FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University has ordered a cake to share with alumni on Homecoming, Saturday, Oct. 11.

The "wish cake" hot-air balloon was scheduled in honor of the University's 75th anniversary as a public institution of higher learning, according to Bill Redwine, director of alumni relations and development and coordinator of Homecoming activities. "Complete with 16 pink candles, red roses and banner and standing nearly 100 feet tall, it will welcome visitors to Jayne Stadium for the Homecoming football game," he said.

Scheduled to be installed about 11 a.m. that morning, the balloon will remain tethered at the entrance for two hours prior to game time, according to Mark Howard, MSU alumnus and promotions director and graphic designer for Oxford Promotions Limited in Louisville which owns the balloon.

Holding 5,000 cubic feet of air, the balloon made its debut in Switzerland in 1993. Since that time, it has traveled to eight different countries and will participate in the World Hot Air Balloon Championships in Japan in November.

Homecoming '97, which runs Oct. 10-12, promises to be a special time filled with activities for returning alumni and friends, Redwine noted.

Kicking off the activities will be the annual appreciation coffee and continental breakfast for the MSU faculty and staff on Friday, Oct. 10, from 8:30 to 11 a.m. All employees are invited to gather for the event, which will be held in the Alumni Center. At noon, the Track and Cross Country team will host a luncheon in the Adron Doran University Center and Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity will hold a golf tournament at Eagle Trace Golf Course.

The Welcome Reception, sponsored by the MSU Alumni Association, starts at 5 p.m. Friday, Oct. 10, at the Morehead Holiday Inn-Pavilion. This event gives early arrivals a chance to visit with friends and various University officials.

Six inductees will be recognized at the Athletic Hall of Fame banquet that begins at 7 p.m. in the Crager Room, ADUC. Tickets for the banquet are $12 per person and must be purchased in advance.

The dance, which gets under way at 8 p.m., will be held in the grill, ADUC. Admission is $3 per person and everyone is invited to attend.

Saturday brings the opportunity for many to reunite and enjoy activities sponsored by several organizations. Registration begins at 9 a.m. in ADUC where complimentary beverages will be served.

Also slated for Saturday morning will be the American Heart Association "HeartWalk." Participants will gather on Laughlin lawn at 9 a.m. for the five-mile trek.

Various departments have scheduled meetings throughout the day. Alumni from the Department of Agricultural Sciences will meet at 6 p.m. at the University farm. The Department of English, Foreign Languages and Philosophy will sponsor a dessert at 7 p.m. at the Fuzzy Duck Coffee Shop at the Morehead Plaza.

CELEBRATION OF TEACHERS AND TEACHING

Morehead State University recently held a special "Moonlight School Event" to celebrate teaching and teachers as part of its year-long commemoration of the University's 75th anniversary as a public postsecondary education institution. During the event, Laura and Michael Duncan-O'Connell (pictured above) recreated highlights from her original production, "Miss Cora: The Moonlight Lady." The play is based on the life of Cora Wilson Stewart, who founded the adult education movement in Rowan County in the early 1900s. The celebration, held on the lawn of the campus Moonlight School building, featured a brass band, string band, an oral history corner, an old books display and a display for the soon-to-be-published MSU history, "A Light to the Mountains," written by Dr. Don Flatt, MSU professor emeritus of history.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Values of family, home and community are what motivates two of Morehead State University's newest faculty members.

John Lott, assistant professor of social work, and Dr. Youmasu Siewe, assistant professor of health, physical education and recreation, may come from different continents, but their views of life and the things they value are very similar.

Born in Youngstown, Ohio, Lott learned the importance of family ties at an early age when his parents' marriage ended in divorce. He chose to stay with his mother and became the man of the family at six-years of age.

"I wanted to go with my father because he was the man," Lott said. "But, when I looked at my mother, I knew I couldn't leave her."

Both of Lott's parents instilled in him the strong religious beliefs that carried him through a drug-infested community and the perils of professional football. After playing high school football in Youngstown, he went to the University of Michigan where he was drafted into the United States Football League (USFL).

"High school football was fun, you played for the fun of it," Lott said. "College football was still fun, but you knew you had to win," he added. In what Lott described as the "dog-eat-dog world" of pro football, he came to the realization that the love of the game was being replaced by greed and politics. "All the fun was gone," he said.

