"Render To Caesar The Things Which Are Caesar's"

Apparently the Chandler campaign "Board of Strategy" for Rowan county is basing their claim to recognition for the Governor's desire to become United States Senator on the fact that Morehead is the home of the Morehead State Teachers College. Recently the following two paragraphs were published in an editorial endorsing Governor Chandler for Senator:

"In 1923 Morehead did not have many of the modern conveniences which make life pleasant. Today, Morehead has practically all of the facilities and services that any town can boast of considerable more than most towns of its size. In this short period of fifteen years we have had the following improvements: Twenty-four hour electrical service, natural gas, adequate sewage system, purest water supply afforded by modern science, paved streets and concrete walks.

"While a great deal of credit is due to the civic interest of our citizens, it cannot be denied that the greater part of this improvement has been due to the location in our midst maintained by the Commonwealth of Kentucky. It will be admitted by every thinking person in this community that the thing which works for the best interest of the Morehead State Teachers College is also to the best interest of the City of Morehead and Rowan County."

The above would be amusing, if the claim were not so all inclusive. It should be remembered that at the time the Morehead State Teachers College was established, Governor Chandler, with all due respect to him, was to all intents and purposes a boy in knee pants. He did not appear of the political horizon of Kentucky until several years later. To claim that he is responsible for the establishment and development of the Morehead State Teachers College is, to say the least, a gross exaggeration of fact.

It is always well to look at the record, to analyze the actual facts, to learn the real truth about the situation. Here's my record:

In 1922 the legislature of which Troy Jennings was a member, voted to establish two new teachers colleges in the Commonwealth, one in Eastern and one in Western Kentucky. Citizens of Morehead raised over one hundred thousand dollars with which to purchase the old Morehead Normal School established by Dr. F. E. Burton and his mother and later taken over by the C. W. B. M. This they turned over to the state, which through the efforts of Judge Ailie W. Young was developed into the Morehead State Teachers College.

So to the people of Morehead, under the assistance of Judge Young belongs the credit for the establishment and development of the Morehead State Teachers College and it may be safely said without fear of contradiction, that up until 1936 Governor Chandler had not a thing to do with it.

During the campaign of 1935, the Rowan County News supported Governor Chandler on the grounds that he himself established. In his three speeches made in this community he repeatedly promised that he would personally see to it that the "Morehead State Teachers College is maintained on an equal footing with the other colleges of the State." He stated that he would build this college, improve it and gave a personal guarantee that out of respect for its builder, and as a perpetual monument to his memory, he would never let the Morehead State Teachers College down. That was in 1935.

In 1936 Morehead received an increased appropriation of approximately $20,000 per year. Murray, the sister school in Western Kentucky received an additional $40,000 giving Morehead at that time the distinction of having the lowest appropriation of other teachers colleges. It is true that the president of the school, striving to establish a record for economy, in order to put himself in solid with the state administration, acceded to the suggestion. Nevertheless the Governor failed to keep his promise made in 1935, just a few short months before.

In 1938, it was even worse, Murray the sister school, received an appropriation of over $65,000 per year more than the Morehead State Teachers College. For the two year period the Murray appropriation totals nearly $130,000 more than that for Morehead.

Some may call this equality. We have a different name for it. Some may call this justice. We call it rank discrimination. Incidentally it has been well established that the present Chandler campaign manager, and the president of the college agreed to the slice in the Morehead appropriation.

It appears to us that the present state administration is of a mind to forget Morehead. Conditions at the College have been such for the past year, that Senator Waller Crockett, was moved to introduce a resolution in the Senate during the last regular session, making certain charges, and demanding a legislative investigation. The investigation was dropped, and a liberal coat of white wash applied. Why? No one has been able to suggest a reason except that a political campaign was coming and white wash was plentiful.

It has never been our policy to play politics with a principal. We have never and never will endorse that policy. It is and has been clear that for the past year or more a vicious circle of petty politics has been developing in the Morehead State Teachers College, designed solely for the purpose of perpetuating a man who has on numerous occasions demonstrated his inefficiency to handle the job of president of a great institution. There have been bickerings, back biting, petty gossip, dissatisfied, disruption, almost rebellion. Those things have no right in an educational institution. They have no place in the scheme of things, and if the head of the institution permits them to develop clearly he is not the man for the job.

By his failure to take note of these conditions, by his refusal to take action when the situation has been brought forcibly to his attention, Governor Chandler has become a party to the movement that is clearly and definitely retarding the growth of the Morehead State Teachers College. By his failure to act to remedy the evil he, has made himself a party to the evil.

Blessed across the sky in Rowan county are the names of the leaders in this effort to perpetuate a czar at the head of the Morehead State Teachers College.

The names of the members of the Chandler "Board of Strategy" are included in the list. It is a dangerous condition in Rowan county and in the counties served by the Morehead State Teachers College. It is a condition that can only be remedied by the election of Allen W. Barkley and by conclusively carrying this section of Kentucky in general and Rowan county in particular for the man who has the endorsement of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of editorials dealing with the Senatorial campaign now on foot which affects the people of Morehead, Rowan County and Eastern Kentucky. Next week: "The Gravy Train Still Runs."

