Storm Floods City Streets

A hard rain-storm flooded a large portion of Morehead last Saturday afternoon, overflowing curbs in several business houses and homes. Damage was not great, however, as the water subsided almost as fast as it came.

Several business houses on Railroad Street were flooded. Water poured into the Rowan County News office on Second Street, but the damage was not great as paper and other materials that would have been ruined were moved in time.

The bridge on Second Street near the Church of God was completely washed away and traffic was blocked for several hours. S. E. Highway 60 was temporarily blocked in West Morehead, and water there went into basements, on the first floor, in other cities in this section.

The storm several hours and into garages. In some homes, already taxed by so much rainfall, were unable to care for the deluge. It was estimated that an inch of rain fell in two hours. The storm seemed to have its center in Morehead, although other cities in this section also reported a heavy down-pour.

At Farmers, the Licking River reached out of its banks but did not come to the flood stage. The Ohio River came dangerously close to flooding low-lying districts.

Registration enabling the voters to participate in the August primary closes on June 7. No one will be allowed to register after that date.

County Clerk C. V. Alfrey said there had been a large number of persons desiring to change either registration, but under the State law they could not vote the ballot of the party to which they changed in August. In other words, according to Mr. Alfrey, no one may change their registration now in order to vote in a different party in August.

Mrs. Young and a group of eight girls from her high school participated in the Alabama High School Music Festival in Montgomery recently.

Automobile Thefts Continue At MSTC

The theft of wheels from automobiles parked in front of the Men's Hall at the Morehead State Teachers College is becoming rapidly one of the most destructive activities. On Saturday night of last week, wheels were stolen from two cars belonging to men rooming at that hall. This is the second time the same thing has occurred.

Men's Hall, the new dormitory for men at the college is located far down on the campus and the failure of college authorities to install lights around the building has given the thieves a wonderful opportunity to work in the dark and perpetrate their unlawful activities.

Dean Nickell who has charge of the building has requested on numerous occasions that lights be installed but thus far his requests have been ignored.

Both Sides Making Effort To Get Full Strength At Polling Places

Voters in Rowan County and the Eighth Congressional District will go to the polls Saturday to elect a Democrat with the exception of two years which brought a G. O. P. candidate into office on the results of the Hoover landslide.

Republicans however, feeling that their chances are greatly enhanced in a special election, because the vote will probably be light, are expected to put up a battle. Joe Cecil Sparks, Republican, has already gone out to recruit for his campaign office to begin work in the next few days.

The candidates to be voted on are Joe B. Bates of Greenup, Republican, and James Cecil Sparks, Republican, both nominated by the publicans who convened at the Morehead.

An admitted edge is held by the Democrats in this election since the district is Democratic and has been represented for thirty years by a Democrat with the exception of two years which brought a G. O. P. candidate into office on the results of the Hoover landslide.

Joe Bates Heard At Meeting

Democrats organized for Saturday's special election here Saturday at the courthouse. Although the crowd was not very large, it was smaller than ordinary because of a heavy rain-storm that delayed the meeting, there was a good representation of voters from the ward in the county represented by County Chairman Lester George, president at the meeting, and introduced the program to the Democrats in Eastern Kentucky, and has perhaps done as much for the party as any man in the western Kentucky.

Mr. Bates spoke briefly regarding the campaign, expressing the hope that the party could outgrow its past and cast its ballot for the Democratic party. "Failures of this (Continued On Page Eight)

Democrats — Go Vote Saturday

Saturday is special election day in Rowan County and the Eighth Congressional District. The Honorable Joe B. Bates of Greenup nominee on the Democratic ticket, is opposed by a Republican for the important office of Congressman, for the short term, to succeed Honorable Fred M. Vinson, re-elected.

The only hope of the Republican party in this special election is that the Democrats will not come out and cast their ballots. The district is Democratic, and Mr. Bates should be elected, but it is up to every Democrat to exercise his voting privilege Saturday.

The result of this election is more important and there is more at stake for the Democrats than would appear on the surface. If Mr. Bates should fail to be elected it would injure the chances of the Democratic nominee for Senator this fall, whether it is Senator Barkley or Governor Chandler. It would also lessen our chances for a Democratic congressman in the fall.

Congressman Fred Vinson is anxious that Mr. Bates be elected as his successor. For many years Mr. Bates has been one of Congressman Vinson's right hand men.

The Democratic nominee is well qualified and highly-deserving. He has been identified with the Democratic party in Kentucky for many years. He served five terms as Clerk of Greenup County. In the gubernatorial race three years ago he was a major factor in the election of Governor Chandler in November, being assistant campaign manager for the party.

It is up to the Democrats to get out Saturday and cast their ballots for the continuance of our successful form of Democratic government.

It is admirable that the campaign heads of both the Barkley and the Chandler organizations in Rowan County have declared a truce this week and have met on common ground. They are both working for a common cause—for this is not a primary election, but one that pits a Democrat against a Republican. It is a commendable trait of the Democratic party in Kentucky that, for the most part, there can be red-hot primaries, but after that smoke has cleared the two get together on a united front for democracy.

Business Needs Only Courage

To the oft-reiterated complaint that business men are timid and unwilling to do their share toward bringing about recovery, a dramatic reply was made a week or two ago by one of the largest chain-store systems. These merchants did not content themselves with making patriotic speeches or issuing statements to the press saying they were ready to spend money whenever the Government took its hands off business. Instead of making empty gestures, they acted.