After leaving pro ball, Lott spent a year in seclusion at the beach. He removed himself from the world of football, not watching any games or talking about the sport with anyone. He used this time to rebuild and seek a reconnection with the values that had been so much a part of his life. He then enrolled in Jacksonville Theological Seminary, where he earned a master's degree in theology.

After graduation, he spent the next 12 years in the social service field. He was a treatment director for a juvenile delinquent center in Ecourse, Mich. He served as detoxification coordinator for the Hope Center in Lexington, a chemical dependence counselor at St. Joseph Hospital and, more recently, as a career placement coordinator and part-time instructor at Maysville Community College.

(MORE)

He also coached the Mason County High School football team in Maysville, where he lives with his wife Barbara and their children, Darius, 6, and Tierra, nine months. Currently he is working on his doctorate at the University of Kentucky.

The former pro football player is comfortable at MSU. "The atmosphere and the people are great, this is a special environment," he said. "The nice thing about being at MSU is that I still get to see former students who are continuing their education on campus here," he added. "I believe I can make an impact on a larger scale."

Noting that MSU has only a small number of African American educators, Lott said, "We are not many, but there is so much we can bring in expansion and experience, and we will make differences."

He added that his personal philosophy is, "If you can't express an opinion or take a stand and be able to articulate that opinion, then knowledge will not do you any good."

Dr. Siewe came from farther away to be part of the MSU family. While he has been in the United States for 16 years, he still calls Cameroon, West Africa, home. "Cameroon is home; that is where my roots are," Dr. Siewe said.

He studied at West Virginia University, the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, and Southern Illinois University-Carbondale where he got his Ph.D. degree in health education with a concentration in community health. His dissertation was entitled "Studying the Risk Factors of Cardiovascular Diseases Among Young Adults, Using a Transtheoretical Approach."

Dr. Siewe also has taught nursing and community health at North Carolina Central University in Durham and at the John A. Logan College in Carterville, Ill., as well as working in patient education at Duke University Hospital and the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Durham.

The similarities between his homeland and Morehead are what attracted Dr. Siewe to MSU's rural setting. On his first visit, he immediately recognized the values that he had first learned about on another continent--family, home and community. He wanted to live here with his wife Christina, and their three children, Mbonda, 12, and twins Daku and Youmasu Jr., 10.

Dr. Siewe, like Lott, has found a place where the students are very polite and the atmosphere very friendly. "The students are very eager to learn, you can see it in them; but I wish they would talk more."

The shyness he encounters in the classroom, Dr. Siewe says, makes him more determined to reach out to students and bring them out of their shell into the fullness of learning. "Teaching is a very noble career, you are enriching, empowering and helping students to learn to make decisions," he added. "By being open, teachers can also learn a lot from students."

Also new to MSU's faculty this fall is Yolanda Marie Scott, assistant professor of sociology. Scott, who earned her master's degree from MSU, is a doctoral candidate at the University of Kentucky where she is a Faculty for the Future Fellow under a cooperative program with UK, the University of Louisville and MSU.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University will host the third annual Governor's Minority Student College Preparation Conference on Friday, Oct. 24, in East Room A, Adron Doran University Center.

Registration and a continental breakfast will begin at 8:30 a.m.

The Governor's Minority Student College Preparation program was initiated in 1986 to make young African American students aware of the benefits and values of college in order to make more students consider college as an achievable option. The program focuses on preparing these students to be successful in college-level work to proceed toward graduation.

"The program is designed to assist minority students in a successful college matriculation," said Ernestine Winfield, MSU's Minority Teacher Education Program coordinator. "It also encourages the recruitment and retention of a larger number of African American students on college campuses in the state," she said.

Personnel from programs across the state are expected to attend the conference and discuss program improvements. Scheduled to attend are directors from Henderson Community College, Hopkinsville Community College, University of Kentucky, Kentucky State University, Murray State University, University of Louisville, Western Kentucky University and MSU.

The conference will allow directors of programs like Winfield's to share ideas and brainstorm on different ways to strengthen the outreach of programs. Each director is scheduled to give a 10-minute synopsis of their program's activities.

Sherron Jackson, director of equal opportunities/facilities with the Council on Postsecondary Education, will facilitate the meeting and offer a prediction for the program's future.

Several MSU faculty and staff members will be among the conference speakers. They include: Dr. Lemuel Berry Jr., dean of the Caudill College of Humanities; Master Sgt. Reginald Daniel, chairperson of the African/African American Professional Coalition; Francene Botts-Butler, director of Human Resources; Bud Grevious, building services superintendent with the Office of Physical Plant, and Ralph Shoaf, coordinator of clinical field experience and student teaching.