The Lightest Court Docket

Clear and clear-thinking citizens of Rowan County will take just pride in our community if they will study the docket at the June term of Rowan Circuit Court which convenes Monday evening.

The court docket is the lightest in many years. There appears on it only a small number of felony cases and practically all of these are carry-overs from previous terms. Only one murder is on the docket and that is for an alleged slaying in 1933.

Five years ago it was not unusual for Rowan County to have ten murders in the space of a year. Now it is unusual for one in the period of a year. In fact we have not had a single murder committed in Rowan County for almost three years.

It is a record of which we are all justifiably proud. Not only has the number of murder cases decreased, but robberies, assault charges and the like are on the decline. It used to be that every court had from ten to twenty-five persons before it for disturbing religious worship, most of which occurred in the rural sections where religious meetings were held. Now it is rare that we have a similar case on the docket.

When Judge J. B. Cantill mounts the judge's stand Monday morning he could truthfully say: "Gentlemen of the jury you will have fewer investigations to make than any previous grand jury, in the history of my knowledge, has ever had. It is a distinct tribute to the people of this county that such an admirable situation exists."

We cannot give you the reason for this marked decrease in lawlessness during the last five years, except possibly to state that our people are becoming better educated and more civilized. At any rate this commendable situation exists and the people of this county deserve credit.

"Politics and medicine do not mix, any better than oil and water," declared Dr. James T. Taylor who tendered his resignation to Governor Chandler as clinical director of the Eastern State Hospital at Lexington.

Dr. Taylor's resignation was caused by the interference of the State with the hospital employees in which a two percent assessment was made of each workers pay presumably to go into the political pot to attempt to elect Chandler to the Senate.

Later, Chandler, commenting on the case said "It looks like I might have made a mistake in hiring Dr. Taylor." The Governor, however did not say anything about the assessments that are being made on the Eastern State Hospital.

The grand jury in Fayette County Circuit Court announced they were making an investigation of the alleged assessments of employees and would attempt to fix the blame. They had been previously ordered by Circuit Judge King Swope to return a report on the alleged condition that existed there.

The announcement by President Roosevelt that he will send a commission to London this Summer to study and report on the workings of the British Trade Unions Act has met with general approval here except for certain Labor leaders, who in this plan possible threat to the Union supremacy now according to the National Labor Relations Act. Mr. Lewis, chairman of the C. O. for one, does not want any changes in American laws which would put such restrictions on the activities of an organized labor as are imposed in Great Britain.

The general feeling here, however is that it is about time Congress and the American people had access to correct information about how labor relations are controlled in the other great democracy of the world.

England has had a long experience with labor organizations and their regulation by government. Besides old law providing for the registration of Unions and public accounting of their receipts and expenditure there are statutes prohibiting the use of Union funds for political purposes. The Act of 1927, which followed the general strike of 1926, declares "sympathetic" strikes illegal, prohibits picketing in support of illegal strikes and forbids the use of union funds to support such strikes. An important provision of the British law forbids Union affiliation by government employees.

There is a growing feeling in both houses of Congress that our own Wagner Labor Relations Act gives organized labor an unfair advantage in that does not give employers rights comparable with those of workers. The movement to amend the Wagner Act in that regard and other respects has been gaining headway.

Distribution of $2,000,000,000. In the meantime, the exact situation in this country of the related matters of unemployment and relief is coming under increasing scrutiny in response to a request from the President, Congress has appropriated nearly 3 million dollars for "pump-priming" and relief in the shape of 1928, declares "sympathetic" strikes illegal, prohibits picketing in support of illegal strikes and forbids the use of union funds to support such strikes. An important provision of the British law forbids Union affiliation by government employees.

The immediate solution, as the Department of Agriculture sees it, is to appropriate another 212 million dollars to be distributed to farmers to compensate for the lower prices their excess production will bring them. The long-run remedy proposed is to cut down farm acreage and marketing quotas permitted to farmers for the staple commodities. These are cotton, wheat, corn, tobacco and rice.

The cash farm income for this year, including about one billion dollars in Federal benefits and subsidies, is expected to be not more than 7 1/2 billion dollars, as against the $12 billion last year. The cotton situation is particularly serious, for the world markets already have a surplus of 25 million bales carried over from previous years, to which this year's American crop will add another 13 million bales.

There are 200 million bushels of wheat in storage for last year, and the outlook is for another 250 million surplus bushels this year. When the new corn crop starts to market next Fall, it will find a carryover surplus of 300 millions bushels ahead of it.

Against these surplus crops the Government is authorized to make loans to farmers who will keep them in storage, and to maintain prices in the fact of world competition. Sixty cents a bushel on surplus wheat, 50 cents of corn and nine cents a pound, or $4 1/2 a bale, on cotton may be lent by the Government to the farmers who do not find a cash market, the farmers who grow them are in no immediate danger of starvation.

Since then "streamlined" trains, drawn by Diesel-engine locomotives, have been introduced on long runs on several western railroads. Some eastern roads have put on fast, streamlined trains, using steam for motive power. On June 15 this year, both the Twentieth Century and the Broadway Limited will start new streamlined trains between New York and Chicago, on a 16 hour schedule. With six stops on each line that will call for an average between stations of 100 miles an hour or faster.