In the New York and other newspapers they ran big display advertisements announcing that they wanted to buy merchandise on an unprecedented scale. Five million dollars of first quality merchandise, and they wanted it that very week. Their ordinary purchases are a million dollars a week. They were confident that through their 1,600 outlets they could sell double that amount every week, if manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers were willing to join them in cutting profits and giving the public real savings in their purchases. So they engaged quarters in a big New York hotel where their whole staff of buyers was ready to meet the people who had their kind of merchandise to sell.

The sellers came in droves, and the merchants bought—five million dollars' worth of goods, largely for cash.

"We thought it was time for business to prime its own pump," said President Woodcock of the United Clear-Wheelmen Stores. "We are convinced that the public is buying again, and that business will pick up if business men only believe it and prove their belief by acting on it." There is something of the old American spirit of independence and self-reliance in this incident. If every business concern in the Nation would go ahead in the same fashion instead of whining about business being hampered by Government, the wheels of industry would soon begin to revolve again and the unemployment problem would be well on its way to solution.

Action Is Needed On The Liquor Question

It has been reported that from five to ten new liquor stores will be opened in Morehead July 1.

The reason for this overnight blooming of dispensaries in this city is that on that date licenses will run out and the stores not in the city limit will no longer be allowed to sell liquor under the state law. If this many new whiskey stores open in Morehead it will mean that we will have a place dispensing liquor for almost every hundred inhabitants.

This would create a situation that would be unsavory and unwarranted by any good citizen of this community and one that would be a detriment to Morehead, especially the Morehead State Teachers College. It seems that the only way in which this deplorable situation can be prevented is for the Morehead City Council to take action. An ordinance limiting the number of whiskey stores in the city and regulating whiskey within the corporate limits is needed. Action should be taken on this in order to protect the city from the mushrooming of liquor stores in practically every corner.

It is not our intention to discriminate against any person, regardless of what business, if it be whiskey or anything else. At the same time we are interested in preventing anything that would be a detriment to Morehead. Now is the time to act—not wait until the damage has already been done.

The voters of this county saw fit two years ago to give a majority against local option. Those engaged in the whiskey and beer business should take fair warning at this time that it will only be a comparative short time until another election will be called. A situation as is about to rise in Morehead would only hasten local option in this county and put them all out of business.

THE NEW DEAL

With Congress apparently on the verge of adjournment and a hot campaign ahead for all of the Representatives and a third of the Senators, political Washington is paying much more attention now to the outlook for the Fall elections than it is to such matters as the wages and hours bill or the President's efforts to put over his Reorganization plan.

The big question which next Fall elections will decide is whether the trend of sentiment among the voters of the nation is away from the dominant Democratic party, and, if such a trend has developed, the party is away from the present Administration and the New Deal, or otherwise.

The Wind Now at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue, the Executive end which centers at the White House, and the Legislative end on Capitol Hill, the sophistayers and stanzers are tossing straws into the air to determine which way the political wind is blowing.

The first straw so tossed blew, as every observer agreed, directly toward the White House. That was the recent New Deal victory of Senator Pepper in Florida. So far as the trend inside the Democratic party is concerned, the Republican evidence that Democratic voters are still overwhelmingly New Dealers.

But then came the Pennsylvania primaries, and the indications from that straw were by no means so encouraging. One of the Democratic candidates who had the blessing of the Administration was nominated.

Governor Earle's victory running for the Senatorial nomination, was conceded in advance by almost everybody, not so much because he has been a consistent supporter of Mr. Roosevelt from the beginning but because the candidate who opposed him in the primaries were men in whom the voters of his own party had little confidence.

The victory in Pennsylvania of the Anti-New Deal Democratic candidate for Governor, Charles A. Jones, over Lieut-Governor Kenney, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, was not only a straw revealing a Democratic current in a different direction from the way the wind blows in Florida, but it was a definite and severe set-back to the political ambitions of John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O.

Lewis had put all the strength of his labor organization behind Mr. Kenney. Mr. Jones' victory over the combined efforts of Mr. Lewis and of chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee is regarded here as a pretty definite indication that the trend in the great industrial states of the north is at least toward conservatism, if not distinctly toward Republicanism.

Mr. Lewis had also put his influence in the Republican primaries behind the veteran former Governor of Ohio "Pinch" who made a very poor showing indeed against Judge Arthur H. James for the Republican nomination for Governor. The fact that the size of the Republican primary vote, over 135,000 more than the Democrats, have started Washington to talking seriously of the possible recapture of Pennsylvania by their party next November, and have definitely strengthened the conviction that the Republicans are certain to gain a large number of Congressional seats.

Even New Deal enthusiasts are now conceding that there will be at least 35 more Republican members in the lower house of the next Congress than in the present one. That may safely be regarded as the minimum shift. Estimates of experienced political observers run all the way from 35 more Republicans to 110. The average of several polls of expert opinion is 65.

That would not give a Republican majority, and even staunch Republican express doubts whether a majority would be obtainable with a Senate still overwhelmingly Democratic and a Democratic Administration in the White House. Such a condition has obtained in the past with the result of a complete deadlock in all important matters of legislation.

His own Democratic Party was split between the Conservative faction bent upon preserving the gold standard and bringing back realism to the party of 1883 by encouraging industry, and the radical Free Silver advocates.