"The Million Woman march will be a time for African-American women to get away from the pettiness and work on community unity," said Peggy Overly, MSU assistant director of minority student affairs and adviser for LaDies, who will accompany the students on the march.

The students have been conducting bake sales and sponsoring raffles to raise money for the trip, Overly noted.

To get in the spirit of the march and celebrate the two-year anniversary of the Million Man March, LaDies will sponsor a rally on Thursday, Oct. 16, in 419 Reed Hall, beginning at 7 p.m. Among the guest speakers will be Ann Grundy, director of the Bluegrass Aspendale Teen Center in Lexington, and Ivan G. Williamson, Chicago, Ill., junior who attended the Million Man March.

"We want those women (on campus) who can't go to the march to know we're going to take them with us in spirit," Overly said.

The Million Woman March is being implemented by black women who interact on grassroots and global levels, according to the march's mission statement. It is capable and ready to create and implement strategic methods of resolving problems that have resulted in the deterioration of African-Americans and African people overall.

A tentative schedule of platform issues to be discussed at the march include: development of those who are or who wish to become professionals, entrepreneurs, and/or politicians; Human Rights violations and their effects; programming that will foster the necessary interaction with youth; homelessness and the circumstances that attribute to the plight of people who are without shelter, and formation of Rites of Passage centers/academics.

"A lot of good things have come from the meetings with the LaDies planning to go on the trip," Overly said. "Just think about it--being able to network with over a million women. Greater things could happen because of the march."

MSU'S BEGINNING

Morehead State University recently celebrated the 110th birthday of the founding of its predecessor institution, Morehead Normal School, with the unveiling of a replica of a plaque commemorating the opening of the school. The bronzed plaque will be mounted in front of the Adron Doran University Center, which sits on the original school site. Taking part in the unveiling were, from left, MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin, Dr. J.E. Duncan, dean emeritus of the former School of the Humanities; Robert S. Bishop, whose family owned the land where the school stood, and Dr. John R. Duncan, professor emeritus of education. The plaque reads: "It was on this property that Phebe Button and her son, Frank, with help from the Christian Church of Kentucky, founded Morehead (Christian) Normal School (MNS), the noble forerunner of Morehead State University. Classes began here in a rented house on the morning of October 3, 1887, with one student, Annie Page. By day's end, Ethel Bertie Hamm also had enrolled and the Buttons had created what would be known as "A Light To The Mountains." MNS was among 25 private normal schools opened in the state between 1870 and 1905. The school became a public institution in 1922."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---The cooperation between higher education and the public school system seems to sometimes get lost among all the paper shuffling and time consuming tasks of taking care of business.

In an effort to keep in touch with the community and focus not only on higher education needs, but also the needs of the community and public school systems, Morehead State University provided a middle school teacher with the opportunity to apply for a continuing education scholarship.

Rosemarie Gold, director of the Clearinghouse for School Services at MSU, recently received a call from one of the companies her office works with, Pieces of Learning, a company that sells teaching tools, books and other items to learning institutions.

"Pieces of Learning, located in Beaver Creek, Ohio, contacted me when it learned of a scholarship being offered by its publisher, National School Supply and Equipment Association," Gold explained.

When Pieces of Learning asked if she knew of a teacher who might be interested in applying for a scholarship, Gold referred the matter to Rowan County Middle School principal, Tresia Swain, who had the perfect teacher in mind for the project.

"I immediately thought of Kerry Evans. She is one of the finest teachers in the country and an inspiration to everyone," Swain said.

Swain asked Evans, a teacher for gifted students, if she would be interested in applying for the scholarship. Evans was delighted to be offered the chance to receive a scholarship that would allow her to attend conferences for teachers of gifted students.

Gold forwarded the application, Evans completed it and wrote the required paragraph telling how she could benefit from the $500 scholarship. She wrote:

"The scholarship would enable me to attend professional training sessions, without which I would be unable to do so. This experience would enhance my teaching by providing fresh gifted ideas, topics, and strategies, and keeping me abreast of novel concepts in the gifted field."

Evans was surprised that she received one of the 20 scholarships given nationwide. "After all," she said, "it was only a paragraph."