These new trains will be hauled by steam locomotives. Most railroad men still pin their faith on steam as the most economic motive power and contend that on a per cent roadbed, with heavy enough rails, steam engines can beat diesels on any distance. The new Chicago-New York trains are the challenge of the Iron Horse to its modern rival.

Mathe and New Brunswick are going to join this year in celebrating the 100th anniversary of what I used to hear old people in Maine refer to as "the Great War with Great Britain," or often as "The Great Madawaska War." No blood was spilled, but thousands of millions of dollars and more than two years were encamped on the banks of the Madawaska River, facing Canadian militia on the opposite bank.

"Before the war" was ended by territorial concessions on both sides and the fixing of the international boundary line, Washington had appropriated ten million dollars and sent General Winfield Scott to the border to take command of 60,000 Federal troops which were promised if needed.

My grandfather, John Calvin Stockbridge, a captain in the Maine militia, was one of those encamped on the Madawaska front. He and the others officers received bonuses of quarter-sections of Government land west of the Mississippi. My grandfather sold his free land to a speculator named Briggs, who bought up most of what is now the site of the city of Des Moines, Iowa, from the militiamen.

American dentists are the best in the world because the American teeth are the worst in the world and need more attention than those of other peoples. To make a sugar, not enough vitamins, in our national diet is the cause of our bad teeth, says Dr. Russell W. Huntington, of the University of Michigan's school of dentistry. American consumes two thousand million pounds of candy a year, besides the sugar we get in other food. That is more than fifteen pounds of candy a year for every man, woman, and child, white, black or Indian.

Dr. Huntington tried an experiment in which he kept 300 children on a diet containing no sugar for a period of months. They maintained perfect health and showed no signs of tooth decay, while another group allowed to eat what they pleased

MURDER Case

by S.S. Van Dine

First Installment

District Attorney Markham looked sharply at his old friend Phil Vance. "Do you like kidnapping?"

"Not passionately," the detective answered, his face darkening blackly by crimes, kidnappings. About as low as a criminal can sink. His eyebrows went up. Why?

"There's been a kidnapping during the night. I learned about it half an hour ago. I'm on my way—"

"Who and where?" Vance's face had now become somber too.

"Kasper Kenting. Health and a couple of his men are at the Kenting house in 86th Street now. They're waiting for me."

"Kasper Kenting? Vance repeated the name several times, as if trying to recall some former association with it.

"It is number 86 West 86th St., perhaps?"

Markham nodded. "That's right. Easy to remember."

"Yes—quite. I seem to remember it when you mentioned Kenting's name. The domicile is in the 'twenties' and I have never seen it, however. Had a fascinating reputation once. Still called the Purple House."

"Purple house?" Markham looked up.

"My dear fellow, are you entirely ignorant of the history of the city which you adorn as District Attorney? The Purple House was built by Karl K. Kasper, who has lost and he had the bricks and slabs of stone painted purple, in order to distinguish this abode from all others in the neighborhood, so to flaunt it as a challenge to his numerous enemies. "With a house that color," he used to say, "they won't have any trouble finding me. But what about your Kasper Kenting?"

"He disappeared some time last night," Markham explained impatiently. "From his bedroom. Open window, ladder, ransom note, thumb tacked to the window-sill. No doubt about it."

"Details familiar—eh, what?" missed Vance. "And I presume with words cut from newspaper and pasted on a sheet of paper?"

"Exactly. How did you guess it?"

"Nothing new or original about it," said Vance. "Highly conventional. Bookish in how. How did you learn about it?"

"Eldridge Fleel was waiting at my office when I arrived this morning. He's the lawyer for the Kenting family. One of the executors of the old man's estate. Kasper Kenting's wife naturally notified him at once at his home—called him by his eviled-headed chap, this Fleel?"

"Oh, yes. I've known the man for years. Good lawyer. He was really an influential one in the city. Hit by the depression, I think took with Sergeant Health in melancholy, and he went up to the Kenting place. I told them he'd be there as soon as I could. I dropped off there, thinking—"

"By the way, do you know this young Kasper Kenting?"

"Slightly," Vance answered abstractly. "I've run into the polmie here and there, at the old Kinkaid's Casino and at the race tracks. Kasper's a gambler and pretty much 'ner' as well. I heard up and down that he had no one. Can't imagine why any one would want to pay a ransom for him."

"Can't really blame the chap for being such a blighter. Old Karl K., the author of his being, was a bit queer himself. Had more than enough money, and left it all to the older son, Kenyon K., to dole out to Kasper as he saw fit. I imagine he hasn't seen fit very often or very much."

"That may all be very interesting," Markham grumbled; "but I've got to get to 86th Street. That may prove a crucial case, and I can't afford to ignore it." He looked somewhat appealing at Vance.

"Vance rose likewise, and crunched his cigarette.

"Oh, by all means," Vance drawled. "I'll be delighted to go along. Thought I can't even vaguely imagine why kidnappers should select Kasper Kenting. The Kentings are no longer a wealthy family. By the by, do you know how much ransom was demanded."

"Fifty thousand. But you'll see the note when we get there. Nothing's been touched. Health knows I'm coming."