In the Congressional election of that year the Republicans gained 120 seats, and two years later elected President McKinley and a Republican Congress.

Cutting across all party lines this year, however, is the new spending program which the President proposed, which Congress has accepted. That the distribution of several billions of fresh funds for relief and public works will operate as a powerful influence for the election of Democrats over Republicans in scores of Congress districts taken for granted here.

How far it will be influential in the nomination of thick-thin New Dealers over the conservative Democrats is a question to which no affirmative answer is not quite such a foregone conclusion, since the Florida New Deal victory was about the only criterion to go by.

TODAY and TOMORROW

As long as men have been catching fish, little is really known about their life and habits. How do they behave under water? We can't see more than a few inches below the surface of the sea. Who eats what? How do they struggle for existence that goes on in the ocean's depths? Nobody knows for sure, but a great scientific laboratory for the study of living fish of all kinds has been established in Florida, and we are now on the way toward learning more about the hidden life under water.

At Marineland on Florida's East Coast half a million dollars has been spent to build a miniature ocean. Two great connected tanks holding nearly a million gallons of filtered sea-water have been built. They have windows along the sides and the bottom through which the behavior of marine animals can be studied and photographed at close range.

When I visited Marineland in April there were dozens of sharks of different kinds and sizes, a big number of smaller fish, crabs, starfish and other crustaceans, seals and proposals all living together as they do in the sea.

Does a shark catch his fishes fish? Catching big fish for an aquarium is a good deal like catching big animals for a zoo or a circus. In order to bring 'em in alive and in condition to keep on living, they have to be carefully handled after they are trapped, else they will injure themselves in the struggle to get free. Big game hunters for zoos use "mercy bullets," shooting a quick-acting narcotic drug into the animal's hide. On the same principle the Marine Studies use a "hypodermic harpoon" to control big fish after they have been netted or trapped.

Invented by Count Illa Tolstoy, grandson of the famous Russian novelist, who is in charge of collecting fish for the Marineland aquarium, the hypodermic harpoon injects an anesthetic drug into a fish. Even the largest sharks turn over and they die without feeling this "shot in the arm," but a few hours later they are lively as ever in the "miniature ocean."

I went out with one of the "bring 'em in alive" expeditions early in April. We set a big net a few miles out in the Atlantic and anchored over night, to haul the net at sunrise, the feeding time for the big ones. But all we got was one five-foot hammerhead shark.

Whether sharks actually attack living persons in the water is still a matter of dispute. The fish expert I talked with in Florida said that some of the large sharks will seize an injured person, attracted by the smell of blood. All agree that a far more dangerous fish is the barracuda, the "tiger" of the sea. It comes into shallow waters and frequently bites an arm or a leg off of a bather.

Everybody who has been around the Atlantic seaboard much, from Nova Scotia to Florida, has been schooled in the habits, which are usually called porpoises, leaping out of water in graceful curves. Little take them for fish, but they are warm-blooded mammals, little cousins of the whale. They make their brief excursions to the surface to fill their lungs with air, which they can do in couple of seconds through the single nostril or "blowhole" in the tops of their heads.

While I was visiting the big aquarium at Marineland word came that porpoises were feeding in a nearby inlet. Half a dozen fishermen in rowboats went out after them. They set four nets across the mouth of the inlet. The first porpoise broke through all four nets, but her baby got tangled in the first net and the mother came back to the rescue. Mother and baby now live in the aquarium.

I spent an hour or more watching in another pool a mother porpoise suckle her baby and teach it how to catch fish on its own account. Nobody had ever before had a chance to study the domestic life of the dolphin at close range.

MYSTERIES of the sea The sea is full of mysteries which probably never will be solved. Most of the life in the sea is in the upper 500 feet, where sunlight penetrates and vegetable growth nourish the animal sea creatures which in turn are food for the larger fish. Below the 500 foot level is a dark abyss in which strange monsters, carrying their own lights, live a mysterious existence. They die by internal explosion when they are brought to the upper levels, for they are so used to resist the immense pressure from without which the weight of the deep water exerts upon their bodies.

I spent a great sea mystery which science hopes to solve is why the eels from all the freshwater rivers and ponds in the world gather every winter at a certain spot in the middle of the Atlantic, where they breed and return to the places they came from. Or how the young eels find their way to the homes of their ancestors.

Up in the Clouds

By Beulah Earle

"Monty" began Sunny, slowly, "there is something I must tell you."

Her serious manner brought Monty's eyes peered down at her. She walked to a chair at the further side of the room to be farther away from the man who must hear her confession.

"Go on," prompted Monty, seating himself opposite to the girl.

Sunny seemed loathe to tell all. Her mind raced as her actions played for time. With true feminine instinct she decided on one last secret at all cost. Instantly her manner changed. The old seriousness gave way to something softer. Her next words held a world of meaning.

"Don't you think you care for me—a little, even after all that's happened?"

Monty was caught off guard.

"Why—why, yes—why not?" he faltered.

Sunny followed up her advantage without hesitation.

"You know, Monty, I really let you out of that engagement because I felt generous. My strategy was well mapped by now. She continued:

"But somehow I'm wishing now I'd never been such a fool!"

The note of flattery was not lost on Monty. Ever mindful of a certain masculine charm that could not be denied even by his enemies, Monty knew that many women had been attracted to him. Sunny's approach was a masterful stroke of psychology. She knew his Achilles' heel—now she aimed directly for it.

