triangle of the county, with its highest elevations of 1850 feet, the large part of Spruce Mountain, is a part of the Kentucky Mountains, a region possibly more familiarly known as the Cumberland Plateau or the Eastern Coalfields. This area belongs in its natural and cultural landscape to Eastern Kentucky. This region is a wide belt that runs through the central portion of the county in a northeast-southwest direction. This central area is an upland knob lands and rolling limestone plains. Its surface is marked by many typical Gasf formations, such as swallow, sinkholes, ponds, sinking streams, caves, and springs. Here are found some of the loveliest farms in the whole state.

The third topographical region of Wayne County is that of the Pennyroyal or Mississippi Plateau, a triangle of cavernous limestone lands located in the northwestern corner of the county. This area is deeply incised by stream courses of the Cumberland and its tributaries. Thus the whole area is varied and picturesque because of the beautiful palisades and the lovely meandering courses of the streams. Along this beautiful Cumberland River, thousands of early pioneers poured into Tennessee, and for many years regular steamship service from Burnside, Kentucky, to Nashville, and Paducah served Wayne County as a commercial outlet. There is genuine beauty to be enjoyed each season by anyone who will take a trip down the Cumberland river or a drive over her state and county highways.

Each of the three regions of the county abounds in thick growth of virgin timber, and much of it is underlaid by rich deposits of coal. The principal mineral resources, however, are limestone and petroleum. The limestone occurs in large quantities, is widely distributed, and is sufficient for any reasonable demand for road building and urban or rural roads. The oil pools are widely scattered over the area which bear thousands of barrels of oil each year and provide large quantities of natural gas sufficient to supply all local needs. The mining of coal is a domestic enterprise and serves only a very small region, inasmuch as the county possesses no railroad facilities and all coal must be marketed by truck. The building of excellent state highways has connected Monticello, the county seat, and the other towns with the leading arterial routes of the state and nation. Prior to the World War, the Cumberland River provided some transportation for the county, but the use of the river has decreased to a very negligible degree. Wayne is one of the many progressive counties of the state which have built a fine municipal airport; thus making up for railroad deficiency by the use of motorways and airplanes. One important arterial highway is the "Lookout Mountain altitude," a short route connecting the North and South.

Although the surface of the county is much broken with knobs and hills, the valley land is very fertile and productive, the soil being generally based on limestone. The value of the farm crops approximates a million dollars a year, and the production of livestock equals that of the farm crops. The principal farm crops are corn, wheat, oats, potatoes and the orchards produce sufficient quantities of apples and peaches. The livestock produced each year, and exported to the surrounding counties includes cattle, horses, mules, sheep, wine, dairy products and poultry. Thus the people of Wayne county have been blessed with an abundance of oil, hardwood timber, and coal resources, and by a wise use of their farm lands by which they are able to produce an abundance yield of farm crops and heavy exports of livestock. All this richness of resources is reflected in the great homes, fine schools, and in the excellent cultural advantages in education and religion. Thus there is translated through these institutions good citizenship on the part of the youth. Wayne County is progressive in the utilization of its resources and in the overcoming of its handicaps. S. S. Association To Organize

An all day meeting of the Executive Committee of the Kentucky Sunday School Association was held in Louisville on May 11th for the purpose of discussing the Association's general program of activities and to consider plans for a state convention. By unanimous vote it was decided to hold a state convention in Louisville, around the middle of October, this year, the final date to be determined by the executive committee of the Association. It will be a two-day convention and the whole program will deal with present day issues and ways of meeting them. At least three forums on methods, with a resource leader for each, will be held, and if present plans carry, some of the outstanding religious leaders of the country will participate in the program.

Information was to the effect that the promotion of Go To Sunday School Day, this year, resulted in a fine increase in attendance throughout the state. Observance of the day for 1938 was approved and it was voted to ask the Sunday Schools, for Go To Sunday School day in 1939, to strive for a minimum goal of 20 per cent increased attendance over this year.

The committee endorsed the actions of the Central or ad interim committee for the year, these including the engagement of Rev. P. Barnes, of Bardston, Ky., to assist in the field work for the summer and the acceptance of a goal of 100 delegates from Kentucky to the International Convention on Christian Education to be held in Columbus, Ohio, June 28 thru July 3rd.

Farmers who are not FSA borrowers, as well as those who have received debt adjustment service from this agency, Cobb pointed out. The regional report showed that almost half of the 6,088 farmers aided were FSA borrowers, while 3185 were not. Many of the letters were undoubtedly able to secure credit elsewhere after debt settlements were made, or were able to operate under their own financial power, he said.

In Kentucky the farm debt adjustment record to date shows that settlements have been effected for 1129 farmers. Other states in this region are, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia.

Mediator between EAST and WEST

In the State of Virginia in 1847, east was east and west was west, with the Blue Ridge mountains looming between. But the means of union were already taking form.

Q That was a great year in Chesapeake and Ohio history, for its predecessor company - the little 49 mile Louisa Railroad - made two important decisions: to tunnel the Blue Ridge at Rockfish Gap and to undertake all operations on its line.

This second decision involved the purchase of equipment, and it was a proud day for the Louisa's owners when they inspected their first locomotive.

Q The stockholders were led by the president, Colonel Edmund Fosselman:

... a contract was made for three engines, two of which have arrived... the third is on its way.

We trust the day is not far distant when this noble machine shall become the mediator between the East and the West... break down the wall of partition between eastern and western interests, and prodigal eternal union between the two regions and the lowlands.

Q One man going at the 144-ton locomotive on that June day of 1847 could imagine how successfully the dream would be realized... by the use of "noble machines of today - the powerful 4000-hp engines and freight across two mountain stages from the Atlantic seaboard to the Middle West, it's helping daily to maintain "the eternal union" between the mountains and the lowlands.

Mediator between EAST and WEST

In the State of Virginia in 1847, east was east and west was west, with the Blue Ridge mountains looming between. But the means of union were already taking form.

Q That was a great year in Chesapeake and Ohio history, for its predecessor company - the little 49 mile Louisa Railroad - made two important decisions: to tunnel the Blue Ridge at Rockfish Gap and to undertake all operations on its line.

This second decision involved the purchase of equipment, and it was a proud day for the Louisa's owners when they inspected their first locomotive.

Q The stockholders were led by the president, Colonel Edmund Fosselman:

... a contract was made for three engines, two of which have arrived... the third is on its way.

We trust the day is not far distant when this noble machine shall become the mediator between the East and the West... break down the wall of partition between eastern and western interests, and prodigal eternal union between the two regions and the lowlands.

Q One man going at the 144-ton locomotive on that June day of 1847 could imagine how successfully the dream would be realized... by the use of "noble machines of today - the powerful 4000-hp engines and freight across two mountain stages from the Atlantic seaboard to the Middle West, it's helping daily to maintain "the eternal union" between the mountains and the lowlands.