"Fifty thousand?" Vance poured himself a pony of his Napoleon cognac. "That's most interesting. Not an unduly sum—eh, what?"

"He turned to me."

"And you care to come along with me?"

"Despite my accumulated work, I was glad of the invitation."

The Sergeant led his stuffy drawing room, seated himself at a small black desk and drew out his little black book. "Chief," he said to Markham, "I think maybe you'd better get the whole story direct from Mrs. Kenting, the wife of the gentleman who was kidnaped."

I now noticed three other persons in the room. At the front window stood a solid, slightly corpulent man of successful, professional men. He turned and came forward to him cordially and greeted him by the name Fleel. He was the lawyer of the Kenting family.

At his side was a somewhat aged, thin, with a serious and pained expression. Fleel introduced him to us cursorily, with the name of the hand as Kenyon Kenting, the brother of the missing man. Then the lawyer turned stiffly to the other side of the room, where he said in a grave, business-like voice:

"But I particularly wish to present you gentlemen to Mrs. Kenyon Kenting, the widow of the deceased. We all turned to the pale, terrified woman seated at one end of a smallavenport, in the shadow of a lamp. She appeared at first to be in her early thirties, but I soon realized that my guess might be ten years out, one way or the other."

Sergeant Health broke gently into the scene.

"Don't you want to go upstairs, Mr. Kenting, Kasper?"

Kansas Disappearance: Evidence of kidnapping

Disappearance and ransom note reported by Eldridge Fleel

In Cause: Sergt. Health (Memphis Bureau) and District Attorney's Office.

Chief, and see the room from where the snatched was made? Snitkin's on duty up there."

"I say, just a moment, Sergeant," Vance sat down on the sofa beside Mrs. Kenting. "I'd like to ask Mrs. Fleel a few questions." First chief, and see the room from where her husband was taken. He turned to the woman. "Tell me, when did you first learn of your husband's absence?"

"The woman took a deep breath. "Early this morning, about six o'clock, I should say. I see you had just come."

"And how did you happen to be there at that time?"

"I was sitting in my room, and I heard a noise. I called out, and my husband responded. I was in bed for some unknown reason, and the early morning sun was shining through the shutters into my room not only awakened me, but prevented me from going back to sleep. Then I heard a sound in my husband's room, which we occupy adjoining rooms in the next floor—and I went to see what was going on. I saw one moving stealthily about. There was the unmistakable sound of footsteps across the floor—that is, like that of one walking around in soft slippers."

"I got up, threw a dressing-gown around me, and went to the door which connects our two rooms. I called to my husband, but there was no response of any kind—and I realized that everything had suddenly become quiet in the room. By this time I was panicky; so I pulled open the door quickly and entered the room."

"Just what kind of sound was it that first caught your attention, Mrs. Kenting?"

"I don't know exactly. It might have been some one moving a chair or dropping something."

"Could it have been a scuffle of some kind? I mean, did it sound as if more than one person might have been making the noise?"

"I don't think so. It was over quickly for that."

"When you entered the room, were the lights on?"

"Yes."

"And another strange thing was that the light beside the bed also went out?"

"They were a ghastly yellow in the daylight."

"And another strange thing was that the light beside the bed also went out?"

Vance's eyebrows rose slightly.

"Do you know what time Mr. Kenting came to his bedroom last night?"

"The woman hesitated a moment and flashed a glance at Kenyon Kenting."

"Oh, yes," she said hurriedly. "I heard him come in. It must have

The Girl From Golden West Is Cozy Feature

Hollywood's newest freak production is the job of the dialect director.

Pioneer in the new field is Dave Weber, who speaks and teaches twenty-three dialects and who has been heard on the airways and on the screen in imitation of Joe Pennington, Fred Allen, Walter Winchell, Crosby, Krazy Kat, Snuffy the Skunk and scores of other personalities.

Weber was recruited from radio by William Anthony McGuire, producer of "The Girl of the Golden West." To coach dialects, McGuire had in speaking with a Central Missouri accent as it was spoken in 1850 and Nelson Eddy in the Mexican dialect.

From Weber's store of knowledge on dialects comes the interesting discovery that the American language is one of the most diversified and difficult in existence. "Speech in the United States is in nine dialects," said Weber. "In most remote mountain regions the English version is spoken and Maine has a slight trace of the hillbilly."

New York speaks the American language in three dialects. One is the desand-doked variety. The other is spoken by middle-class average people and the third is the highly intellectual.

"Georgia and Alabama speak the thickest dialects of any in the country. Also in Georgia is a combination of southern drawl and hillbilly. Virginia speaks a very sincere Southern language and Kansans are on the border line with a trace of the drawl. Texas, too, has a language all of its own."

"California? It has no native dialect. The language that is spoken in the Golden West is a mixture of all the nine American dialects. "Strangely enough, the origin of dialects can be found in music. The slowwailing dialects contain the rhythm of a waltz and the Latin dialects resemble the music of the study is intonation. I can name the intonation of an actor by listening to his intonation."

