Author Winds Up "Gone With The Wind"

The following synopsis of "Gone With The Wind" was written by Jack Tarver and published in the Toombs County Democrat (Lyons, Ga.).

"Katherine Scarlett O'Hara was our shero. A winsome wench with a figger like a marble statue and a head as hard. Gerald O'Hara was her pa. By nature he was most animal-like. Proud as a peacock, he roared like a lion and rode like a dog-and-pony show. After Sherman came he was crazy as a bedbug. Anyhow, Scarlett was in love with Ashley Wilkes, who was in love with Ashley, and so they were married.

(Ashley and Melanie, in case you are getting confused.) This irritated Scarlett no end and so in quick succession, she married for spite and cash, respectively, a couple of fellers whose names we didn't get. But then, neither did Scarlett for long.

"The other major characters Rhett Butler, Belle Watling and a colored lady exactly like the one on the flapjack box. Rhett, who was somehow strangely reminiscent of Clark Gable was a cross between Jesse James and Little Boy Blue. If Rhett had joined the Lost Cause in the second reel instead of after intermission, the Confederacy would have won the war. And Belle. You'd have loved Belle. Everybody did. During the siege of Atlanta only three things were running—Belle's place, Prissy's nose and the laundry that kept Rhett's white suits snow-white.

"Melanie's baby arrived about the same time Sherman did. Both were equally welcome to Scarlett. It was so far as our painstaking research has revealed, the first baby ever born in technicolor.

"Anyway, the South lost the war again in the picture (what could you expect with a lot of Yankee producers?) and Scarlett married Rhett to get even with him. Their married life was just like setting in hellfire and listening to the heavenly choir. Finally, after Melanie died, Scarlett realized that she didn't love Ashley but Rhett. Scarlett was as changeable as a four-dollar underwear. However, Rhett had had enough of her foolishness and when she told him, he says, 'Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn.' Neither, by this time, did the audience. They were glad to see the end, their own having become number than somewhat."

WILD LIFE OF KENTUCKY
by Roger Barbour
MOREHEAD STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

The question: "What is a game fish?" is perhaps unanswerable. A simple answer is that fish can be caught on artificial bait are classed as game fish. However, drum fish, chub and channel catfish are sometimes caught on plugs, but still could scarcely be classed as game fish. Fly fishermen hesitate to accept the above definition, for many species of non-edible fish are taken on flies. The writer has taken several species of minnows and darters on flies, and on one occasion hooked a lowly ship jack. I would certainly be extremely reluctant to call such fishes "game." Nevertheless, the above definition is suitable for the purpose of this article.

The gameness of a fish does not affect its edibility, as many non-game fish are delicious. By our definition, catfish are not game fish, yet they are of excellent quality for the table. Numerous other fishes fall in the same category.

Bait casters in Kentucky are most interested in the Small-mouth bass, the large-mouth Bass, and the Ohio Muskellungo as game fishes. On the other hand, fly fishermen are interested in these three and in numerous other fishes, such as the Rock Bass, the Crappie, and other sunfishes.

Kentucky streams were once teemed with fish, but today, as any fisherman will tell you, that supply is sadly depleted. Many factors are responsible for this decrease in the numbers of our game fish, but perhaps the two most important are stream pollution and the illegal taking of fish.

The situation in regard to the illegal taking of fish is not as serious as it was a few years ago, but it is still pretty bad. Closer supervision of the streams, especially in spawning season, is sorely needed.

As regards stream pollution, fortunately, there is less of it than formerly. Sewage systems have been opened indiscriminately into streams with no regard for the fishes. In one particular spot, I have counted dozens of dead bass and sunfish, killed undoubtedly by a sewer that opened into the stream. That particular situation has now been remedied, however. With a sane restocking policy based on scientific research, and the application of a certain amount of common sense by Kentuckians in general, there should be nothing to prevent our streams from again supporting a great number of game fish.