"Monty!" Her explanation came as she slowly rose to her feet.

"Why couldn't we start all over again?" she was crossing to him now.

"Why couldn't we run away from here—from this whole ghastly business and have—just each other?"

She was before him. She knew that when Monty reached out his hand her triumph could not be far away. But victory was not to be won so hastily. Monty had had time to recover from his first surprise. Now he was fending. He made no move.

"Isn't this rather a face-both?" he questioned.

"A woman's privilege" returned Sunny, lightly.

"But hardly a man's" came Monty's swift reply.

"You're going through with it—even if you care for me more?"

Sunny betrayed her own vanity and she knew it. She ought to cover it by forcing an affirmation.

"You admit you still care for me?" Sunny leaned toward Monty seated before her. His eyes met her gaze, faltered, dropped.

"Of course, I do care for you Sunny—but—Monty could not find words to betray Natalie.

"If you care for me, why don't you show it?" Sunny demanded.

"What would you want me to do?"

Sunny was baffled, but not for long. She would force Monty to her will but it would be harder than she thought. She seated herself on the arm of Monty's chair.

"Monty," she said, "I didn't really realize until this moment how much I've wanted you. I can't give you up so easily—I don't care if I did promise!"

Monty was caught off guard. It would be hard to cast the girl aside and in all his being he couldn't find the will to do it even though his mind might so direct.

Sunny lowered her cheek against his hair. She was close to him now. Something inside told her she would have her way. Her hand rested against his, and then closing fingers gave her the answer she had wanted.

The jangle of a telephone broke their moment of silence. Sunny gave a start. The jangle continued and she rose to pick up the receiver.

"Hello—Nat?—where are you?" Sunny listened, then covered the mouthpiece as she whispered, "It's for you, Monty—Natalie. Do you want to talk to her?"

"Of course!" said Monty, taking the instrument from her hand.

"Hello, Nat! What's that—you're at the office—and just found out that I was loose? When are you coming here—we have a date with the Mayor, you know. I'll be waiting! I'm running over to my place to get a change of clothes. We won't leave all the way from Sibetha and they're getting out of press. Okay, see you soon!"

The phone in place, Monty sprang into action. There was no time to lose. Barely an hour would elapse before they would be riding off in Mayor's limousine to the testimonial party in his honor. The flight, the landing, the tussle at the airport—all seemed like a thousand years ago. Much had happened in the few hours since. Monty threw on his coat and was about to go when Sunny ran to him and threw her arms about him.

"Don't go!" she pleaded, "that woman will be there—she will use the occasion to expose you!"

"What makes you think she has anything to expose?" parried Monty.

"I know—I know it's all some terrible plot," cried Sunny, "but don't you see—she'll take any advantage to force you to pay her off! This would be playing right into her hands!"

"You don't think she'd try to make a public scene before I had a chance to pay off quietly, do you?" Monty reasoned.

"You don't understand—she'll be there. If only to be able to threaten you!"

Monty thought little of Sunny's argument. He turned again to Sunny fastened herself on his arm, attempting to drag him back. Her insistence made Monty waver.

"Why shouldn't I let her make a scene?" he exclaimed. "She won't get anywhere. I could have her thrown in jail in five minutes because I know she hasn't any proof—phony or otherwise—of what she's trying to say!"

"But she'll tell about me!" Sunny shrieked. And in that instance she knew her secret was out.

Monty stared at her for a moment, then asked:

"Tell about—about what?" he demanded.

"Oh, I might as well tell you now—it's too late to ever anything up!" Sunny was sobbing. Monty led her back to a chair. There, seated together, he held her tightly as she sought to speak. Finding her voice, she continued:

"I know this girl—and she's a fake. She never married you and she said as much to me right here this afternoon. But she does know me. She was in a gambling house in New York when I went slumming with a party of friends. We were hardly in the place when it was raided. She's always held it over me. She knew I'd give anything to keep Father from knowing. Now she wanted me to get you to

But Natalie had groped her way out to the front entrance. She opened the door only to find it barred by Jimmy who had just returned from a picture assignment far uptown.

"Why Natalie!" Jimmy exclaimed, "What is the matter—why the weeps?"

"It's—they're—in there," Natalie sobbed, and pushing Jimmy to one side started for the elevator. Jimmy ran into the next room. One glance at Monty and Sunny and the awful suspicion clutched at his brain. His fists tightened in anger but the thought that Natalie had been hurt and was even now fleeing, he knew not where, prompted him to waste no time.

"But Sunny said she was with you five minutes!" Monty promised. Then he ran back to Sunny.

"Come on, little girl," he shouted, gaily, "we're going places and do things. We're going to the Mayor's own party—and you'll be the queen bee of the evening!"

Sunny looked at Monty incredulously. She could hardly believe her ears. Then slowly the realization came that Monty had made the all-important decision. Happiness seemed to burst in her heart but there were no words to give it expression.

"You poor kid!" were Monty's words as he sought to comfort her.

"Why didn't you tell me all this in the first place instead of beating around the bush with all this 'I Love You Truly' stuff!"

"I'm—sorry," was all Sunny could say. Monty knew she was.

Absorbed by their own situation, neither Monty nor Sunny had heard the door buzzer, nor its opening and closing. They became conscious of another's presence only when Natalie walked to the center of the room. Monty's arms still held the girl in close embrace. They both looked up into Natalie's surprised and horror-stricken countenance.