Flowers In Windows

A most attractive way to take care of windows opening onto the living porch is to do away with porch boxes and tuck a pair of shelves back against the house on either side of the window. Make the shelves large enough to hold one good sized flower pot and in the form of a bracket resembling the top of the back of the chair. Since period from an iron hook. These little shelves are only a few inches wider than the window ledge they are never in the way and take up no valuable space.

Another interesting arrangement for pot-potted flowers is a bracket shelf with a scalloped apron. Hold it up in the shelf large enough to hold a flower pot apron through and rest it on the collar. The apron is made deep enough to hide the suspended flower pots. This simple flower box, suitable for farm-house and Cape Cod types of houses.

Full growing flowers such as delphiniums should be supported as they grow. Tie them in strong stakes using the soft quene or raffia. You can get both the twine and raffia used in inconspicuous green made especially for this purpose.

California moths are popular with my family during the summer months and they save me both time and money. Small amounts of left-overs are selected in individual glass custard cups and each person helps himself to the one he likes best. In this fashion you can use up those odd pieces of cake and pie too, that you hesitate to serve to your guests.

When flowering shrubs have ceased their blooming don't forget to cut off their faded blossoms. This is an important cultural fact too often overlooked by the average gardener. The trimming should be done as soon as the flowers fade, thus sending all the strength of the growth into the plant instead of dissipating it in the formation of seed pods. Give the plants plenty of water at this time, too, to invigorate them after their blooming period.

Mrs. Isabel A. Ennis

For fifty years Miss Isabel A. Ennis has taught continuously in the New York public schools. More than twenty years ago she became assistant director of continuation schools and has worked for the extension of vocational training. Her salary in the beginning when she was just thirteen years of age, was $300 a year, the small sum causing her great indignation because, she said, she didn't see how people could live on so little. She carried her fight for bigger salaries for teachers to the state legislature. She never approved of suffrage for women and is of the opinion that instead of giving the ballot to women, it should have been taken away from many men.

Kidnap Attempt Fails

The daring attempt to kidnap the famous, wealthy, well-known actor, Lord Burdett, was frustrated by the quick action of a friend in a near-by office who called the police when he overheard the man order Lord Burdett to leave with the kidnapers.

Worded kidnapers were arrested.

Political Arena

The State administration has little over $22,000 to expend on rural highways in Rowan County. This does not represent an appropriation of one year, but rather two years since there was not one dollar spent on Rowan County's roads last year.

With the Governor as a candidate for State Senator this money was turned loose. It is a well known fact that a man is not hired to work on the rural highway on his merits, his ability to work, how much he needs the work, nor whether it is in his community. The equity in getting a job on the rural highway is to either have a number of votes in one's family or be able to control them.

The question arises as to just how long this $22,000 is going to last and how much the roads are to be benefited from this money.

The 1st Henderson states in Sunday's Courier-Journal that the roads in Rowan County must be in bad shape this spring since one hundred and seventeen assistant foremen were placed on the job during the last week.

It is true that the roads in Rowan County are in fairly bad shape. The State hasn't done any work on them for two years. However, it is equally true that when this rural highway work is done, the $22,000 has been spent. They will be in even worse condition. All that is being done is to throw the money up on the road and let it go at that.

Fortunately the people of this county know that the State doesn't intend to spend the money to build or improve roads. What care the campaign management in this county if any roads are built? Their only interest is to get as many votes as possible.

The people residing in the rural sections are too well acquainted with the facts in the matter, however. They know that as soon as the election is over the work will be stopped. If more money is not forthcoming which the work will have to be stopped before the election. The foremen and assistant foremen will receive almost this much pay in the two months remaining before the election.

It is a regrettable fact that the taxpayers' money is going to such an unworthy cause. If the route of the county would be helped, the situation would not be so bad. However, the plan is to work men on every yard in the county so that votes can be controlled in practically every precinct.

The situation will come back to the same starting point that it has here for a number of years. The State won't build any roads and it will fall back on the Federal government to again pay in enough money to actually put in the farm to-market roads. Every rural road in Rowan County that is in a suitable condition to travel on has been placed in that condition by Federal funds.

Picnics will soon be in full swing with lemonade in demand. So if you keep a good supply of simple syrup on hand you can make the picnic beverage sweetened to taste without waiting for the sugar to dissolve—a long process in cold water. Despite the fact that copper and bronze screening is non-painting and long-lived, it has the drawback of discoloring painted surfaces when water drips from it. Of course, if your house is painted with a lead paint the stain usually can be washed off with ammonia water.

On a point containing zinc, however, the stain cannot be removed only by repainting. In order to avoid this unsightly staining, have the screens covered with a thin coating of varnish which has been diluted with an equal amount of linseed oil and turpentine.

To keep a trim, even edge, free from weeds or grass, along your walks sprinkle with a strong brine made with rock salt. If grass grows around the fastenings pour the brine on in a thin stream.

Freddie Bartholomew

At the age of ten, Freddie Bartholomew found himself Hollywood's champion male Cinderella, for he won the role of David Copperfield, the boy, over 10,000 candidates in all sections of the English-speaking world.

Freddie was born in London on March 28, 1924, and when still an infant was taken by his aunt, Miss Myrtle Bartholomew, who reared him at her home in Warrminster, Wiltshire, England. He received all his schooling from his aunt. His curriculum was not limited to the studies ordinarily found in school books. He learned to read, write, and at the age of three was appearing in public at amateur theatricals in the Wiltshire area.