Evans plans to attend two conferences at Western Kentucky University and a seminar in Cincinnati.

Gold believes the manner in which the scholarship came about is the way the University is supposed to help in the community and in the public school system. "This scholarship went from publisher, to business, to higher education, to local school," she said. "That's the way we are meant to work together."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---As graduation time nears once again, many college students find themselves worrying about finding a job, finishing classes and preparing for the big day.

To eliminate some of these concerns, Morehead State University's Alumni Association and the Office of Career Services will sponsor a "Graduation Fair" for students who are candidates for graduation in December. The two-day program will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 28-29, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., in the Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center.

"The Graduation Fair is a combination career day and senior celebration," said Dr. Mike Hopper, Career Services director. "It gives all classifications of students a chance to talk to employers from all over the region about co-ops, internships, full time, part time and summer employment."

Employers from the medical field, law enforcement, insurance companies and the branches of the military are just a few of the 40 careers that will be represented at the fair to answer students' questions.

Student services available at the fair include cap and gown sizing, as well as the opportunity to order class rings and personalized announcements for graduation. "The fair has everything students need to finalize graduation", said Bill Redwine, director of Alumni Relations and Development.

Pre-registration is not necessary to attend the fair. Students are encouraged to bring a current resume to share with employers.

Additional information is available by calling the Office of Career Services at (606) 783-2233.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Lecturer Marceil DeLacy will speak at Morehead State University's Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center, at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 30.

Her campus visit is being sponsored in conjunction with Health 310, a class in health and wellness promotion in the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. In her lecture, she will discuss how to achieve spiritual wellness, according to Dr. Robert Grueninger, professor of HPER.

A resident of Seattle, Wash., DeLacy has been doing public speaking for many years. Currently a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, she is frequently invited to speak on college campuses, in community centers, correctional institutions, churches and on radio and television, addressing issues such as health care, prayer, sexism, stress, and the relationship between science and religion.

Before joining the lecture circuit, she visited colleges in the Pacific Northwest, conducting workshops for students and faculty interested in exploring the spiritual solutions to the unique challenges of university life.

DeLacy is a graduate of the University of Washington in Seattle and studied acting at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City.

During her campus visit, she will talk about Mary Baker Eddy's book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" and the effect of the book's practical spirituality on the lives of readers including herself. Eddy, who was recently placed in the National Women's Hall of Fame, is considered to be the most influential American woman in religious history. A best seller for nearly a century, the book was cited by the Women's National Book Association as "one of 75 books by women whose words have changed the world."

DeLacy's lecture is non-denominational and free and open to the public. Additional information is available by calling Dr. Grueninger at (606) 783-2464.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University has received a $587,497 grant from AmeriCorps to fund its MSUCorps program for the coming year.

The grant has allowed MSU to recruit 50 new members, according to Steve Swim, coordinator of MSUCorps. "Members receive a living allowance of $8,340 for 10 months of service," he said. "Upon completion of the service, members are presented a $4,725 voucher which they may use for educational purposes, such as tuition or to repay student loans."

The program at MSU provides tutors and mentors for at-risk students in 11 counties: Bath, Boyd, Carter, Elliott, Fleming, Lawrence, Lewis, Magoffin, Menifee, Morgan and Rowan. The members work closely with Family Resource Centers in the elementary schools and Youth Service Centers in the middle and high schools. The schools provide MSUCorps members with the names of those considered at-risk.

MSUCorps, administered through the University's Academic Support Services, is the second largest AmeriCorps program in the state. This past year the targeted students had a 92 percent increase in grades because of tutoring and mentoring services. Swim is pleased with the results as it reinforces his motto "When self esteem goes up, grades follow," works.

The AmeriCorps program is a national initiative signed into law by President Clinton in 1993 under the National and Community Service Trust Act. The program is designed to engage Americans of all ages, races, educational, and socioeconomic backgrounds in community service.

Since 1994, the Kentucky Community Service Commission has provided grants to selected AmeriCorps programs around the state. The Corporation for National Service allocates all federal funds for AmeriCorps.

Carter earned her GED through the center's adult learning center, took classes there toward her bachelor's degree which she earned from MSU in 1996, and completed a master's degree at MSU in 1997. She currently is a doctoral student at the University of Kentucky.

Helen C. Pennington, a member of MSU's Board of Regents, will discuss the center's history and L.M. "Sonny" Jones, who chairs the Board of Regents, will make a special scholarship presentation.

