Chandler and Congressman Joe E. Bates on the program. It is not known for certain that all of these will be present, although attempts will be made to have them attend the banquet.

Leading Democrats from all counties will be invited to attend the meeting. A short address will probably be heard from Leonard Pfleider, chairman of the executive committee of Democratic clubs of the Eighth district.

Morehead Conceded Good Chance For Victory Over Murray Saturday

Custer Reynolds To Be Eligible For Tilt Against Visitors

The hopes for a Morehead victory over the Thoroughbreds of Murray at Jayne Stadium Saturday afternoon are looking today as if they become definitely known that Custer Reynolds, the Kentucky classic "Ball of the Buckhorns" Reynolds, will definitely be eligible to play in the Eastern Kentucky classic.

Reynolds, all K. I. A. C. last year and classed by many as the best running back in Kentucky, did not participate in either the opening warm-ups with Alfred Holbrook and Lawrence Tech. But the 190 pound back will be in here pitching Sunday. With the knowledge that Reynolds would be in the hall game Eastern Kentucky followers of the Eagles played Morehead in the favorite role.

The cry "Remember the 'Maine' 1936 and 1937" has made Morehead and Eastern Kentucky football fans conscious that it doubtful if Jayne Stadium will accommodate the throng that is expected for the clash.

Murray Coaches View Morehead Tilt With Alarm

Coach Roy Stewart Believes That Eagles Are Better Club Than Thoroughbreds

The Murray College Thoroughbreds, thirty-four strong, will leave Morehead Friday morning, but will not arrive in Morehead until Saturday for Kentucky's football classic to be played here Saturday afternoon. The Thoroughbreds will stop at Mt. Sterling and work out on the Trojans' field there Friday night.

Expressions on the game were gained today from Murray Coach Roy Stewart and Line Coach Jim Moore.

Coach Roy Stewart summed up the situation in this way: "There will be no chance of Morehead catching us flat this week, as our boys have a profound respect for the Eagles. Murray has looked fair in its loss starts thus far, but no team in Morehead's calendar has been played as yet. I do not know how good—or how bad—we are. We will know Saturday night. Any team that can score 134 points in two games must be hot. I hope we will be able to keep the score down this week-end."

Fishing Good In Local Streams, Anglers Report

Many Good Catches Are Made; Muskies Striking In Triplett Creek

The muskies and bass are striking well. That was the word that went from mouth to mouth of local Isaac Wattons this week, following some good catches in Triplett Creek, North Fork and the Licking River over the week-end.

Van Y. Greene, district game warden, who keeps fishermen well posted in these parts, reports that he believes the best fishing now is in the river. Mr. Greene caught 15 bass Sunday, but threw seven of them back to comply with the game laws. His prize catch was a black bass that weighed slightly over four pounds.

Luther Clark, using live minnows as bait, caught a muskie weighing forty-two pounds, in North Fork. Two fishermen from Ashland, whose names were not learned, landed an 11 pound muskie in Triplett Creek near the place it empties into Licking River, described as the best muskie fishing spot in the state.

Dr. A. F. Zillington landed four bass weighing over two pounds.

According to Mr. Greene October is one of the best months of the year for fishing in Eastern Kentucky.

Ministers Plan Special Service On Thanksgiving

Rev. Traynor Engaged To Give Sermon; All Churches To Participate

At a recent meeting of the Ministers of the City, plans were laid for the special service to be observed at the Methodist Church building on Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving. The Rev. Mr. Traynor was designated to deliver the Thanksgiving Sermon. The Rev. Buell Kazez, the Rev. Mr. Lyons and Rev. Arthur Landolt will participate in the service in other capacities.

It was decided that Wednesday evening would be a more logical time for this service, as many folks go visiting with friends and relatives, or are visited by them on Thanksgiving. The clergy of the city desire that all be freed of obligations to attend service on Thanksgiving day so that all might have a full day to enjoy their visit or visitors.

The service has been tentatively planned, it is to be mainly one of community singing and worship. It is hoped that the service will look forward to attending this Union Service; and all are urged to participate at evening open in order to participate in the hour of Thanksgiving.

FAIR PARADE

Eight years ago the Rowan County News and Mrs. Lydia Messer Caullin, then Superintendent of Schools, joined in sponsoring the first Rowan County School and Agricultural Fair. It was a good beginning and since that time many advancements have been made.

We viewed the parade that opened the Fair in 1930 in which about 2,000 children participated. The morning we saw a larger parade, but it was not the increase in numbers that warmed our hearts. It was met at the first Fair that approximately half of the children that were in the parade were without shoes. The day was cold and some many miles to participate in the County's first Fair. Friday morning in the Fair parade every child had shoes on his feet and can

FARMERS SCHOOL NEWS

Miss Mize and the first and second grade children enjoy working in their room in the new school building. They have plenty of light and space. They have collected for the Fair. They have had only one absence during the three weeks of school. There were seven children visiting in this room-guest work.

The projects supervised by Mr. Peirce are Medieval History. The homes are the exact duplicate of those in the days of manors, serfs and lords. The house and walls are made of clay mixture of salt and flour to prevent the cracking of the clay. A stage coach is made of three different articles. The sides are made of chalk bog, the springs are made out of hot hanger, the top a tin can, the harness of bias tape binding. The Indians and drivers are made of pipe cleaner and yarn, the horses are made of clay. Other projects are geography and biological booklets.

Mr. Peirce's room has a good record of only one-half days absence. The third and fourth grade rooms have organized a health club. They gave the club a name of wideawake health club. The following officers were elected: Atron Armstrong, president; M. T. Myers, vice-president; Lucille Hamilton, Secretary and Treasurer. On section of the blackboard belongs to the club. On this is kept individual health charts. They are checked each morning on a project called Jack and the Bean Stalk. The fourth grade is making a cotton field scene for a floor project in geography.