"Monty—Sunny's—has all Natalie could say. Her eyes welled with tears. Sunny lifted Sunny to her feet and they both ran to Natalie.

"Nat!" Monty called, "You must—you can't think that—"

around her.

"Maybe we aren't so unlucky after all" was all he could say.

The door buzzer again. Monty impatiently rose to see who the unwelcome intruder could be.

It was the Mayor's chauffeur. The car was downstairs.

"I'll be—well be with you in five minutes!" Monty promised. Then he ran back to Sunny.

"Come on, little girl," he shouted, gaily, "we're going places and do things. We're going to the Mayor's own party—and you'll be the queen bee of the evening!"

Sunny looked at Monty incredulously. She could hardly believe her ears. Then slowly the realization came that Monty had made the all-important decision. Happiness seemed to burst in her heart but there were no words to give it expression.

William Powell In Cozy Show

The gay, dignified swish of peerage and its coming a cropper in a mid-European New Deal offers a delightfully exciting theme for "The Baroness and the Butler" which opens Friday at the Cozy Theatre.

This Darryl F. Zanuck production for 20th Century Fox co-stars William Powell and Annabella in a blithe screen version of the stage hit that had half of Europe agog.

Annabella, in her first American-made picture, believes butlers are born to obey—but defonair Bill obeys such un-butler-like impulses she's so proud, he's so proper and you'll be so surprised!

This film has caught the tone and flavor of an old regime—years of tradition and generations of escutcheon worship—suddenly confronted with a blue bloods' dilemma in which the self-effacing butler emerges from his cocoon to assume social equality with his noble employers.

Powell, at his suave best, tries to save the Count's family from the blow of learning that he has been elected to Parliament on the Socialist-Progressive ticket. By his very actions he brings down charges of impoliteness, fraud and trickery on his head.

He incurs the wrath of every one but his Count's worry is that he will lose a good butler. The solving of this situation and the ensuing tale of wits with "Baroness" Annabella and a brilliant cast, gives the fans a treat, long to remember. Powell never was a better Annabella. Reveals the most glamorous, exciting personality ever to grace the screen.

The supporting cast of "The Baroness and the Butler" features Helen Westley, Harry Stephenson, Joseph Schildkraut, J. Edward Bromberg, Nigel Bruce and Lynn Bari.

"You must find them and tell them the truth!"

But Sunny sank to the couch, lost in a torrent of tears.

"Why bother?" she sobbed, "They'd never believe us, ever!"

"But they must!" Monty insisted.

"They simply must!"

Sunny turned her face, eyes brimming.

"I guess we'll have to take each other now," she said, smiling weakly. Monty sat down beside her, he took her hand, then passed his arm around her.

"Maybe we aren't so unlucky after all" was all he could say.

The door buzzer again. Monty impatiently rose to see who the unwelcome intruder could be.

DEMOCRATS

Go to the Polls Saturday and Cast Your Ballots Under the Rooster

was unanimously nominated by the Executive Committee of the Democratic party as the Democratic candidate for Congress in the special election to be held Saturday. Although this district is heavily Democratic the Republicans, hoping that Democrats will not go to the polls and vote their full strength are making a hard fight. The only way that the Democrats can lose this election is for you to fail to go to the polls and cast your ballot. Unquestionably the Democratic party has brought to the nation during the last eight years a program that has met approval of the citizenry of the nation. President Roosevelt has been a friend to the people; Governor Chandler has made one of the executives this State has ever had. It is up to you, Democrats of Rowan County, to keep our county in the Democratic column, and give us a Representative who will continue to carry out these great principles.

Maintain The Principles of Democracy

It is unfortunate this district had to lose Fred M. Vinson as our Congressman, but we all join in congratulations to him over his appointment to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Fred Vinson was one of Washington's foremost leaders. He was undoubtedly the greatest Congressman that Kentucky has sent to Washington for many years. Fred Vinson wants Joe Bates elected at Saturday's special election. It is up to you, Democrats, to see that he is succeeded by a man that is a Democrat and bears his endorsement.

Joe Bates is one of Kentucky's leading Democrats. He has played a major part in every Democratic battle in Kentucky for the past ten years. Qualified, honest, capable and respected are his greatest assets. DON'T FAIL TO GO TO THE POLLS Saturday and endorse Mr. Bates and the Democratic Party with your vote placed under the rooster.

Seeing Things....

A SECRET KEPT—

This column last week made mention of the gentlemen who invaded too much, mistook the wrong house for their home, unlocked and opened the front door, went to sleep in the spare bedroom and was not discovered until the next morning.

Hardly had the News reached the streets when the gentleman referred to (whose name was not mentioned) was a caller on this column.

"If you ever let my name get out or put it in that column of yours, in connection with this matter, I'll never speak to you again, and furthermore, I'll sue you in court," was his bluff.

We're not easily hurt, but in this particular case, we can assure the gentleman that his name will not be released. Lots of us have been in like predicaments and our sympathy goes out to him.

TO WOULD-BE GROOMS—

Which reminds us of a story about beloved Henry Waterson, former editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal and one of the greatest editorialists ever produced in this country.

As the story goes, Mr. Waterson's son, who was on the verge of being married, so Henry called him into his office to offer the following advice:

"Son, I've been married for nearly 50 years and the advice I am about to give you is what my experience has been with women.