Freddie showed propensities far in advance of his age. Although he was once a "victim" of the "retaining" advances of the actress and singer, he early demonstrated an amazingly retentive memory. As a part of his schooling, he memorized long passages of Shakespeare, and could repeat them letter-perfect months afterward without "goin'." He memorized whole chapters of Dickens' works, and recited them in public.

His success in his local borough never turned his head. He seemed to have an instinctive realization that his ultimate goal was still far ahead. His fame began to spread beyond the limits of Wiltshire, and he appeared in tiny roles on the London stage and on two or three amateur motion picture screens without, however, attracting much attention.

In the fall of 1934 he was seen by the newspapermen of David O. Selznick, Inc., who were in England on a boy's trip to Hollywood. He was brought to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture that was to be produced by David O. Selznick, Inc.

Freddie's faith was so strong, that his determination so great, that he had decided to go to America. When they reached Hollywood, they were bewildered to find that 10,000 boys in all parts of the English-speaking world were under consideration for the role.

But Freddie could not be ousted. He was chosen to star in "The Sign of the Cross," which was shot in Warrminster, England. He played the juvenile title role in a picture which boasted no less than twenty-six stars and featured players in the principal parts, and more than fifty other film favorites in the supporting cast. He next appeared with Garbo in "Anna Karenina," and then in "Professional Soldier," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "The Devil in a Sissy," and "Captains Courageous."

He is now appearing with Mickey Rooney in "Laird Cl"

I have been asked by Mr. Redwine to help handle the arrangements for the motorcade from Morehead to Lexington Saturday for the opening of the campaign of Senator Alben W. Barkley. Will you please advise if you will be going and can take your car? My plan on leaving here Saturday morning at about 9 o'clock and will stop in Mt. Sterling to join a motorcade from Eastern Kentucky and will go thence to Lexington. Make your own party for the trip. But if you will have extra room please advise as we will probably have several persons so want to go who do not have transportation. Ribbons bearing the name of our county will be distributed at the courthouse Saturday morning or may be secured from either Mr. Redwine or myself.

WHEN LIFE DEPENDS ON TIRE SAFETY

IT'S ALWAYS FIRESTONE

FOR 19 CONSECUTIVE YEARS THE WINNERS OF THE INDIANAPOLIS 500 MILE RACE HAVE PROTECTED THEIR LIVES WITH FIRESTONE GUM-DIPPED TIRES.

THEY said it couldn't be done — that tires could not withstand the torture of the new high speeds. Yet Floyd Roberts set a new record, at this year's Indianapolis Race, averaging 117.2 miles an hour for the 500 miles on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

With the sun-baked brick of the straight-away and the granite-hard surface of the turns pulling and grinding at their tires, 33 daring drivers, every one on Firestone Tires, waged a thrilling battle for gold and glory. Never before have tires been called upon to take such punishment. Never in all the history of the motor car has fire safety been put to such a gruelling test. Yet not one tire failed — not one single cord loosened — because Gum-Dipping, that famous Firestone patented process saturates and coats every cotton fiber in every cord in every ply with liquid rubber counteracting the tire-destroying internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

Why risk your life and the lives of others on unsafe tires? Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with Firestone Triple-Safe Tires — the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedways for your protection on the highways.

Joe Jamison Will Meet Old Buddy

(Continued From Page One) William Rittenhouse and Mr. Jamison will clasp. Two buddies of the Civil War days, representing the total living remains of 1405 men, will meet on the most famous of all American battlefields, for perhaps the last time.

"To make this a government of the people, by the people and for the people." Well might these words be flashed across the battlefield of Gettysburg as these two men clasp hands with perhaps a tear running down the clean-shaven but wrinkled face of each to fall on hallowed soil.

"Uncle Joe" Jamison served four years in the Civil War. The last thirteen months were in a prison camp at Camp Ford near Tyler, in Smith County, Texas. He was taken, along with 300 other Union men, at Snaggy Point, Louisiana. He is the only survivor of that group.

Voting Strength Is Doubled

In the 1924 election Brushy precinct cast but 7 votes, two of them for Vinson and five for Yastil. Vinson, however, carried 10 of the 12 precincts.

In another special election held on August 3, 1918 only 108 people, 54 Democrats and an equal number of Republicans, went to the polls. Half of these were election officers. This was a race for naming nominees to the United States Senate with William Preston Kimball receiving 6 and Ollie M. James 48 on the Democratic side and I. J. Betherun 16 and Ben L. Bruner 38 for the Republicans.

This election was held in the hey-day of the World War and people weren't interested in voting their interest at that time was overseas.

J. W. Riley is the "ruriniest" living man in Rowan County. His name appeared as a candidate in practically every election. Riley won every one of his races except in 1927 when he was defeated for County Attorney.

In November, 1923 an election was held to determine whether the people wanted to allow stock to run at large. Magisterial district 1 voted 382 against letting them run at large as against 134 for; magisterial district 2 voted to let them run at large the ballots being 169 for as against 96 against; in district 3 it was 201 for and 123 against.