Kathleen Calvert is absent from school on account of poison. The pie supper sponsored by the school and P. T. A. is a huge success. Thanks to the support given by the C. and O. Camp Cars. The supper took in better than $35.00, clearing $10.00. The people are anxious to take this opportunity to make the event a success.

The steps and landing to the front and side doors of the new school building were poured last week. The excavating for the heating plant room is just getting under way and we are looking forward to completion of heating room and installation of plant within the next few days.

The seventh grade English class is having a study contest. The class is divided into two groups. The captains are Alfred Peed and Tom Myers. A question is written by the teacher and answered by the pupils. Each correct answer counts one point for the pupil answering it. The contest will continue for a six weeks period. Then the losers will treat the winners. Mrs. Mize has class to write stories and poems for the Fair.

The high school boys and girls have been putting money into the class treasury by the candy and pencil sale. This money may be used by the high school pupils in financing their part of the Halloween Carnival.

Kidnap Murder Case

"Good heavens, Currie!" said Vance, as he stepped inside. "I told you, you might tuck yourself in at ten o'clock if you hadn't heard from me."

"I'm sorry, sir," Currie said in a voice which, for all its formality, had an emotional tremor in it. "I couldn't go to bed, sir, until you returned. I'm glad you have come home, sir."

"You're a sentimental old fossil," Currie, Vance complained, handing the butler his hat.

"Mr. Markham is waiting in the library," said Currie.

As we entered the library, we found Markham pacing up and down. "Well, thank God!" he said. And though he attempted to sound trivial, his relief was as evident as old Currie's had been.

"Greetings, old dear," said Vance. "Why this unexpected pleasure of your present at such an hour?"

"I was merely interested, officially in what you might have found on Long Street," retorted Markham. "I'm frantically sorry, Markham, he said, 'but I fear I have made you a bit of trouble.' The fact is," he added carelessly, "I killed three men."

"Are you serious?" blurted Markham.

"Oh, quite," answered Vance. "Do you think you can save me from the dire consequences?"

And then he told Markham in detail everything that had happened that night. But I thought he too greatly minimized his own part in the tragic drama. When he had finished his recital he asked some what coyly:

"Am I doomed culprit, or were there what you would call extenuating circumstances?—I'm horribly weak on the intricacies of the law don't you know?"

"Damn it! I forget everything," said Markham. "If you're really worried, I'll get you a brass medal as big as Columbus Circle."

The front doorbell rang, and a minute later Heath entered the library. His ordinary ruddy face was a little pale and drawn, and his right arm was in a sling. He saluted Markham and turned sheepishly to Vance.

"Your old saw-barges at the hospital told me I had to go home," he complained. "And there's nothing in God's world the matter with me!" he added indignantly. "Imagine him puttin' this arm in a sling—Hell! If my gun hadn't jammed—"

"Yes, that was a bad break, Sergeant," nodded Markham.

Vance and Markham and Heath discussed the case from various angles for perhaps a half hour long ere Markham was getting impatient.

"I'm going home," he said finally as he rose. "We'll get this thing straightened out in the morning."

"Is there anything you want me to do, Mr. Vance?" Heath's tone was respectful, but a little weary.

Vance looked at him with commiseration.

"I want you to go home and have a good sleep—And, by the by, Sergeant, how about rounding every body up and inviting them to the Purple House tomorrow, around noon?" he asked. "I'm speakin' of Fleet, Kenyon Kenting and Quaggy Mrs. Falloway and her son will, I'm sure, be there, in any event."

We arrived at the Kenting residence, Vance driving us there in his car, fifteen minutes before noon. Weem took our hats and made a surly gesture toward the drawing room. Sergeant Heath and Stutkin were already there.

A little later Fleet and Kenyon Kenting arrived together, followed almost immediately by Porter Quaggy. They had barely seated themselves when old Mrs. Falloway, supported by her son Frank, came down the stairs and joined us.

"I'm so anxious about Madeline," Mrs. Falloway said. "How is she, Mr. Vance?"

"Mrs. Kenting is doing even better today than I would have expected. I can assure you that she will be home in two or three days fully recovered and in her normal mind."

"And I imagine she will have a most interestin' tale to address you, know, it was not intended that she return."

"The truth is, this was not a kidnaping case at all. The authorities were expected to accept it in that light, but the murderer made too many errors—his fault lay in trying to be excessively clever."

"There is no doubt whatever that Kaspar Kenting made an appointment for the early morning hours, after he had returned from his evening's entertainment at the casino with Mr. Quaggy."

"When Kaspar left this house early Wednesday morning he was met at the appointed place not by the person with whom he had made his appointment, but by others whom he had never seen before. They struck him over the head before he so much as realized that any thing was amiss, threw him into a coupe, and then drove off with him to the East River and disposed of him hoping he would not be found too soon. It was straight, brut-turned to the house here, placed tenderly. The first set-back occurred ladder against the window—it had been left here previously for just that purpose—entered the room through the window, and set the ing the toothbrush, the comb, and the pajamas, and pinning the note to the window sill, generally leaving mute but spurious indications, that Kaspar Kenting had kidnaped him self in order to collect the money, he needed to straighten out his debts.

awarded—possibly just inside Central Park—by the same hard gentleman who had done away with her husband. But instead of meeting with the same fate as Kaspar Kenting, she was taken to the house on Lord Street. I visited last night, and held there as a sort of hostage. I rather imagine, don't you know that the perpetrator of this fiendish scheme had not yet been able to pay the price demanded for the most performance of Kaspar's killing, thereby irking the hired as-assins. The lady was so to speak, a threat held over one criminal by another criminal who was a bit more clever.