If you should go courting out all night on a drunken spree, don't lie to your wife when you come in the next morning. Tell her the truth that you have been out on a spree.

"Son, if you are out gambling and lose all your money, and your wife asks you about, tell her the truth. Don't lie to her about it.

"Son, if you go to the races and don't take your wife, don't lie to her, tell her the truth. She'll like and respect you more for it.

"In fact, son, practically anything you might do should not be hidden from your wife.

"But, if you should go out with another woman, lie and lie like hell...."

A BARKLEY BABY—

A son born to Mr. and Mrs. Max Shay at Bluestone has been named Alben W. Barkley Shay.

The youngster was named by Lonnie Flannery, his grandfather, John Flannery, his father, and furthermore, I'll sue you in court," was his bluff.

Max is a Republican and one of the staunchest G. O. P. believers in the county. He hasn't quite recovered yet over the fact that the child was named against his wishes.

Mrs. Shay is a strong Democrat and evidently from the name given the child a great believer in Senator Barkley.

Here's hoping that Alben W. Barkley Shay will rise to the fame achieved by his name-sake who is majority floor leader of the Senate, twice keynote of the Democratic Party, an achievement never before reached by a Democrat and without question one of the greatest statesmen that Kentucky has ever produced.

That's a big order for young Mr. Alben W. Barkley Shay to shoot at.

THE STEERING WHEEL LEFT—

The elc club from Ohio which performed last week at Morehead College almost had to walk back to the Buckeye State. Marauders stole the lights and horns from the two busses that carried the singers.

Another common practice around here by thieves (whose operations have out-reached the petty stage) is the theft of spare tires from automobiles.

It's about time an investigation was made of these robberies.

MAJBE HE'S A NEW DEALER—

Dr. James Cecil Sparks, candidate for Congress, to be voted on Saturday has mailed cards to voters in the district, urging them to cast their ballot for him. Dr. Sparks failed to enlighten the people on what ticket he was a candidate, but Joe Bates had the two words, "A Democrat" on his cards in as big a type as his name.

NEW RECORD—

The job-printing department of the News is crowing this week of its record achieved Saturday and Monday. They ran almost 14,000 ballots (for Rowan, Elliott and Menifee Counties) without spilling a ballot, although each is numbered and perforated. On another press printed 6,300 postal cards without spilling a one.

Plan Work For Coming Year

Plans are being completed at the Forest Service Offices in Winchester for the next fiscal year's work beginning July 1, to be done by the Supervisor and his staff and the rangers and assistant rangers on Cumberland National Forest. It was announced today by Forest Supervisor R. P. Hemmingsway.

Each year, just prior to July 1, the Forest officers carefully analyze the work load for the coming year and make plans for the carrying out of this work. The plans reveal some interesting facts and usually indicate that there is more work to be done in the protection and administration of a National Forest than is realized and can be accomplished with the available personnel.

During the present analysis, over 275 jobs have been listed under the following major headings: fire control, timber management, range management, wildlife management, recreation management, special land uses, acquisition and general administration. The completed plans are indicative of the amount of work which will be performed by the 180 persons employed in supervisory, clerical and stenographic positions.

The plans must include the employment of the CCC enrollees in the six camps located on the Cumberland National Forest. Approximately 700 enrollees must be kept busy for 240 days during the coming year, or nearly "300,000 man days" of employment must be mapped out. The work to be done by the CCC will be largely comprised of the construction of roads, telephone lines, fire towers, timber surveys and the suppression of forest fires.

During the nearly 40 years which the Forest Service has been in existence, it has been proven that careful planning for work pays great dividends in increased efficiency and accomplishment. The rapid development of Cumberland National Forest has been due largely to such careful planning.

IF CIGARETTES COULD TALK

they would tell a story of a great American industry—In 1492 upon reaching America the Columbus crew noticed natives smoking rolls of dried tobacco. When the Spaniards landed in Mexico in 1519 natives were cultivating tobacco with great care and skill. Cartier, upon discovering Canada, found Indians drying leaves in the sun.

John Rolfe, at Jamestown in 1612, is credited with the culture of tobacco, but it actually did not begin in Maryland until 1631.

Tobacco manufacturers have spent millions in scientific research to improve their products. Utmost care has been taken in the selection of the right crops. Tobacco industry for many years has used newspaper advertising to increase sales and put out a better product at lower cost.

Chattel Mortgages On FSA Explained By Clarence Cobb

Authorization Of Transfer Must Be Secured At Morehead Offices

Persons selling, trading or receiving chattels mortgaged to the Farm Security Administration as security for rehabilitation loans are liable to court action by the government if legal releases have not been secured, according to a notice received from the regional attorney, reports Clarence W. Cobb, county rehabilitation supervisor of the FSA, Morehead.

Restrictions are placed on sale or transfer of chattels mortgaged to FSA not only to provide partial security for rehabilitation loans but to insure maintenance of sufficient operating goods to keep the farm on a productive basis and carry out farm plans, says the notice. When it is a matter of mortgaged chattels in necessary because of changes in farm operation, authorization for transfer of such property should be secured through the county supervisor's office, Cobb, pointed out.