MOREHEAD, Ky.—Morehead State University's chapter of the American Chemical Society (ACS) Student Affiliates has been selected for special recognition as an Honorable Mention chapter for its activities during the 1996-97 academic year.

The 25 members of the ACS student affiliate submitted a yearly report which listed all programs, projects or activities completed during the last year. Among the activities listed were a tutoring program, attendance at national meetings and an adopt-a-highway program.

"This award brings to your student affiliates and to your college a note of accomplishment," said Paul S. Anderson, president of the American Chemical Society. Announcement of the recognition will be listed in Chemical & Engineering News, the Society's official national magazine, and in the student affiliates' magazine.

For the fourth consecutive year, the student affiliates have received an Innovative Activities Grant for a project. In the past, the grant money has been used to assist in funding a chemical treasure hunt with high school students and a chemical magic show as part of the spring Science Olympiad. This year the grant will fund a campus compost project.

In addition Dr. Mike Adams, associate professor of chemistry and faculty adviser to the ACS student affiliate, was commended for his efforts with the group. According to the American Chemical Society notification, "it takes more than a good chapter to get honorable mention; it takes the nurturing attention from a dedicated adviser."

On behalf of the society, Anderson said: "Professor Adams' efforts certainly represent the best in undergraduate science education and mentoring around the country."

Additional information on the groups' activities is available by calling Dr. Adams at (606) 783-2914.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University's Equestrian Team has a new face with the addition of Susan Fuglestad as the team's head coach.

Fuglestad came to the University from Missouri where she earned a bachelor's degree in equine science from Stephens College in Columbia and received a graduate degree in equestrian education from William Woods College in Fulton. She joined MSU's program because it allows her to work more closely in her specialty.

Nationally, the University's Equestrian Team participates in Hunt and Stock Team competitions. Fuglestad's main goal for this year is to strengthen the Hunt Team's competitiveness.

"I would like to get one rider into the nationals for the Hunt Team, while maintaining the strength of the Stock Team," she said. MSU's Stock Team has always been competitive, and Fuglestad wants the same for the Hunt Team.

The new coach has planned three Intercollegiate Horse Shows at MSU for this academic school year, the first will be Nov. 15-16 at the University Farm, with the others set for next semester. MSU also is providing horses for the North American 4-H judging competition on Nov. 8.

The Equestrian Team hosted a Fall Festival walking horse show at the University Farm in October and had six horses in the local Hardwood Festival parade.

Additional information on MSU's equine program is available by calling the University farm at (606) 783-2800.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky. ---Morehead State University's minority retention specialist, William Salazar, has two objectives for the coming year: to keep every student his office has recruited this year and to increase minority enrollment by 10 percent for next year.

"We want to increase minority enrollment in business, health technologies--specifically pre-med and physical science--and math," he said.

As minority retention specialist, Salazar works with high school counselors and recruits at other college fairs. He also must correspond with parents and students for retention purposes.

"I'm responsible for making it an easy transition from high school to college and making minority students aware of the University's resources and how to utilize them," he said. "I also monitor the students' academic progress and look for ways to assist them with study skills and time management," Salazar said.

Since coming to MSU, Salazar has been pleased with the cooperation he has received.

"The University as a whole--the faculty, staff and students--is pretty open," he said. "The administration is very accessible; students are quite accepting, and the staff is easy to work with."

Salazar was an adviser and instructor at Glendale Community College in Glendale, Ariz., where he taught psychology for two years before coming to the University. "Coming here gave me the opportunity to wear four different hats at the same time," he said, noting that now he is an instructor, a recruiter and retainer, as well as a collaborator on a grant.

Along with his other responsibilities, he is working with two professors from the Department of Mathematical Sciences, Joyce Saxon and Dr. Dora Ahmadi, in the hopes of securing a grant from the National Science Foundation.

"If the grant is funded, we're hoping to bring female minority students to MSU for a science summer program. We're also working on setting up internships for junior and seniors," Salazar said. Along with the grant, he hopes to obtain workstudy positions for incoming minority freshmen students.

Among his goals is promotion of cultural diversity and Salazar believes his background will help him accomplish that at MSU. "I have been involved in multicultural counseling, and I've spent the better part of my personal and professional life promoting cultural diversity."

