"NO ILLITERACY IN 1920," MOTTO OF EDUCATORS

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart Outlines Aims of Commission for Coming Year

(Special to The Herald)

FRANKFORT, Ky., June 25—Prominent educators representing every part of the State are here attending the Institute of County Agents appointed by the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission to organize counties to fight illiteracy. During the summer and fall, Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, Chairman of the Illiteracy Commission, will have county agents working in the 120 counties of the State and plans will be well laid for "No Illiteracy in 1920."

At the morning session of the Institute Mrs. Stewart outlined the five aims of the Commission for the present year. They are to teach 50,000 illiterates to read and write, to teach soldiers to read and write, to bring each community in cooperation with war work and to increase the daily attendance of the public schools of the State.

People Responsible, Says Cherry

The people of the State are responsible for the large number of illiterates in the State, was the opinion expressed by President H. H. Cherry, of the Western Normal School. After the present fight to wipe out illiteracy...

literacy, President Cherry said that the people of Kentucky would be to blame if there were illiterates in the future, and that the citizenship of the State would have to bear the blame.

At the afternoon session, Miss Jessie O. Yancey, State Organizer of County Agents and V. O. Gilbert, Superintendent of Public Instruction, addressed the Institute. Over sixty agents are here attending the Institute. In selecting the County Agents Mrs. Stewart took into consideration the educational qualifications as well as the experience which the agents have had. The County Agents are college graduates, a number of them having served as school superintendents or school supervisors.