Reds To Open Stand At Home

Team Showing Improved Form; First Division Berth Aim Of Rhine-landers

Bill McKechnie's hustling young Reddies, who have been touring the National League hinterlands for the greater part of three weeks, settled down to a stay in their own ball yard Wednesday. They opened the stand at Crosley Field with a three-game series against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Following the Dodgers in here will be the championship New York Giants, who have found the Reds their toughest customers this year. In the five meetings between the teams, the Reddies have copped four decisions, two of them coming right in the Giant's own Polo grounds in the series recently played there.

Three games will comprise the run of competition against the Terrys' Terriers, running through Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Because of the interest being manifested in this series, club officials expect that the Sunday game will draw approximately 25,000 spectators.

Philadelphia will follow the Giants to Crosley Field, appearing in an afternoon game Tuesday, June 7, then completing the stay with a night game Wednesday, June 8. This night game is going to be a special event for it has been designated as Kentucky night. Governor Chandler of Kentucky will be the guest of honor, and it is very fitting that he be the man selected by the St. Louis Sporting News, national baseball weekly to present Bill McKechnie with the small emblematic of his having performed the outstanding major league managerial achievement of 1937. It was the Boston Red Sox to fifth in the National League, McKechnie was accorded this distinction after a season conducted by the Sporting News.

Practical Articles
If you invest in new silver, pick out articles that will have more than one use. A bowl may be used as a flower holder, a salad bowl and a fruit dish. A relish dish may become a meat platter or a sandwich tray when the glass lining is removed. An asparagus dish is practical in season and out of season—simply remove the rack and sauce boat and you have a server for other vegetables, salads or desserts.

Here is a delicious relish and garnish for spring lamb. Beat one half cup of current jelly with a fork. Add 4 tablespoons minced mint leaves and pile on slices of oranges. Serve as a garnish on platter with leg of lamb or broiled lamb chops.

MEXICAN BEAN POT

Four cups cooked red kidney beans, 1 clove garlic, 1 teaspoon powdered thyme, 1 teaspoon rosemary, small bayleaf, 3 whole cloves, 2 teaspoons salt, 1/2 teaspoon powdered mustard, 1/2 cup tomato catsup, 1 onion, 1/4 slices bacon. Cut onion in half and put in bottom of bean pot. Mince garlic and combine with seasonings and catsup. Bake one hour in a slow oven (300 degrees F.). Cover with bacon and bake until bacon is crisp. Serve with brown bread and butter sandwiches.

THE SUPPER CHOICE

When you want an entirely different kind of a meal, why not choose the of a foreign flavor? Even the simplest of meals can be given distinction by creating a setting for them. Here is a suggestion for Italian meat balls with spaghetti, given by Inez S. Willson, home economist. Serve this with Parmesan cheese in true Italian style.

1 1/2 pounds ground meat
1 cup bread crumbs
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon green pepper
1 egg, beaten
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons bacon fat
2 cups tomatoes
Combine ground meat with chopped onion, green pepper, salt, pepper and bread which has been moistened with water. Add slightly beaten egg and shape into round balls about an inch in diameter. Brown in bacon fat. Add tomatoes, cover and let cook until balls are done. Serve on spaghetti.

COLD MEAT SALAD

SUMMER VARIETY
On warm days, there is nothing quite so good as a cool crisp salad, but be sure to make the salad substantial enough to satisfy the appetite, says Inez S. Willson, home economist. And a meat salad does just that.
Meat salads may be divided into two groups—the toss-up variety and the jellied ones—and which you choose depends upon your preference and the time for preparation. Jellied salads must be made several hours in advance so that they will become thoroughly chilled and set.

MEATS FOR SALADS

As for the choice of meats for salad, practically any kind of cooked meat may be used. Left over roast, chilled and diced into cubes, is excellent, but if none of this is on hand, you may use the already cooked ham or ready-to-serve meats which always are available at the market.

For a quickly prepared salad, here is a suggestion: Dice the meat into small cubes. Combine with an equal amount of chopped celery and apples. Season with salt and pepper and toss with salad dressing. Serve in lettuce cups. Sprinkle with paprika for added color.

GERTA GARBO

The Glamorous Garbo Worked In A Barber Shop

Two of the best known people in all the world took to work in a barber shop, one in London and the other in Stockholm. Both of them used to mix lather in shaving mugs and smear it on the faces of the customers, while the barbers honed their razors and got ready to mow down the whiskers. Both Gerta Garbo and Charlie Chaplin once made their living in this fashion.

As a child, Garbo was far from being a female prodigy. She disliked the humdrum of school, so she used to steal away frequently to the back porch of a theatre and stand tip-toe listening to a performance without buying a ticket. Tinging with excitement, she would rush home, paint her face with a child's set of water colors, and pretend she was Greta Garbo, hating parading in front of the footlights.

Her father died when she was fourteen, leaving the family in poverty. After working for a while in a barber shop, Gerta finally got a job selling hats in a department store in Stockholm.

Then, one day, a trivium happened—a thing that altered her destiny and started her on the road to a fame far exceeding the most fantastic expectations. She posed for a hat advertisement. The ad boosted sales, so the store decided to make a moving picture advertisement of hats, and Greta posed as the model.

THE GARDEN

Last week, the need was stressed for following-up spring-planted vegetables with later ones, to continue as long as the season is long enough left to mature them. Thus the table could be supplied and a surplus for winter use is assured.

