Crackerbarrel Comments (By Woody Hinton)

Blessings on the Allen M. Trout in your "Greetings" op. ed. page in the "Crackerbarrel" I agree with you that what this country needs is an old-fashioned revival. I work on Sundays and my seldom, but I have a chance to put on my Sunday suit and go with my wife to services. And I would feel awful sitting by the side with my ill-fitting, stained clothes on and her in that checked dress and what she calls a hat to match. I feel that some members of the congregation would be saying: "It's a pity she could not have done better than that." I would like to go back for a visit to the Brushy Fork Meeting House and the Church at Muses Mills. I would like to hear the bell rung by "Uncle" George McKee. He was the bellman of the Civil War and his duty was to ring the bell and take care of the Church which he did in his own way. It was his duty to ring the bell up or offer any suggestions. "Uncle" George didn't take any stock in religion, but his wife said she was a "crackerbarrel" and would like once more to be lying on the front porch in my bare feet with shirt and pants on resting after a hard day's work and hearing that bell rung by "Uncle" George. And her "Mom" say: "Hurry and wash your feet and get your socks on. It's almost nine o'clock." I would like to hear the prayers being led by George Mue (whom I know that if any man or woman the same as "Aunt Ede" and "Uncle" George are now in Heaven.) And hear preacher Meadows in his deep Bass voice say "Praise the Lord, and Help Brother Mue." I would like to see "Aunt" Ede moved by his words and shout. After services I would like to sing "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder," and hold "Yonder" in my unutilized tenor until the congregation sang: "I'll be there, I'd like to go to the Brushy Fork Meeting House and hear one of those fetched on preachers with their loud roars and their water from a red-hot sermon stop and say, "Don't take the baby out sister, Thank God I can preach louder than it can squall." I'd like to see the rattles shake. I'd like to hear the good members holler: "Praise the Lord." I'd like to see them shout and drink pure spring water from a long handle dipper that stuck out of a galvanized bucket that sat on the pulpit.

I highly admire our preachers here in Morehead and I consider Brothers Landolt, Kaze and Traver the best friends I have nor are they doing a bad thing and I consider them the backbone of our community.

LATE NEWS: The only way you could keep that guy Professor Peratt from smiling is to cut his head clean off. Rumors are being spread that he was under the "Old Joe" when he fell down the stairs and broke his arm. Mrs. Peratt said she looked on the stairs and saw little Mrs. Peratt, there, he was lying on the floor below. Anyhow to you Professor Peratt I am sure your host of friends join with me in wishing you a speedy recovery. And you are one of the persons in Morehead that I have never heard anything good about.

Building Knocked From Foundation By Automobile

Ward Carter, Olive Hill, Slams Into Corner of Moore's On U. S. 60

A speeding automobile knocked a two-room frame building completely off its foundation Monday at 11:27. The driver of the car, a 1936 model Plymouth sedan, escaped serious injury, but Ward Carter, husband of the driver of the vehicle, suffered cuts about the head from the broken windshield. The building belongs to Millard Moore and is located a few miles east of Morehead on U. S. 60.

The accident which had happened when Mrs. Carter placed her foot on the throttle rather than the brake in attempting to turn off the highway in the drive of the Moore establishment.

A clock in an adjoining room from the side of the building struck by the car established the time of the accident as being 11:27. The force of the impact stopped the clock and knocked groceries off the shelves.

A concrete foundation butting a foot above the ground kept the machine from plowing through the store.

Carter's head was rammed thru the windshield of the Plymouth and persons in the building at the time of the accident were forced to break glass about his head in order to remove him from the car without cutting his throat.

A Sheriff McBreary placed a charge of drunkenness against Carter and lodged him in jail after a local doctor had attended to his wounds.

of interfering with, or effecting, the election or nomination of candidates for federal offices." The present act forbids similar practices by State employees "paid in whole or in part by the federal government."

It is essential to the cause of good government that the original act be extended to include State groups. To forbid "pernicious political activity" by the W. P. A., for instance, without doing the same for those administering and receiving old-age assistance and unemployment insurance would be not only unfair but ridiculous. Therefore, the "Little Hatch Act" is an indispensable complement to the original measure.

The Act also carries provisions for limiting the amount of money individuals may legally give to campaign funds, as well as the total amount of money any spend in a presidential election.

It is yet somewhat uncertain just how many of our State employees will come under the provisions of the Act. It has been estimated that at least 1,000 will be effected, and perhaps in a year more. It is not clear as yet whether

Fire Prevention and Defense

Today, all important American industry is cooperating in an effort to expedite the defense program. And the service industries, no less than the manufacturing industries, are doing their part. A particularly salient example of this is provided by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, representative organization of the country's principal stock fire insurance companies.