If You're Planning To Build
By W. S. Lowndes
Director, School of Architecture and Building
International Correspondence Schools

ONE of the most important things to keep in mind when you are planning to build is the arrangement of closet space. Closets are indispensable and should be installed wherever required as far as the cost of the house warrants. In inexpensive houses, where space is necessarily scarce, they are used sparingly. When possible each bedroom should have a large closet. These closets should be provided with high shelves and with strips for hooks, and may be fitted with any of the patented devices for hanging clothing. The doors should open so as to admit direct daylight or lamplight. Also there should be a go-rated closet connected with the kitchen, one with the laundry, and one for coats, etc., in connection with the hall. It is desirable to have a closet for linen, one for extra and extra closets for the storage of winter clothing and blankets.

If your house is to have a cellar make it serve you well. The average cellar is a sort of catch-all, and is apt to contain a miscellaneous collection of objects, many of which are useless. A modern cellar should be properly designed for certain functions. The heating apparatus, of course, is a prime necessity and should be thoughtfully located. The laundry is frequently located in the cellar and should be closed off so as to be free from dust. By partitioning off the cellar with fire, dust, proof partitions a large spare room can sometimes be located there. Such a room may be used as a play room for the children. Closets for storage purposes also may be built into any well planned cellar.

against; in number 4, 57 for and 166 against.
As can be seen from the above in this election that they did in any other except the county elections. Stock running at large was of far greater consequence to them than it was to vote for a Senator or Congressman or even Governor at that time.

CATHERINE THE GREAT She Ruled an Empire, Married an Imbecile, And Had a Score Of Lovers

Catherine The Great was the most famous Empress that ever sat upon the glittering throne of Russia.

Yet her real name was not Catherine. And she was not Russian. And some historians don't even think she was great. She arrived in Russia, friendless and penniless, and with only three dresses to her name. Yet she managed to marry the Grand Duke Peter, the heir to the throne of all the Russians. But Peter didn't amount to much. He was a driving imbecile. His face was pitted, and marked with the ravages of small-pox, and he used to go to bed with his boots on. Even after he became Czar he got drunk with his own servants, took a whip and beat his soldiers with his own hands, and lay on the floor, for hours at a time, playing with wax dolls dressed in military uniform.

He despised her, and she loathed him. So she staged a revolt, kicked him off the throne, and had one of her lovers put arsenic in his vodka. But he was so tough that even arsenic couldn't harm him. So Catherine's lover knocked him down and choked him to death by thrusting a napkin down his throat.

Then, for thirty-four years after that, Catherine ruled one of the greatest empires on earth—ruled over a land inhabited by fifty different races, and she called it her "Little Hohenzollern." She never married again, but she wasn't exactly lonesome for scores, you, perhaps hundreds of different lovers, danced in the ballroom of her warm and romantic heart. Yet she was so strict with her grandsons that she made them stop studying botany because they asked questions about the reproduction of plants.

She supported her lovers in royal splendor and squandered on them five hundred million dollars. Even though some of them hadn't the

True Friendship

Benjamin Franklin once said that a man had but three friends—An old wife, an old dog and money. Had he lived in the present age and known the story I am about to tell, I can positively state that the philosophical Quaker would have added other names to those he listed as true friends and it would be old neighbors.

The respiratory system, the chief organs of which are the nose, the lungs, the arteries and the veins, are absolutely essential for existence, and the amount of air which an individual needs varies with the time to time and to a great extent is controlled by muscular activity. For example, if we breathe for any length of time in excess, our bodies require more air or oxygen than if we are reading a book or are sleeping. The heart pumps the blood cells into the tissues of the body and the oxygen in the blood is consumed producing what we term energy. As the blood starts to return to the heart it is blue, because the oxygen has been exhausted and when it gets back to the lungs it is again filled with oxygen and returns through the arterial system a bright red. The respiratory movements or breathing are necessary to obtain this fresh supply of oxygen.

Artificial Respiration At Chiddingfold, England, a man recently died who was kept alive for a little more than four years by artificial respiration—that is, he was made to breathe by other means than normal. In 1931 he found it difficult to breathe, due to a disease which he had contracted, but in experimenting with himself ascertained that he could assist respiration by pressing hard upon his chest. His condition gradually became worse, and due to the progress of his malady, he could not aid himself. Friends and relatives were enlisted to perform artificial respiration in order that he might live. In relays, his fellow-townsmen and members of his family, night and day, for more than four years, performed this service and kept him alive.

I know of no higher expression of sympathy and friendliness than the citizens of this town exhibited toward their unfortunate townsman.

least bit of ability, nevertheless she made them generals in the army. She made them generals and plotters and premiers. She conquered Poland and made one of her lovers, King of Poland. He didn't want to be a king; but she was tired of him and wanted to get rid of him so she made him a king anyway. Later she ruined him, and brought his gilded throne back to Russia and used it in her bathroom.

Then Catherine the Great fell in love with an ugly giant, bearing the name of Potemkin. Potemkin only had one eye. He had lost the other one in a tavern brawl.