As for tomatoes, it may be recalled that the number of plants now set is large enough to fill a complete tomato program, but if they are all of the same age, or of the same variety, they will all reach peak together, and that may be long before the season should close, and the gardener must be content with reduced supplies of inferior fruit.

These plants will be ready to set in the garden in 4 to 6 weeks and should begin to bear in early September, about the time that the early-set plants begin to wane. This fruit will be of top quality and will make an excellent canned product.

These plants will take almost no extra space in the garden, for they may be set in gaps in the rows of early cabbage.

In a case of sweet corn is somewhat the same; a planting or two is made early, possibly with the intention to make more on a schedule to maintain a continuous supply, but plans go awry making dependence necessary or immature corn from the field. Young field corn is inferior to the sweet sort at any time, and stays in usable condition so short a time as to make the tablecorn supply extremely un dependable and unsatisfactory.

Late cabbage is not as easy to grow as early cabbage, for it always some dry weather may be expected. Also, the green worm may be more numerous as the season progresses, at least, to mid-

BLUE MOLD SPREADS

As HERBERT TOMPKINS reports, blue mold of tobacco has appeared in occasional plant beds over the greater part of the burley growing areas in Kentucky, according to Dr. W. D. Valleau, plant pathologist at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington. At present it is limited to a few beds, but if damp weather continues, he says it is likely to become more prevalent. Dr. Valleau issued the following statement:

"In dry weather the disease causes comparatively little damage to plants almost large enough to set, but in moist periods when the plants are tender it may cause extensive injury in a very short time."

"It is recommended that tobacco cotton be removed in order to dry the plants early in the day and harden them. The disease spreads more slowly in plants exposed to the sun than those under cotton. Where the plants are large enough set the healthy plants as rapidly as possible. The affected ones will gradually recover and will be ready to set about 10 days later than if they had not been affected. Recovered plants are entirely satisfactory, for use as the disease will not affect plants after they are set."

"Where plants are already affected it is recommended that they be treated with 5 gallons of a solution of 10 pounds of nitrate of soda in 50 gallons of water to each 200 square feet of bed. The solution should be put on with a sprinkling can and should be followed with an equal amount of clear water to prevent injury to plants."

Cosmetics, Past and Present

Women—savages or educated, primitive or modern—have always striven to make themselves beautiful, and to keep themselves so. Even St. Augustine, who lived around 350 A. D. commented on beautiful women Euclid, Horace, Marcus Aurelius, Shakespeare, Byron, Keats, Shelley, Longfellow, Tennyson and a host of more modern poets and writers have praised feminine beauty.

African Beauty

The African belle makes hideous cuts on her body, rubs dirt into the wounds so that when healed they leave large welts; the Eskimo female greases and paints her face, as do women of various Indian tribes. Chinese women try to develop large ears because the masculine mind appreciates them; other nations and tribes pay special attention to the hair, the fingers, the eyes and the feet. Standards of beauty vary with the time, the place and the women, but nevertheless the female of all ages do what they think will enhance their attractiveness.

Cleopatra

4,000 years B. C. the Egyptians devoted much time and thought to this subject. Beautician's parlors were to be found in the smallest cities. Cleopatra was noted for her luxurious perfumes and hair. Face creams were used for centuries before the birth of Christ, as was the lip stick, they eyebrow pencil, rouge and the other materials which are nowadays part of the equipment of every lady.

Test Beauty Aids

An English physician who has devoted years to the study of the various preparations used to beautify women finds, after experimenting with forty women, who applied a well-known face cream to one side of the face only, that twenty-four showed not the slightest difference as far as the other cheek was concerned. Twelve did show some roughness where the cream had not been used. He too ascertained that the cream did not clog the pores or prevent the proper functioning of the skin-glands. But he did conclude that pure soap and water were as beneficial as the most expensive face creams and did keep the face clean and make it attractive.

One of the foremost women geologists of the world, if not the foremost, is Dr. Florence Bascom who was recently a guest in Washington, D. C. at a luncheon which was a feature of the fiftieth annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. Early in her career she was the first woman elected as a member of this select group of scientists, of which there are only eleven women members now. She was the first woman ever appointed to the United States Government's staff of geologists. She has visited Canada, Mexico, Sweden, Italy, Germany and Spitzbergen and she attended an International Geological Congress in Moscow many years ago. Recently she completed a report on the geology and mineral resources of a certain section of Pennsylvania.

To Test Prep Entries

Dean Bernice Brown Cronkhite of the Graduate School of Radcliffe College, believes that in order to avoid educational misfits in college there should be better testing methods at the time of entrance to preparatory school. Of the million college students in this country today a large number would undoubtedly be happier and better off in a different type of training, according to her.

The professor was engaged in a deep controversy one day with a fellow scholar when his wife hurriedly entered the room. "Oh, my dear," she cried, "the dog has swallowed my fountain pen!"

There's something about the puff sleeves and full skirt of a pure Dirndl that makes you feel gay and fresh as Spring. This dress is becomingly shirred at the waistline and tied around with a ribbon belt. You'll like the becoming lapels at the neckline, too.

This Dirndl fashion is one that you'll do enjoy wearing that you'll be making it up in challis or sheer wool, or fine printed silk or cotton for all summer wear. Bright colors go well with the Dirndl fashion, so choose something gay.

Pattern 8130 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 44 requires 3-3/4 yards of 64-inch material. In 39-inch material, blouse alone requires 2-1/2 yards, skirt 2 yards.