In 1917, the National Board conducted a nation-wide conservation campaign for the reduction of fire loss in American industry. Grain, cotton and other vital commodities were safeguarded from destruction. Plans were developed for the swift and efficient installation of fire fighting facilities for army cantonments, the Navy Department, the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and other departments. A fire prevention bureau was established by the Board in the War Department at Washington, which inspected all buildings turned to military use, and submitted recommendations for lessening hazards. One of that, a widespread campaign to instruct the public in fire prevention was carried on.

Now the National Board has again offered its services to the government. It will provide the government all the vast information in its possession. It is prepared to use all its facilities to help reduce fire loss during the present emergency.

The importance of this is clear. The greatest need now in the national defense program is speed — speed in manufacture, speed in assembling, speed in transportation, speed all along the complicated industrial line that will produce the airplanes and ships and other arms necessary to American defense. A series of disastrous fires could cause ruinous delays. If one key factory were burned, and put out of commission for a few months, the slow-down in production would be felt throughout the industrial structure. Fire is thus the enemy of our national security.

The Board's offer marks a definite and essential contribution to defense. It is typical of the kinds of public service we have come to expect from our great American industries of all kinds.

"... All this was built for me"

WHAT builds America? Basically, it is the desire of Americans—you and 125,000,000 others—for better things.

Your desire for better transportation resulted in the automobile, the streamline train, and the airplane.

Because of you, laboratories worked months and years to produce fabrics out of test tubes. Corn becomes oil for cooking or flak d food; soybeans become milk, flour, p. int, plastics.

Your desire for better living has put science and industry to work to make all the electric appliances you use: electric lights, vacuum cleaner, refrigerator, toaster, electric fan, radio, and many others.

Because you use so many of these tools for better living, you help yourself to get electric service in such quantity and quality as was hardly dreamed of thirty years ago. You have made possible the development of the marvelous system of interconnected power plants from which this company and other electric companies supply reliable service day and night.

All this is possible because you use more and more electricity, year after year. When you buy a new electric appliance, you don't dispose of one you already have; you keep adding appliances, each one of which makes some household task easier.

Your increased use of electric service, plus the economies of this company's operation, have cut rates to about half what they were twelve or fifteen years ago. Under modern promotional rates, now in effect, you can automatically reduce the average rate you pay still further: the more electricity you use each month, the lower your average rate will be.

Thus your desires have helped this company and other electric companies build a great industry. We members of that industry are proud to be able to serve you so well. We pledge ourselves to continue our work, thereby keeping pace with your desire for better living at lower cost.

Navy Expansion To Mean Better Wages

Ninety-two Combat Vessels To Be Built At A Cost Of $1,140,000,000

Kentucky will benefit in increased employment, wages and sales resulting from the Navy expansion program involving construction of ninety-two combat vessels at a cost of $1,140,000,000. Judge Lorenzo R. Wood, State Director for the Office of Government Reports, stated today that Kentucky manufacturers or producers hardwoods, paints, galley and pantry outfits, firebrick, leather, hemp and to a lesser extent many other products used in modern naval construction.

"On the basis of Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates, the construction of ninety-two vessels will result in $445,000,000 in wages to labor employed in the shipyards," Judge Wood said, "but even more will be spent in wages in the mines and factories where the raw materials are produced, and in transportation."

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics estimate that forty-one percent of total costs in private shipyards is spent for materials, more than $467,000,000 will be expended for materials and manufactured products for naval expansion. "There are over two hundred major industries producing materials used in ship construction," Judge Wood said. "More than $40,000,000 man-hours of work in shipyards and more than 647,000,000 man-hours of work at mines, factories, and in transporting materials will be created by the new program, providing sufficient work to keep the equivalent of 245,000 workers employed two full years."

"Although there are more than forty types of skilled mechanics needed to build a ship," Judge Wood said, "the actual building of the ship requires less labor than does the production of materials used."

(Continued from Page 1.) of the State department at Washington, D. C., regarding his thesis topic. He plans to teach through this session of summer school at Morehead.

After returning this Fall from Puerto Rico the Morehead professor continue his work at the University of Kentucky where he was awarded a full fellowship for the year 1940-41. Senff has studied at the University of Kentucky, Chicago University, and the University of Southern California.

Morehead State College authorities have expressed themselves as pleased with Senff's ambitions and expect others to do more work of this kind in the near future.

"There is undoubtedly a great challenge and a splendid opportunity for real service in the desertation subject upon which I have chosen to write. It will require both patience and work; however, I have been most fortunate in enlisting the services of a splendid graduate committee under whose supervision I intend to study. That fact, coupled with understanding suggestions from friends both in Washington and Puerto Rico leads me to undertake the problem with optimism," Senff declared.