While he has only been on board for five months, he has already started to improve communications with the establishment of "Open Monthly Forums" for minority students. "This is an opportunity for administrators and students to get together to discuss problems or concerns they have on campus," Salazar said. The forum is open to the public and usually lasts an hour.

Additional information on programs and activities is available by calling Salazar at (606) 783-2518.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Fishing is considered a sport by some, but for Dr. Geoffrey Gearner, associate professor of biology at Morehead State University, it is part of his life's work.

Dr. Gearner has received a grant from the Kentucky Chapter of Muskies, Inc., which will allow graduate students to learn about the muskie fish in Cave Run Lake.

The $2,000 grant will provide funds and materials for a graduate assistant, under the guidance of Dr. Gearner, to research the habitat, pathology, water quality, telemetry and reproduction of muskie.

Dr. Gearner is currently overseeing the written proposals for the study which are being prepared by MSU graduate students. "Once the proposals are completed, a group, composed of MSU faculty members and representatives from the muskie organization, will evaluate the research plan and the student with the winning entry will complete the research during the next year," Dr. Gearner said.

"If the corporation finds the data useful, then hopefully, we will be asked to continue the research every couple of years," he added.

Dr. Gearner, who has been interested in science since he was in the fifth grade, has been a faculty member at MSU since 1990. He was inspired by his grandfather, a catfish farmer who manipulated nature on a farm in northeast Texas.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Menifee County Middle School teacher Cheryl Cooper has the unique opportunity to teach teachers for a year instead of her usual middle school students.

A program designed by the Department of Elementary, Reading and Special Education at Morehead State University is responsible for taking Cooper out of the classroom and putting her in the environment that teaches teachers to teach students in public schools.

Since the reforms initiated by KERA have taken effect, higher education is trying to comply with regulations to help new teachers be prepared for the classroom. A giant step for this re-education is taking a seasoned teacher from the public school classroom and allowing her/him to instruct university faculty about teaching strategies in the age of KERA, according to Dr. Cathy Barlow, MSU department chair.

"This is one way for higher education to learn about KERA and the needs of the public schools while also helping the community, Dr. Barlow said. "This is an effort for us to stay abreast of what's going on in the public schools."

The program came about in part because of a similar program Dr. Barlow started while working at the University of Evansville in Evansville, Ind. She is pleased that the University was interested and believes it to be the first higher education facility in the state to initiate such a program.

When applications were reviewed and Cooper was selected, Dr. Barlow went to the superintendent of Menifee County schools to inquire about Cooper's participation in the program.

(MORE)

Cheryl Cooper
2-2-2-2-2

"He was very pleased to hear we had selected a teacher from the Menifee County School system," Dr. Barlow said.

Cooper, who lives in Mt. Sterling, almost didn't submit a resume. "When I read the information about the position in the Lexington Herald-Leader, I just put it away and pondered on it for awhile. I didn't know if this was really something I wanted to do," Cooper said. "It was a real hard decision to make to leave my students and my classroom."

Cooper will work for the University for one year and will be paid with funds from the department. Dr. Barlow said that Cooper's salary from the county can then be used to hire a teacher to replace her for the year.

Brown bag lunches and other informal sessions offer Cooper the opportunity to discuss the public school classroom with faculty members in the Department of Elementary, Reading and Special Education. She received positive feedback from the first brown bag gathering and is looking forward to upcoming sessions which include "Curriculum Analysis" and "Authentic and Qualitative Assessment."

Cooper also oversees 10 student teachers at four different schools. To prepare them for the classroom, she held a four-week seminar. Now, she visits each of the schools to see how they are doing and if she can help them in any way. The student teachers like the connection between the public schools and the University that Cooper's position provides.

Dr. Barlow describes Cooper's role best as "a liaison from MSU to the public schools." "I think it is a plus for everybody," she said.

MSU HOSTS GOVERNOR'S COLLEGE PREPARATION CONFERENCE

Representatives from programs across the state attended the third annual Governor's Minority Student College Preparation Conference on the Morehead State University campus recently. Ernestine Winfield, MSU's Minority Teacher Education Program coordinator, talked with participants Dr. Allene White-Gold, branch manager for the Division of Minority Educator Recruitment and Retention with the Kentucky Department of Education, and Mildred Bailey, director of the Minority Awareness Program at the University of Kentucky at the registration table. The conference was designed to allow program directors to share ideas and brainstorm on different ways to strengthen the outreach of the programs. Each director gave a 10 minute synopsis of his/her program's activities.