Although Potemkin lived in a palace glittering with all the splendor and riches of Asia, he went about with nothing but house slippers on his bare feet. His hair was uncombed, and he always needed a bath. He chewed his finger nails, and he ate raw onions and garlic. But Potemkin was a hero of physical strength, and the mere touch of his hand filled Catherine with a vast and tender happiness. She called him her golden peasant, her "pison," her "brow-wow."

Her "low-wow" was one of the greatest generals Russia ever had, and yet he was afraid of the noise of guns and trembled like a school girl whenever a cannon was fired. Although Catherine was the richest woman in the world, she ate only two meals a day, and she ate anyone in America of modest income enjoys better cooked food. She had her dinners served on plates of gold; yet if she cooked burned the meat, she merely laughed and ate it just the same.

PATTERN No. 8192

Pattern 8192 is so simple and so well-designed that it's practically a woman's dress. Shaping on the shoulders makes it softly full where it should be full. The puff sleeves are becomingly narrowed by tucks, and the waistline is snug to the figure by darts.

An ideal dress for cotton, 8192 will be stunning in linen, which comes in such beautiful blues, gold to brown tone and violet. Also it will be very smart in gingham or printed percale. If you make it in print, choose a gay and lively pattern, for it's a gay little dress.

Pattern 8192 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, and 22. Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39 inch material, if you make it with short sleeves, 3 7/8 yards if your sleeves are to be long.

PATTERN 884: Ship ahoy there, my lassie! Hoist yourself and jump into this nautical ensemble which will enable you to breeze through the Summer months both feet by the deck. In assembling this costume, be sure that the suspect matches the trousers in color and that the intervening jacket offers a nice contrast.

Designed in sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 24, 30, and 36. Size 14 requires 2 1/8 yards of 3 1/2 yard material for the jacket and 3 1/2 yards for the slacks.

Candied Nuts

My mother makes a useful sum of money each year by selling candied English walnut meats. The walnuts are shelled and dipped in a strip of two cups of sugar and one cup of water. The nuts are packed in one hand cellophane bags. My mother wrote each socially prominent woman in her town, one to buy a pound. The nuts were well liked, and she asked her to buy and serve the nuts at the next party. This personal touch caused almost every Fort Myers

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

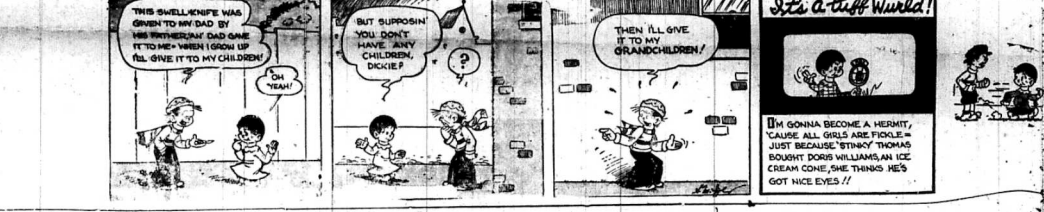

YOU better not talk back to the cop unless you got a stand-in at City Hall. There was a guy with a couple of black eyes and a swollen jaw come in police court one morning, and the judge was asking him questions. "So you ran past the red light, did you?" says the judge. "Yes, your honor, I did." "And then you and this cop had some words?" "Yes, I guess you might say we had some words. I still got mine, though. The cop never gave me a chance to use any of them."

Current Joke

Woman (telephoning): "I'm asking for more electricity over here, do you understand?" Answering Voice: "Certainly ma'am, more power to you."

Dubious

Visitor: "What a sweet and innocent looking face your little girl has, Mrs. Brown." Mrs. Brown: "I hadn't noticed it. Mary, what have you been doing?"

That's Right

A teacher is explaining the rule of subtraction to a pupil. The pupil does not seem to understand, so at last the teacher asks: "When you have four chops on your plate, and eat four, what will then remain?" The pupil: "The potatoes."

Good Breakfast Food

Mistress: "What can be the matter with my husband? He whistled and sang when we went off to the office!" Maid: "It is my fault, no doubt. I used the canary's seed for the gruel this morning."

Habit

The professor was in the habit of allowing his dog to sit on a chair beside him at meal times. One evening he was out to dinner. The woman sitting next to him wishing to attract his attention, touched his sleeve. Absently, the professor picked up a bone from his plate, and, with out turning his head, held it out to her and said: "Oh, don't worry so. Take this on the mat and eat it."

Easier

First Boy: "We're picking teams, England against Africa." Second Boy: "Are the Africans backing their faces?" First Boy: "No, the English are washing their faces."

Certainly Not

A large colored woman boarded a south side street car and an elderly colored man got up to offer her his seat. He bowed and raised his hat. "But, suh, I don't want to deprive you-all of yer seat," she answered. "No deprivity, mam, no deprivity," he said gallantly.

Crop Report

Kentucky's crop conditions June 1, indicated a probable production of wheat and rye smaller than in 1937 but larger than the 10-year average; the condition of oats was slightly below that of a year ago but better than the 10-year average; and hay and pasture were unusually good; according to the crop report for Kentucky issued by the Louisville office of H. F. Bryant, Kentucky Statistician for the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Three fruits in this state generally are short but occasional orchards have fair crops.
